The borough needs a councilman to fill the vacancy left by the resignation of Newton B Smalley. Robert F. Currie, who was elected to the office, has declined to accept it. It is said that the duties of the office would necessitate too much time to him to take a long rest from active labors.

Kindly Words.

R. B. Sinclair, of Westfield, and one of the editorial staff of the Harpers' publishing house, writes as follows concerning the death of the renowned editor, Geo. Jones:

NEW YORK, Aug 18, 1891.

Gilbert J. Jones, Poland Springs, Me.:

Dear Sir:

The death of your dear father, my beloved friend and fortune chief, deeply grieves us. All in Franklin Square send sincere sympathy.

A New Bridge at Sandford Avenue.

The contract to build a new iron truss bridge at Sandford avenue has been awarded, through agent William T. Kirk, of West Seventh street, to the firm of Milliken Bros. It is to cost $2,350. There were eight bids for the work, no two of which were $100 apart. Four of the bids bid on $2,400. The bridge is to have a roadway 20 feet wide, and two 7-foot sidewalks.

A Handicap Tennis Tournament.

There will be a handicap tennis tournament for ladies' singles and gentlemen's singles and doubles, held at the grounds of the Hillside tennis club, Saturday, Sept. 5, and Labor Day, Sept. 7. Entries may be made to any of the committee on the grounds, Saturday, Sept. 3.

Prizes will be awarded to winners. The committee in charge is composed of: Howard W. Bosbe, Clarence S Schnecly, Ernest L. Walz, jr., and James F. Murray.

Borough Fire Wells to be Cleaned.

The recommendation of foreman George H. Fairchild and THE PRESS that the borough fire wells be thoroughly cleaned was adopted at Friday night's session of the North Plainfield Council. Councilman Hegeman reported that the wells were generally in good condition, and that in all there was little water in them. This, he said, was a dangerous condition of affairs. The committee on fire, water and lamps were authorized to have the wells put in proper condition.

Plainfield Banner Plate Read.

Seventy-five firemen, in fatigue uniform, and a large number of other citizens, attended the funeral, Thursday afternoon, of Hartpence Rue, a member of Granville Engine Company. The officiating clergymen was the Rev. Mr. Hyde, who was a constant attendant at the bedside of the deceased during his illness, and whose sermon contained touching words of resignation and comfort for the mourners left behind. The floral tributes were very beautiful. Foreman Fairchild's floral "Gates ajar," from Granville Engine company, and 6 pillow bearing the word "Papa". The floral display was photographed. The gold-headed cane was Fairchild, Rocco, James Sonring, D. W. Lidell, John Hasting, J. W. Vanliehe and Edward Lidell, all of Granville company.

Mrs. Rue and her children, Mrs. Jennie E. Gavett and Mrs. Joseph W. Gavett, of this city, and one of the best known and most highly esteemed veterans of the fire insurance business in New York city, died Saturday morning at his residence, No. 229 West Thirty-sixth street, in his seventh-first year, of the infirmities due to age. Mr. Underhill had been connected with the Mechanics' Fire Insurance Company for fifty-four years, when he resigned last March because of failing health. He began as office boy and rose to the presidency. He then became clerk, secretary and, in 1876, president of the company. Mr. Underhill was of Quaker descent, his family having come to New York city from Maryland. He was an active Mason and a volunteer fireman.

His wife died in November last, and the letter to the company he resigned are one daughter, several nephews and nieces. His brother was Mrs. J. W. Underhill, and his sister Mrs. A. F. Gavett's mother.

LOTO AT THE NETHERWOOD.

Land Speculator's Scheme Proves Successful and Wins the Subscribers and Prize Winners Wide.

[SPECIAL TO THE PRESS.]

NETHERWOOD, N. J., Aug. 17.—The initial loto party of the season was held in the grand parlor of the hotel this evening, and nearly all of the guests assembled to witness the motives at the tables. Messrs. Crossman, Bonsey, Fromont and Martin announced the numbers. Messrs. Bonsey and Martin purchased the prizes for the occasion and the general verdict was that the gentlemen deserved great credit for their excellent taste, and the unanimous verdict of the subscribers was that they were simply superb.

It is due to the following ladies to mention their suggestions made to them by Messrs. Bonsey and Martin in relation to the prizes and faithfully carried out—Mrs. Bonsey, Mrs. Richardson, Miss Cullen and Mrs. Bridgman.

The following were the subscribers:

A. E Bonsey, Mrs. M Bonsey, Mrs. O. P. Bridgman, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Balch, Miss Cullen, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Hageman, Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Cullen, Miss Hattie Cullen, Miss Conway, Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Donald, Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Fromont, Miss Ella Fellman, Mr. and Mrs. H. Fellman, Master R. McK. Fromont, Master L. V. Fromont, C. D. Findley, Mr. and Mrs W. L. Findley, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Hines, Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Hicks, J. Augustus Hinchman, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Kirk, Mr and Mrs. H. Litchfield, Harry Martin, Mr. and Mrs. Fred. Martin, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. McGrody, Col. and Mrs. Neil McIntosh, Mr. and Mrs. Martin, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Ogden, Mrs. Charles Fox, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Richardson, Miss Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Spencer, Mr. and Mrs. C. Scott, Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Thornton, Mr. S. H. Tobey, Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Van Tine, Mr. and Mrs. D. T. Whitney.

The prize winners were: Mrs. Bonsey, Miss Cullen, Mr and Mrs. VanZandt, Mrs. Thos. H. Cullen, Miss Hattie Cullen, Mr. and Mrs. McCready, Mr. and Mrs. Fromont, Mrs. F. H. Richardson, Mrs. Hinchinchen, Mrs. Frank Littlefield, Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Ogden, Mrs. E. G. Hines, Miss Ella Fellman, Mrs. H. Fellman, Mrs. O. P. Bridgman, Master Eugene Fromont, Master Victor Fromont, Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Balch, Mrs. Balch, Mr. G. E. Thornton, Mr. S. H. Tobey, Mrs. Findley and Fred Martin, jr.

The affair was universally pronounced a grand success and another delightful event was placed to the credit of The Netherwood. Other charming events will be duly bulletined during the midsummer season. A large number of guests are sojourning here and others are booked for the present month.

Mr. and Mrs. Crossman and family and Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Hines and family leave here to-morrow for the Long Beach Hotel. I am pleased to announce that they expect to return here early in the queen month of the year—September.

Your correspondent, with all due humility, is grateful to chronicle that his prediction at the commencement of the season that it would be a memorable and prosperous one, is fully verified, and the outlook for the fall season is excellent. The reason d'etre is that Netherwood is one of the most charming summer resorts in the country. J. A. H.

NORWICH DID N'T COME.

Even the People of Their Own City Say It Is a "Disgraceful Act".

Tuesday night, too late to notify the public, T. H. Keller received a telegram from the Norwich base-ball club saying that they would not be here. They must certainly shows bad management somewhere. Not only had the Norwich club a game here, but one at Westfield to-day, and another for Friday that Mr. Keller had just arranged. They have forfeited over $200 in guarantees besides treating the people here very shabbily.

A newspaper man of their own city writes under date of Aug. 19:

The future of the Norwich club is shrouded in obscurity, and whether or no they start for New Jersey to-night is as yet a problem. No one they decide in the game, in view of the arrangements which New Jersey has made to secure them, it will be a disgraceful act. The general opinion here is that the team will not start, but will go together with the schoolgirl games with your nine had been played as your club is held in high esteem by the people and considering the arrangements would no doubt cause you much trouble.

A GREAT ROAD RACE.

Handsome Prizes Now Ready for Plainfield Wheelmen to Ride.

Arrangements are about completed for the grand road race open to all Plainfield to be given under the auspices of the Bicycle Club over the road to Field-Spring-field courses, Saturday, Sept. 12.

The start will be made at 6 p. m., from the Scott Printing Machine works, thence through Park avenue and Back Plains to the hot-1 in Springfield, and return over the same course—a total distance of about 18 miles, over the best stretch of road in New Jersey.

Captain F. L. C. Martin of the Bicycle Club has offered the first medal, which is up to a handsome one of gold, to be known as the Martin medal. The second is to be a valuable design in gold and silver, and the third of solid silver, the two latter to be given by the club.

This is to be a scratch race, with no penalties attached to any particular style of wheel, and every one has an equal chance to show his muscle and staying powers.

It is hoped that every would-be racer in the town will at once get in training and enter.

An entrance fee of 50 cents will be charged, which must accompany every entry. The entries will close on Sept. 9, and may be handed to any member of the committee. Messrs. Marsh, Martin and Lenox.

The Play Was a Correct One.

There has been some unjust criticism of a play by Jones in center field, last Saturday. It is said that he could have touched and caught the ball that Lough-lin in the second inning, but that he stopped shor within six feet of it.

The hit was a hard driven one and struck the ground at least 15 feet from Jones. He could not have reached it on the fly, and had he come a foot nearer it would have bounded past him and two runs would have come in. As it was the three it is to Hasmill so quick that Mc-Laughlin was put out at second.

Plainfield Railroad Business Has a New Bonus.

The Central railroad company has completed the two-story switch house at the Plainfield avenue crossing, which Contractor Donahue, who has been a watchman at the crossing for three years in a cramped up little shanty, is now installed in more comfortable quarters. The lower story of the house is one of the finest on the road. How he has only to sit inside near the crank and watch the passing gates, where formerly he was obliged to go outside in sunshine or in rain to do the work.

Mr. Donahue has been with the Central railroad for years and years, and has never lost very little time by sickness. He has never been censured by the company for making a single mistake. He is a model employe, and a man any one may be proud to call his friend.

GABLE GIVES BONDS.

(From the Press of Aug. 18.)

John S. Gable, the wife deserter, has been taken back to New York city, and compelled to furnish bonds to contribute to the support of his suffering wife. On Tuesday night, accompanied by Mrs. Gable herself, a detective walked a beat in the metropolis where it was said Gable was living with Mrs. Avery, and Gable was captured just as he was about to go out for a pitcher of beer. He was not done locked up, but later found in a New York friend a bondsman who went surety for him in his promise to pay Mr. Gable $2,000. Then he was released. He paid Plainfield a flying visit this morning and then went back to New York.

Families Proud of Her Little Citizen.

John Merschrod, of Dunellen, entered one of his original paintings at the exhibition of the Industrial Art society, in New York city, and took second prize. The amount of the prize is $250 and pays Mr. Merschrod nicely for his trouble. This is quite a start in the concern of success, and makes Dunellen proud as well.

Borough Property Changes Hands.

Recent real-estate transfers in North Plainfield include the following:

Hannah Hall, to executor, to William H. Carder and others, $500.

Thomas S. Reynolds and others to Lucy M. Reynolds, $1.

Francis Barnett to William M. Stillman, $1.

John H. Marsh and others to Robert Sharp, $50.

Peter Brune and others to William Minard, $50.

Tenants Arrested a Neighborhood.

A disgraceful row occurred on Somerset street, near the bridge over Green brook, at 2 o'clock Friday, a. m., when a number of roughs, intoxicated, were engaged in a furious war of words. The language fairly used was of the vilest, and the disturbance was so great as to arouse the entire neighborhood. The Plainfield police were powerless, as the row was on the borough side of the brook, but after the police force to bring a borough marshal to the spot they succeeded in persuading the drunken crowd to disperse. The fellows are known, and may be arrested today. Those who were awakened by the racket found that their nerves were so shattered that it was impossible to get to sleep again, even after the noise had ceased.

Recorder's Prisoners.

Cases in the recorder's county court were disposed of as follows Friday:

Wm. Hadley, charged with larceny of a coat and vest, valued at $18; sentence suspended.

James Bonner, charged with assault and resisting an officer; sentence suspended.

Charles Williams, charged with assault on his sister; trial set down for Wednesday, Aug. 19.

Johnson, colored, charged with attempted assault and robbery of a white woman in her bedroom in North Plainfield, pleaded not guilty; trial set down for Wednesday, Aug. 19.

In Remorham.

At a special meeting of Gazelle Engine Company, No. 3, held Tuesday evening, the following preamble and resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, It has pleased Divine Providence to remove from our midst our beloved friend and brother Remsen, Charleon R. Hoper. Therefore we deeply mourn the loss of our late companion, who was endeared to us by his kind and faithful conduct.

Resolved, That we sincerely sympathize with the bereaved family in their hour of affliction, and trust that the Almighty Father in his wisdom will watch over, guide and protect them.

Resolved, That our engine-house be draped in mourning for thirty days, and that a copy of these resolutions be presented to the family of our late brother, and published in THE DAILY PRESS.

The West Ends. So Far, Lead in Both Batting and Fielding.

The following varies a little from the correct ratings, but enough to show the advantage or disadvantage of either side, to make much difference in the averages. It is taken from the Rarkinstown Union-ist:

"One half of the series between the West Ends and Crescents being completed, it would not be out of the way to look over the work of the nine men who in the three games the West Ends have won at the bat 119 times, Crescents 92 times. West Ends have scored 37 runs, Crescents 11 runs. West Ends have made 28 hits with a total of 33, Crescents 22 hits with a total of 30. West Ends have 11 sacrifices to their credit while the Crescents have only 1. West Ends have made 12 errors, Crescents 25. West Ends have stolen 19 bases, Crescents 9. West Ends have made 3 passed balls, Crescents only 7. Strike outs are even 23 apiece. West Ends have had 27 men left on bases, Crescents 21. Now if we take percentage of each team in batting and fielding, we will get the following result:"

CLUB BATTING.

	At Bat.	Base Hits.	Bat. Av'g.
West Ends	119	28	.235
Crescents	92	22	.239

CLUB FIELDING.

POETICALLY PUT.

Dr. Watts, on of our best poets, said,

"Mag wants but little here below,
No wants that little long"

If the Doctor had lived in our time and had known anything about the clothing business he would probably written instead,

"Man must have trousers here below
And wants them sewed up strong"

And to these words he might have added—

"He likes to have them fit him, so They'll be neither short nor long".

And then, if he had accidentally become acquainted with us and our stock of trousers, he would have turned out more poetry to the tune of something like this—

"The young, the old, and the gay gallants,
Are all well pleased with McGregor's P

ANSWER TO "WANTED: A WIFE."

One doesn't need to go to school
To quickly recognize,
To point that out, "He is a useless fool
That wonders not both ways."

I want a man that doesn't smoke
Till after dinner is blue,
Then only lays his pipe aside
To take a nasty chew.

I wants a man that doesn't drink,
A man that doesn't swear,
One that has brains enough to think,
And heart enough to care.

I want a man that loves my mother,
Whether a button flies,
One that can entertain without a growl
A cuss did not rise.

A man that doesn't angry get Because everything went wrong,
But lends a hand to help a bit
And shows a cheerful song.

A man that won't sit right some home
And leave his business clothes
For me to sit and mend alone
While to the club he goes.

I want a man that will not smile
On every girl he sees,
And always keep on hand for me
A look to make me freeze.

A man that's not afraid to lend
His pocketbook to me,
And feel that I can save or spend
As certainly as he.

Now if the "bachelor"—the "Goose"
Finds this a perfect man,
He has no task not just to ask
For me to fill his life.

MR. AND MRS. BOWSER.

The Old Gentleman Does a Little More Tinkering.

Her "Pretty Yarn" for His Remarkable Forgetfulness—The Trouble Caused by a Solitary Screen Door.

"Do you pass a carpenter shop on your way downtown?" asked Mrs. Bowser the other morning as the car was ready to leave the house.

"Why?" he cautiously inquired in reply.

"We ought to have a screen door to the kitchen. There's where all the flies come in. We can see one at a time if we brought with us, but we'll have to have a carpenter to-day."

"We will, eh? I beg to differ. I have a proposition to put on carpenters for four days' job doing what I can do in half an hour. I'll fix it myself."

"But don't you remember, Mr. Bowser—don't you remember that you—"

"That I what?"

"You refused to hang a screen door last summer in Detroit and you got so mad you nearly tore the house down."

"I did, sir! That's a pretty yarn for you to stand up these days and spout! In the first place, I never tried to hang a screen door, and in the second I never got mad."

"But you—you—" she stammered.

"Nothing of the sort! I don't even remember that we had a screen door. I never tried to hang one. I never got mad. I never even saw a fly around my house in Detroit. Change of climate seems to have had a very queer effect on you."

"But won't you send up a carpenter?"

"Not by a jugful! I ain't have anything to do with coffee this afternoon, and if there's a bit of tinkering around the house it will be fun for me."

He returned at noon, having a heavy parcel with him, and when Mrs. Bowser asked about the contents he cut the string and replied:

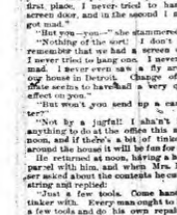
"Just a few tools. Come handy to tinker with. Every man ought to keep a few tools about him. Been right busy. I think I saved us at least two hundred dollars last year."

"Well, I hope you won't fly mad over your work. A screen door is a very particular thing to hang."

"Oh! it is! You're hung lots of 'em, I presume?"

"I know that it takes a skilled workman."

"You'd better write a book and call it: 'What I Know About Screen Doors.'



"I've hung lots of 'em."

I ought to feel awful proud to think I have such a husband as you. Ben right in, now, and begin on the first chapter of your book."

Mr. Bowser descended to the cellar, where he found the screen doors of different sizes he had selected one he thought would fit and carried it up. It was six inches too high. The next was four inches too short. The third was almost long enough to make two such doors as he wanted. He had the fourth one, which was just a fit, in the back yard, when Mrs. Bowser came out to say:

"If you had first measured the opening and then measured your doors, you wouldn't have had to lug up but this one."

"Wouldn't I? Perhaps you understand my object in bringing up the extra doors, Mrs. Bowser? It is the duty of a husband to explain every little move he makes?"

"The door had to be sawed off about an inch at the top. Mr. Bowser brought out a couple of kitchen chairs, made a scratch on the door with a nail, and was about to use the saw when she asked:

"Aren't you going to strike a line across there?"

"For what reason?"

"If you don't you can't saw straight."

"Can't I? Perhaps I am blind!"

When the finished door fitted the strip and held the frame up to the opening it was plain that he had cut his saw at an angle.

"I told you so," she quietly observed.

"Told me what?" he replied, as he turned on her. "Do you suppose I don't know what I'm about? Do you imagine I started a straight top on that door? If you know so much go ahead and finish the job!"

Mrs. Bowser went into the house, and Mr. Bowser held the frame up again to see that he would be obliged to tack on a strip or leave an opening at the top. He decided to leave it, and he was sawing a piece off one of the other doors to make this strip when Mrs. Bowser appeared and said:

"You'll spoil that door too, Mr. Bowser. Why don't you take a piece off this box? If you had put a straight edge on the other and thrown it you would have been all right."

"Mrs. Bowser," he began, as he laid five or six years old, who must be brought in when the other two are out of the house, forty years of age and generally supposed to have sense enough not to sit down, under a pile driver to eat my dinner."

"But you'll never make that door fit," she protested.

"If I don't no other man on earth need try!"

She went in again and he sawed off a strip and nailed it on the other door. Then he held it up to find the frame half an inch too long. Mrs. Bowser reappeared and was about to say something, but he glared at her so savagely that she went back without a word.

"The infernal old kitchen is either lifting up or settling down!" he growled as he held the door up. "I've got to saw a piece off the bottom to make it fit, and she'll either fit or down comes the shanty!"

He sawed off a piece and got what he called a fit. He sanded and chuckled over the success and had the blame brought on when Mrs. Bowser came out to ask:

"What good is a door there if you leave all those cracks?"

"Cracks! Cracks! You can't find one!"

"Look here—look here!" cried Mrs. Bowser, even the bumble bees of New York would have no trouble in flying in there! Just how are you going to stop that spring on?"

Mr. Bowser laid down the hammer, the gimlet and the screwdriver, and after wiping off his flushed face he stood erect and pointed into the kitchen. Mrs. Bowser disappeared without a word. Then he inspected and found no cracks.

"Confounded old doorway is out of plumb, and that's the matter!" he growled, as he set to work to remedy it. When he got the door off he recked it this way and that and tried it again. More cracks than before. He took it down and sprung on the top with all his might, and this time, as he held it up, there was a crevice there which not a sparrow could have flown. He started to lay it flat on the ground, but fell backward, landing over himself and sprawled on his back.

"What's the matter?" asked Mrs. Bowser, from the back door.

Mr. Bowser slowly arose, looked all around for the ax, and not seeing it, he jumped at the screen doors and kicked with both feet until they were reduced to strips and splinters. Then he went in to Mrs. Bowser, panting and perspiring and pale faced, and hoarsely whispered:

"This is the last time—the very last time that you ever put me into doing any such infernal guttering work around the house I'll go—go, never to return!"

"Where did I pass you?"

"Never you mind! It's all right!"

"But I say—"

"Don't speak to me again! I am neither blind nor deaf. If we live together ten billion years longer don't you ask me to even look at a hole in a table or fix a caster! This is the limit. I'm danger-ous from this on!"—M. Quad, in N. Y. World.

If the pictures are studied carefully, they will help you very much in making the doll. Select eight peanuts two that are very much bent for the feet, one gracefully bent for the head, and five that are as straight as possible. Thread a needle with strong silk or thread; run it through the top of the peanut that is to be on the lower end, through the lower part of one of the straight peanuts, and tie the thread so that the peanuts will be snug slightly apart. Now connect two peanuts corresponding with these in the same way. Then run the needle through the upper part of the upper peanut for one side and through the lower part of another straight peanut, and tie the thread in the same way. Then run the needle through the top of the upper peanut for a sixth peanut in the same way, and tie. Now run the needle through the top of the last peanut, and tie the thread so that the peanuts will be snug slightly apart. Now connect two peanuts corresponding with these in the same way. Then run the needle through the upper part of the upper peanut for one side and through the lower part of another straight peanut, and tie the thread in the same way. Then run the needle through the top of the last peanut, and tie. Now run the needle through the top of the upper peanut for a sixth peanut in the same way, and tie. Now run the needle through the top of the last peanut, and tie the thread. The appearance of the peanuts so carefully strung is shown at figure No. 3. Now with a pen and black ink mark the eyes, head, mouth and eyebrows on the bead peanut, and tint the feet for the shoes.

Take six strands of black Saxony wool and braid them carefully to make a queue, sew one end of the queue to the center of a circular piece of black court-plaster, and stick the plaster on the back of the bead peanut. Now Chinaman doll is ready to dress, and we will put him in georgeous colors and like a lady's goods, because he belongs to the nobility.

FIG. 3.

Take two pieces of black silk, each about three inches wide and long enough to extend up to the middle of the peanut for the head; these are to form his trousers. Join the long edges of each section more than half way to the top and then join the front edges of the two sections together; join the back edges together in the same way and gather the top. Make a narrow hem at each lower edge. Now arrange the trousers on the doll, drawing the gathering thread up closely; and sew them at the gathering to the body. Take a narrow strip of the same black silk and draw it tightly over the gathers, allowing it to extend nearly up to the middle of the head, as shown at figure No. 4. Next cut a section of the same kind of silk and draw it closely about the peanut of one arm, leaving only the end of the peanut exposed, and making the section long enough to extend nearly to the top of the hand at the neck; sew the section firmly in place. Cover the other arm in the same way.

The tunic is made of bright yellow plaid silk about four inches wide, and requires about half a yard. Cut two sections, each five inches wide, for the body, and two other sections, each about three inches and a half wide, for the sleeves. Join the edges of each sleeve, and the top and each side of the seam make two tiny rolls forming to end the seam. Join the side edges of the body for about half an inch from the neck; then sew the sleeves in top of the side edges of the body section for about half an inch below the armhole, and the edges below with narrow hems.

At this point of the construction of the tunic will look like figure No. 5, where, if you look carefully you will see a dotted line near the neck edge. Made a gathering all round the neck in exactly the same position as the dotted line. Put the tunic on, and draw the gathering thread up closely and securely.

Now our Chinaman doll is all made and dressed, and don't you think him "allee samee like Chinaman?" He can both sit and stand, as illustrated at figures Nos. 1 and 2. You can dress him in any colors and materials you like, and can have him as handsome a Chinaman from our well-known Wing-Lee, the laundryman, to his Celestial highness, the Chinese emperor Hwang.—Delineator.

HOW TO DRIVE A HORSE.

Any Little Girl Can Learn to Hold the Reins and Guide a Horse.

Let me tell you how any little girl or boy can drive a horse. It is the easiest thing in the world to learn, and will give you the points as they were told to me by little Ivah Marcomber, who can control a horse like a grown man.

Ivah is a sweet-faced cherub of six. She lives with her aunt, Mrs. Schwenk, on a big cattle farm not many miles from the city.

Of course you must not try a vicious animal; but any horse, except with the strength of a full-grown man. Begin with a gentle horse; and right here let me say that right out of every ten horses you see are more or less gentle provided you treat them right.

But let me tell you Ivah's story. She had come down to the depot in a dear looking phaeton, driving a short team, to meet me as I got off the train. At first I thought she had prevailed upon her aunt to let her ride alone with the child. The desire of being the first to greet me, but I soon saw that I was mistaken. I had hardly left the car step before her when she fetched the reins she held in her tiny hands and the black mare started off.

The turn to the main road was very short, but Ivah held them well in her left rein and turned about without a break. It was so gracefully done that I could not help but admire the child. I must say, in my admiration, I was completely disconcerted. But Ivah didn't seem to suspect that I was in the least afraid. She gave the reins a slight jerk, and the horse broke into a jog trot, and she kept the middle of the road, which, by the way, was very very narrow. I thought that Ivah was driving a horse. In a few minutes we reached the house and Ivah—oh, I can't tell you how she did it—but she drove into the gateway and up to the discharging platform and handed the reins to the groom. I lifted her out in my arms and gently stood her on the platform.

After dinner I talked with Ivah about horses. They love to be fed what dishes and how any to other children.

"Oh, I love horses," said Ivah, just like Gracie, the blind person, but not afraid of her a bit. I go into her stall and speak to her and she lets me play with her.

"Gracie knows me and she nods her head when I speak to her," Ivah here continued the child. "I never say cross things to her. Uncle Sam told me to say kind words to Gracie to get her and she minds me like I mind auntie. When I want Gracie to stop I say 'Whoa,' and she stands still right away. If I want her to go one way I pull the rein and she goes, and when I want her to go the other way I pull the other rein."

This was Ivah's way of explaining the uses of the right and left reins, and I am sure you will understand her without any assistance from me.

In the first place, children, in order to command an animal you must show it that you have more intelligence than it has. This will soon give you the confidence of the animal. To do this you must walk boldly up to a horse and speak kindly to it. Don't be afraid, for if you are, the horse will always be timid and nervous when you handle it. If you put your full confidence in a horse it will return your favor by doing readily come to mind. It will feel safe when you are about, and you can make it do just as you please, and never it will think you will protect it from harm.

This is the only hard thing to learn about driving a horse; the rest is easy. All you will have to do is to imitate the clever Uncle Sam gave to Ivah and you will have no trouble in managing a timid and nervous horse in a short time. If you put your full confidence in a horse it will return your favor by doing readily come to mind. It will feel safe when you are about, and you can make it do just as you please, and never it will think you will protect it from harm.

FANCHON'S ADVENTURE.

How an Elephant Went Upstairs and How He Came Down.

Mrs. Marvin lived in East Fifty-seventh street, New York, a rather quiet part of the city, and one not accustomed to getting itself into the papers. Opposite her house was a queer-looking building which was the cause of considerable comment in the neighborhood. Dawnstairs appeared to be a stable with wide doors. Above the ball was a small room, used as a gymnasium by the two children of Mrs. Brown and their six children.

They knew the secret of that stable, and were paid for not letting it get out of the bag. But there is a saying that "Murder will out," and little did the Browns surmise what a trick Fanchon was to play on them.

Fanchon? Yes, the baby elephant which at present is the property of the importer of foreign birds and animals, and was taken care of by Mr. Brown, who had been a sailor some twenty of the time arrived for her to appear in public. But Fanchon grew impatient; she thought it a little cruel of her to be kept in such a strange new world into which she had been brought. So one day when the keeper was absent she took it into her head to go on an exploring expedition.

She marched quietly out into the hall, and climbing up a narrow stairway—how she did it no one knows—found herself on an upper landing, whence she easily made her way into the kitchen where Mrs. Brown was preparing dinner. This good woman, hearing a step behind her, turned and saw a sight that almost froze the blood in her veins. For a moment she stood as one paralyzed, then, recovering herself, threw open the window and screamed for dear life.

It was a February afternoon, and Mrs. Marvin sat busily sewing, when she heard a most unearthly shriek that made her spring to the window in great haste; and all her neighbors did likewise. There stood Mrs. Brown at her own window, gesticulating and wringing her hands in an agony of despair, while over her head was stretched out—what? Could it be possible?—the long, flexible trunk of an elephant? Yes, unmistakably so, and the whole neighborhood was in the situation, and to take great delight in breathing the fresh outdoor air.

The newspapers and the small boy kept alive the excitement in the street, but that was nothing to the excitement in Mrs. Brown's room when the elephant had taken up its quarters and was making itself decidedly at home.

Fanchon was an enormous size, and she could be, and actually was, quite a playful one. She was an elephant, and her pranks were astounding on a large scale. Now and then she would go to the kitchen sink and fill herself with a drink in the clevered and easiest way. Occasionally she would come to the window and look out, and sometimes ninny in her trunk, and poor Mrs. Brown could be seen following, and wringing and shaking her hands in fear.

Presently, carpenters with lumber made their appearance, and five men worked like beavers to make a temporary gan slide for Mistress Fanchon. It was finished at the end of three days. It ran from the upper window to the top of the stone wall—not a very steep slope—then took a turn and a gradual descent into the open space below, leading directly to the stable.

Well, the day came when everything was in readiness for Fanchon's removal, and long before noon the street was packed with people gathered there to see the circus. The crowd were prepared to give Fanchon a tremendous cheering, but they had been requested to be as silent as possible, you could have heard a pin drop. It was a most remarkable exhibition of self-control to show stopped Fanchon, preceded by young Mr. Rolotte, who patted her on the shoulder and encouraged her with words of praise, and followed by her keeper, who kept close to her, ready to give her a piece of candy at the end of the slide to induce her to step on top of the stone wall. Her trunk was stretched out her head low in search of some support, and, finding Mrs. Brown's shoulder, she grasped her body around Mrs. Brown, and there she violently down upon the great slide. Down it she went, and then she kept the middle of the road, which, by the way, was very very narrow, and she was a long time in coming down. Then

Due to the Weather.

Hatslet Jones—So your new play was a failure! What was the matter—was the audience cold?

Woodby Booth—No—that was just the trouble. The thermometer in the lobby stood at a hundred degrees.—Munsey's Weekly.

An Inconsiderate Theory.

Mr. Upstart—See here, sir! I want you to understand that you cannot dictate to me now that I am your wife. Your days of dictation are over.—Once a Week.

An Unsatisfactory Theory.

Scientist—The yellow dot on a strawberry is found under the microscope to be a perfect straw. Did you know that?

Layman—No, but I know that strawberries were named before microscopes were invented.—N. Y. Weekly.

A Cool Suggestion.

Checkley Spatts—Dash me! I really don't know what to do this summer to escape my mother-in-law.

Sally de Witt—Why don't you take a trip to the Antarctic ocean? There's absolutely nothing going on there.—Puck.

Close as Mud.

Mrs. Bibbs (suspiciously)—I don't see how it is that typewriter girl of your's manages to dress better than I do.

Mr. Bibbs—Why, you see, she works for a living, and you don't.—N. Y. Weekly.

International Joke.

Smart Youth (to head-organ man)—Garfinahl, how's business this morning?

Don't you know, Cholly?

Hand-Organ Man (grinding away)—No. One monks 'miff.—Chicago Tribune.

Matrimonial Note.

Wife—What do you suppose is the reason there are no marriages in Heaven?

Husband—You stupid goose: It is to offset the fact that there will be heaven in matrimony.—Truth.

Carrying Out Directions.

Mamma—Now, Tommy, did you give the poor, sick dog his medicine while I was away?

Tommy—Yes, ma. I read the receipt, and it said the compound could be mixed on an old broken dish. I used the dish I broke, and I had to break one.—Philadelphia Times.

It Recalled Old Times.

"So you saw old Jones in Egypt?" "Yes."

"I must have seemed like old New York. It reminded you of old times, didn't it?"

"I should say so. He borrowed ten dollars before we were together half an hour."—N. Y. Recorder.

On the Broad Atlantic.

She—How far are we from the nearest land, doctor?

He—About two miles.

She—Indeed! So near? Ah, that is delightful.

He—Yes, but I hope we shan't touch there. The nearest land is the bottom of the ocean.—Munsey's Weekly.

THIS Celebrated Wine is the pure juice of the Longworth Grape Grape, raised in Speer's vineyards, and built under my direct supervision and is becoming partially restored before gathering. Its invigorating are recommended by all eminent Physicians. Being produced under Mr. Speer's own personal supervision, its purity and genuineness are guaranteed by the principal Hospitals and Boards of Health who have examined it. The pleasant child and the weakest invalids use it to advantage. It is particularly beneficial to the aged and debilitated and suited to the various ailments that affect the weaker sex.
Tonic and Strengthening Properties
It is in every respect a WINE TO BE RELIED ON.
Speer's Unfermented Grape Juice
Is the juice of the Speer Grape, preserved in its natural fresh, sweet state as it runs from the press by fermentation and evaporation, thereby excluding the ruinous effects of alcohol. It is perfectly pure, free from spirits, and will keep in any climate.
Speer's Sacramental Claret
Is held in high estimation for its richness as a pure Table Wine, especially suited for invalids.
Speer's P. J. Sherry
Is a Wine of superior character, and palatable as the choicest qualities of the grape from which it is made.
Speer's P. J. Brandy
IS A PURE distillation of the grape, and stands unrivaled in this country for its fine flavor and purity. It has a peculiar flavor, similar to that of the celebrated Cognac brandies.

ERRATIC LEO TOLSTOI.

Aesthetic Reminiscences of the Great Russian Novelist.

The Witness Proves Secretary to His Brother Tells His Impressions of Men Encountered at Servants' Hall and Midnight Drinking Bouts.

[COPYRIGHT, 1891.]

We had dined, my reverend friend and I, at the house of one citizen, we had feasted ourselves for their enjoyment on the baloony of our hotel overlooking the Grand Sonta bay. It was the evening half-hour of after-glow, and the air was so soft and sensitive that speech was scarcely more than a sigh as the light lasted; we did not speak. Slight was then the only privileged sense, and we watched the rings of smoke lazily break as they rolled across the lawn, and beyond the—objects of our mere contemplation—passed and repassed upon the yachts with dreamy sails as they passed into the purple harbor of the twilight. There were gurgles on the shore, and hollow splashings between the moored boats. The drowsed past wasted to come back again. Each wash of the incoming tide brought it to the very feet, and all length we were hemmed in by it. My friend, who is a doctor of divinity, a graduate of Berne, and a poet and critic and D'Annunzio had, like myself, become lost in reserie, and it was not till the amber light faded, leaving but shadows of the deep blue face of the sea, and dull russet bands around its western margin, that he broke the silence.

"I have been thinking," he said, "of Leoff Tolstoi," he spelled, "the great Russian writer about whom everyone talks more or less. He was the most eccentric and every way remarkable man I have ever met."

My friend, who, to be explicit, was Rev. Dr. Cornelius J. Calkoen, a clergyman of the Dutch Reformed denomination, had spent ten years in Russia, four as a pastor in Odessa, and the remaining six as the private secretary to and tutor of the sons of Gregorieff Tolstoi, the novelist's brother, who was exiled to Siberia by imperial decree in 1876.

"Your opportunities of meeting Count Tolstoi must have been unusual," I said.

"Not so frequent as you would think, with the extreme freedom of the intercourse which he figured during our casual acquaintance were significant. A strange, almost-called, meteor-like character he reminded me of the famous Dr. Melville who ran against a cow in the road and took off his hat to beg her pardon, regretting, at another time, when his own wife was spoken of in complimentary terms, that he had not the pleasure of her acquaintance. How far the count's peculiarities have been modified in the sixteen years since we met I do not know. I last saw him I cannot tell. But, judging from what I read of him from time to time, I should say he had simply grown but little change. His character might be summed up in the phrase 'an Ishmaelite.' Sincere, good natured, impulsive, living for the comfort and happiness of others and the good he could do, he was as I remember him, a rare jewel in an extraordinary setting.

"I first met him at Berne, 1870, I think. We had just arrived the evening before at Arues, the splendid country seat of his brother, Dragomir, near the city of Arues, in the Crimea. I sat in front of the mansion, listlessly gazing about, when I saw a tall, athletic man with a long hair, bright, earnest eyes and frank, open countenance approaching me at a rapid gait. He was not, I should suppose, about fifty years of age, and was clad—just how I cannot now recall, certainly without regard to modern taste. I arose to salute him, and he extended his good morning. Then, in accordance with the Easter custom, universally observed in Russia—

"'Christos voskress!' (Verily, He is risen) I replied, kissing him respectively.

"He then took a seat near me, and, during his large eyes full upon my face, asked, in a voice that was imperative, but kind: 'Do you know me, sir?'

"I had already instinctively recognized him and replied: 'I presume I have the honor of being addressed by the Count Tolstoi.'

"'I am a lawyer,' he said. 'But,' he continued, evidently voicing reflections in which he had been engaged as he walked, 'I do not like the practice at all. Are you acquainted with the paradocta, sir?'

"I leave them to be a collection of Roman decisions,' I answered, 'digested into laws by the Emperor Justinian. But it has not fallen to my lot to study them.'

"'The law,' the lawyer continued Tolstoi, indifferent to, if not oblivious of, my reply. 'Christ is the law, and the Gospel ought to be the book of sentences and international law. Then the nations would observe justice and preserve peace. You are a clergyman, sir, are you not?'

"I replied affirmatively.

"'Then serve the poor and the unfortunate,' he exclaimed. 'That will be live of the life of your Master. We may not do all the good we would, but we must try. Be a shoemaker and a cobbler.'

"I answered that the Divine law was undoubtedly paramount; and, as paralleling his predilections for shoemaking, instanced the case of Louis XVI., who became an excellent locksmith, and died the martyr to his trade and Frenchmen, who turned out to be a good printer.

"'Yes, yes,' was the abrupt rejoinder, 'a man ought not to have still a great deal to do.'

"The next day he came to me and said: 'Good-by! I start for Simferopol, and shall not see you again.'

"'I greatly regret that you must leave,' I replied. 'Permit me to accompany you to the railway station.'

"'No, no, no. You must not!' he declared, emphatically. 'There are three things I do not like—visions, umbrellas and to be accompanied to the railway station. I am a pilgrim, and I wish to live as simply as a pocahontas as my pilgrimage.'

"In October of the same year, having returned with his brother's family from Spain, I met the count at Odessa. The evening of the day of my arrival I was engaged in studying in my own apartment when my manservant Alexis came to me saying: 'Doctor, the Count (Tolstoi has arrived, and as the facility are not at home it will fall to you torepresent him.'

"'Most willingly,' I said, and proceeding downstairs I addressed him courtly and respectfully and inquired concerning his health.

"'I am well, but I do not know you, sir,' he answered. 'I do not know you. Who are you and what are you doing here?'

I smiled and said: 'Count, do you not remember that we met at Prischin last Easter?' I recalled the incident itself and the subject of our conversation as given above.

"'Well, well—possible. It is pardonable lapses memoriæ,' murmured the count. 'But whence do you come from?' he asked, petulantly.

"I told him that we had just returned from Spain, where his brother and family had been for health and recreation.

"'Stuff and nonsense!' he exclaimed, impatiently. 'You ought not to have come to Spain. Better, a great deal better, had you given the money to the poor. But,' he asked, with sudden inconsistency, 'have you been anything so tall?'

"'Certainly,' I replied. 'Let us step to the dining-room.'

"'Brown bread and a little milk, or sour watery, said the second, as if I wish for.' I remonstrated and pointed to the table, on which were a dish with the carter, cold chicken, cold ham, with pickins and sundry edibles temptingly displayed.

"Have the kindness to be seated and help yourself,' I said, as I poured out and proffered him a glass of alicante.

"'No, no,' he said impatiently, 'I do not like those things. They are too rich for me. Break your bread with the poor and eat their greens. That is better than all this vanity.'

"Then, impulsively seizing my hand, 'Spoksi ni notch gospodin' (phrase

"I DO NOT KNOW YOU, SIR."

for 'Good night, sir!') he exclaimed, and was gone.

"I sat for a few minutes in mute astonishment, and then inquiring of my servant was informed that the count had asked to be shown to a room, and had gone to bed. Next morning, as I learned from Alexis, he drove out to the estate of Nicholajew, a town situated on the Bug.

"I met him again in March of the following year, in the city of Elizabethgrad. He was in very low spirits, having been much occupied in contemplation of the miseries of mankind, which are nowhere more painfully manifest than in Russia.

"'Mankind is far from God; that I can see every day,' he said, sorrowfully, soon after our conversation began. 'Is this hopeless inequality? Why should the masters of society so greatly increase their wealth and the faces of slavery grow black with toil and loading? Oh, my dear sir, what Pitches, what riddles! Tell me, have you any solution of these?'

"'Humanity and life are riddles,' I answered. 'And, from a religious standpoint, we must not forget that "we now seethrough a glass darkly." With this life the children of God will see "face to face." If we abide in God, we who now know but in part, shall know even as we are known.'

"'Yes,' the count rejoined, 'you speak as out of my own heart. But we do not find an acceptance of these things by the philosophers. Philosophy, indeed, has been making me quite unhappy. I have read Lessing, Leibnitz, Kant and the rest, but none of them answers to my aspirations. I am languishing.'

"'Count,' I replied, 'you are distressed. The philosophers are not philosophy. Like you, I found them unsatisfying. I rest in the declaration of Holy Scripture. You doubtless recall: "The world passeth away and the lust thereof, but he that doeth the will of the Father abideth forever."'

"There was a long pause, during which he was meditative. 'May I take the liberty of asking if you have business in town?' I inquired.

"'Yes,' he answered, 'I have a coat to be made. We will go to the tailor's.' I accompanied him to the shop. The tailor's name was Brischnow. He was not at home, but his assistant took the count's measure in the usual manner and his instructions to make it as plain as possible.

"'I shall be in town but two days,' said the count, 'can it be ready the day after to-morrow?'

The assistant assured him and we left. Next day I heard the noise of a heated controversy in the count's room. The man was near my own, and, alarmed by an occurrence so unusual, went to see what it meant. I found Tolstoi violently berating the tailor's clerk.

"'I do not know you, sir. You are no mistaken. I did not order you coat. Take it away and begone!' ejaculated the count.

"But the tailor's assistant did not go. He saw me and at once appealed to me.

"'Is it not true, sir, that his excellency came yesterday to my master's shop, and that I measured him to have a coat made?' he asked.

"'Yes,' I replied, 'the count ordered a coat yesterday. You are quite right. Count Tolstoi,' I said, 'this worthy man has but acted on your instructions.'

"'Is it possible that I am thus mistaken?' he exclaimed. Then, still he said to the tailor, 'I beg your pardon. Go finish the coat and I will pay for it here.'

"'Better not pay for it until it is finished,' I suggested, and it was so agreed and both parties departed in peace.

"This incident reminds me of another which took place a year previously, when, as I explained, I met the count in Odessa. Finding himself in need of that exceedingly important article of civilization, a pocket-book, he hastened on, as we walked, to accompany him to the shop where one was to be had. He there found what he sought and bought it at one ruble and twenty kopecks. He took the parcel with him, declaring he

"'No, no, no. You must not!' he declared, emphatically. 'There are three things I do not like—visions, umbrellas and to be accompanied to the railway station. I am a pilgrim, and I wish to live as simply as a pocahontas as my pilgrimage.'

"In October of the same year, having returned with his brother's family from Spain, I met the count at Odessa. The evening of the day of my arrival I was engaged in studying in my own apartment when my manservant Alexis came to me saying: 'Doctor, the Count (Tolstoi has arrived, and as the facility are not at home it will fall to you torepresent him.'

"'Most willingly,' I said, and proceeding downstairs I addressed him courtly and respectfully and inquired concerning his health.

"'I am well, but I do not know you, sir,' he answered. 'I do not know you. Who are you and what are you doing here?'

I smiled and said: 'Count, do you not remember that we met at Prischin last Easter?' I recalled the incident itself and the subject of our conversation as given above.

"'Well, well—possible. It is pardonable lapses memoriæ,' murmured the count. 'But whence do you come from?' he asked, petulantly.

"I told him that we had just returned from Spain, where his brother and family had been for health and recreation.

"'Stuff and nonsense!' he exclaimed, impatiently. 'You ought not to have come to Spain. Better, a great deal better, had you given the money to the poor. But,' he asked, with sudden inconsistency, 'have you been anything so tall?'

"'Certainly,' I replied. 'Let us step to the dining-room.'

"'Brown bread and a little milk, or sour watery, said the second, as if I wish for.' I remonstrated and pointed to the table, on which were a dish with the carter, cold chicken, cold ham, with pickins and sundry edibles temptingly displayed.

"Have the kindness to be seated and help yourself,' I said, as I poured out and proffered him a glass of alicante.

"'No, no,' he said impatiently, 'I do not like those things. They are too rich for me. Break your bread with the poor and eat their greens. That is better than all this vanity.'

"Then, impulsively seizing my hand, 'Spoksi ni notch gospodin' (phrase

for 'Good night, sir!') he exclaimed, and was gone.

"I sat for a few minutes in mute astonishment, and then inquiring of my servant was informed that the count had asked to be shown to a room, and had gone to bed. Next morning, as I learned from Alexis, he drove out to the estate of Nicholajew, a town situated on the Bug.

"I met him again in March of the following year, in the city of Elizabethgrad. He was in very low spirits, having been much occupied in contemplation of the miseries of mankind, which are nowhere more painfully manifest than in Russia.

"'Mankind is far from God; that I can see every day,' he said, sorrowfully, soon after our conversation began. 'Is this hopeless inequality? Why should the masters of society so greatly increase their wealth and the faces of slavery grow black with toil and loading? Oh, my dear sir, what Pitches, what riddles! Tell me, have you any solution of these?'

"'Humanity and life are riddles,' I answered. 'And, from a religious standpoint, we must not forget that "we now seethrough a glass darkly." With this life the children of God will see "face to face." If we abide in God, we who now know but in part, shall know even as we are known.'

"'Yes,' the count rejoined, 'you speak as out of my own heart. But we do not find an acceptance of these things by the philosophers. Philosophy, indeed, has been making me quite unhappy. I have read Lessing, Leibnitz, Kant and the rest, but none of them answers to my aspirations. I am languishing.'

"'Count,' I replied, 'you are distressed. The philosophers are not philosophy. Like you, I found them unsatisfying. I rest in the declaration of Holy Scripture. You doubtless recall: "The world passeth away and the lust thereof, but he that doeth the will of the Father abideth forever."'

"There was a long pause, during which he was meditative. 'May I take the liberty of asking if you have business in town?' I inquired.

"'Yes,' he answered, 'I have a coat to be made. We will go to the tailor's.' I accompanied him to the shop. The tailor's name was Brischnow. He was not at home, but his assistant took the count's measure in the usual manner and his instructions to make it as plain as possible.

"'I shall be in town but two days,' said the count, 'can it be ready the day after to-morrow?'

The assistant assured him and we left. Next day I heard the noise of a heated controversy in the count's room. The man was near my own, and, alarmed by an occurrence so unusual, went to see what it meant. I found Tolstoi violently berating the tailor's clerk.

"'I do not know you, sir. You are no mistaken. I did not order you coat. Take it away and begone!' ejaculated the count.

"But the tailor's assistant did not go. He saw me and at once appealed to me.

"'Is it not true, sir, that his excellency came yesterday to my master's shop, and that I measured him to have a coat made?' he asked.

"'Yes,' I replied, 'the count ordered a coat yesterday. You are quite right. Count Tolstoi,' I said, 'this worthy man has but acted on your instructions.'

"'Is it possible that I am thus mistaken?' he exclaimed. 'Then,' still he said to the tailor, 'I beg your pardon. Go finish the coat and I will pay for it here.'

"'Better not pay for it until it is finished,' I suggested, and it was so agreed and both parties departed in peace.

"This incident reminds me of another which took place a year previously, when, as I explained, I met the count in Odessa. Finding himself in need of that exceedingly important article of civilization, a pocket-book, he hastened on, as we walked, to accompany him to the shop where one was to be had. He there found what he sought and bought it at one ruble and twenty kopecks. He took the parcel with him, declaring he Tolstoi, Jr., excellent locksmith, and died the martyr to his trade and Frenchman, who turned out to be a good printer.

"'You, yes,' was the abrupt rejoinder, 'a man ought not to have still a great deal to do.'

"The next day he came to me and said: 'Good-by! I start for Simferopol, and shall not see you again.'

"'I greatly regret that you must leave,' I replied. 'Permit me to accompany you to the railway station.'

"'No, no, no. You must not!' he declared, emphatically. 'There are three things I do not like—visions, umbrellas and to be accompanied to the railway station. I am a pilgrim, and I wish to live as simply as a pocahontas as my pilgrimage.'

WAGES.

The authors of the McKinley tariff bill put forth as a prominent argument in favor of its enactment that the consumption of American labor would thereby be materially advanced.

Wage-earners were to derive great pecuniary benefit from the piling up of special duties on foreign importations, ranging so high as to become, in many instances, virtually prohibitory.

That was a captivating promise, but, like apples of the Dead Sea shore, it has turned ashes to the taste.

The McKinley tariff was passed.

The contract was duly signed and delivered, and the favored recipients of its bounties feel well content to pocketing the returns at within their grasp.

Not so the laboring masses, they who toil from morn to night. Taxed with heavier living expenses no tariff wage emolument is visible.

Wages have not increased, but, on the contrary, in some particulars been actually reduced.

That is reality, not a flimsy theory.

Gentlemen of the McKinley school, unable to truthfully deny the existence of such a fact, now turn around and coolly tell the workingmen of America—"Had it not been for our own loose, defective tariff wages would have gone lower down!"

What noxious rant, yet how perfectly in accord with one-sided protection.

Protection to be honest, must be general.

Making high wages a promised consequent of high special duties is a fallacy of the first kind.

What do bounty protected monopolists care about labor except to get out of it the greatest possible amount of work and at the very lowest possible price?

That is the rule of action, with few, if any, isolated exceptions.

Labor is the basis of legitimate wealth.

A hundred McKinley tariffs cannot subvert the foundations of truth and justice.

If there is profit in monopolistic protecting, we contend that labor ought to receive a generous slice and not be put off with meatless bones.

At the end of the fiscal year 1889 90 the pension roll contained 537,944 names. It has now 630,324, to which number Commissioner Raum is adding 1,000 a day.

David Morrissey, one of Summit's well-known citizens, died last week, after an illness of five months, from a complication of diseases. Deceased was a sterling and prominent Democrat.

Georgia has now no third party. Louisiana is equally fortunate. Each is a Democratic State. Ohio and Kansas are in a similar condition, and they can be hardly relied on as Republican States.

Judge McCormick, of the Union County bar, has a good warm friends in this vicinity who will be glad to learn that the Judge is enjoying himself hugely on his European trip and is in good health. He will return in time to duties as an upright Judge, about Sept. 12.

A Washington despatch of July 20 says: "The Secretary of the Treasury gives notice that a new distinctive paper has been adopted for new issues of United States bonds, National bank notes and certificates. It is cream white paper, the distinctive feature of which is a localized red and blue fiber so placed as to form a perpendicular stripe on either side of the centre portrait or vignette."

It is not generally known that Edison has made wonderful improvements on the telephone which he had patented and is now in Ogden Park. By it conversation can be carried on in the room without going near the instrument. The instrument will not be for public use until the present Bell patent expires, about two years hence, but the cheapness of telephones will then bring them into more general use.

The term of Chief Justice Morcus Bonsley will soon close, and he will probably, in view of his age, be retired. He was born in 1815. In 1864 he was appointed Chief Justice by Gov. Parker; re-appointed by Gov. Randolph in 1871; by Gov. McClellan in 1878, and again by Gov. Abbett in 1885. He has made a record which is a matter of State pride and gratification, as one of the most eminent jurists in America.

The Indianapolis Sentinel very truly says: "What is true of Indiana is true of Ohio. Neither the Democrats nor anybody else has the power to change it, and so far as the Democrats are concerned they have no desire to change it. The Democratic party is thoroughly united on the tariff question. There are differences as to details, but no man can claim recognition as a Democrat who is not squarely opposed to the principle of high tariff for protection. Upon this issue the party in 1890 won the most sweeping victory in its history. The Democrats could ask for nothing more than to have the same issue presented to the country for next year. With this issue they are certain of victory." And, we may add, with the help of a good candidate round which the party can rally to a man, the contest for success will indeed be most brilliant.

Elliot Purvis, formerly lecturer of the Farmers' Alliance and now editor of the Alliance Herald, Cardington, Ohio is one of the most intelligent members of the Alliance, and does not believe in the Government loan idea. He says:

"I am an old Republican and come of a Republican stock. One of my earliest recollections as a boy was of sitting in father's barn being taken away on the underground railway. I still believe in the old Republican principle, but the party has abandoned those principles. It has gone off on false doctrines, and I refuse to follow it any further. There are 100,000 Republicans in Ohio in the same boat. At least 50,000 will have backbone to vote against McKinley. The biggest majority Ohio ever saw will be piled up against McKinley. It will exceed the memorable 102,000 rolled up against Vallandigham immediately after the war."

Mr. Purvis said the People's party vote in Ohio will be at least 100,000. The members of the State ticket may not get so large a vote, but the Legislative tickets will aggregate that.

AT IT AGAIN.

Hot-Mouthed Carey Goes Here Accused of Oppression and Worse.

Among the tenants of Tunis J. Carey, the past 18 months, has been Joseph S. Levy, a Hebrew merchant. Levy is an industrious, industrious man, with a large family. His expenses are so heavy that his income from his store hardly meets them, and he has fallen behind a month or two ago that he would seek another field about Sept. 1

Levy always paid his rent in advance. His skill was in his possession receipts from Carey showing the payments. A receipt bearing date of May 4 is "for rent from May 1 to June 1." A receipt dated June 2 is "for rent from June 1 to July 1." A receipt dated July 6 is "for rent for the month of July", and so on to pay day. Levy paid the bill Aug. 12, when Carey gave him. In his own handwriting a receipt. That rent was of course for the month of August, but as Levy was behind only that period he did not notice that in the body of the document Carey wrote "one month's rent —for July"—a month for which he already had made payment and held a receipt.

The day Levy was away in New York. His wife, which he values at $1,200, were packing their silver ready for moving. During his absence Carey was very busy trying to squeeze more money out of his departing tenant. He went to Charles A. Ludlow, and had him open a suit against L. vy to pay his August rent! Then he seized constable James Moffett to serve them. Mr. Moffett looked into the case and refused to take the papers. "I don't want to burn my fingers"—he said. The name of constable Rockfellow was suggested, and Carey, with his usual characteristic of his foul mouth, said he didn't want Rockfellow, because that worthy had once taken a case against him.

Carey finally found a man, E. B. Musgrave a man who agreed to act as bailiff, and he went to Mrs. Levy and demanded the August rent. Mrs. Levy insisted that it was paid, and Musgrave so reported to Carey. Then Carey's man Krewson, acting for Carey, went to Levy's store, seized $100 worth of goods and transferred them into Carey's auction and storage rooms in the same building—all this in spite of Mrs. Levy's plea to wait an hour or two for the return of her husband from New York, when he would pay any honest debt that was due.

While the place was being ransacked in and the goods were being carried away a big crowd gathered in front of the place, and considerable excitement prevailed. Carey's man was very rough, and pushed things around so that Mrs. Levy, with a baby in her arms, was knocked to the floor, so re she lay for some time in a fainting fit such as one rarely sees attended since of Dr. L ng, the result of illness brought on by the shock.

Levy says he will demand an instant trial, and in the case between himself and Carey, and will make things hot for his myriad landlord.

Yesterday afternoon Justice Nodyne issued an attachment for debt on some of the goods at Carey's place, and constable Rockfellow executed it. Then Carey came up to Judge Nodyne's office and abused him for having done his duty. At that time he said: "I don't give a ——— for the law. Hereafter I'm going to take it into my own hands." That is the way to the most ex-policeman does it. Such lawlessness must be suppressed.

THE PHYSICIAN'S CERTIFICATE.

A LOCK-UP FOR DUNELLEN.

Subscriptions for That and Town Rooms, Are Solicited and Will be Acknowledged In The Press.

The many Dunellenors who read THE PRESS editorials on fire protection, have discussed the possibilities and advantages of organizing a fire department and building a lock-up. THE PRESS cordially invites open interchange of the leading citizens, finds that where there is one in favor of a fire department, there are many in favor of a lock-up. It will soon be time for a suitable building for a lock-up and town offices. So THE PRESS, ready to do anything to help the thriving borough along, will commence now to solicit funds for a lock-up first, and look into the matter of a fire department afterwards.

A Subscribers' Blank has been drawn up and THE PRESS correspondent is now in receipt of a number of names of those willing to give towards the good purpose. The growing need of an improvement of the kind is proved every day. Yesterday there was a case, reported elsewhere, that threatened to be desperate. No one can tell at what moment such a thing will happen, and the time to take precaution, is before the thing occurs.

From time to time THE PRESS will publish the list of names showing the total amount subscribed. Read THE PRESS and see what is being done.

Crushed Between Cars.

A Jersey Central railway detective has been investigating an accident which occurred to a young man of Mt. Edward Moore, of East Fifty street, a week ago. The lad was crossing the tracks between two rows of cars standing on a siding when a drill locomotive backed into the line and caught the boy between them. He was badly bruised, and nearly had the life crushed out of him, but is now recovering slowly. The detective exonerates the crew of No 9, against whom complaint of carelessness had been made, from all blame in the matter.

New Batteries and Emmalii Pitched.

Here is an analysis of the pitching in Saturday's games:

Harkins pitched a total of 139 balls. Of these 70 were hit balls, 18 of them safely; 41 were called balls; 20 were called strikes; 10 were hit foul; and 1 one hit batsman.

Hemmill pitched a total of 141 balls. Of these 71 were hit balls; 19 of them safely; 35 were called balls; 24 were called strikes; 36 were hit foul; and 2 hit the batsman.

A MILITIA-MAN'S MISADVENTURES.

Shooting Him a Fastened Resident Started This Week With All Sail for the Lake.

UNDAY last a prominent resident of Fanwood and a well known officer of the 23rd Regt., of Brooklyn, accompanied by his wife and child started for a afternoon's drive toward Scotch Plains. When within a mile of Springfield the terrific storm overtook them, and the vehicle having no top, the result was a very wet group. They were therefore very thankful when the lights of that magnificent and spacious hostelry at Springfield appeared, and more so upon reaching it. The storm continuing they remained over night leaving at 6:30 Monday morning as the gentleman was obliged to catch the 8:38 train from Fanwood.

The roads being heavy he caught the 9:07. Upon reaching New York city on a letter from a debtor announced his non-intention of paying a certain sum then due. "Well this is a good starter for the day's business" he thought to himself. What next? Ah! an invitation from old —— to spend the night on his yacht. Take boat leaving South Ferry 5:30. That's delayed to 6:30. Promptly at 5 o'clock the Fanwood man was at the dock. No friend appeared and a boat was leaving the dock for Bay Ridge 5:15. Take the Bay Ridge till 5:30, announced the gateman. Supposing his friend would meet him at the Hamilton Ferry, he decided there to find the next boat left at 5:15 He then thought that there might be another line to Bay Ridge and upon inquiring found there was with a boat leaving at 5:30 for Bay Ridge. So he saw the boat moving out with his friend presumably aboard. "More bad luck, now I'll go home," and suiting the action to the word started for the ferry.

Remembering having seen a time-table in a re-rt on Liberty street, well known to Jersey men, he stopped in to consult it and found the next train left at 6 p. m. Feeling hungry he ate a sandwich there, and not feeling satisfied at another furgeon on, leaving New York on the 6 o'clock boat. At Jersey City the usual call of trains was heard, and he confidently entered the one labelled for Rahway, as it was the boat and he would soon be home. Much to his surprise, however, after leaving Roselle station, a sudden halt was made and he found himself overlooking a swamp in West Roselle with no engine attached, and the only passenger on board. "Well, now I'm in for it. If you were going to kick a fellow off at Roselle, why didn't you do it at the station?" "That's all right," replied the trainman, "the engine is over at 6:32." Thinking any train stopping at a little place like Roselle must certainly stop at Fanwood, he regained confidence and boarded it. Upon arriving there he jumped to the platform and Westfield and he grasped his grip certain he was all right now and prepared to alight. But there was not even a solitary soul, while Fanwood was left in the distance.

Arriving at Plainfield he consulted the time-table and found that the next train back was 8:31, then demanding a solemn vow of truthfulness from each and every railway official in sight, made them confirm it and seeking by himself to a seat, he sat down to wait, partook of a few more sandwiches. The 8:31 was seven minutes late—he caught it, and stood ready to jump from the rear car. It was over a mile away, and this Fanwood was left in the distance.

CITY DEPARTMENT.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE, THE COUNTY AND THE CITY. AND HAS THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY PAPER PUBLISHED IN THE COUNTY OF UNION.

J. A. DEMAREST, - - City Editor.

—Who can measure the harm that the concert saloon has done?

—Even the Frequenters of Jos Miller's concert saloon acknowledge the truth about it.

—Carpenters are hard at work upon the reconstruction of the interior of Muse Hall.

—Work began on Tuesday upon the enlargement of the Holy Cross Sunday-school building.

—Sexton Johnson, of the Methodist church, has started the town clock again, and it is still going.

—The official list of Plainfield's delinquent tax-payers, will be published in THE PRESS some time next week.

—What was your estimation of the character of Joseph Brengle Miller before he started his concert saloon? What is it now?

—When a man has deliberately thrown away the good will of a community he ought not to complain because he finds himself unpopular.

—And so Joseph Brengle Miller has had his reputation damaged to the extent of $10,000! Who will now say that anything is impossible with the press?

—Joseph Brengle Miller has not even the decency to distinguish between his electric-light concert-saloon advertisement on the public street over Sunday.

—Eighth street, from Central avenue westward, is most poorly lighted and in a very one-sided way. At the head of Liberty street it is as dark as pitch and dangerous to turn the corner.

—The First Baptist church claim the banner for Sunday evening's attendance. The Rev. Thomas Marles, of St. Paul, preached, and fifty were present in spite of the storm.

—The city park is being improved. More,carloads of earth are being spread out to fill in the uneven places. Who knows but it may be made a smooth and level lawn will underlie those trees?

—Joseph Brengle Miller is seeking to be reimbursed for his vanished reputation. If he wishes to know where his good name is now, why don't he go and he turn his eyes towards his concert saloon?

—It is anything but virtue that stalks abroad on a Sunday in public, by the side neighborhood of that notorious concert saloon. And people very often—and sometimes with good reason judge of infernal conditions by external appearances.

—Mahlon Titus, of South Plains, while under the influence of liquor, fell out of his wagon in this city at noon yesterday. He was picked up unconscious and taken to Muhlenberg Hospital. Dr. Fomlinson was not able to tell at once the extent of his injuries.

—The street is ripe for the Plainfield police. Let them begin at once and cut down the noxious weeds that have sprung up in certain parts of the city. How much longer is Plainfield to be disgraced with places that are considered an abomination even in larger cities?

—Smokestack", otherwise Ed Hoover, is alive yet and in Plainfield again. If anybody has a steeple, stack or chimney to paint, he would better secure Hoover before he leaves. He uses neither ladder nor scaffold, and goes to the top of a stack or of the highest church steeple with the agility of a cat.

—If any one has any doubt as to the character of Joseph Brengle Miller's saloon, let him interview Theodore Kurshals and learn from his own lips of the sights and sounds that were witnessed nightly by himself and his family. He was in the habit shut out only by erecting a high board fence against the windows.

—The committee having in charge the arrangements for the excursion to Atlantic City, between the latter part of this month and October 4, on the occasion of the Firemen's Tournament, promise a very low rate of fare for that event, and tickets are to be good for a week. A full announcement will soon be made.

—The ordinance concerning the tearing up of the streets, and the manner and their restoration to their former condition after being put into disorder by pipe-laying concerns, was put back on its second reading by the Council Monday night and readopted after the penalty clause had been corrected to $100, the limit of the law, in-tead of $200.

—The First Baptist church was crowded yesterday morning with those eager to hear the Rev. Carter Heim Jones, who preached a powerful sermon from the text "I am the Life". A large number were present from Elizabeth and Westfield. This popular preacher will also occupy the same pulpit next Sabbath, Aug. 30, both morning and evening.

—Plainfield is taking an eminently righteous step in suppressing concert saloons. The concert and dance element is simply adding gross immorality to the inherently objectionable character of the saloon. The very fact that they at once became popular proves how bad they are, and the more effectually they can be shut out of existence the better it will be for the morality and honesty and legitimate business of Plainfield.—Elizabeth Journal.

—New Jersey will begin to think it's Venice on a large scale, if the carnival craze keeps on spreading. Cranford has just got over the cold it caught,a-carnivaling, and Rahway is suffering from premature fever also. Now Plainfield is announces that she, too, contemplates an orgy with boats, Japanese lanterns and red fire. Carnival in New Jersey is the town meeting night, the river, thin clothing and doctors' bills.—New York World.

—The Plainfield police have long had knowledge of the immoral notoriety that has attached itself to the concert saloon of Joseph Brengle Miller has extended out and seared hold of another building of the neighborhood. One of the officers acknowledged to a reporter of THE PRESS a few nights ago that evil doers gathered at the house, kept the bystanders "moving" considerably and engaged in grossly di-reputable doings. If the police ever hope to suppress disorderly houses in Plainfield, let them begin now.

—A pitiful scene was witnessed in West Third street, Monday night, when a drunken woman, with two small children clinging to her skirts, made the air fairly blue with her curses and her bestial language, abusing everyone within hearing by applying foul names. The neighbors are only kept from making a complaint on account of three small children which she has, and on account of her hardworking, respectable husband. Every Monday, which is wash-day, with her she is in the habit of getting intoxicated and then becomes a regular terror.

A Sad Home Call for Farewell.

At a meeting of the Fanwood fire department, Tuesday, a resolution to purchase a hose cart was unanimously carried, and Messrs. Hall, Bloodgood, Bell, and Stiver a few members, were appointed a committee to see the cost. I paste them too lightly? They ought to be pasted so that they will not fall off. Please do so that it is in proper shape to send them on. WALTER C. STODDARD.

PERSONALIA.

A. D. Cook and family have returned from Saratoga.

Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Dayton are home from their visit to Bradford, Mass.

Miss Nettie Randall is visiting friends in Lebanon, Hunterdon county.

Mrs. Charles Sandford and daughters have returned from Watch Hill, R. I.

Frank D. Bonsall, of Madison avenue, has returned from Lake Hopatcong.

Miss Annie Blasier, of Newark, is visiting Mrs. Wm. Demler,of Washington ville.

Mrs. B. M. Clark, of Grandview avenue, is slowly convalescing from her recent illness.

Miss Clara Ward and Miss Mary Brooks are enjoying the rural breezes at High Bridge.

Councilman J. F. Buckle and the two Misses Buckle, of North Plainfield, are visiting relatives in South Jersey.

Mrs. S. O. Doane,of East Fourth street, mother of child engineer A. O. Doane, is very much better of her recent illness.

W. D. Murray will lead the Y. M. C. A. meeting Sunday afternoon at 4:35, and the Rev. Carter Heim Jones will speak.

Stewart Johnson, who was for many years a carpenter in this city, and who served through the late war, died at Basking Ridge Tuesday. He leaves two children.

A SERIOUS ASSAULT.

A Concert Saloon Performer Rounds a Fearful Insult to His Wife.

The concert saloons that have sprung up in Plainfield were responsible for another exciting scene night of Aug. 19, when William A. Cross, of Arlington avenue, was seriously assaulted by one of the performers in the "theatrical" annex to Wallace V. Miller's bar room, on West Front street.

Cross's story is that he was seated with James Conroy and Charles Hope at a table in the concert hall, watching a sort of panorama exhibited by a performer who was impersonating an Irishman.

A picture came to view that pleased Cross's fancy, and at sight of it he exclaimed "Oh, ain't that nice!"

It happened that just as he uttered the words a woman came out on the stage. She was subsequently said to be the wife of the performer. She evidently took Cross's remark to be meant for herself, and thinking that they were intended as an insult, for she said: "If I was a man I'd fix you."

At that her reputed husband jumped from the stage to where Cross was sitting, knocked him over, and jumped upon him. A result of the combined assault of the fists and heavily shod feet of the performer is that to-day Cross's right eye is closed up, his face is terribly cut and swollen, and on his body and legs are ugly bruises from the kicks received from the "actor". Cross's eye was almost kicked out of his head, and it is feared that his sight may be affected permanently. He had to not resent the insult to his friends, it is said, his face would have been beaten to a pulp.

He was bleeding profusely, and coughing up blood when the performer was hauled off. He was promptly taken to No. 2's engine house, and Dr. Carman was summoned and attended him.

Next morning Cross tried to have a warrant issued for his assailant's arrest, but Sergeant Lynch, on investigating the case, satisfied himself that the assault was to some respects a justifiable one.

The performer says, and others corroborate him, that Cross was intoxicated and that he repeatedly and deliberately did insult the man's wife, even after he had been told to cease his objectionable behavior. It is said that almost the entire saloon full of people commended the action of the man in avenging the insult, by shouting "You did right!" when they were asked by him if he had been wrong in the matter. It may be, therefore, that no arrest will be made.

NOT HELD FOR THE GRAND JURY.

The Papers in the Hiller suit Acknowledged.

THE PRESS Returned, and Justice Bush Will Try It.

Prosecutor Marsh has sent back to Justice Nash the papers in the case of Concert-saloon Joe against THE PRESS. He says an examination can be had before the grand jury, but it is an simple a case that it is not necessary for him to be present. He also returned the bonds which had been complained of to await the action of the grand jury.

The editors and publishers of THE PRESS have now demanded an immediate examination.

The Crescents Lose.

Following is the record so far in the contest for the base-ball championship of New Jersey:

Westfield	3	3	.500

Will Make It a Paying Institution.

[From The Newark News.]

F. W. Runyon, editor of the Central New Jersey Leader, and James A. Mundy, editor of the Plainfield Press, were appointed managers of the Plainfield Opera House, and have taken hold with a purpose of making the theatre a paying institution. Nearly $3,000 will be spent in improvements. The theatre cost $50,000, exclusive of the land, but the stockholders have never received one cent in dividends.

Ball-player Catches Shot.

The Mt. Tabor Record records the following accident to a well-known North Plainfield who lives at 78 Dunr street:

The young man named Will Cadmus, on Mt. Tabor, accidently shot himself in the arm while hunting, Wednesday, Aug. 19. The ball entered the arm below the elbow, and was immediately extracted by Dr. Colt. The bullet was a 32-rifle caliber. Dr. Colt extracted the ball from the shoulder. Mr. Cadmus is doing very nicely.

Another One Rolled Game.

The Crescent League's ball team goes to Westfield, next Saturday. The batting order will be: Jones, center field; Lufberry, second base; Tierney, right field; Frank D. Bonsall, who is home from the country, had not seen his father for the past fourteen years. The funeral took place on August 9.

Mrs. Rachel Randolph, of Plainfield, has been appointed assistant editor of the Commercial Hotel. Mrs. Randolph is in her eighty-eighth year. She retains her memory, eyesight and hearing, and is remarkably hale and hearty, being one of the youngest ladies who accompany her in her walks. She is very cheerful and pleasing in her conversation, relating many interesting incidents of her younger days. She says she expects to see the close of the nineteenth and beginning of the twentieth century. It is safe to say that she meets with a person in such advanced years and so lively as Mrs. Randolph.—Somerville Democrat.

Miss Ellen Blackford, whose illness was mentioned in the last issue of the Leader, died at her home on West Second street, Monday night. Miss Blackford was a sufferer for several years of two months' duration of softening of the brain, attended with paralysis, which finally caused her death. She had lived all her life upon the farm on which she died. She was the last of a large-lived family of brothers and sisters. Miss Blackford was highly and affectionately spoken by a large circle of relatives and friends as "Aunt Lide". Her funeral took place from the house, Wednesday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, the service being conducted by the Rev. Mr. Thompson, of South Plainfield. Burial was at Scotch town burying ground.

A PLAINFIELD MYSTERY SOLVED.

Little Wooden Shoes Found and Claimed by Frederick Fattoula.

The mystery about "Little Wooden" that has recent puzzled her neighbors in this city, has been solved since her last dispatches from Plainfield a few months ago.

The man with whom she lived in this city, is now said to be Frederick B. Fattoula a well-known Newarker and one of the most prominent coal dealers of the State. He is a member of the North End Club and the Triton Boat Club. Fattoula spent one year at Princeton College where he was graduated with the Class of '65. His wife is well known in society, and is a daughter of Joseph S. Baylis, of Warren place, Newark, who has been associated in business with her husband.

A few days ago he disappeared from his home in Newark, under very mysterious circumstances, and for the next month end of last city is discussing the scandal in which he is involved. Some months ago, Mrs. Fattoula heard rumors of her husband's dissipation which she at first refused to believe, but when, a few weeks afterwards, he started ostensibly on a pleasure trip to Canada, her suspicions became aroused and an investigation was begun.

Fattoula was traced to this city, where his wife and her brother found him living with a woman known as Lillie Wooden. Fattoula had been spending money lavishly on the woman, and Mrs. Fattoula learned that he had disposed of a number of valuable pieces of property in Newark in order to supply her with luxuries.

Mrs. Fattoula refused to acknowledge his guilt, and upon his earnest pleadings and promises of repentance he was forgiven. He returned to Newark with his wife, and everything continued all right until his second disappearance about two weeks ago. It has now been learned beyond a doubt that he is again in company with the Wooden woman, in Oneida, New York, where he has ordered his horses and carriages to be sent to him.

Selston Block Pavement for North Avenue.

Through the efforts of street commissioner Meeker the city has been presented by the railway company with Belgian paving blocks sufficient to lay a solid pavement between the tracks on North avenue in front of the station where the hacks stand. The city is excavating the roadway and making ready to receive the blocks. Sunday night rain filled up the excavation and made a lake which had to be pumped out.

Advancing the Sewerage Project.

By the vote of 6 to 4, Friday night, the City Common Council passed on its third reading and final passage the ordinance proposing to give J. M. Low and associates a franchise to construct a system of sewers in the town.

The ayes were: Messrs. Gallup, Hetfield, Moffett, Roberts, Smith and Spangenberg.

Noes—Messrs. Ackerman, Johnston, Rushmore and See.

All He Wants is $10,000.

At the instigation of one Joseph Brengle Miller, and his attorney, Charles A. Reed, the genial sheriff of Union county, Wm. H. Hicks, visited this office Thursday and served papers on the proprietors and managing editor of THE PRESS in an alleged libel suit for $10,000 damage, "as usual".

The next thing for Joseph Brengle Miller to do is to prove that it is possible for his reputation to be damaged in this community.

The Chief Won the Bottle.

Some time ago councilman Spangenberg wagered chief engineer Doane a bottle of wine that the first time a fire alarm was sent in from box 28, at Netherwood, the department would occupy at least 10 minutes in reaching the spot. The opportunity for a test occurred at 9 o'clock Saturday evening, when a bright blaze seen from the hotel grounds resulted in an alarm being sounded. The engines were on hand in just 6 minutes. They were not needed, however, for the fire was nothing but the burning of a big heap of straw and other rubbish piled up in a field beyond Leland avenue.

Special Exercises to Atlantic City.

At a meeting held last week, the Exempt Firemen decided to go to Atlantic City early in September, during the fireworks carnival in that city. They will run an excursion train by which Plainfield people may enjoy all the pleasures and privileges of the trip at a greatly reduced rate. A committee, of which Augusts Saltzman is chairman, and H. H. Brokaw secretary, was appointed to make definite arrangements. Representatives were present from Bound Brook, Scotch Plains, and Westfield, and the example of those places will cooperate in the excursion. It is probable that the Elizabeth firemen will also participate. The tickets will be good to return on any train within six days. The trip will be a fine one. Particulars will be given later.

Paine News From New Brunswick.

The following foul items are entirely untrue. They are both from New Brunswick papers of yesterday. The first emanates from a sporting rumor; the second is received by telephone from the sheet on Somerset street that is now buying Rahway with money received for advertising "Paine Dollar Goods."

(From the Freeholder.)

PLAINFIELD, July 29.—Paine Dairy Dollmore a singer in a concert hall, has brought suit against the Daily Press for $10,000 damages for an article published in a recent which she claims is untrue and detrimental to her character.

Tribute to the Departed.

Funeral services over the remains of Mrs. Rachel L. Harford were held afternoon of Aug. 19, at the residence of her sister, Mrs. S. A. Mellen, on the Erons railway station. Her pastor, the Rev. Cornelius Schenck, came from Dover to officiate. In his sermon he spoke touchingly of her Christian resignation and obedience to God's will. She had no fear of death, and passed away, leaving not many of her behind. She left them, she said, in God's care, whose mercies were boundless, and who was abundantly able to sustain and keep them.

The deceased was conscious to the last, and spoke lovingly and tenderly to the mourners gathered about her.

At the funeral her favorite hymns were sung, by a choir composed of Elmer Runyon, William Runyon and George Stevens.

The remains were taken to her former home, Middletown, N. Y., for interment on the 5:50 train next morning. The stricken family and their friends are deeply grateful for the kind offices of Supt. Peddle of the Jersey Central railway, who granted many especial favors in the shape of arranging for the transportation of the remains and the mourners to Middletown. We are also fully appreciative to Supt. Rockefeller of the Long Branch road for his kindness in seeing that she was safely and comfortably conveyed from Union Grove when stricken ill.

Good for young and old. We know of no better remedy for Coughs, Colds, &c., than Improved Wood Syrup. It is delicious, effective and harmless. Sold by druggists. 25 cts. per bottle. The ordinance establishing the grade of Hamilton avenue, between Second and Third streets, was passed.

A Sewerage ordinance was also passed.

THE VETO OF NO AVAIL.

Is Duly Passed Over the Mayor's Opposition, the Low Valuedrain Sewerage Scheme Is Law.

At the special meeting of the Plainfield Common Council held Friday night, the reports of the committees and form of ordinance for the proposed construction of waterworks by J. M. Low and his associates, were received and filed.

Mr. Ackerman moved that consideration in the matter be postponed to October 5.

Mr. Hetfield insisted that there was no reason for postponement, and said that copies of the contract had been seen by all the councilmen for a considerable length of time.

Mr. Ackerman said that he had n't seen it since it was altered, and there were others who had n't. He and his colleagues wanted opportunity to look into the merits of the matter.

Mr. Ackerman's motion was lost by the vote of 4 to 6. Those voting in favor of it were Messrs. Ackerman, Johnston, Rushmore and See. Mr. Ginna was absent.

Mr. Hetfield presented a resolution that the bids and specifications be approved and that the Mayor and City Clerk be instructed to engross the contract for the city. This, after considerable discussion, was adopted, by the vote of 6 to 4.

Ayes—Messrs. Gallup, Hetfield, Moffett, Roberts, Smith and Spangenberg.

Noes—Messrs. Ackerman, Johnston, Rushmore and See.

Before voting, Mr. Ackerman insisted that the Mayor's fellow-councilmen be given an opportunity to examine the document carefully.

Mr. Hetfield said that it had been in the hands of the City Clerk a long time, and could have been examined there.

Mr. Ackerman made a speech in which he said that the Low company wanted more money for fire hydrants than was asked by the Water Supply Company.

Mr. Hetfield replied that the Water Supply Company had offered an exorbitant rate of $60 per hydrant, for which they would furnish water for fire purposes and flush the sewers, while for the same service the Low company wanted only $25 per hydrant.

Mr. Ackerman held that the Water Supply figure for fire service was $15 per hydrant.

Mr. Hetfield said that the Water Supply people had never, to his knowledge, made less the one offer of $60. They had promised to meet with the councilmen and consult in the matter, but had never done so.

Mr. Ackerman replied that the members of the company were reputable and respectable men right here in town all the time, and the councilmen could have consulted with them any time they desired.

"Yes"—said Mr Hetfield—"if we got down on our knees and cried before them we might treat with them."

Mr. Rushmore said that this was the first time he had seen the new contract, and he did n't propose to vote for it without careful examination.

Mr. Hetfield said that everything had been done by counsel to make the contract a perfect one.

The Mayor's veto of the Low waterworks ordinance was presented and read as follows:

To the Honorable Common Council of the City of Plainfield.

GENTLEMEN:

I return herewith without my approval an ordinance entitled "An ordinance to provide for the obtaining and furnishing of a supply of water to the City of Plainfield, for the purpose of extinguishing fires, and for other lawful uses and purposes".

The object of this ordinance is to give to Joseph M. Low and his unknown associates the consent of the corporate authorities, to form a corporation, under the name of the Plainfield Aqueduct Company, for the purpose of supplying the city with water.

I cannot conscientiously sign this ordinance without first being made acquainted with the reasons and considerations which you purpose to grant the franchise referred to. Said terms and conditions are supposed to be embodied in a contract which was drafted more than a month ago, since which time it has been in the hotel proprietor's possession for the benefit of that portion of your honorable body favorable to the passage of this ordinance. Five members of the Common Council have been kept in ignorance concerning the character of the contract. The five members have been withstanding their right to the fullest information respecting all measures brought before the Council. The information Council has kept information of the changes and alterations which have from time to time been made in the compact as originally adopted, but I am informed and believe that it does not meet with the approval of the City Clerk, nor even from a purely business standpoint, my own judgment is that this contract should have been submitted to the Common Council, and fully discussed and agreed to, before the final passage of this ordinance. In no other way is it possible to reach an intelligent conclusion as to the advisability of granting the proposed franchise.

Plainfield certainly has no need of two water companies, neither of which can succeed, for any other basis and inasmuch as the plant of the Plainfield Water Supply Company is already approaching completion it seems to me unwise to have our streets torn up again, and the inhabitants subjected to the annoyance and damage which we have already experienced, through the laying of pipes by the present company.

It is a well known fact that competing companies can more sooner or later consolidate, and the latter is the one more generally effected, but

TURNED OUT TO GRASS

Mr. Floating Finds Himself a Case of Conversational Failure.

The Story of Uncle Lem Dewey's White Horse and His Peculiar Method of Waking a Living—Two Humorists from a Happy Hunting Ground.

COPYRIGHT, 1891.

I have always considered my conversational powers to be much above the average. My remarks have almost never failed to interest and instruct my hearers. They have a convincing force which influences even my wife. I can bring her to a reasonable view of any question by persistently taking the wrong side of it.

In the course of time there might have grown up in me an unbecoming vanity regarding this gift of eloquence, if it had not been ordained that I should come to Grimesville. My brief sojourn there has added the finishing touch to the modesty of my nature. The Grimesville rustic is polite. He does not interrupt me when I talk. He has listened to my brilliant comments on topics of the day with a well-preserved look of deep interest, which, far from a polite, monotonous acquaintance, he had learned to bear. I can tell that by myself.

I have been in Grimesville some of those days which, for fast, swift others from a mortal's life, are as long as my uncle's clock has sat and wooden countenance of its visage, up all to my self. I have been in Grimesville and had some sense in its inner parts, for, whereas in New York I was considered good enough to be one of the company pers, I am inclined to think a faithful man in Grimesville.

My experience of failure is especially painful when I am called upon to visit the store. It is considered bad form in Grimesville for a gentleman, as if I were merely a common creature, to buy anything. The venerable merchant who has kept the store since the days of Uncle Lem, will feel offended if one offers him no more than money for his goods. He wishes to have a talk to hang around the stove and talk a bit, and take a social shot or two at the topics of the day, and then buy five cents' store. As I class nothing but guns and cannot interest these people in conversational enchantment, my social failure is complete and hopeless.

The first time I went to the store, I made the unfortunate error of trying to be funny. I called attention to a couple of advertising cards which were hanging on a wall, and remarked reflected that I was almost as much of a fixture there as the stove. I had been in the store the day before and had said the same thing.

When I visited the store again, I took Mandie Floating with me. Mandie is not on the part of her auditor will never check the easy flow of her conversation. I thought, at any rate, if I could get her subject, she will continue to present her views of it to me for an hour or more after I have fallen asleep. So I often walked up and cought her at it. She should be finally the person to converse with old Jones, the storekeeper.

I prepared her for the interview by saying that old Jones had passed for a local celebrity in cribbage because he had once explained to a man never to take more than one card when he was playing for a game. I also told her that old Jones had the best of gossip, and that he was the only man in Grimesville to whom the Jones and you Jones kept to get into the good graces of the community.

I left Mandie and a special engagement to make some items of fortune with old Jones. She was to meet me at the village hotel. The result was not what I had expected. I had always thought that Mandie was a fluent talker, but in comparison with the sight of her I am almost without sight. Mandie's conversation was not only a revelation to me, but it was also a revelation to the village. It related to her neighbor, Leonard Irwin, whom I had seen once or twice, and who, I should not imagine, was entitled to any opinion on political matters. This was the gist of it.

Uncle Lem owned his old white horse. Years of experience with the locomotives of Uncle Lem's stable had proved to him the uselessness of this animal as an expression of mournful and hungry despondency. Therefore, at the close of the season, a man took a few slats of paper, to the Colonel Uncle Lem's pasture, and there he ruled out of the horse. Through the summer, when the community were in need of a horse, it simply went to the pasture and caught it. Uncle Lem charged two dollars a trip for the horse, and there was no end to the business. This is happened that the horse, after the season had closed, made the regular hire, had been in the habit of hiring himself out to the village. He had

DOWN BY THE CREEK.

In summer time I love to go
Down by the creek, the cool creek,
Along the meandering overhung path,
To where the murmuring water takes its bath,
And kneel and dip pale and weak
My face.

To lie down on the green bottom
And look through the water to the sun,
Where bubbles and minnows and tadpoles play,
To hear the birds sing,
To love to be there, all alone,
On hot summer days,
Away from all the cares of life;
Forgetful of the past and present,
And careless of future ways.

To throw a stick into the stream
And play that it's a boat
Which sails off proudly all alone;
A hunt that means no fun for me—
Just sitting there alone.

To revel in that peacefulness
Of quiet summer days,
Midway, makes me forget my fears,
And all the cares that burden years—
I tell you, sir, it pays.

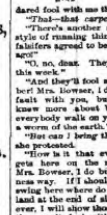
MR. AND MRS. BOWSER.

Another One of Their Many Housekeeping Trials.

He Put Down the Carpet—What "Comes from Having a Wife Who Doesn't Know Anything About Managing a House."



HEY finally brought up that celebrated this afternoon," said Mrs. Bowser affably, at dinner the other evening.

"Did, eh? Put a tack into you picked it up, I hope?"

"Only four days."

"Curious how everybody takes advantage of you. They wouldn't have dared fool with me that way!"

"That—that carpet isn't down yet."

"There's another specimen of your style of running things! The infernal thing's spread to be here a month with scrit."

"O, no, dear. They said some time this week."

"And they'll fool around till September! Mrs. Bowser, I don't want to find fault with you, but I do wish you knew more about business. You let everybody impose on you as if you were a worm of the earth."

"But can I being the men up here?" she pleaded.

"How is it that everything I order gets here on the middle? Because, Mrs. Bowser, I do business in a business way. If I should let you have full swing here where do you suppose we'll land at the end of six months? Now over, I will allow those carpet men that they can't fool with Jemima J. Bowser, no matter what excuses they can palm off on his wife. I'll slip up and put that carpet down in seven minutes."

"You—you don't mean it!" she gasped.

"Certainly I do. I don't care about being a dollar or two, but I propose to assert my independence. Where's the hammer?"

"I wish you wouldn't. A carpet has got to be nicely put down."

"Exactly. I have seen one or two carpets in my life! Where's the tacks?"

"But I know how it will end," she persisted. "You'll get tired out, get mad, and then—"

"And then, what?"

"Just remember that it is against my wishes. If anything happens don't blame me."

"Now, did I ever blame you? When did anything ever happen?"

She gave it up, and he removed his coat, vest, collar and tie, and then appeared upstairs. The carpet lay in a heap on the floor, and he matched it, pushed up his sleeves, and was about to begin work when Mrs. Bowser opened the door and observed:

"I don't see how you are to get it down without a stretcher."

"Perhaps not. There are a great many things in this world for you and every other wife to learn, Mrs. Bowser."

She retired and two minutes later heard the sound of the tack hammer. She stood it for five or six minutes and then went up and looked in on him again. He had got the carpet tacked along one side, but the other was free.

"Why, you are tacking that carpet on the bare floor. There's the lining on the window sill! You'd have made a nice job of it, wouldn't you?"

He couldn't crawl out of it, and he contented himself with rising up and pointing sternly toward the door. She went out, but blundered and heard the rip! rip! rip! as he pulled up his work. It was a quarter of an hour before she dared enter again, and then it was in response to a yell which made the cook drop three plates and the dog howl uncourteously.

"W—what is it?" she gasped, as she rushed in to find Mr. Bowser standing on one leg against the wall.

"What is what?"

"Why, you whooped like an Indian. Your face is as red as fire, and something's happened."

"Mrs. Bowser, I am not in the habit of whooping," he hissed back, "and nothing has happened. When I want your valuable services I'll call to you. The carpet is down and probably came from some one in a balloon passing over the house."

He had answered every bar about ten minutes when she looked in on him again. He had three-fifths of the carpet down and was tacking the fourth, and as she reached the head of the stairs he was pulling out one of the bedroom door with a suppressed yell and a great oath.

"What on earth are you trying to do, Mr. Bowser?" she asked.

"You go here again!" he shouted in a voice of thunder. "I told you to go downstairs and stay there! Does it take two million people to put down one unfortunate old carpet?"

"But can't I help?"

"No, you can't help! I'll put the things down, darn it, and the cook and the house dog and Mr. Bowser can carpet men don't come up here to lay it. They only bring it! I'll lay it, darn it, with a fool tack long on the other! Jemima J. Bowser, you go downstairs and I'll—What's the matter now?"

"It's got the wrong end of the wrong wrong!"

"No, I am not. You go!"

"But, Mr. Bowser, you can't, you know, to put it on that way. It—it won't do at all. I know you'll—"

"Mrs. Bowser, I am not in the habit of being disputed twice!" he hissed, and gazed at her with such fierce expression that she fled.

"Do a fool task some of do you?"

"Well, I suppose you do."

"Very well. When man was created the idea was that he should run the house. That's how he came to know so much more than a woman. If I am not competent, however—if you have put down fifteen or twenty million carpets, and I never saw one in my life, why, you'd better finish this job and ask the court to appoint a guardian over me!"

"Hadn't you better wait till morning to finish up?"

"Not by a jugful! I'll put'er down if it kills me stone dead."

He heard the door go after her as she went out, and when he grabbed hold of the carpet and ripped it up it seemed as if the house lifted up a foot or more.

MR. BOWSER PUTS THE CARPET DOWN.

"Mrs. Bowser, you go to bed to pay for this!" she heard him as growl as she listened at the door.

He whirled the carpet around the right way, upset his saucer of tacks, and bunched the lining all up in a heap; and as he moved about he suddenly entered another wheap and hobbled about on one leg. She knew this was the last straw and she fled. On her way down stairs she heard the window go up and next moment something scraped along side the house and fell with a "dar whop" on the iron fence. It wasn't Mr. Bowser. He came downstairs with his eyes as big as onions and his face as red as paint, and as soon as he could get his breath he spoke:

"Your old carpet is down, Mrs. Bowser, down out of the window."

"Didn't I tell you before you began, that—"

"No! You wanted it down!"

"Didn't I say you'd get mad and blame—"

"Never! Mrs. Bowser, this is the last time I ever lift my hand to do anything around this house! I've rubbed more'n a yard of hide off my knees, skinned both elbows, and driven 13,000 tacks into my feet, besides getting a crick in my back which will lay me up the rest of my life!"

"But I told you in the very beginning that—"

"That you wanted the carpet down! It is down! I am down! That ends it! I'll ball the old room up with old wall spikes, and if you even ask me in the future to sharpen a lead pencil I won't be responsible for my actions. Mrs. Bowser, good night!"

And as he limped upstairs and threw himself on the bed with a jar which shook the house and stopped the kitchen clock she heard him groan:

"And this comes from having a wife who doesn't know anything about managing a house."—M. Quad, in N. Y. World.

NUTS.

Hon. Jerry Simpson, Farmers' Alliance Congressman-elect, has been handing forth some hard nuts for the bounty protectionists to crack. In a recent speech he said:

"We are in earnest and we think that the people of America have been greatly wronged.

I go to the Republican party and ask them for its remedy.

It replies—'Put up the tariff.'

And yet you have been putting up the tariff for thirty-two years.

I asked Mr. McKinley—

'If tariffs raise wages, why is it that Great Britain, a free-trade country, pays twice the wages protected Italy does?

Why is that Great Britain pays double to her wage-earners what she paid in 1851, when she became a free-trade country?

Why is it that Great Britain pays her laborers one-third more than the laborers receive in the protected countries of Europe?

My idea is that the freedom to trade with others is a primal right.

What have the Republicans done?

They have shut the gates off from the markets of the world.

Oh, yes, they put wheat and corn and oats in the duty list.

We have a surplus of them! What there any need of protection there?

What we need is a chance to trade with all the world."

The Farmer Congressman-elect has no admiration for the McKinley plan of making those who toil for a living pay dear for the necessities of life, in order that a favored class may reap princely profits.

He is sound in judgment and his followers are legion.

Freedom is what this country needs.

Freedom to unfurl and keep unfurled the flag of American Commerce over every ocean.

Freedom for American manufacturers and artisans to use free raw materials, thereby increasing the demand for American labor of all kinds, and securing for the products of American industry both home and world-wide markets.

Freedom from wanton public expenditures.

Freedom from unjust and oppressive taxation.

Freedom from the plundering effects of Trust Combines, Sordid Monopolists and Gambling Speculators.

Freedom for small capitalists and tradesmen to prosper on an equal footing with the largest.

Freedom for honest labor to enjoy the full benefit of its earnings, without paying tribute to any specially protected interest.

Freedom is real Protection, because it raises the general public good far above personal greed, and guarantees to all the people a chance to live and let live.

THE G. O. P. AND THE CROPS.

We've been looking for it—and here it is already—it was bound to make its appearance in some way, a chestnut though it be—and work to the edge at that. With somewhat more logic than most protectionists, Mr. Chauncey M. Depew does not attribute the present prices of wheat and oats to the tariff. But he has a touching faith in a Special Providence overruling the situation for the benefit of tariff spoliation. In an interview telegraphed from London to the New York Herald, he says: "I feel that Providence, having witnessed the effect of the last Democratic administration, sent a good crop in America and a bad crop in Europe in order that the blessings of a Republican administration might be continued." This pious attempt to implicate Divine Providence in the good harvests of this country and the bad harvests of Europe, in order to elect a Republican President and maintain the McKinley tariff, approaches the very verge of the Ridiculous. Yet it gives us pleasure to contrast the childlike piety of a Depew with the occasional blasphemy of an Ingersoll.—Dover Index.

THE RIGHT KIND OF TALK.

Cardinal Gibbons' address on the occasion of conferring the pallium upon Archbishop Katzer, of Milwaukee, on Thursday last, was at once a warning against introducing the spirit of nationalism into religion and an eloquent appeal for loyalty to law and country. "To one country," he said, "we owe allegiance, and that country is America. We must be in harmony with our political institutions. It matters not whether this is the land of our birth or of our adoption. It is the land of our destiny. Here we intend to live and here we hope to die." With such a principle as this throughout the entire social economy of a nation there could be no fears for its future.—Philadelphia Record, Aug. 22.

Election day occurs on Nov. 3, this year.

Ex-Senator Hobart has resigned as Chairman of the Republican State Committee. Probably ex-Comptroller Anderson will succeed him.

Not more than a year will elapse before the Democratic National Convention will be in session. As yet not a State, as a unit, has spoken for anybody for the nomination of Mr. Cleveland. It will be difficult to find one that has not endorsed him.

Jerry Simpson, the Farmers' Alliance leader, is tip-taking mad because he was charged $10 for fare from Chicago to New York, when he only came 900 to transport a hog. Jerry has evidently forgotten that comparisons are sometimes odious.

"Only a year remains at most—probably but nine or ten months—before the National Convention and not a State has spoken for anybody but Cleveland," so says the Kansas City Mo., Times (Dem) and it's a fact—New York Times (Ind.)

That staunch Democratic journal, the National Democrat, of Rahway, has just entered upon the fifty-third year of existence. The name of the paper has recently been changed to Union Democrat. We congratulate Bro. Hyer upon the success of his paper.

It will be the fashion for Republican dudes to adopt the Washington style of dressing their hair. It will be carefully parted in the middle and called the "financial parting." To have it parted all on one side would be too much like the Democratic majority in the House.

INTO THE SUPREME COURT AGAIN

Roane W. Tyler and Others Striving to Arrest Competition in Water Supply and Trying to Bolster the Book and Bucket Trust in the Hands of a Monopoly.

From The Daily Press of Sept. 1.

Mayor Gilbert was served last evening, with a copy of a bill of complaint, together with a notice of an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States, in the case of Roane W. Tyler et al. against the Mayor, Council and Citizens of Plainfield over the question of the obtaining and furnishing of a supply of water," etc., and also the resolution adopted at the same meeting appointing or a form of contract between the city and J. M. Low, and directing the Mayor and City Clerk to execute the same. The petitioners are:

Mason W. Tyler,
Garfield Ott,
J. Evarts Tracy,
Charles J. Fisk,
George H. Babcock,
Philip Fisk,
Ernest L. Walz,
Eric N. Erickson,
John H. Wilson,
John Bunnell,
William E. Lowe,
William Thompson,
Joseph H. Thompson,
George H. Goddard.

The attorney of these men, Richard VanSchoick Lindabury, goes on to recite in his petition the old stock plea about the unconstitutionality of the act under which the ordinance was granted, etc., etc., while the men themselves tell the Supreme Court that there is a splendid water company already started here, and that it has lots of capital, and that four-fifths of the tax payers want the city to have it, Provided, and that it will do everything now that it has to to get the job,or words to that effect all through the pages of the typewritten petition.

What object such honest men as those named above have in arresting water competition in this city, and delivering the people into the hands of the water monopolists who are now compelling the consumers to pay $2.50 a thousand for gas no better than those in other places pay for 75 cents and $1, is a mystery.

It is said that other representative and wealthy citizens besides those named above, were appealed to to go on the bills, but they declined. Perhaps Potter, Jr., if is said, was one who refused, and in a six page letter to Mr. Tyler he gave his reasons. THE PRESS publishes the epitome for a copy of that letter.

A VALUABLE MAN.

Superintendent Bowden of Engineer Dunham's Staff, is Great Deceased, Indeed.

Engineer F. A. Dunham's right-hand man is the opinion of credit. Mr. David Bowden of this city; and Mr. Dunham is only trouble in this world is that he can't cut Mr. Bowden in two and have available at Isle of different places. The people at Hackensack where Mr. Dunham has some work under way, are just now discussing their engineer Mr. Bowden has been away from there. But the people at Dunkirk are rejoicing over it. The Herald of that city, says:

Mr. David Bowden, of Plainfield, N. J., is the gentleman who Mr. F. A. Dunham, the City Engineer has appointed as inspector of the brick and material to be used in putting out sprouts, and he will, also, have the general superintendence of the work. The Council called for the very best kind of work and brick from beginning to end, and Mr. Bowden, by his experience in being the right man in the right place, We have every reason to believe that it will be. Engineer Dunham has made a good selection for this responsible position, and there will be no shirking of the contract permitted under any circumstances. From the reputation which the honorable gentleman has earned in the past, there is no reason to believe that they have any fault to find with anything but live up to the contract in letter and spirit. But with all this, the fact that we have a live competent inspector on the job is a great relief to the people, and given additional confidence as to the character of the improvements now being made.

EX-CHULUMBUS DARLING STILL HELD.

Not Released From All Claims by Court Order.

From the Daily Press of Sept. 2.

A final settlement of the affairs of the bankrupt firm of John F. Plumner & Co., dry goods commission merchants of Broadway and Leonard street, New York, who, it will be remembered, made a voluntary assignment to Jeremiah P. Murphy, their head cashier, March 19, 1890, has been effected. The counsel engaged in the matters, John F. of Netherwood, and Albert T. Plumner, have fully discharged them from all claims. They have, however, retained all the claims of the firm against ex-councilman William S. Darling, of this city, the absconded partner of the firm.

This settlement was due in a great measure to the belief held by the creditors that Darling had made away with a greater part of the missing cash assets. Relatives and friends of the Messrs. Plumner have consented to waive their rights and interests against the assigned estate, and this includes the concession of the Dower right held by the wife of John F. Plumner against her husband's property.

A majority of creditors preferred a cash dividend, and this has been paid them to the extent of 30 per cent. of their claims. Some of the largest creditors, with Colonel William Strong, president of the Central National Bank, New York, as trustee, have taken title to John F. Plumner's real estate as their dividend. A large part of this real estate consists of valuable property in Ridgewood, and the personal indebtedness of the brothers, as apart from the obligations of the firm, has been discharged in full.

John F. Plumner said recently that Darling was still in Canada. Mr. Plumner does not intend to resume mercantile business. His wife, it is said, has given up a fortune to bring about the settlement.

FOUGHT WITH HIS CRUTCH.

Constable Warden Had to be Assisted in Taking a Cow-Legged Prisoner to Jail.

"Packer" Wilson, in the employ of John Goff, proprietor of the Fourth Ward Hotel, Liberty street, drove through Dunellen Monday at a very lively rate. He was he considerably elated thought he owned the road. He met Alvah Gray's lumber wagon on the main street and ran into it, but never stopped his speed. He abused horse to see whether any damage had been done.

Mr. Gray procured a warrant for Wilson's arrest. Constable Warden found him at Taylor's hotel, and took him before Judge Coles. Wilson was fined $10, but had not the money to pay, so he was therefore taken to the county jail at New Brunswick.

Wilson, who has but one leg and walks with a crutch, was very obstinate, and could not be induced to enter the carriage that was to take him to jail. He used his crutch as a weapon of defense, and savage attack upon constable Warden, who was obliged to get help from three or four men before he could get the prisoner safely secured. Wilson may also have to answer for his assault upon the constable.

DISPOSING OF THE DEAD MAN.

MIDDLESEX COUNTY AUTHORITIES HOLD A FARCICAL INQUEST.

The County Physician Washes His Hands of a Disagreeable Job, and the Coroner's Jury Did Their Overzealous Mindes of Their Unwanted Burden—Katie Hoffman Gets the Body on Paying All Expenses.

From The Daily Press of Sept. 2.

The Middlesex county authorities have concluded to their own satisfaction their inquest concerning the dead body found in John I. Holly's lake.

When they were informed of the finding of the corpse they postponed as long as possible all action in the case, and when they finally got down to work they got rid of the matter with a haste that strong-minded people would not hesitate to characterize as indecent.

The inquest—held at Campbell's clubhouse yesterday afternoon—was a farce. No attempt whatever was made to ascertain how the man met his death. The jury contented themselves with the verdict that the man died from unknown causes, and had no desire to learn whether these causes were leprosy or chilblains. They seemed not to care whether he killed himself or whether he was murdered.

The county physician, F. Henry Donohue, from Perth Amboy, made his appearance for the first time since the discovery of the body by the boys. Though the case was one which demanded his ingredable presence and deserved his fullest investigation, Dr. Donohue made no effort to go to the assistance of Mr. Holly, and had permitted his official duties to lag under the unskilful direction of a well-meaning but inexperienced justice-of-the-peace. At yesterday's inquest the county physician distinguished himself by acting as a pall-bearer at the funeral, and that it has lots of capital, and that four-fifths of the tax payers want the city to have it, Provided, and that it will do everything now that it has to to get the job,or words to that effect all through the pages of the typewritten petition.

What object such honest men as those named above have in arresting water competition in this city, and delivering the people into the hands of the water monopolists who are now compelling the consumers to pay $2.50 a thousand for gas no better than those in other places pay for 75 cents and $1, is a mystery.

It is said that other representative and wealthy citizens besides those named above, were appealed to to go on the bills, but they declined. Perhaps Potter, Jr., if is said, was one who refused, and in a six page letter to Mr. Tyler he gave his reasons. THE PRESS publishes the epitome for a copy of that letter.

The jurors began their inquest by examining one of the boys from Harrell's Hotel, Perth Amboy who had found the body while fishing. They spent an hour over him, and succeeded in impressing, from his evidence, the fact on their minds that the man had been found under the bridge. So much time having been consumed in settling this point, they proceeded to expedite matters.

A Spencer Anderson was called. He testified that Katie Hoffman worked for him and that she had had a brother Michael. That two weeks ago last Sunday Katie came into the dining room and told him that her brother had given her $20 in money and his bank book, and that Katie's mother was afraid that she would never see him again That he, the witness, thereupon ran out and called to Hoffman to come back. That Hoffman came with Katie and told Peter to go to the bank and get the money". and went away.

The witness could not say how Hoffman was dressed, nor how he looked. That was the only time he had ever seen him.

Mrs. Engel was called. She testified that her name was Katie Engel. That on Sunday, two weeks ago, Hoffman, who worked for her husband, suddenly gave up his job, and demanded and got a settlement immediately. That Hoffman took a piece of paper burnt on the dead man's body, and asked to identify it. Notified it as her husband's handwriting. Notified it by the way he wrote a letter to him. Notified it by the ruled lines on the paper.

Witness was asked if she had seen the dead man's clothes. She said that she saw a portion of his clothes, but had not looked at the body. Had seen the clothes out in the stable—a very dark one, where Hoffman had changed his clothes. She said she had notified the clothes, also the handkerchiefs. Said that when Hoffman went away he was dressed in a suit of blue cloth with white and fine pin-stripe in it. Was shown two styles of coats, a cutaway and a sack; said it was a sack coat that Hoffman wore.

Witness testified, in response to the ages inquiries of the county physician, that Hoffman was unmarried, so far as she knew, and that Hoffman told her he knew anything about. Having settled a matter having so much important bearing on the cause of the dead man's death and his identity, the county physician ended dege again into profound silence.

Juror Percy Ohl ascertained from Mrs. Engel that Hoffman had been in this country only a few months, having been at his years that he worked for them. Previous to his entering their service he had worked at a horse Brunswick.

The county physician saw an opportunity to impress the jurors. In talking to Mrs. Engel, Mr. Ohl had repeatedly used the terms "dead man" and "corpse."

"Mr. Ohl,"—bellowed forth the county physician—"who do you mean by 'this man' and 'he'?"

Everybody had understood that Hoffman was the man under discussion, and Mr. Ohl tartly said so.

"You ought to be explicit"—thundered the county physician,—"This man' and 'he' isn't low way to specify."

So Mr. Ohl had to repeat all his previous questions, explaining all the references to Hoffman as "this man" and "he." Michael Hoffman, who used to work for you". F. Henry Donohue thereby increased his sage importance in the eyes of the seven-citizen coroner's jury, and the cole gentlemen pitching quoits out in the yard, fatefully overhearing it all, said, the one to the other:

"Goodnight, but he 's a smart one."

Mrs. Engel made way for Katie Hoffman, who testified that when her brother visited her, two weeks ago Sunday, he gave her the money and bank book and said, as he went out, that he'd be back in half an hour. She never saw him again. His suit was of blue, with white and yellow pin-stripe in it. The ideas of his watch were misty, but it never seemed to occur to justice Wood to show to either her or Mrs. Engel the watch found on the dead man, or any other of the articles found on the body, for the purpose of identification.

Juror Bethune Dunham pulled up a leg of the dead man and looked at his right foot in front of Katie. "There's the kind of shoes he wore"—she said. Mr. Dunham said "Yes to be sure", in a kindly and reminiscent tone, pursed up his lips, scratched the fringe of whiskers under his chin, thoughtfully stroked his cleanly-shaved face, and held out his hat.

"Was his head that size?"—he asked, Katie thought it was.

"Yes: to be sure"—said Mr. Dunham.

No comment was made as to the disagreeable fitness of the description of the clothing that Hoffman had worn and that found on the dead man. The suit found on the dead man was a dark one, and without spots, dots or checks, and the coat was a cutaway. The jurors examined a piece of the cloth cut from the lining of the coat, and decided that the color was dark blue, and decided that the material was cotton, as the lining was of that material. The buttons were all found to be black, and the vest was found to be black.

The county physician was not called, nor was any medical man asked for his opinion concerning the cause of the dead man's death. The jurors were not fixed in their opinion by being asked for their opinion, and they therefore left the room without any opinion whatever as to whether the dead man died from natural causes or was dead before placed in the water, or was murdered. The medical expert, Justice Theodore A. Wood of Metuchen, read over his transcript of the evidence very haltingly, and looked bewildered and somewhat annoyed by the physician from time to time, and arrogated his legs unseemly about under the table. After the evidence had been read over the jurors, without the assistance of the dissenting table chewing up any more venturesome jurors, everybody but the twelve men seem to jog that case, "dead and tired," sidled out of the room. The jurors deliberated awhile behind closed doors and sent constable Mahlon Roper out to talk to Spencer Anderson.

After much dickering Anderson agreed, for Katie Hoffman, to bear all the county's expenses in the case, as well as those of the jurors, and to allow the body decent interment, provided the jury decided the body to be that of Michael. Then the jury ratified Katie's offer made at the inquest and they rendered this remarkable verdict:

"The evidences of Mr. Anderson and Mrs. Engel satisfy us that the body is that of Michael Hoffman.

"We find that this man came to his death from causes unknown to the jury."

Then, having relieved Holly's estate of all responsibility in the matter, the jurors left the room and swing the jurors with a sense of his importance.

Katie Hoffman, the servant girl in the employ of Spencer Anderson, dry goods clerk, of Passaic, turned up in time for the inquest. She had been spending the night at the house of Mrs. Engel, their brother Michael worked previous to his disappearance. Katie's reappearance was a great relief to her employer, who had been disturbing fretfully for her all the morning.

The jurors began their inquest by examining one of the boys from Harrell's Hotel, Perth Amboy who had found the body while fishing. They spent an hour over him, and succeeded in impressing, from his evidence, the fact on their minds that the man had been found under the bridge. So much time having been consumed in settling this point, they proceeded to expedite matters.

A Spencer Anderson was called. He testified that Katie Hoffman worked for him and that she had had a brother Michael. That two weeks ago last Sunday Katie came into the dining room and told him that her brother had given her $20 in money and his bank book, and that Katie's mother was afraid that she would never see him again That he, the witness, thereupon ran out and called to Hoffman to come back. That Hoffman came with Katie and told Peter to go to the bank and get the money". and went away.

The witness could not say how Hoffman was dressed, nor how he looked. That was the only time he had ever seen him.

Mrs. Engel was called. She testified that her name was Katie Engel. That on Sunday, two weeks ago, Hoffman, who worked for her husband, suddenly gave up his job, and demanded and got a settlement immediately. That Hoffman took a piece of paper burnt on the dead man's body, and asked to identify it. Notified it as her husband's handwriting. Notified it by the way he wrote a letter to him. "Mr. Ohl,"—bellowed forth the county physician—"who do you mean by 'this man' and 'he'?"

"You ought to be explicit"—thundered the county physician,—"This man' and 'he' isn't low way to specify."

A GREAT RECORD.

The Plainfield Club Leader in the Art of Base-ball Victories.

The base-ball team of the Plainfield Bicycle Club had as their opponents, this (Saturday) afternoon, on the Park avenue grounds, the Alerts of the Pond Meadow Trot Works.

The game opened with the Alerts at the bat, and by some fielding on the part of the Bicycle Club they took the lead by scoring 2 runs, only to lose the lead in the last half of this inning. Bleakley, Tilney and W. Murray and a three-base hit by R. Murray, assisted by two bases on balls, yielded 5 runs for the Bicycle Club.

The Bicycle Club did some hard hitting in the second inning, scoring 5 more runs.

Both teams did good fielding in the third inning, neither side scoring.

The Alerts again failed to score in the fourth, and were fielding on their part gave the Bicycle Club 1 more run.

In the fifth inning both clubs scored 2 runs no good base running.

In the sixth inning the Alerts could not get on to Lowrie's curves. The 2 men to the bat fanned the air for 3 strikes. Duddy's failing to connect with R. Murray's long fly, and Sheppard's and Lowrie's batting, gave the Bicycle Club two more runs.

In the seventh inning the Bicycle Club got rattled and let in 6 unearned runs on Hammill's fumbles. McMullen was brought in from right field and put at first, and Mullen was taken from the bench to cover right field. Diven succeeded in getting McIndoe called on strikes, which retired the side. One of the strikes—the second—was also called a dead ball, but in reality it was a passed ball. Thereupon Diven scored from the plate. The umpire sent him back to third, where he was left, on the dead-ball claim. So in reality the Crescents were not on a run in that inning, for the pitched ball could not have been both dead and a strike, and since it was a strike it was a passed ball.

As THE PRESS has repeatedly said, when the Crescents make errors they are costly ones. All three of Westfield's runs were in the seventh inning, and ought to have been shut out without a single run. One of Kesler's errors spoiled a fine chance for a double play.

In the 1st Kesler made another great record of five single hits and a two bagger—a hit for every time he went to the bat. Hammill did n't get a single strike on him. Despite his two errors, he did excellent work at shortstop, and made some very difficult stops.

McIndoe made one of his great Holiday hits at just the right time. He had a good bat—an "Irish" one, with a ring of green paint at the end. He picked out the third ball pitched, and sent it sailing far over the fence. It did not lost to sight in the clouds, and probably fell, if it isn't still sailing through the air, somewhere near South Amboy. Three times he was were on the bases ahead of McIndoe, on hits of their own, so all three of those runs were earned. The Crescents earned 2 runs by good base hits, sharp and steady batting all through the game.

Seven of the hits that were made were executed with the old war-time bat that has been Lafferty's pet for years. The stick was brought over by Lafferty in the Mayflower, and was a most disreputable looking thing. It was flat enough on one side to answer a small boat with. The seventh hit, made by Lafferty himself, shattered it. If anyone else had broken that bat, Lafferty must have slaughtered him.

After the game the ridiculous story was circulated that a syndicate of Plainfielders who had bet heavily had been trying to get the Crescents to lose by the game, and that he had agreed to sell out the game for $300. The bare idea is nonsensical. There was never any necessity of buying anybody on the Crescent base team. There was never any likelihood that Plainfield would lose the game. Plainfield could not win. He tried with all his might.

One especially pretty exhibition of good judgment was made by Plainfield's Hammill. A runner was on second, and one on third. A ball was batted to Hammill. He turned as though to throw it to first. The man on third started for home on the finish, and Hammill wheeled about in time to throw him out.

Diven's pitching in the seventh and eighth innings was far inferior to what the discarded Hamill has done. He has gave four men their base on balls—three of them in succession—made a wild pitch, and was batted for two safe hits. He was assisted by his umpire in being responsible for two of the Crescents' five strikeouts.

Before the game, posters were conspicuous everywhere in the village, saying that this was to be a "meeting of the bitter rivals in our exciting and deeper base struggle for the championship of the State". It was indeed a struggle for Westfield—a great struggle, and an utterly vain one.

The poster went on to say:

"That is the game for which many baseball enthusiast in this region has eagerly waited. Former games and scores are forgotten, and the merits of the two teams are constantly discussed. Plainfield won the game at Plainfield by the close score of 7 to 5. Was that game won by sheer luck in hitting, or is the Plainfield team superior? Will Westfield be able can see these two teams playing the 'game of their lives', and decide all these questions for yourself, at Drake Park, next Monday. You should come very early in order to secure a seat."

Well, the people went early. Some of them secured seats, and some did n't. But they all "saw the game", and the reason of Plainfield's victories was not "sheer luck", but instead superior playing:

The score:

A GOOD SOUND BUSINESS.

Yearly Meeting of the Plainfield Tennis Association.

The last meeting of the Plainfield Tennis Association was held on Tuesday evening, September 1st.

In one respect, if in no other, Tuesday evening's session was an example for all its successor to imitate. It has long been the practice of the paragrapher in need of a subject to fall back upon the mother of the idea of that head of the house, as a being with whom it is utterly impossible to exhaust the same root.

Above, however, the professional joker must cease his malicious impendence, for behold, immediately at our door is a small community comprising twenty-six people—the ladies and gentlemen of Plainfield, orderly and harmoniously, (twelve mothers-in-law).

No need for professional supervision where children there—these mothers-in-law who have watched with careful eye and tenderest solicitude the vagari-s of their immediate offspring, nor overlook the affairs of the households of the husbands or wives, as the case may be, of said offsprings with keen query and economy that would put even they were themselves at the helm.

The fact of the preponderance of the above designated class may account for the remarkable healthfulness of the children in Banwood, for certainly there has been for years less sickness among the youngsters than in the whole of the rest of the town. For this reason that Dr. Westcott, in whom all have confidence and whom the children love, has selected this time for a month's vacation, and he would be perfectly at home with his patients

CITY DEPARTMENT.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE, THE COUNTY AND THE CITY. LARGEST BONA FIDE CIRCULATION OF ANY PAPER PUBLISHED IN THE COUNTY OF UNION.

J. A. DEMAREST, - - City Editor.

—The West Ends are trying to induce Bonbon to join the West Ends. They are said to have offered him his own price.

—The thirty-second annual convention of the Somerset county Sunday-schools will be held at Warren chapel, North Plainfield, Tuesday, September 8.

—The big entrance to Alem hose house is being raised so that a driver on the hose wagon won't get his head knocked off when the hebose rush out with him to a fire.

—Jerrard B. Underhill, Isaac Sheppard, Amos Vail, Henry Woodland, Hosten M. Clark and Frederick M. Brown are the North Plainfielders in the list of petit jurors in Somerset county for the coming term.

—The 1st of September will be a great day at Veghte's Point, near Bonbon, where there will be held the first reunion of the 30th Reg't, N. J., Vols. A mammoth clambake will be one of the features of the occasion. The 30th's commander, Col. J. Ten Eyck, is sparing no pains to make the reunion a most enjoyable one.

—Game and Fish Protective Societies are springing up all over the State, which is a sign that true sportsmen are making endeavors to have the game and fish laws enforced. The New Jersey Game and Fish Protective Society, whose headquarters are Plainfield, N. J., is the parent society of the State and has a large membership. It was organized in 1879.

—A Press reporter was of the opinion that the reason the new pavement in front of the old Arlington hotel was being rate job, and because of poor laying. But Street Commissioner Meeker says that it is the best that can be done with the material furnished by the railroad company as their share of the "improvement." The belgian blocks are a lot of old ones that have been used for years in some other city's streets.

THREE GREAT GAMES.

Saturday and Monday The Crescent League's Team Will Rest Strong.

The managers of the Crescent League's base-ball team, have arranged some exciting contests for next Saturday and Monday.

The New York Athletic club's team, which won the only game the New Jersey Athletic club's team lost this season in the contest for the amateur athletic championship of the United States, will meet the Crescents on the latter's grounds, Saturday afternoon.

Monday morning the Crescent Athletic club of Staten Island, with George Cadmus in the pitcher's box, will be here. Cadmus, who was the star in the box of the Plainfield grand stand, has been doing wonders as a twirler this season.

Monday morning the Star Athletics, of Newark, will be here. This is the team with which the Crescents have always had such exciting struggles. They have only met once so far this year. May 9, after eleven innings, the Crescents won by the score of 4 to 3. Last season, April 19, the two met and after twelve innings the Star Athletics won by the score of 4 to 3. August 16 of last year the Crescents won by the score of 2 to 0. So Monday afternoon's game promises to be one of the most exciting of the season.

Last Saturday at Staten Island, the Crescent Athletic club won two games against the Staten Island Cricket club, the ties with Carr pitching for the Crescents, by the score of 5 to 1, and the second with Cadmus pitching, by the score of 10 to 0. Cadmus' 10 runs were made off Cadmus, and he struck out 10 men.

Put the Law on Them.

Last Saturday afternoon a hydrant with his nose all scratched, said he was run into by Irving Stelle, who, while racing along the county road with another driver, plowed the wheelman into the gutter and upset him. A man and woman were also run down about the same time and near the same spot by a private carriage said to belong to Isaac Lewis of the Old Netherwood. It was not Mr. Lewis's team, however. A suit for heavy damages against the reckless driver, he, the proper kind of bonds to administer.

A Plainfield Man Interested.

The improvements at Lorraine are in full blast and the streets are being rapidly graded. Twenty-two lots have been disposed of in the last three days. A number of contracts have been awarded for the erection of houses. Among the lots is number A. D. Thompson, of Plainfield, will at once build four houses. A depot will be erected the coming week at the foot of Sheridan avenue, and trains will stop for the accommodation of the traffic of this growing town. An offer of $35,000 was made and refused last evening for thirty-four acres of land in the immediate neighborhood of Lorraine.—Elizabeth Journal.

Reopening of Music Hall.

Although the extensive alterations to Music Hall now under way are not yet completed, the new management have arranged to open next Tuesday evening. The play selected is William Gillette's touching drama "All the Comforts of Home." He run in New York on its production was one of the events of the season. It is bright, wholesome, clean, full of laughable points and unbounded fun, occasionally here and there a dash of sentiment. Many who have enjoyed an evening with this merry household prefer it to the popular farce "Our Boarding House" that was always crowded Mr. Gillette's master-work. The company (Mr. Charles Frohman's) is a strong one, every single member is a finished list of artists, and the characters are portrayed with the same careful attention and details of stage with the equally handsome and correct list of characters as all of Mr. Frohman's attractions.

DOUGLASS GHEEN RETURNS.

He Visits Wall Street and They Guess About His Future.

A great many stories were told in Wall street Thursday about a many guesses made about the future movements of Douglass Gheen, who was for many years a resident of this city and until nearly two years ago a member of the firm of Green & Bateman of New York, and of well-known stock broker.

The cause of these stories having set afloat was the presence in Wall street of Mr. Green himself. He appeared there Tuesday for the first time since he sailed away with Miss Suell McCrea. He was apparently in the best of health and spirits, and many of his former friends said they were glad to see him.

Mr. Green and little to say of his future intentions. He had been in San Francisco and intended to transact the business matters to New York as speedily as possible.

It was said by those who gossiped about his return that several offers had been made for his services by concerns which regarded him as a good broker and a skillful operator in the stock market. One story was to the effect that Jay Gould would establish himself as the New York representative of P. D. Armour of Chicago, with whom he is said to be on the best of terms. Another story was that he would not be content to operate as an agent, but would begin business on his own hook.

Of his career since he left New York Mr. Green said little that was news, even to his most intimate friends. Some who had called at a room on the one-thousand nature with him said that he had not been idle while in Europe or in San Francisco, but had been doing considerable speculating all the time he had been away from Wall street.

It was said that he would not make application for reinstatement as a member of the Stock Exchange.

CAREY WAIVES EXAMINATION.

But Mr. Levy Has Other Rods to Fish for Him.

Ex-policeman Carey being mixed for, returned to Plainfield Thursday and surrendered himself to answer for his recent battle at the corner of Watchung and Park Paines. He waived examination and gave bonds in the amount of $300 to await the action of the grand jury.

It is understood that there was any assault on Mrs. Levy. He says he thought the rent was owing him, and he was told that Levy's daughter was picking up to go to be married home to look after his own, and in the bustle of moving the goods Mrs. Levy may have been pushed over.

Carey says that was the only time that there is no credit on them of the $40 for August rent which Levy holds a receipt for. He could have taken a horse and wagon something about the same time, and maybe the receipt should have been for that.

But Mr. Levy doesn't propose to let the case rest as it is. Other proceedings will be begun against the ex-policeman, at once.

He bought a bicycle and a gun with the money. Mrs. Boley on yesterday sent him to the county jail to await the action of the grand jury.

The prospects of potatoes is indeed bright. Reports of health, bring good crops from all parts of the country. Mr. Hall, of Somerville, brought in some potatoes Monday that were of a large size and fine quality. He says that they are not as large as they should be, but that the dry weather has prevented their growth. Mr. Hall's potatoes are of the Early Rose variety.

PROGRESSIVE EUCHRE AT NETHERWOOD.

The Prizes Had Been Purchased and the Evening Was Enjoyed.

(From The Press of August 29.)

HANDSOME souvenirs and their acceptance were the features of a progressive euchre party at the Netherwood, in Grant

Press. Precisely at 9 o'clock Harry Mason gave the signal for beginning the contest and stated the rules of the game; whereupon the players seated themselves at the tables provided for the event. It was a brilliant and joyous throng, and at the conclusion of the game a vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. Martin and Miss Cullen for the exquisite taste displayed by them in the purchase of the souvenirs. Mr. Martin responded in a few fine chronicler has the pleasure of announcing that one more charming fete is placed to the credit of the season of '91. The midsummer season at The Netherwood shows a large number of guests supporting here, and other families booked for the present month. The present indications the fall season will fully rank with former years.

The Netherwood will remain open until about the 25th of September. The excellent system of steam heaters throughout the hotel gives ample warmth when required.

The Saturday night hops at The Netherwood are ranked among the delightful events of the season, and our Plainfield friends will ever cherish a cordial welcome from proprietor and guests. Our Sunday evening concerts are also warmly commended and really are very enjoyable.

DOUGLASS GHEEN RETURNS.

He Visits Wall Street and They Guess About His Future.

A great many stories were told in Wall street Thursday about a many guesses made about the future movements of Douglass Gheen, who was for many years a resident of this city and until nearly two years ago a member of the firm of Green & Bateman of New York, and of well-known stock broker.

The cause of these stories having set afloat was the presence in Wall street of Mr. Green himself. He appeared there Tuesday for the first time since he sailed away with Miss Suell McCrea. He was apparently in the best of health and spirits, and many of his former friends said they were glad to see him.

Mr. Green and little to say of his future intentions. He had been in San Francisco and intended to transact the business matters to New York as speedily as possible.

OLD COMRADES MEET AGAIN.

Reunion of the Tenth Regiment Veterans at Netherwood.

(From The Press of Aug. 31.)

The 10th enlisted survivors of the Twenty-eighth Regiment, N. J. Vols., are holding a reunion in this city to-day. This morning, accompanied by the band of G. A. R. Post 9 and a band of music, they paraded through the principal streets. The buildings all along the line were decorated with flags and bunting in honor of the old soldiers. After the parade a business meeting was held in the rooms of Post No. 72. At two o'clock Mayor Gilbert and the Common Council welcomed the visitors at the Crescent rink, and dinner was served. Speeches were made by the various officers, and there was singing by the Mixed Meaning and others. This evening a ball at the rink will conclude the events of the day.

At the business session this morn Henry C. Drake of this city, was elected president of the association for the ensuing year. Secretary Appleby of Old Bridge was re-elected. Vice president was elected from each company in the regiment.

The Twenty-eighth Regiment was recruited in Middlesex, Monmouth, Ocean, Camden and Gloucester counties, and was mustered into service at Freehold, Sept. 1, 1862. It left Freehold, Sept. 3, with 940 men, and reached Washington the the following day. It marched into Virginia, Oct. 13, and engaged in its first battle at Fredericksburg, Dec. 13. Here the loss of the men were killed or wounded. The regiment then remained in camp until April 29, when it was detailed for picket service at the United States Ford. On April 30 it led the advance in crossing the river and pushed forward to the Chancellor House. It was engaged in battle on May 3, and lost thirty men, killed, wounded and missing. The regiment then remained in camp near Falmouth until June 14. Shortly after, its term of service having expired, it proceeded to Washington, and thence to Freehold, where it was mustered out July 6, 1863.

A CHANCE FOR ALERTS.

They Can Take the Basket With Their New Uniforms and Silver Carriage.

Among the prizes to be awarded at the coming annual parade and tournament of the Elizabeth fire department, Thursday, September 3, will be a silver basket for the hand-horse hose carriage in line. There's a chance for Alert company of this city to turn out with their new uniforms and silver carriage, and win a prize.

Other of Plainfield's companies are also offered opportunities in the following: For the best-equipped company in line, a silver trumpet; for the largest number of men in line, a silver bucket; for the steamer throwing a stream the greatest distance, a silver water pitcher.

The Elizabeth department parade is remarkable liberality not only in offering these prizes, but in having her own companies from competing for them.

They Had a Good Time.

Thirty-five of Plainfield's citizens, members of Trinity Commandery, No. 17, and friends, accompanied by their wives, went to Atlantic City Thursday to participate in the annual field-day pleasures of the Knights Templar of New Jersey, and came home well pleased with the enjoyments of the day. Trinity Commandery, although the infant of the organization in the State, showed that she was thoroughly alive, by securing the parlor car Reunion for its journey to and from Atlantic City. It left Plainfield at 7:30 a. m and was attached to the excursion train of Damascus Commandery, No. 2, of Newark, at Elizabethport. Sir Knight H. P. Beldin, General Passenger Agent of the Central railway, was in attendance at the above station and personally saw that the Sir Knights were safely and properly started on their journey, and also gave the Plainfield car a special locomotive to convey it and its passengers to their homes on the return trip from Elizabethport. Every one was loud in praise of the efficient management of the Damascus Commandery, with its genial and kind attention given on the trip by the employes of the road. The Central never does things half way, and its popular agent, Sir Beldin, received the thanks of the passengers on the Reunion for his personal endeavors in their behalf Thursday. The day at Atlantic City, with the parade, was a grand one, a large number of Sir Knights being in attendance The parade was grand, and only marred by a shower at the close of the parade, which dampened the uniforms and ardor of the participants. At the Mansion House, where Trinity and guests were entertained, Sir John H. Stanger was given to them through the kindness of Clerk Thomas F. Kirk, in whom the establishment has a treasure. He is social and attentive. The Reunionists all express their appreciation of the services and attention paid them on their trip by conductor Isaac Mush, brakeman Frank H. Crane and James V. Middleworth, and porter John P. Herndon, the latter looking after the wants of all. The "Reunion" was in charge of Commander from Elizabethport by special engine No. 131, Joseph Tate, engineer, Richard Tenbrook, conductor, and by the way, he failed to secure a price offered by the New York Recorder for the most popular conductor on the Central railway. All hands arrived at Plainfield Depot in Plainfield at 11:56 p. m. Those of the party who dined at table No. 2 of the Mansion House desire to express their appreciation of the courtesy and attention of Andrew W. Hopkins. During the trip a fine collection of sandwiches, cake and other refreshments were served. John H. Iler can provide, was served to the occupants of the parlor car. In fact the whole affair was a grand success, and all are loud in praise of the tri-annual re-union at Denver, Col., in 1892.

On the return trip, through the kindness of leader Vose, that celebrated band discoursed sweet music. Sir Knight Commander, ex-hero the parlor car and tendered Trinity a serenade, which was highly appreciated by all. Sir Knight Beldin made ample provision for the refreshments of the parade, which was unavoidably the weakest of the four on account of having one side facing the street.

Stakeholders Should Settle.

The Fac wood assignment which backed the Crescents against the Westfields, Saturday, have all received the amounts due them on wagers where the bets were verbal.

A certain within man, however, placed his money in the hands of a well-known member horticulturalists as stakeholder, and it has not yet been paid over. For the sake of the reputation of Quality Hill it is to be hoped that it will be paid to-day immediately made, and before the amount, which is understood to be large, is picked in the "Small Pig." It is hardly the province of a stakeholder to hold the stakes, but was not present at the game he has to absolute proof of its result.

John Long has come into possession of a fine Jersey cow, which he will keep for his own use. The animal is a handsome one, and will prove a valuable addition to Mr. Long's stock. When Mr. Long was asked how he came by the animal he replied that he had won it in a raffle. Then he added that he had bought the chances for the raffle, and that he had been lucky enough to win the animal. Mr. Long is a lucky man, and his friends are glad to see him have his luck.

SINGING A DIFFERENT TUNE, NOW.

Plainfield Would Vote Now the Water Supply Loan Issued Two Years Ago, if the City Were That Thirsty That Had the Bonds.

The Press and its readers are under obligation to some unknown stenographer for his labors at the last Council meeting. Thereby it is possible to give in full the day at that one said that was unbiased and of importance at that meeting. Only Councilmen Rusbmore and Ackerman spoke of the minority, and what they said was simply in line with what the Mayor said and what the water committee and all those boomed the Water Supply company and begged the majority to order the city's water from that source, Councilman Ackerman excepted.

The Mayor said two companies "could not profitably exist here," and Messrs. Rushmore and Ackerman said so, too. Well, who cares? The Mayor gave as another reason for his veto that "the two companies would consolidate at later combine and the interests of the public would be sacrificed thereby". Messrs. Rushmore and Ackerman thought so, too.

The Mayor said two companies "could not profitably exist here", and Messrs. Rushmore and Ackerman said so, too. Well, who cares? The Mayor gave as another reason for his veto that "the two companies would consolidate at later combine and the interests of the public would be sacrificed thereby". Messrs. Rushmore and Ackerman thought so, too.

That was the gist of the remarks of the "gentlemen on the other side of the house," and a clever advertisement it was put through for the Plainfield Water Supply company. What ails said that deserves attention is the following:

Mr. Hetfield (before voting)—Mr. President, I desire to say a few words in reference to the remarks of Mr. Ackerman. Now, the gentleman has referred to the opposition of the Plainfield Water Supply Company. I desire to state, and also to be placed on record with regard to that, that our Committee met with a Committee of the Water Supply Company, were ready and willing and wished to negotiate with them for putting in water for the City, but we also wanted put in a supply of sewerage. They agreed with us that they would investigate it and let us know and call a meeting. They never called a meeting and never heard from us again. But outside of any meeting they have told us that, if they were obliged to put in sewers, we could not water carriages and still a price less than sixty dollars a hydrant. That is what they told us; and taking that into consideration we could not negotiate with them for a long time before Mr. Lee or anybody else was talked to about this water system or the sewerage, they have been given every opportunity and every chance, but they did not take advantage of it, did not seem to want to. And as I said, if we had given them the contract according to their statement we would be obliged to pay them sixty dollars a hydrant for their water and for flushing the sewers, instead of twenty-five dollars under this contract. That is all I desire to state, Mr. President.

Mr. Ackerman—Mr. President, I would like to say just one word. I would like to ask Mr. Hetfield if he has had any communication with the Plainfield Water Supply Company since the first of August.

Mr. Hetfield — Mr. President, why should I? When we met with them and talked to them they were to notify us of another meeting. We waited a long time, and then after we had considered the proposition of Mr. Low, as it had been put to the City of Newark, at Rhinebeck, Sir Knight H. P. Beldin, General Passenger Agent of the Central railway, was in attendance at the above station and personally saw that the Sir Knights were safely and properly started on their journey, and also gave the Plainfield car a special locomotive to convey it and its passengers to their homes on the return trip from Elizabethport. AN ANGEL IN THE BOULEVARD.

The Most Quiet That Visited a West End Saloon and Then Departed for the Better Land.

A rather unusual thing happened the other night in a fashionable saloon. The boulevard is not the first place in the world you would go to look for an angel for such a thing is not in fashion, and yet—well, here is the story:

Half a dozen men whose names the reporter could not learn were lounging about the bar room and talking lackadaisically. It was pretty late, and they had been drinking all the evening, and their funds were exhausted. Finally one was the first to stop, and the others seemed inclined to follow suit. The bartender fell to wishing it was time to put down the shades.

"Well, gents," said he at last—"won't none of you buy another for luck?"

The "gents" ransacked their dilapidated pockets, but between them all the "price" was not to be found. One of them, less dressy than the rest, replied:

"We'd like to, cap's [illegible] like to, but we ain't got it."

"That sounds purty from you, Jones, seein' what you could raise if you'd just hook that"—put in a man who sat at the table, as he pointed to a little silver cross that hung by a bedraggled purple ribbon from the only available buttonhole in Jones's vest.

"No, sir!"—returned the party addressed—"that there locket stays right where it is, and I'll be licked to death before I hocks it for rum I see."

"What is dere locket?"—inquired the bartender, coming around to inspect the little cross.

"Well, I don't mind tellin' yer"—said Jones—"It allus does me good to tell the story."

"Yes, gin us de story"—urged the bartender, waxing interested.—"What is dese letters, 'I. H. N.', eh?"

"I dunno"—replied Jones—"Anyway, one rainy day about a few months ago, I come home crazy, howlin' drunk. I got it into my noodscuttle that my pal and woman was goin' to de show, and after dey'd kid her, an' I made a dead set for her. She was n't in de front room when I come in, but I heard de kids twistin' somethin an' I goes to de door an' looks in de kitchen door. I was drunk, but I didn't look what I was doin'. I see de old gal cuvvered up, de corner, and de kids hangin' onto her skirt. I just hauled de chair and went for 'em. I brought de chair down hard but somethin' got in front of it before it hit my woman. I didn't know what it was for sure, but I must have hurted it wid dat blow. It was de death, too, as I broke de kids' necks off de chair legs in my blind rage. I threw down de broken chair and started for der kids, but somethin' got in front of me again. I grabbed it an' pounded it to agin de wall, an' it was all I wanted to do her hold it. But I bumped its head on de scrics until, somehow, it stopped bleedin' and fell quiet. Den I got sick, an' I let it drop on de floor and turned around, but de old woman had sneaked out wid de young one and left me. I was sick, an' I got drunk. When I woke up I sorter remembered a leetle of what had happened an' I went into de kitchen an' found de old gal dead. She was back. I

JOHN'S APPRENTICESHIP.

When he was twenty-five years old, John Bowyer established
And then, of commonplaces alone pronounced him educated.
But he took three years for travel to learn Russian politeness,
Twenty old Italian art, and German mysticism.

Then came a hard postgraduate course which took him three years longer;
Then, though the health is now very poor, its by-Indeed was considered one approached exceedingly
His physical condition now
The doctor ordered two years' rest for his re-expectations.

He studied law—it took three years to master ties to harvard.
And then he only foreign law three more long years for travel.
When he returned his big mustache with long gray hairs was shrouded.
He'd lost his youthful look before, and now was quite bald headed.

When he was thirty-nine years old our then normal start
Hung out its legal shingle, and then waited for his others.

The girl he loved in youthful days had long since wed another,
And had grown a portly matron and an excellent grandmother.

The hero he knew in grammar school seemed ancient as progenitors,
And one ex-pugilistic state, and two of them were senators.
But he satisfied his conscience in retired acquaintance ten.
And waited long for clients with their tales of litigation.

One day when he was forty-five, came in his confidential clerk,
John tried to be as quiet as the poetry of Bryant.
But the shock it came so sudden, with such force unexpected,
What he felt with apoplexy, and he died within,
so hence.

A DEADLY HATE.

John Martin's Terrible Revenge on the Snoqua Apaches.

IN THE cool of the morning John Martin kissed his wife and two little boys at the door of their humble log cabin. Half frame, half dugout, took his team and went over the roll of the prairie to work in a plowing, about half a mile from the house. He passed on the top of the roll before going from sight, he called back to his wife: "Mary, let Georgie come to me at noon with a bench and fresh drinking water. It's so far that I don't think I'll come up for dinner. Give the little cottie a drink and a bite, too."

His wife called back: "All right, dear," and waved her apron. He turned to his team and started them on. As he said "get up," the near side animal, whose little collie was left behind in the rough start, turned her head, and, looking back, whinnied long and loud.

"Come, come, Fan, go on; what's the matter with you?" But Fan would not back there, too, and they will see that your baby doesn't get hungry or lonely or cold. Come, old girl, now we must go and work for our children."

The team started, and Fan, shaking cheerfully to them for company's sake, they went on to their work.

The man finished his furrow, and furrow after furrow was turned. John kept the team going steadily, but Fan was restless and would run to the house and look around and then throw herself into the collar and forge shoulders though the team. But she was in the way, so the work finished.

"What does all you, Fan? you seem glad, fact, " John, finally; "does your harness hurt you, old girl?" And then he went over the horse carefully examining each strap and piece where it touched her sleek coat. "Old girl, your harness is all right, and you are only fussing for nothing. Now, if you don't go steady you'll get whipped." He went back between the handles of the plow and Fan threw her nose up over her mate's neck, looking in the direction of the house, and whinnied so sharp and mournful that John involuntarily looked in the same direction and then started. There his eyes descrying him! Was that a thinnedium of smoke rising in the clear air from over the roof of his house? His heart almost stopped beating. It is smoke! Fast as his limbs could move he pulled the harness fastenings from the team, threw the harness to the ground, released one horse and sprang upon the back of the needed no urging or directing, but leaped like an arrow from the bow. As they galloped over the rough sod of ground John looked, and had to clutch the horse's mane to keep from falling. A little cloud of smoke indeed was rising from the ground where his home had stood, and as he cast an anxious look under the cloud he saw the sign of life he saw away off on the distant horizon a few rapidly-diminishing specks and a little cloud of dust.

"Oh, Fan, hurry, hurry!" No use to urge the creature, she whinnied so sharp and mournful that John involuntarily looked in the same direction and then started. There his eyes descrying him! Was that a thinnedium of smoke rising in the clear air from over the roof of his house? His heart almost stopped beating. It is smoke! Fast as his limbs could move he pulled the harness fastenings from the team, threw the harness to the ground, released one horse and sprang upon the back of the needed no urging or directing, but leaped like an arrow from the bow. DOG-DAY DELIGHTS.
The weather now is torrid;
Our every clothing thread is wet;
The sun is like a furnace fire;
Sweat drops,
Mosquitoes, flies and midges bite;
Sleep eludes us entirely;
We're tired of everything;
Pussy flies.

The work we do for dividends
Is done in a dreamy, stupid way;
Our labor is a mere exertion
To breathe in an exertion
The thought of thinking otherwise is tiring;
Our labor is a mere slavery;
We're boiling, broiling, baking Alive.

Hating existence for the writer
With fans that make us hotter;
We wish the writer dead,
Or cooled,
In watery depths he wishes
We'd lay on moonlight pillows—
How cool under the waters
It must feel.

Though gaunty our attire
All night long we perspire
And dream eternal fire
Is ours.
We'd fashion gyves in number
For poets who write rhymes
Where the grimy, green monster
Rides the dog-days.

O, won't the weather wizard
Refresh us with a blizzard
And turn us very glacial
Into ice;
Where dog-days fashion wears snowing
And coldness wears nose freezing
Word images, frosty snowing!
—O, how we—

DOWN THE GRADE.
Story of a Stagecoach Ride in the Rockies.

"IT'S telling a'l the stories of stagecoach days on the frontier has only just begun. I've yet told, there are a thousand adventures hidden in the mountains, hanging in faint echoes about the canyons of the pioneers.

"If you live awhile in the cabins along the Yuba, above Marysville, you will find miners still engaged in the thirty-seventh piles of gravel for the aftermath of '49; you will find old stage drivers, with head well bleached by years, who know every noted driver of the Pacific coast; you will hear stories of staging in the first and sixties, for the remote parts of the siterras, that have never reached print, but have been carried on, through manifold traditions, until they have reached the completeness and the dignity of an epic of the stage coach.

Besides the longer stories one hears there are the shorter episodes of the staging days—the episode of Smoky's runaway, for instance.

Smoky was a famous stage driver between Grass Valley and Marysville, by way of Penn valley, Rough and Ready, Smartsville and Timbuctoo. It used to be was in his glory, the ideal of a driver, and able to hold his own with anyone on the reins. He received his name from the remark of a little girl, a daughter of the Hostlemaster at Murphy's Ranch. She came out of the lap and was cuff, saying that he was going to start to stop her. She "liked men who did not puff cigars in her face."

After this episode Smoky's real name fell into disuse; he was "Sm oky" and "Old Smoky" from the Sierra to the Sacramento.

On the day when Smoky had his runaway affair, the stage swung into Grass Valley early in the morning with two passengers aboard, both inside. They had breakfasted at Penn Smoky took charge. He drove around in front of the store to wait for another passenger; he put on the brake, as he supposed, he leined the reins about the brake-bar, and went into the store. The four horses started off at full speed, and, striking a stone, the jar let the brake loose; then the horses flew down the grade like sons of destruction.

The passengers sat in silence, a little surprised at the rapid motion, but believing that the driver was on the box. One of them was a small, nervous, bright-eyed young man, newly come to California—a young man who was just beginning a career of invention and manufacturing endeavor that has given him place among the score or so of foremost Californians. The other man was a man of no notability.

The young man with the bright eyes began to see that something was wrong with the stage. It went too fast; it swung too much. He climbed on the seat, and let down the narrow window nearest the driver's box. He leaned out and managed to raise himself far enough to see that the horses were running away. He called to the driver but received no reply.

The young man reflected that the road ahead was not an easy one for a runaway stagecoach to manage. They were now at the down grade, and, some a hill, then another descent, then a second hill, then a long, steep and winding descent to Grass Valley. The horses must be stopped before this descent was reached or a smash-up was inevitable. He decided to try to get to the horses; if he failed he would jump out and spare them.

The young man set to do this by swing on the driver's box. A heavier man might have failed, but the young stranger was not a man of slight muscular development. He had an athlete's chance, caught the iron bar at the end of the window, put his left foot on a spoke of the wheel, and, swinging upon the driver's seat, and clinging to the brake-bar with his left hand, he got his right foot on the heads of the horses, or headed some there.

The down grade began to put on the brakes, but with any haste, but slowly and splendidly. Great curving blocks of road seemed to sweep beneath the wheels, but the rapidity of the vehicle's motion was now much less than before. The danger of breaking the thing was passed. The driver's seat was empty, but the reins were still in the hands of the driver, or headed some there.

The young man began to put on the brakes, not

PAUPER LABOR.

Loud and long have the McKinley tariffites depicted the horrors and dangers of foreign pauper labor.

From that terrible scourge the laboring classes of this country must be saved, and only can be by rearing a Chinese wall of high tariff taxation.

Such has been the cry of the bounty protectionists day in and day out.

We now have in governing effect a tariff measure framed at their special dictation, and can it be possible that in the presence of such a magnificent scheme of patriotic legislation and humanitarian labor love, pauper wages exist within the blessed bounds of protected America?

Strange though the assertion may appear, the starvation demon abides not many miles away from Plainfield.

The female operatives in a skirt factory struck a few days ago.

Why did they strike?

Is not McKinley protection a law of the land?

They struck, and justly so, because the price for making stirling had been reduced by certain figures a dozen, and the most expert worker could not make over four dozen a day.

Fifteen cents a dozen.

Sixty cents a day at the very outside for a poor girl killing herself to earn bread.

Better stop prating about foreign pauper labor and investigate home wage penury.

ORGANIC LAW.

It is well to recall to memory the purposes for which the Government of the United States was established.

The preamble to the Constitution thus declares:

"We the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect Union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defence, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America."

That is organic law pure and simple. It was made by the people for their general good, and to secure perfect Union, perfect

—John Williams, the colored man charged with entering a house in Washington Valley recently and stealing articles of his plea of not guilty, in the Somerset county courts, and entered a plea of guilty to the charge of larceny but not guilty of breaking. This plea was accepted by prosecutor Steele and the man was sentenced by the court to two and a half years in State prison.

—It was long after 10 o'clock Tuesday morning—the time set for the hearing of the case of Saloon Joe Miller against Tax Payne—when the plaintiff made his appearance before Justice Crosley. He had no lawyer and begged for an adjournment "because a material witness was out of the State." The request was granted by the judge and set the case down again for Tuesday morning of next week at ten o'clock.

Hebrew Feasts in the Courts Again.

S. Frucht, the Hebrew merchant, had J. Tose, the trunkman, arrested, Friday, on the charge of larceny. Frucht said that Tose took $9 worth of notions, etc., out of his store. Tose said that Frucht had consented to his taking them in payment of an old bill. Frucht stated he had not, and was convicted, even seeking to prove that the goods in his store were his wife's, but it was proved that they came in Frucht's own name, and that Frucht did not buy the money. Justice Sodyne dismissed the case.

—One of the chief attractions at the Somerville fair, next week, will be the handsome uniformed band of Prof. Barlow. Concerts will be given daily from the new mammoth grand stand.

A MOTHER'S SONG.

A mother sat rocking her little babe,
"Bye, little baby, bye,"
And this is the song she sang as she rocked:
"Hush, little dear, don't cry.
Father has gone to brother's home
To buy the baby a sweet gown.
Brother has gone to fish in the brook
To catch a fish with his little hook.
Sister will try it for baby to eat.
Never was fish one-half so sweet.
Bye, little baby, bye.

"Bye, little baby, bye.
Angels are watching my baby dear,
Their fluttering wings do hovering near.
They bring him dreams of Heaven above.
Very stronger to him of mother's love.
Bye little baby, bye.

"Bye, little baby, bye.
Sleep, sweetly sleep, on mother's breast,
In mother's arms you dream and rest.
Sleep, little baby, sleep.
The waves sprolls flutter down,
Baby is out of dreamland town.
Bye, baby, bye.

"Bye, darling, bye,
Baby has gone to the land of Nod,
Where everything is queer and odd,
Where cows can fish on twigs of gold,
And little children never grow old,
Where peaches turn into butterflies,
And out of the hearts of the flowers rise
Beautiful fairies we never see,
And all the reasons of life most surely be Too! we never visit the land of Nod
Where everything else but children are odd
Or we would see those funny sights
That baby sees with his eyes shut tight.
By, baby, bye."

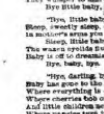
HER PRACTICAL JOKE.

By Anna Sophia's Way of Getting Even With Miss Tyrell.



WISH mother would send here Keziah Briggs here every Monday and Tuesday to wash and iron. I know she could find some one else who would do just as well."

Mother says Keziah washes and irons, and she is attached to her; but how anyone can be attached to Keziah I don't see. She is always giving her opinion on matters that don't concern her at all, and I never make a move for myself.

Yesterday, in church, when the minister spoke of the fresh air society, and asked for the names of those willing to take charge of one or more children for a fortnight, Keziah looked across at me and said:

The reason she did so was because of what happened last summer. I believe she has told everybody in town about it, though she declared she hasn't.

Lulu Fenwick looked at me, too, and I hated her for it. I tried not to seem unconcerned. But, when old Miss Tyrell turned square around in her pew and glared me in the face, I couldn't help coloring a little.

It is hard on a young lady that she sold to the sermon about the fresh air society, and I was a very forward little girl, and she would have charge of me for a few weeks, and that was the reason I told to go even with her last summer.

It was the last Sunday in June a year ago that Mr. Patten spoke just before the sermon about the fresh air society.

He said there were many pleasant and comfortable homes in Bondville, where the little children who needed fresh air and good food could be taken care of without great inconvenience, and he asked that all those who were willing to take charge of one or more children should send in their names to him on Monday, that he might know how many applications to send out for.

Miss Tyrell wasn't at church that night, but I walked home, it popped into my head that here was my chance to get even with her in time.

I had heard she fairly hated children, and she lives all alone in a big white house at the end of the street, and hardly ever has even the minister and his wife to tea. People say she is very rich, but she never spends any more than she can help.

Well, on Monday, I took a sheet of note-paper and wrote on it in my best hand: "Will take three of the youngest," and signed it with Miss Tyrell's name in full. Then I folded the note, enveloped, directed it to Mr. Patten, and the next time I had to go to the store I stepped out and dropped the letter into the letter-box on his front door.

I couldn't help laughing all the way to the store and back, thinking of how horrified Miss Tyrell would be when on Thursday, three of those fresh air children were sent out to her. But she would have to take them, she wouldn't be able to get out of it then.

I thought it a very good joke, and I think so still; but it didn't turn out as I expected. Things seldom do in this world.

On Wednesday, when I was out in front yard with mother and the baby and Lulu Fenwick, Mr. Patten stopped at the gate and began to talk with mother about the children who were to come the next day.

I am very glad Miss Tyrell is to take three," he said. "She has a fine house and plenty of room for them. That old orchard will be a delightful place for little ones to play in."

I am surprised, however, that Miss Tyrell sent her name," said mother. "For I know she dislikes children."

"I was surprised, also," said Mr. Patten, but she evidently has grown better in my box, and I went out at once to get it, thinking it was from you. I was very much astonished to see it was from Miss Tyrell."

I asked Lulu if she didn't want a drink, and we went into the house and I kept out of mother's way until bedtime. I was afraid she would ask me how that note came to be, and give me that note. But the baby choked himself on a button about eight o'clock, and mother was so busy with him that she forgot all about what the minister had said. She told me so afterward.

I went down to the station the next day to see the children arrive, and I could see Miss Tyrell's face, when Mr. Patten called to me.

"Anna Sophia," he said, "Miss Tyrell isn't here. Can't you take these three little ones out to her house?"

Of course I said I would with pleasure.

They were a boy and two girls. The boy was six years old and the girls four and five. They were forlorn, pale little creatures, but looked clean, and were neatly dressed.

I went off with them, and all the way along from town I was wondering what Miss Tyrell would say.

I intended to tell her that the minister had sent them, and that she would think she must keep them, no matter how vexed she was, and I knew she'd have her hands full for the next two weeks.

But when we reached the house I saw it was closed. Every shutter was pulled down, and nothing was stirring about the place. I rang the bell, however, and was pulling the bell when old Jabe Peter came along. He knows me, and he told me that Miss Tyrell was away.

"Miss Tyrell's gone to every relation he said. "I reckon she's back for ten or three weeks. Those look as though nothing that high!"

I was so disgusted that I sat right down on the door-step.

What could I do with those children? I wished I had never had any thoughts of getting even with Miss Tyrell. I was sorry enough that I had written that note, and I'll bet it was the first thing you mentioned to Mrs. Fielding afterwards.

But I'll leave it to you if this isn't more than human nature to stand upon such a disappointment.

"My dear girl," said I, "you've got the wrong pig by the ear."

He interrupted me with a gesture.

"Don't scold your head with falsehood for the sake of the feelings," he said. "You've told me about your wife's cousin, Miss May, who's coming to visit you to-day. You've told me what a jolly girl she is; always full of spirits and ready to have a good laugh. Now, I've planned to be that girl for Bellowell was in command of the Sappho-hannock and the main body of the army had been all suddenly retired, leaving only a few straggling companies to harass the advance of the rebel troops. Falmouth heights had been reached with little resistance. Dashing Lieut. Decker, with his sharpshooters, had hurried forward two torpedoes. He was ambushed and three saddles, but some of them were emptied in an instant. This was, however, the only serious casualty which occurred on the march. Asell reached Falmouth at 1860. Below Falmouth heights bridges were burned and a little to the right Battery B was blazing away at the retiring foe. Beyond Fredericksburg, Anderson's division could be seen in motion. For the Fighting Fourteenth, dethroned Red Legged Devils by the confederates, the spectacle was one to be forgotten. In a few moments McDowell and his staff were upon the scene, hurrying to the front. Then came a surprise. Much to the amusement of "Big Jack," the gallant colonel of the Fourteenth, two red legs were seen on the wrong side of the Rappahannock. Instead of marching toward Fredericksburg, they were marching toward Fredericksburg. This strange spectacle had evidently attracted the attention of the general in command. His staff, rallied for a field glass and focussed it on the red legs. Altogether the appearance of the scrubby fiery contingent in motion, every step taking them nearer to the place which it was their duty to avoid, was simply ludicrous. The field glass was passed from one member of the staff to another, but it was evident that neither McDowell nor his aides could come to any satisfactory conclusion about the matter. So they apparently gave up the problem and rode on. A few moments later, however, one of McDowell's orderlies appeared on Falmouth heights with instructions to the effect that the roll of the fighting Fourteenth be called immediately. This, of course, would show not only whether any of the Red Legs were missing but who were the delinquent and foolhardy men. So the roll was called. It is needless to say that the affair became more complicated than ever when it was found that every name had been responded to. Nobody knew what to make of it. For some time the mystery remained unsolved. The Red Legs managed to have nothing in common in Fredericksburg as they did on their way there. Quite a crowd of people awaited their approach and when they disappeared from sight it was evident that their arrival had caused something of a sensation. Before sightfall the Fourteenth had moved into camp and every member of the command was theorizing about the strange spectacle of the morning. The man who had been in charge of it belonged to Company G. When they were asked for an opinion they declared as readily as possible, one, but professed to be as much mystified as the remainder of the regiment. The night was well advanced when John Shanley and Bott Isley, both members of Company G, strolled into camp, attracting as they did so, as little attention as possible. They were soon surrounded by a group of curious questioners. Shanley was the spokesman. Without a word he produced a handful of Confederate bills and tossed them into the air. It was soon an open secret all over the camp that they were the owners of the red legs. They had marched into Fredericksburg. A more reckless pair of Irishmen never breathed. When the roll was called they had been duly answered and, if the sergeant who had the roll in his hand knew of the deception, he was wise enough enough to keep his own counsel. Of course they were soon in the middle of a crowd of comrades, and Shanley, with his usual communicative man, but it took little to loosen the strings of Shanley's tongue. He really told the story of their remarkable adventures of the day. In all the varied annals of war there is nothing to equal it. Shanley declared positively that Mr. Riley that the army was moving a good deal too slowly, and as told Mr. Riley that if he (Shanley) understood that, if he was in such a hurry, there was nothing to prevent him from making better time. As a matter of fact he could go to the city all by himself if he wanted to.

"I'll go if you will go with me," remarked Mr. Riley.

"Come with you, Bott," said Mr. Shanley.

That was the beginning of as strange an escapade as was ever undertaken. It was carried out to the letter. Not a mouth, but neither man "took water." What was suggested probably is just was carried out. Shanley and Isley slipped off early in the morning, crossed the river and entered the rebel city. Some idea of the reception which awaited them has already been given. Timid citizens shook in their shoes at the audacious announcement that Fredericksburg was willing to surrender. It

BLAINE'S DOUBLE.

It Was It That Had the "Dropping Jaws" and "Glaring Eyes."

The Secretary of State Denies All Acquaintance with a Half-Crazed Would-Be Murderer Who Asserts About Noted Scribes.

[COPYRIGHT, 1891.]

The eyes of the world are on Bar Harbor just now. It is well aware of its own importance, and having had greatness thrust upon it, conducts itself with becoming haughtiness. It holds its head well up and looks with superb contempt upon Narragansett and even beholds to eye Newport with condescending glances.

Small wonder that it values itself higher. Looking about noting the beauty of this marvelous isle; glancing from the limpid, turquois waters of Frenchman's bay to the emerald circle of the rocky hills; drinking in the cosmos of its atmosphere, one is ready to agree with that writer who said: "No other island that was ever planted in the sea can equal this."

The greatest attraction of the place is that you can get away from the crowds, the noise and the whirl into the very heart of the wilderness. Bar Harbor is a fashionable resort. There are many smart people here, but they have not yet absorbed the individuality of the place. Unlike Newport, Bar Harbor has not yet been polished to the high of artificial perfection. There are the forests and the mountains for those who love the solitary fastnesses of nature. Though there are superbly built roads, affording at every time bewitching views of sea, hills and valleys, there is no one drive where at a certain hour you must be seen to preserve your social standing. So is Bar Harbor as yet only a resort for the wealthy. Quiet people, invalids, people of moderate circumstances can all find distinct and separate enjoyment and rest here.

The nearest approach to Newport life is found in the vicinity of Eden street. Here are the beautiful cottages, whose luxury and comfort are fast driving out hotel life at Bar Harbor. Here in the Malvern, known as the "Squirrel Inn" of the town, Inasmuch as it is rumored that its owner will have your name inscribed upon its register it must be visited by a Philadelphia real estate dealer, in Mr. De Grasse Fox, who aspires to be the Ward McAllister of Bar Harbor. Here he will find some of the Pomeroys, the Joneses, the Barneys, the Scotts and other millionaires. Senator Sherman has a handsome cottage in this neighborhood. Dr. Tod Helmuth and many other well-known New Yorkers are.

The Louisberg and the St. Sauver are also localities for such as like to be chalets. There is a hotel here named the Des Isle, which the natives persist in calling the "Desinzle." Then there is the Rodick!

Rodick's is a synonym for Bar Harbor. Here the Rodicks have possessed the land hereabouts for many years. It still holds nearly all the water front while it will not sell at any price. The Rodicks built a huge caravansary capable of accommodating over five hundred people. It is beautifully situated, commanding superb views of Green mountain and the bay. It has most marvelous decorations. Its peacock blue and pink tints would make the Newport aesthetics swoon. The hotel was made famous by Charles Dudley Warner, who spoke tenderly of it in one of his charming books. I fear if Charles should survey there now he would sing another ditty. The Rodicks are rich and curious. You must look out for your valuables and chattels the last you can when you go there, for no one else will. Rodick's feature, and the great hotel is a elevator without any bell. Should you wish to ride you must grasp the lever above and well shake it and bid upon it. After you have broiled your fat and aired your choicest English you may amuse and attracting the attention of some one on the office floor. The bell answers, an engaging individual who allows you to wander about to vast dining-rooms and drive into any one you choose, provided a good share of it time behind the counter in the office sitting with the clerk, while idle waiters stand about in the distinguished allotment of their time up and walk ostentatiously. The Rodick has also a livery stable and a store in which the wives of the bay dash. After you have worried through a night on one of Rodick's springless beds you will be close on a plank, a board, a stone pavement or the floor of a dungeon cell. Nice girls are employed in smaller hotel and boarding houses where one can obtain good living at reasonable rates.

SIGMA ENCAMPMENT.

on Ocean avenue in Newport, but the summer visitor go in monthly for boarding-house life. Here at Bar Harbor "cottage" is a noble indigenous to Bar Harbor. It is a fashionable thing to live in a cottage. Mr. Pulitzer, the Pardons Victoria, and very comfortable. But the boarding-house is the popular thing for the summer resort. One the immunity the summer with a rude side consisting of a couple of planes stretched between two pairs of wheels should see a really truly Bar Harbor boarding-house with its yellow tints and gray velvet cushions, a model of elegance and ease. Driving is a cheap amusement at the resort, the livery rates being very reasonable, and the drives are beyond description. Nothing more beautiful can be imagined than the Corniche or the Ocean drive. Here, one has everything—sea, rocks, forests, lakes and mountains all in one. When one wearies of riding, one leaves the buckboard and, goes down to view the wonderful Thunder cave or the equally wonderful Ovens, beaten out of the cliffs by the fury of the sea. The drives to Eagle lake, Schooner head and Somerville are equally delightful.

Once, and once only, was seen Mr. Blaine's cottage. Now don't be frightened. I am not going into that great man's system, so tell you that he is on the brink of the tomb or that he is a giant in his strength. One can believe anything from the reports instruments sent out only two of which are authentic. I am in a position to state that the only newspaper people who have seen Mr. Blaine are Miss Helen A. Smith, the editor of the Bar Harbor Record, and a celebrated New York correspondent. Miss Smith had the first interview. Miss Smith, a dainty, fragile little lady, who gets through a monstrous amount of work, is a friend of the Blaines and was given the first audience on that account. As to the stories which have been sent over the country by the wiliest of reporters, a young half-French, half-Spanish girl, Margarita Arlina Hamm by name, is Mr. Blaine's favorite, is the lover of Mrs. Blaine and a pet of Bar Harbor exclusives, they are absolute rubbish.

Mr. Blaine was pleasant and quite impatiently asked of a friend yesterday: "Who is this woman who is sending out these stories?" and emphasized it audibly denied any acquaintance with her.

There is an old gentleman here, the father of Mr. Josiah Marcus Fiske, the mayor of Boston, who resembles Mr. Blaine a trifle, and who rather enjoys the distinction. Mr. Fiske met with an accident which made it necessary for him to have his forefinger dressed for several days. A wicked newspaper man put the representative of a rival journal on this old gentleman's track, and the deceived scribe followed him about for days under the impression that he was the secretary of State. Meantime in his paper constantly appeared startling telegrams about Mr. Blaine's "livid color," "drooping jaws," "glaring eyes," and so on.

Mr. Blaine's home, "Stanwood," is a commodious and comfortable villa, surrounded by large trees and pleasant grounds. James G. Blaine, Jr., is one of the attractions here. Handsome, with a complexion quite unusual for his flannels, canvas shoes and silk outing shirt. From him he has all the symphony in white. Mrs. Ramonda Blaine drives about in a yellow phaeton, dressed in a pretty costume of white serge and wearing a white sailor hat. Mrs. Blaine is devoted to simple white muslin gowns.

The Indian encampment is quite a unique feature for the summer visitor. It is on the outskirts of the town, and here the girls come to buy sweet scented baskets and high bark canoes. The pretty stories of their mystic snake dances are forever amusing the fakirs. The Indians are so quiet that many visitors do not hear of their presence.

"Have you seen my Indians?" I heard one young dude anxiously ask another. "I have just landed in town, and I'm real mad. I fancied the woods were full of them."

"HER AIN COUNTRIE."

What Called the Lonely Scotch Lassie Home.

HE was just a little Scotch lassie. A timid, sweet faced little creature, with an auricule of tawny hair to frame her pretty face.

She had come to this country three years before. At her father's death she had been left alone save for an aunt, a good kind woman, who was a brother to the girl.

They were left almost penniless, dependent on the charity of kin. Such was said of the employment to be found in America and the good wages paid. Lisette's aunt decided to come and try their fortunes in the strange country. "But what ob Kenneth?" the girl had asked. "I'll no' hae a promise to wait for him till he comes hame for me, this Yuletide a year." "Leave yer address with some friend, Clyde Burgh was be a gude one, and when he comes home for me, he can gang to the waters for ye, or ye can come back to him. We must gae, lass, for there's naught to do here."

So they came and found a home and employment in this country. The first year was a busy one to them. They were charmed with the novelty of it all, and though they worked hard they were making and earning money. And Lisette would be so glad to show it to her lover on his return for both. Over and over she planned her wedding outfit, day after day she dreamed of the little cottage that would be theirs, in their "ain countrie."

The weeks slipped happily by, but then the Christmas time. Kind was Kenneth came over the waters, and the months slowly dragged away till the anniversary should come and yet no lover, the happy smile faded. The cheeks lost their bloom, and the laughter from the lips, but Kenneth was faithful now. Each morning dawn brought whispering of a hope that might be fulfilled, brought entertaining and fearning love. Each evening's sun set on the hopes and dreams and plans of a living heart.

That fall the aunt sickened and died, leaving Lisette alone in the great, foreign world. She had been a very kind, loving nurse all through her illness, and her heart was almost broken at her loss. People said sorrowfully that she would soon join her dear one, who had died of a broken heart, but Lisette was young and strong, and she fought bravely with her grief. She found employment worthy of her talents, and was soon earning a good salary. She formed friendships of home and found them in one her fellow-boarders.

They helped her all she would permit them, but she was strangely independent, and liked best to be left alone in the little while she had out of the mill.

It was one evening the autumn after her aunt's death, that she toiled home, weary and heartsick. The sun was just sinking in great red self behind the azure tipped clouds, smiling a goodnight to the tired world. "Ye are sinking on all my hopes," the girl cried; "I shall have to begin again, but I canna get back to my ain countrie."

"MAY I COME WITH YOU, LISETTE?"

"May I come with you Lisette?" a man called in a voice of her ear.

"Yes, Jack, I am glad to hae ye," she answered, smiling feebly.

"You are tired, my girl, my girl; you work too hard, Lisette."

"No, I may be some tired to-night, but I shall be all right in the morning."

"I wish you would let an old friend help you, child; you want to go home, don't you?"

"Yes, Lisette."

"Aye, that I do, Jack," she said, with glistening eyes, "I like ye all, ye has been as gude and kind to poor little me, and I like America, too, but it is na Scotland, and I long for a sight of the dear auld hame."

"Then let me help you go back to it. It will be awful to let you go, Lisette, but your heart is set on going and you ought to go; now I have more than enough to take you, and I wish with all my heart you would take it and give it would please me so."

"No, no," she said, flushing hotly, "I canna take yer hard earned money, Jack. It is gude and kind o' ye to offer it, but I canna take it."

"Not to please me, dear?"

"I would do much to please ye, but I canna do that, Jack."

"Then for your own sake but-most for mine, give me the chance to loan it to you; you could send it back to me whenever you wished it." Lisette pleaded.

"No, I am na strong. I might na be able to earn it back so, so I will stay here and thank ye with all my heart for yer kindness."

"But you have the right to take care of you, darling. You are so weak, and I am so strong. I know I am not your equal in education and refinement—I know you do not—but I would try so hard to make you happy and to care a little for me if you would let me."

"Oh, Jack," she moaned, "dinna ask it; I would na wound yer guide, kind heart, but I am promised to another, and I canna think of it."

"I know it," he said huskily, "I have known it all along, but he has been so long coming to you, and you need some one to care for you, Lisette, oh, Lisette, it would have made me so happy to have done it."

"May our good Father bless ye," she said softly, putting her two hands in his, "for yer gudeness, and oh, may he defend me from yer love. I shall pray for him, for I ken he will come." The girl's face was transfigured with joy and the love-light.

"Then may he come soon and make your heart happy," he said, "for I have heard," was the mournful answer, "and I'm real mad. I fancies the woods were full of them."

THE GIRL SLID DOWN ON THE FLOOR.

she sun came in and kissed her hair and face. She toiled and caressed her letter, she turned it over and over in her little work-hardened hands. She postponed the greatest enjoyment she ever doubled the contents would give her. She toasted heart and eyes on the outside. Then she broke the seal, and in the full red light, read:

"Lassena, MY ain LOVE: They tell me I am dying, and with my last strength I would tell ye if my words be ever served ye. When I was home for ye that Yuletide a year, I was taken ill with fever and left as word for me, and I believed him—poor fool that I was—that ye had forgot ye, I couldna. And when they brought back home to me that ye had come true to me, that he wanted me for his own, I was glad for his sake, but my heart was broken. But we will be happy, ye will soon come to leave, for I am dying, my love, dying. Yer ain, KENNETH."

A little stifled moan, and the white faced girl slid down on the floor, her head bowed on her arms. The fire light came in and filled the room. Then it changed to gloom, and then the stars began to look down on the world's cares there, quiet, save now and then a moan, and a low murmur of "Kenneth, Kenneth, my ain Kenneth. Father, mother." And now the stars were hidden, and darkness filled the room. A storm was brooding, rustled the leaves and filled the air. The lightning flashed all around her, but still she knelt. And now the rain poured in torrents, and blew in through the open window. She raised her head, and dragged herself back into the room, but still the pitiless rain beat over her. She lay there still and motionless, and the clock broke the stillness, and then all was still.

The bright sunshine of the morning streamed in, and the birds sang their morning welcome to the other side. Still she lay there, the cold and still. It seemed to her hands, her eyes, her white face. The sun shone on her golden hair, and the breakfast was called in the boarding house. Some one knocked at the door, and then entered. Then a scream of horror rang through the house, and a faint light as from an unseen door told me that a "locomotive was coming down the mountain as a scream, speed.

"The course of the engine was then nearly parallel with that of ours, but I knew that a moment later it would skim around the curve and be right behind. For an instant I was almost paralyzed with surprise and fear. The idea of an empty engine dashing down a grade in your rear with a speed four times that of your own is something to benumb one's brain.

"As I persons accustomed to act upon the impulse of a moment does so almost unconsciously, and in this instance I threw off the brake and put on a full head of steam, even while my eyes were fixed on the engine behind.

A HEADLIGHT FLASHED INTO VIEW.

My engine gave a jump, and I knew that in that first effort it was to tell us we would be making a mile a minute.

"If the engineer of the helper was running merely under the impression that we were far ahead, the danger signal at the tower would warn him and he would stop, but if he had lost control of his engine—I thought of the high embankments ahead and trembled as the idea of rolling down the mountain again came into my brain.

"The wild and prolonged tooting of a whistle sounded in the rear, and reflected against the rocks and echoed in the valleys. I knew what that meant—the engine was beyond the engineer's control. We had at Bear Creek a mile start. Could we with six cars hope to escape an engine without brakes?

"I gritted my teeth in agony. A short distance ahead was a deep cut, and then a high embankment, if we passed the cut safely. I knew we would be over. We whizzed down the track faster than I ever rode before on a train. My engine was hot and the cut was left behind.

"A second later we were over the hill and on solid ground. I glanced back and saw the headlight of the wild Johnstown near midnight. Two hundred years before the great flood, and I was glad when we came in sight of the Johnstown station and I knew that my engine leaped forward, but luckily did not leave the track.

"Instantly I realized the ineffable arrangement on the coaches had broken the force of the collision, aided also by the speed of my engine. A second later the same whistle which had thrilled us before rang out, but this time it was the signal for the completely different from the former call that night, and I knew I had put on air cautiously to see whether the engine was pushing us with her full power.

"Finding it was not, I looked back and saw the runaway come to a standstill. Well, we backed past the train and rolled under the Seventeenth street bridge at Altoona. I afterwards learned that Chief McCleary, and the news had already reached the summit. It takes three engines to bring up an ordinary freight from Altoona, two in front and one behind. The two helpers are cut off at the top of the mountain and run back light to Altoona for another trip.

"When we reached the summit, therefore, there were six empty engines waiting to follow us down. 'You want to keep a move on,' one of the freight engineers yelled to me as we rolled slowly by, 'we're going to bring you down into Altoona yard ahead of the second section.'

"YOU WANT TO KEEP A MOVE ON."

"I laughed, and when my train got fairly over the summit and began to slide down the grade, I let her out. I knew the engines with which would follow us would be kept far enough in the rear to give the signal, 'move on' at the tower. We soon plunged into the tunnel and rattled along at a lively gait, that clicked of the rail joints and wheels which makes it plain to everyone that the train is running down hill. Soon I felt from the bed, arching over at the top much like the ordinary delivery wagon for a retail grocery store.

The body will be boarded up to the height of the seat inside, and heavy bars of iron will be run from side to side which heavy brass bars will be run, making it as secure as the ordinary passenger car. The driver will be elevated from the main portion of the wagon by a heavy wooden partition which will extend from side to side and he can keep an eye on his passengers. The door leading into the wagon will be provided with strong wire netting, so as to admit light and air, and yet keep the inside of the wagon from being seen. There will be conveniences for fastening the doors open, entirely shutting off a view of the inside.

With the old-style wagons the prisoners were exposed to the sight of the people on the streets, whether innocent or guilty. It is often impossible to obtain witnesses to the station house with prisoners, and they are necessarily locked in the patrol wagon while processed people. The protection to the persons on the wagon in case of a short is also provided for, and it will require fewer officers to guard prisoners. The seats will cover lockers which are to be stocked with stretchers, medicine chest, etc. Should the first wagon prove satisfactory every wagon in the department will be converted into the new style.

TINSEL POLITICS.

The tin-plate side-show of the McKinley Bill bonquiflers is exceedingly grotesque and quite sufficient to amuse intelligent people.

To boom McKinley and his bill, they got up a political banquet at Newberry-ville, Ohio, on the 2nd day, and endeavored to make it an impressive exhibit of the marvelous development of our country's tin product and manufactures. Everything in the shape of tin, stanium and dribolets was there served on American tin, so called. Tin-plates held the sandwiches, coffee was dipped from tin buckets into tin cups by tin dippers, and sweetened by sugar taken from tin cans by tin spoons.

How exhilarating the feast must have been, yet a second act of the farce did follow.

After the tin dinner came a tin mass-meeting in the public square, whereat the portraits of prominent Republican leaders were conspicuously displayed, appropriately framed in tin, shining tin, stretched on spacious plate-iron, amid deafening enthusiastic shouting and bealing drum-shaped tin pails furnished the music, while all the faithful proudly wore tin badges bearing the stamped likenesses of McKinley, the great tin idol.

Wonderful! Overpowering! And yet how sad to think that the entire product of American tin for a whole year was grossly absorbed in one small state in that single futile attempt to convert fiction into fact for partisan effect.

Tariff Reformers, and among them may be counted the whole of Republicans, should be deterred from investigating and correcting the manifest evils of a measure that aims to make millionaires of the favored few at the expense of the toiling many, though glittering tin may be piled as high as Banker Hill Monument, and all the sordid monopolists in the land bluster around hoarsely singing the praise of McKinley.

If American tin ore can be mined and fabricated in quantities to meet consumption, as well and cheaply at home as abroad, then let the fact be practically demonstrated, without political palaver or humbug.

But—

And there is meaning in the word.

Why, as is the farmer needing tin roofing for his buildings, in manner of fruits and vegetables when purchasing essential stock in trade, the dairyman as he surveys required milk pans, the housewife as she handles cooking utensils, did Mr. Stanium and laborer daily carrying humble dinner pails, are we arbitrarily compelled to pay heavy tribute to the special followers of McKinley or any other man, a justice to our right as American citizens and justice we demand?

That is the pending question.

A FARCE IN COURT.

Miller Offers he Evidence to Sustain His Complaint, THE PRESS Proves it is False, and the Prosecutor says It's Only a "Simple Case"; Yet Justice Sends Records to Downie II.

The examination of the officers and prosecutors of Miller, on the charge of malicious libel of Joe Miller, took place before Justice Nash, on Tuesday. The papers in the case had been sent to the Prosecuting Attorney, and he returned them to the Justice with a letter saying the case was such a "simple" one it could be settled in the Justice's own court.

Last week Nash granted Miller an adjournment because of the "absence of a material witness". To-day the "witness" was still absent and Miller had to ask for another. He was ready to proceed. Judge Goldtree, counsel for THE PRESS, moved that the case be dismissed and gave such sufficient reasons therefor that the Justice said he should dismiss it if Miller had a counsel", but as he had no counsel he (the Justice) would require him to call his witnesses, and ordered the examination to proceed.

Although there was not a particle of evidence offered that the article was malicious, but on the contrary of evidence that it damaged Miller, and not a particle of evidence that even if true it was a libel, yet Justice Nash decided to put the case back to the Prosecutor who had already given Mr. Nash his written opinion that it was a "simple case" that the Justice could settle himself.

Miller swore that the publishers of THE PRESS had enmity against him because he withdrew his advertising from the columns of the paper, and swore that he never received a letter from the publishers refusing to insert his advertisement and refusing to pay him. He was disproved by four witnesses that Miller was a perjurer. It was proved that such a letter was written and delivered to Miller and his advertisement returned. In fact, in cross-examining the last witness who swore that Miller had shown him the letter himself, Miller arose from the table and wanted to prove by it then that the advertisement was refused merely because he owned a little account.

Miller also proved nothing material to his complaint, but did n't even offer any evidence. On the other side it was proved that Miller's attorney had been coming to Miller's saloon for "Daisy Pulmore", was true. Miller, himself, took it. It was also proved that far from being malicious in the publication, the editor instructed the reporter of THE PRESS to leave Miller's name out of the article and so to the matter—which had then been seven days for ten days as favorable as possible for all the parties concerned.

In spite of this, Justice Nash said the defendants on their own head (!) await the action of the grand jury.

Bosh!

The minority members of the Council will not call public attention to their deeds by asking for a vote of thanks, but they are doing effective work in the compilation and collection of delinquent taxes to which the province of the Finance Committee is limited. Some of which have reached the pale of the "Big Six". A consolidation of the amount of delinquent taxes collected will be a surprise even to that of last year will prove time well spent.—Council Notes.

What nonsense! The minority members of the Council, or the finance committee, have no more to do with collecting the delinquent taxes than with writing the letter of the editor of the THIRD TERRET. Much does it all and does it well. It's to no one's credit but his.

THE SEASONS ORDINANCE DEAD.

Mayor Gilbert Vetoes It, and the Council Agrees With Him a Better One.

The ordinance to grant a sewerage franchise to J. M. Low and his associates was killed by the Plainfield Common Council at Monday's meeting, when the Finance Committee's report was adopted by a vote from Mayor Gilbert was presented:

To the Honorable Common Council of the City of Plainfield.

GENTLEMEN:—I return herewith without my approval, the ordinance entitled "An ordinance to provide sewers in the city of Plainfield."

The subject of this ordinance is to give the consent of the corporate authorities to the formation of a company by J. M. Low and his associates, to be known as the Plainfield Sewerage Company, for the purpose of constructing sewers and disposing of the sewerage in this city.

I realize full well the necessity that exists for a sewerage system in the thickly settled portion of the city, and I shall be glad to co-operate with any responsible body in an effort to construct same, if in my judgment due regard is shown for the interests of the city in the character of the system and the construction of it. I cannot, however, look with favor on this effort, which is hedged by so many restrictions as to the sewers and the method of construction entirely discretionary with the party who seeks the franchise, whereby the sewerage system in the city is to be constructed as the company may see fit.

The terms and conditions on which the proposed franchise is to be granted are set forth in an agreement which was submitted to and signed by the contracting parties, and which is attached to which is a schedule of rates to be charged for the use of said sewers.

The agreements are very vague and indefinite, and as it is not accompanied by any description of the system to be introduced, nor any specifications for the construction of the same, it justifies the belief that no definite system has yet been reached as to how the proposed work shall be carried out.

There is no limit whatever in the agreement which indicates what kind of a system is to be constructed, except the provision that the sewerage is to be properly disposed of, either at the sewage works, or in some manner to be approved by the mayor and council of the city, as the case may be.

A contract of so much importance as this should not be awarded to any party until by the most thorough investigation and study an intelligent conclusion has been reached as to the system to be introduced, and the character of the system should be set forth in the agreement in a clear and unmistakable terms.

If the sewage is to be carried to tide water, and is to be screened, if we are to have filtering works, the people have a right to know in advance where they are to be situated and how the sewage is to be purified. These are very important items, and may affect important interests in large districts, both as to healthfulness and desirability as a place of residence. Let us know just what we are to have before we grant away valuable franchises, grant any franchise, or enter into any agreement.

The city has a very deep interest in the sewerage problem. It is a matter that closely concerns the future welfare of the people, and no efforts are caused be exercised in the preliminary study of the question, the preparation of plans, and the careful supervision of the work by a competent engineer working solely for the interests of the city.

Provision is made in the agreement for a sanitary engineer, but he is to be employed by the company in the interests of the company. No provision is made for any supervision in the interest of the city. The entire matter is left entirely to the company after granting the franchise would have no right to concern itself about the character of the work, or any other important matter connected therewith, and consequently would have no need of a superintendent.

The provision relating to the purchase of the works by the city at the expiration of the franchise is objectionable, as it puts it within the power of the arbitrators to be chosen to compel the city to purchase at any price they may see upon. It leaves the city practically at the mercy of three men, two of whom will represent the sewerage company.

The privilege of the city to purchase after the expiration of a term of years should be at least, with a reasonable allowance for good will, in order to ascertain the cost, the company should be required to keep an accurate account of the cost of construction, subject to inspection by the city at any and all times.

The bond provided for in the agreement for failure to fulfil the contract is my judgment will be of no value whatever. It is the city's bond of the company without surety. If the company should be insolvent it would not be able to build them, as they probably will be, a judgment against the company will be worthless.

No good business man in any important transaction requiring a bond would think for a moment of accepting such a bond.

Section 2 of the ordinance provides: "That neither this Ordinance nor said assent shall be construed as giving any exclusive right to any their pipes beneath the public roads, streets, alleyways and alleys, but such use of the same shall have fully complied with the terms, conditions and requirements of the act entitled "An act for the construction, maintenance and operation of systems of sewerage in cities, approved March 30th, 1889, and the acts amendatory thereto, 1890." Inasmuch as the act referred to was approved June 30, 1890, instead of June 30, 1889, as stated, it is practically impossible for any of corresponding the error in order to avoid the possibility of a technical objection.

Respectfully submitted,
A. GILBERT, Mayor.

On motion of Mr. Hetfield the veto of the Mayor was ordered spread in full on the minutes. And also on Mr. Hetfield's motion the ordinance was ordered returned and not approved. The vote of disapproval was unanimous.

Another sewerage ordinance—being the old ordinance perfected by the city—has been brought up for discussion, but on motion of Mr. Hetfield it was tabled.

MR. SPANGENBERG INDIGNANT.

If Anyone Will Bring a Case Against the Saloons, He Will Vote to Take Away the License.

The ordinance prohibiting disreputable concerts and entertainments from being given in liquor saloons was adopted by the Common Council on third reading and final passage Monday night. All the councilmen voted for it. Before voting, Mr. Spangenberg said:

"MR. PRESIDENT:—I am heartily in favor of the recommended ordinance to license taverns and inns. When I voted for saloon licenses, I did not vote for saloon concerts. I did not vote for saloon dancing. I did not vote for saloon prostitution. I did not vote for saloon gambling. I did not vote for saloon theatricals. I did not vote for saloon prize fights. I did not vote for saloon sparring exhibitions. I did not vote for the granting of Mr. Miller's license, I called upon him to find out just what kind of a place he intended to have. He gave me his word of honor that it was to be a first class place, and that I would never regret voting for it. As he had been many years in Plainfield and always had kept a respectable place, I decided to vote for it. But he has kept his word with me! Why, according to reports he has kept a disreputable place, deceiving the majority in the Council, and disgracing a large portion of our city. Words cannot half express my indignation, and if any one will make a complaint to the city judge and the information is had, and the matter is brought before the council, I shall certainly vote to revoke his license."

The Plainfield Bicycle Riot Defeats Rahway Again.

Saturday afternoon the Bicycle Club's base ball nine defeated the Rahway ball team for the third time this season. Wyckoff, who pitched for the Bicycle club, deserves great credit for his fine work in the box. He held the Rahway down to 2 hits, and struck out 16 men. As one of the boys said: "He's making fools of them." Although Wyckoff didn't give the outsiders a chance to look at the ball, a few were hit to the infield, and were handled in good style.

Dawes did great work behind the bat, catching all the strike-outs and throwing two men out at second and one at third, without any error. He is right back in his old form, and will make a great backstop for next year's crack Bicycle team.

Wyckoff, Dawes and Sheppard did the batting honors. The batting was as follows:

BATTING CLUB.	BASES.
Dawes, catcher,	2. Hilliard, pitcher,
Wyckoff, pitcher,	2. Dawes, catcher,
H. Murray, 1st base,	1. Dawes, third base,

OH, WHAT A GAME!

Its Like Was Never Seen Before in Somerville, and Plainfield Won.

A cleaner, more beautiful game of baseball never was seen in central New Jersey than that at Somerville Saturday afternoon, when the Plainfield Crescents defeated the Somerville West Ends by the score of 2 to 1.

Both teams fought valiant tly from start to finish, and the game throughout was so exciting ly close that the big crowd of spectators was in constant aprear.

The papers were all in prime condition, and in each inning their playing was very evenly matched. Neither Harkins nor Hammill gave a single man a base on balls or on being hit by a ball, and while Harkins struck out only 3 men and Hammill only 2, the Crescents got only 8 hits and the West Ends only 7. The only errors made in the whole nine innings were 2 by Carbonell, who muffed a fly in the seventh, and let a ball go through his legs in the eighth.

Holly's playing was especially phenomenal. He was called on to make some very difficult stops of batted balls, and he accepted 9 chances with never an error. Freddy Foster did excellent work at centre field, Holly acquitted himself in great style at first base, and Keeler and Hammill fielded their respective positions in a manner that was admirable. Renter's work was perfect and even surpassed Kennedy's.

The one run of the West Ends was made in this way: Carbonell went to the bat and struck out, after getting three balls called on him. Farrgil got one ball, hit a little foul, and then lined the ball out into the field for a clean base hit. Moorehead picked out the first ball pitched and sent it sailing out to left centre. Jones caught it, which made two men out. Then Harkins went to the bat, made a clean hit to centre field, and advanced Farrell to second. Farrell started for third on the throw in, and slowed up a bit just before reaching third, so that the ball struck him and bounded back into the grass, away out of anybody's reach. When the ball was recovered Farrell was too near the home plate to be put out, but Harkins was caught of second and after some playing was put out just after Farrell scored.

Twice after that the West Ends came very near scoring. In the fourth inning, after two outs were out, Kennedy and Ridley each made a hit, and Kennedy was on third when Roberts batted a fly that looked like a hit. Tierney, however, ran and held it before it touched ground, and Kennedy's attempt at a run was spoiled. In the sixth inning Farrell and Moorehead each made a hit. No one was out, and a single bagger would have brought in two runs. Harkins, Kennedy and Ridley, however, were retired by superb fielding in one two three order, and Farrell was left on third—ed Moorehead on second. Second side of three threw innings the West Ends never got a man beyond first. What saved the run from coming in for the West Ends in the sixth, was the fact that Harkins's long hit to right field was just outside the foul line. Tierney caught it, but Farrell would have had a run on him in after the catch, had it been a fair.

Plainfield's first run was made on an error, after two men were out. Jones went to first and sent an easy one to Farrell, who threw him out at first. Lofberg made a hit, was forced off first by Tierney's batting, and was caught out at the mid. Tierney reached first by a dodge play, but was just one-tenth of a second too late in getting the ball to Roberts. Keeler made a hit, advancing Tierney to second Mclndoe was caught flying by Carbonell who dropped it, and Tierney scored. Hammill went out, Farrell to Roberts.

The winning run was made in the ninth. Mclndoe got two balls and two strikes and then sent the ball sailing far away over the right field fence. In all previous games such hits had counted as three baggers, but this time the ball in the ground rule had been made, and the ball was batted within the limit which had been set making it only a single bagger. Mclndoe advanced to third on Hammill's sacrifice. It looked as though Holly were going to strike out again, for he got two strikes and two balls, but everybody, however, by a dandy hit, which brought in Mclndoe, earning the run, and winning the game. Then the crowd stand went wild. All the Somerville crowd on the bleachers smashed their teeth and swished black tooks at Carbonell, who had been guilty of the only bad playing on the side.

A number of Somerville infants slipped away from their nursing-bottles at home and were present at the game. They had brand-new rattles, and enjoyed themselves to their hearts' content—till Plainfield won the game. Their disagreeable performance at the finish would have been expected of babies, but it did no harm, and the attempt to rattle Hammill and win the game by rowdy methods failed. Hammill had a cool eye in judging strikes, but he probably did the best he knew how. During the game the Somerville crowd remarked that the ball was so small that pitcher Hammill was a "big stuff." In this way the jokers succeeded in proving that Hammill was a very good a gentleman, even if they themselves have not yet risen above the old low Somerville methods.

The record to date in the contest for the semi-professional championship of New Jersey is now as follows:

	Won	Lost	Average
Plainfield	6	2	.750
Somerville	4	3	.571
Westfield	3	4	.429
Rahway	2	5	.286

Plainfield has won three straight from Somerville, and lost two to be played this afternoon. The series is to be played this week Saturday.

Fined for Riotous Rising.

Warrants were issued by Justice Nash, at the instance of the Hon. George Eyre, of Fanwood, Saturday, for the apprehension of Messrs. Thos. Hulsart and D. A. Sutton for "riotous rising" on their bicycles in front of the residence of the Fanwood constable early on a Fanwood township ordinance. As these were the first arrests made under the ordinance, justice Nash gave each defendant a fine of $1 each, and remitted the culprits not to do it again.

Robbed the Rotary Engine.

While Mrs. Mitchell Wilcox, of 205 Somerset street, was at church on Sunday morning, some one broke open the door of her house and stole a gold watch and chain, a gold ring and a pair of gold sleeve buttons. The thief was seen to enter the house by a boy who was playing on the street, but the boy thought he was a friend of the family and paid no attention to him.

THE ALBION'S SEASON BEGINS.

All The Bettermost's Guests Follow the Proprietor There, and the Hostelry Shines Are Gathered Fast.

Saturday was the last day of the season at The Netherwood, but not one of the remaining guests would leave proprietor Miller when the hotel closed. They all followed him to The Albion and engaged rooms there, thus filling that house to almost its entire capacity.

So much is to be said during the Summer of the larger hotel with its orchestra, its ball, its tete-and-tachers parties, its promenades concerts and its other gayeties, that The Albion is almost neglected in print, but the season is now coming. The Winter will see within its walls assembled the best company to be found anywhere, and the guests are the gayest they have ever been. People have flocked to town from miles around, to enjoy the holiday, and Knights of Pythias are present from all over the State.

The big parade is in progress as this paper is being put to press. By actual count, the number of men in line is 1 404, not counting a long train of carriages in the wake.

The night is a noble one, and the air resounds with inspiriting music. The long line of men in fish-uniforms and dazzling regalia, the prancing steeds, gally caparisoned, the bands of musicians, clad in brightest colors, have attracted dense crowds of people, all in holiday attire, to the streets. Banners are waving in every breeze. Flags are fluttering from every staff. All over the city the words "Welcome to all!" blaze forth. The city has given itself up to the Knights, and a gayety reigns supreme.

The Uniformed Divisions in line are as follows:

Palestine Division, No. 1, of Jersey City, Capt. Gust. Stoup in command.

Myrtle Division, No. 2, of Paterson.

Unity Division, No. 3, of Elizabeth, Capt. John Bell in command.

Black Prince Division, No. 4, of Newark, Capt. C. M. Simms in command.

Friendship Division, No. 5, of New Brunswick, Capt. John Pollard in command.

Red Cross Division, No. 6, of South Amboy, Capt. W. P. Mack in command.

Long Branch Division, No. 7, of Long Branch City, Capt. Benjamin D. Tolbson in command.

Monmouth Division, No. 9, of Red Bank, Capt. Walter S. Whitmore, M. D., in command.

Ortygia Division, No. 10, of Phillipsburg, Capt. J. Mitchell Reese, M. D., in command.

Ex. elsior Division, No. 11, of Trenton, Capt. Edwin P. Margerum in command.

Crescent Division, No. 13, of Plainfield, Capt. J. E. Fiedler, in command.

Calanthe Division, No. 14, of Newark, Capt. Theodore H. Baldwin in command.

The uniformed lodges, which also are well represented, number 132, and are officered as follows.

Grand Marshal—D. N. Meeker, of Somerville.

Assistant Grand Marshal—Hon. George T. Cranmer, of Bergen.

Adjutant—Hon. S. T. Champion, of Atlantic Highlands.

Chief Grand Marshal has appointed aids, among whom is L. R. Blackford of Plainfield.

Very prominent members of the order are in town, including Past Supreme Chancellor General Wm. Ward, of Newark; Supreme Representative Jas. R. Rutan, of Hackettstown; Supreme Representative Hon. James E. Moon, of Phillipsburg; Past Supreme Representative William A. Cotter, of Flemington; Past Supreme Representative Hon. Augustus A. Hardy; Past Grand Chancellors DeWitt C. Bolton, of Paterson; A. B. Rose, of Smith's Landing; Judge Badgley, of Newark; Henry C. Hoswell, of New Jersey; Wm. H. Mount, of Gallough, of Swedesboro; Wm. B. Trenchard, of Bridgeton; Henry W. Long, of Englishtown; Geo. H. Kalder of Jersey City.

The annual parade of the Knights is always looked forward to with great interest from year to year, owing to the order's rule to give being invited to participate, more than ordinary interest was manifested. There is no doubt that this is the largest Pythian gathering ever held in this State.

Unity and Perseverance Lodges of Plainfield, Good Will Lodge of South Plains, and Crescent Division of Plainfield, each had appointed a committee to make preparations for this event. This committee has been in close consultation with Grand Chancellor John Ulrich, and as a result an elaborate programme has been laid out that will be sure to please not only the Knights, but also every outsider of Plainfield and vicinity.

Following is the general committee:

From Perseverance, No. 76—C. Jones, M. L. Bradley, Jr., Wm. Bell, R. L. Bradford, T. C. Smith, R. M. Whitworth.

From Unity, No. 3—Wm. Bell, Jr., Geo. T. Bowman, Charles Richardson.

From Crescent, No. 13—Harry B. M. Turton, C. C. Bitner, J. L. Van Dike, Sir Knight Captain Ralph Marlin.

From Good Will, No. 74—Smith, V. C. G. W. Clark, Joseph Blinde.

From Oak Park, No. 68—Sir Knight Captain C. C. Smith, M. of Charles Richardson.

From Fidelity, No. 4—Sir Knight Captain R. T. Bowman, P. C. G. Jno.

From Palestine, No. 1—Sir Knight C. K. W. Titus, Sir Knight Captain P. C. J. C. Bitner, Sir Knight Captain Jno. Van Dike, Sir Knight Captain Thos. Jenkins, N. L. Bailey, C. Bowman.

It was by a committee from the town ability of these committees that the parade would be a success. The members all helped the committees, and the result is such a parade as Plainfield and the members of the order as has not been gathered together before at a parade in this State.

Following are the officers of the First Regiment:

Colonel—George H. Hinds, Elizabeth.

Lieutenant-Colonel—George H. Polhemus, Plainfield.

Major—George H. Kidder, Jersey City.

Adjutant—Frederick H. Irick, Elizabeth.

Quartermaster—John C. VanDyke, Plainfield.

Surgeon—Charles Richardson, Plainfield.

Commissary-Sergeant—Scott H. Hillyard, Red Bank.

Chaplain—Rev. H. C. Orr Newark.

Hospital-Steward—Lucius Ingham, Newark.

A cocktail figure in to-day's celebration will be Sir Knight Captain Jacob Dornick, founder and Commissioner-Chief of the Uniform Rank. General Carnahan was born in Tippecanoe county, Indiana, in 1845. He worked his way through college, and at the breakingout of the war in 1861, enlisted as a private in the 11th Indiana, Indiana Volunteers, Wallace's Zouaves". He was transferred to the 30th and remained with that regiment until the close of the war, returning as Captain and Brevet Major. He is a regular army, and on his return home studied law, graduating in 1867, and was appointed Judge in 1874. He became a member of the order in '76. Grand Vice Chancellor in 1879, Grand Chancellor in 1880, Supreme Representative in 1881, Supreme Supreme Chancellor at Detroit in 1883. General Carnahan entered his commission as Major-General of the Uniform Rank in '86, at New Orleans, and has the honor of being the first in the history of the Uniform Rank. He was re-appointed by Supreme Chancellor Douglass as Major-General of the Uniform Rank, and is now in command.

There are at present in this city 19,000 Knights of Pythias in the jurisdiction of New Jersey, gathered in not 130 active Lodges. Plainfield is honored in the selection of the Hon. John Ulrich, as Grand Chancellor of the State. The principles of the Uniform Rank are those of the order of which it is a part, and no one can become a member of this branch who is not a member in good standing in the Knights of Pythias.

The order was founded on the touching and heroic story of Damon and Pythias, and has for its basic principles the virtues of Friendship, Charity and Benevolence, a trinity of power and one that has been the means of conferring untold blessings upon the great brotherhood of humanity. The order was the beautiful conception of Justus H. Rathbone, a young man not yet 25 years of age when the first Lodge in his home, Washington, D. C., was instituted February 19, 1864. Associated with him in this first Lodge were D. L. Burnett, W. H. Burnett, E. S. Kimball and R. A. Champion, all of whom, including Mr. Rathbone, were government clerks in Washington, and most of them members of a social and musical organization known as the Jolly Green Club. The order had a stormy existence for nearly two years, but it breasted the waves of opposition and reached the haven of success, all of the strongest of the tri-la through which it had passed. On September 30, 1866, there were four subordinate lodges and 324 members, and their number at the close of the order into other States, until to-day the order has grown from a handful of members to a splendid army of 225,000 fighting gathered in more than every section of the American continent. Mr. Rathbone lived to see the order, which he founded, occupy a high and most honorable position in the fraternal world, and died "in the harness" at Lima, Ohio, December 9, 1889, while on a lecturing tour in the interests of the order.

There are two important branches of the order that have contributed in a marked degree to the present high excellence of Pythianism. The first is the Endowment Rank, or the insurance branch, which has been in existence about a decade and has a membership of more than 28,000 Knights. This department, or branch, is under the direction of the Supreme Lodge of the order, and furnishes a system of life insurance, established on popular and permanent, and within the reach of all members physically eligible. The U nform Rank was organized in 1871. In 1882 there were 101 divisions of the military branch of the order, and four years later 471 divisions and 13,000 or Knights were enrolled in the branch, which to-day has a membership of 40,000.

The judges selected for the competition drill are as follows: Grand Master at Arms Drake of Elizabeth, Capt. Sherman Gaynes of Company E, Third Regiment, and Capt. Ruttyon of the First Regiment of Newark.

BOUND BY A BID.

The Water Supply Company Comes to Terms in the Matter of Flushing Sewers.

At last the city has succeeded in binding the Water Supply company down to a figure for which it agrees to flush sewers whenever they have been built. The Common Council has had considerable difficulty in getting an offer from the Supply people, who seemed to be decidedly out of committing themselves to any price, so that if opportunity ever offered they might prevent. The bringing of an exorbitant water rates, a sewerage company from coming into the city. Notwithstanding all after it was proposed to grant to J. M. Low's water and sewerage franchise the privilege of flushing, at a moderate rate, the sewers of Low's sewerage company, the Water Supply company refused to bind itself to any figure, and never consented to do so at that rate all the water that may be required and that the sewers that may be constructed in Plainfield.

It is of course impossible to say how much water will be needed to flush a system of sewers not in existence, but experience in other cities indicates that seven gallons per minute may be flushed at a cost not exceeding 50 a mile per year.

To put the proposition in another way, it will say that our company will agree to supply water sufficient to flush the sewers of the city as may be built, at the rate of $5 per annum for each hydrant subject to use for extinguishing fires.

Very respectfully,
FRANK BERGEN,
President of the Plainfield Water Supply Company.

As a result of the foregoing letter Mayor Gilbert sent to the Common Council last night the following message:

To the Honorable Common Council of the City of Plainfield.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to submit herewith a communication from the Plainfield Water Supply Company received by me on the 10th inst., which I desire to call your attention to, and their terms for furnishing water for the purposes and for flushing sewers, whenever a system of sewerage shall be constructed.

While it is my opinion that the Common Council has no legal right to tax the people for the purposes of flushing sewers, that the private corporation, I submit the proposition of the Water Supply Company for your action. We may know how much can be saved for the city by making a contract with said company to furnish water for fire purposes at the rate of $50 annum for each hydrant, with a proviso that the water for flushing sewers shall be under the contract with them for flushing sewers, the city's charge for such service shall not exceed 50 per cent. of the rate for fire hydrants.

With this proposition before you, it would seem to be unwise to enter into a long term contract with J. M. Low or his proposed Water company, which binds the city to pay a minimum sum for each hydrant, for the reason it would be necessary to pay if the sewers were not built, and would be a needless waste, if no question could be raised as to the right of the city to pay for flushing the sewers of a private corporation.

A contract with the Plainfield Water Supply Company to flush the sewers of Low's system, I make with Mr. Low's company will under any circumstances save the city at least $1 00 per annum, viz., $5 per hydrant for 100 hydrants, and the amount thus saved will increase with the increase of the number of hydrants.

There is but slight probability of sewers being built by Mr. Low for the coverage company, and you will pay $50 per year for hydrants to his Acqueduct Company without voting away a large portion of the people's money without receiving adequate return therefore.

It will be time enough to contract for flushing sewers when sewers are built, and when the Water Supply company refuses to do so justified in paying $2,500 per annum for flushing sewers when the same service can be obtained for $1,000.

Respectfully submitted,
A. GILBERT,
Mayor.

Plainfield, N. J., Sept. 14, 1891.

By a unanimous vote the communication of the Supply company and that of the Mayor were ordered filed. The motion of Mr. Ackerman to spread them in full on the minutes was defeated by a vote of 4 to 6. Councilmen Ackerman, Gleason, Johnston and Rushmore voted aye. Mr. Lee was absent.

Done with Thirty Bullets.

Young men whom he knew only as "Jim" and accompanied him the other day at Henry Lieflin, the baker, overcoat, watch and $2.70 in change from the pockets of Mr. Lieflin, the baker, overcoated his clothes from the house into the delivery wagon, arriving at Sept. 8, Somerville, where they left the wagon, overcoats, and boarded the 12:20 train for Bound Brook, leaving the horse tied in front of the bakery. Mr. Lieflin, when he discovered it had been stolen, notified the police of Somerville, Plainfield, Bound Brook and Dunellen, and the thieves were captured at Bound Brook. Lieflin identified the horse and wagon, and the prisoners were brought back to Somerville, where they were arraigned before Justice Nash, and sentenced to thirty days each in the county jail.

A LEADER IN HIS CALLING.

George W. Rockfellow, the Busiest Business Man in Town.

A neat souvenir pamphlet was issued by the Plainfield grocers' association on Saturday last, and presented to each member present at the meeting in Reynolds Beach. Among the other interesting features of the contents was a portrait of George Washington Rockfellow, the popular president of the State grocers' association, together with a biographical sketch of that most modest gentleman. The sketch was written by the contributor of THE PRESS, which, when asked to fill out a page, could find no more appropriate subject-matter more suggestive to other aldermen than the career of the successful merchant who had founded the association under whose auspices the excursion was being given. The sketch is republished here, so that all may know more about the man for whom everybody on the Grand Jury has voted for years.

In all the grocery business of the State of New Jersey there is no more energetic and successful hustler than George W. Rockfellow, whose portrait is given herewith.

Mr. Rockfellow is heart and soul a Jerseyman. He was born at Round Brook, Somerset Co., N. J., in 1846, and has spent his entire life in the State. His father was Andrew Rockfellow, who, in his day, was one of Somerset's best citizens.

After completing his schooling, Mr. Rockfellow applied himself diligently to a mercantile life, and speedily built up for himself a reputation for integrity and thrift in every line. For twenty years he has been a grocer, all I that time in Plainfield; and his establishment, which during that entire period has been at the old stand, corner of North and Park avenues, has become one of the most permanent and prominent features of the busin-ss streets of the town.

Chief among the things dear to Mr. Rockfellow's heart is the elevation of the trade, and the untiring zeal and force-ful energy the grocers of Plainfield and New Jersey owe many of the best achievements for their welfare. He was one of the foremost in founding the local Protective Association for Purchasers in Plainfield, and his labors for that organization and for its members were so fully appreciated that he was unanimously chosen its first president, was forced to serve a second term, and would have been re-elected again last year had he not positively declined. He was one of the State Association he developed so much characteristic activity that at the convention in Burlington last year he was chosen President of that, and right well has he filled that office.

Though Mr. Rockfellow's private life has been one of ceaseless labor, he has, nevertheless, been compelled to accept some of the honors of public office that such men as he richly deserve. As Mayor of the city of Plainfield, during the term of 1884-85, he administered municipal affairs with a wise and judicious hand, and as President of the Plainfield Board of Health he is after sanitary matters with a keen and vigilant eye. Over-whelmed with business cares though he is, he never permits secular matters to encroach on religious affairs. He is a trustee and Sunday-school officer of the Congregational church, and he carries in every-day life a conscientiousness and integrity that have helped materially to make him what he is—one of the most respected and honored men in the trade. He is a loyal, big-hearted, popular, and a leader in his calling.

FORTY YEARS A PREACHER.

The Rev. Dr. Ranaln Celebrates the Oldest Pastorate in New Jersey.

The Rev. Dr. John C. Rankin, pastor of the Presbyterian church at Basking Ridge, Somerset county, the oldest in New Jersey, celebrated the fortieth anniversary of his pastorate over that congregation, Sunday.

The services were very largely attended. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Dr. Liggett of Rahway, whose discourse was on

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE, THE COUNTY AND THE CITY, AND HAS THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY PAPER PUBLISHED IN THE COUNTY OF UNION.

J. A. DEMAREST, - - City Editor.

—It took the parade just 16 minutes to pass the office of THE PRESS.

—Edward Ryan has been made a special policeman, so as to be able to act as night watchman.

—The one person who has n't seen fit to decorate, in honor of the day, the building he occupies, is the editor of the sons.

—"Battle Row", the city poor-house, is in bad shape. The Council removed Monday night to pay the rent bill till repairs have been made.

—Permission has been granted to Alert Rose company to take their apparatus to Elizabeth Sept. 8 to participate in the prize parade.

—Miss Carrie Dewey, of 4 West Fifth street has returned from her summer vacation and resumed the tuition of her scholars in instrumental music.

—The reported wedding of Alfred J. Everett of this city to Miss Louise Olsson of New York is denied by Mr. Everett as altogether without foundation.

—The hottest order of an kind delivered in this city, is that of one million lath recently received by John D. Runyon from Mr. R. F. Sherman.

—Miss Julia Jermain Ketcham has resumed her classes in voice culture. Pupils desiring to receive tuition from her may call at 42 Second East Fifth street.

—The Somerville lowfers have a new cry. This is what they shouted in chorus all through Saturday's game: "Hah, big! Rah, rah! Rah, rah, big stuff—Hammill!"

—Under the management of Stephen A Davis, the "Elm House" at Elizabeth is daily gaining popularity. Mr Davis formerly resided in this city, where he has many warm friends.

—A correspondent writes that "A butcher wagon with the name 'Arnold' on its sides is recklessly driven through the streets every morning to the danger of all who come near it."

—A moonlight bicycle run from the Y. M. C. A. rooms to Westfield will take place Saturday evening. Members of the Association and others interested are requested to be on hand at 7 o'clock sharp.

—George Collins would give a good deal to find out just who the miscreant was who has caused with black paint the bridge at Girard avenue which he had just painted in light colors, and which he will now have to repaint at his own expense.

—A boom town called Lorraine is threatened between Roselle and Elmora, and Graceland has already attained a population of one night-board and a flower bed. Verily the law of empire seems to have dropped down to roost in Union county.

A letter to E. T. Dunn, of West Fourth street, announces the safe arrival at San Francisco, Cal., Friday morning, Sept. 4, of Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Dunn, of Fairhaven, Wash.

—Elizabeth, one of the Crescent cigar parlor, North avenue, was made a delighted grandfather, on Monday, when a little daughter, their first child, came to gladden the home of Mr. and Mrs. William R. Mosher, 92 East Fourth street.

John R. Clark, formerly of Westfield, but now a resident of Catonsville, N. Y., is visiting his daughter, Mrs. Harry H. Connett, of No. 8 West Fourth street, Plainfield. He is looking remarkably well, and thinks that Catonsville is the spot to live in.

—The executors' sale of the property of the late Thomas Bell, situated on the south side of Peace street, between Front and Second streets, on Saturday last, resulted in the property being struck down by Edward Love, for $3,335. The property has a frontage of 50 feet and a depth of 180 feet.

—Plainfield is in need of money, and rather than borrow at interest prefers to use the $3,000 left in the old Moore waterworks fund. But it is contended that the cannot be touched until the courts have settled the water-supply dispute. Corporation counsel Marsh will be required to give a written opinion in the matter.

—Of all the exhibitions at the State fair at Waverly, none will excel that of Wm. Mullins & Co., the extensive and reliable furniture and carpet dealers of 220 Market street, Newark. Goods from them are as represented, their prices are lower than many other houses, and they make the easiest terms to those desiring credit.

—The application of the Plainfield Water Supply Company for permission to carry an 8-inch water pipe under the Washington avenue bridge has been granted by the Board of Security Board of freeholders, and the committees on the bridges for Somerset and Union counties are to look after the matter so as to see that no injury is done to the bridge.

—After the game Saturday, the Crescent League members and their friends paraded the streets of Somerville in a carriage and four, in honor of victory. Captain Farrell of the vanquished West Ends marched in the procession in spite of the pessimistic remarks of the Somerville men. The parade was headed by the Crescent band and the West Ends were serenaded in front of their club-house.

—A young man rode across the railway is the type in Texas in a buckwhich on a bicycle over a single plank. Sunday. The bridge if fifty feet high and 900 feet long, and had a train of cars been on it at the time the man would have been killed. The foolhardy youth refused to give his name, though the watchman detained him for an hour, hoping that a policeman would appear.

—Charles Courtney, of Westfield, is the owner of a valuable pointer dog, "Duke", which for intelligence and sagacity has but few equals. Recently Mr. Courtney lost his watch and a portion of the chain, in some manner while out hunting. He commanded "Duke" to go find it, and the intelligent animal was gone among the briar bushes but a few moments when he reappeared with the missing time-piece in his mouth. Mr. Courtney wants to sell the animal, however—so he says.

—Two women came to town late Saturday night in search of Lewis Agage, who keeps a pool room on Front street, and who kidnapped his daughter from his wife at Phillipsburg a few days ago. The women—one of whom is said to be Agage's wife—chased him about town in a very lively manner, but he escaped from them, and they learned nothing concerning the whereabouts of the child. Agage claims that his wife is an unfit person to have charge of the little one.

The proprietors of Hop's Cuban Balm do not claim it to be a cure for all ills, but a remedy for nasal catarrh in the head, and for that it is a positive cure. It is not a cocaine preparation, but is purely vegetable and harmless. It gives relief at once. For sale by druggists.

Lawyer William C. Coddington Monday was fined $10 and the costs, John Peterson, a verdict before Justice Sperry and a jury of twelve men for $194, together with interest and costs. Mr. Peterson sued Brokaw & Cain for the balance due him on a certain contract made by Peterson with Brokaw & Cain to furnish the materials and took-cease for Borough Attorney Reed's house.

A young man who worked in the same shop with Peterson claimed that he was a partner of Mr. Peterson's, and went to Brokaw & Cain and asked them to pay him instead of Peterson. The Brokaw & Cain did to Justice Nash's office some time ago, at the same time requiring the alleged partner to give them an indemnity bond before paying over the money. Mr. Peterson never got any of the money paid to the young man (whose name is John Herrman) and consulted with his lawyer to ascertain what he had better do to secure his rights.

HIS BRIDE IS COMING BACK.

Pensioner Letter Carrier Has Explained the Presence of a Woman's Garment in His Shanty.

The following story of the singular case of wife desertion which was published in THE PRESS Saturday appeared in the Sunday issue of a New York paper Monday:

"Uncle Billy" Jacobs is the letter-carrier in Dunellen, a pretty little New Jersey village about three miles from Plainfield. It is the first place in which Postmaster-General Wanamaker experimented with his pet hobby of extending the letter-carriers service to take in even the smallest villages, and "Uncle Billy" was the first carrier appointed after the new scheme went into effect. His route extends over twelve miles of territory, but although his hair is now nearly as white as snow, and he confesses to having celebrated his sixtieth birthday, he has never failed to make his daily rounds with the mail.

"Uncle Billy" is no ordinary letter-carrier. He is a man who has held a position of considerable prominence in a business and social way. "Uncle Billy" is connected with some of the largest and most influential families in Essex county. B. M. Day, a New York broker, is his nephew. Another nephew is A. Compton Hall, manager of the Ogden Laundry Company, on Broadway, and still another is William H. Lyon, secretary of one of the leading trust companies, all residents of Plainfield.

"Uncle Billy's" first wife died last Thanksgiving Day and not long after he was persuaded into contracting his unfortunate marriage with the county searching for another.

People out there say he went to a matrimonial agency and even advertised for one in this city. It is found that Plainfield is only 8 behind big Elizabeth and lends all that rest in the whole State in number of members. The principal places and their membership is as follows:

Elizabeth, 109; Plainfield, 101; Newark, 86; Jersey City, 76; Paterson, 58; Asbury Park, 46; Trenton, 41; East Orange, 40; Vineland, 38; Camden, 34; Rahway, 31; Orange, 27; Bridgeton, 26; Passaic, 26; Westfield, 22; Rutherford, 21; Bayonne, 18; Orange, 18; Montclair, 16; Millville, 14; Morristown, 14; Cranford, 13; Flemington, 13; Atlantic city, 11; New Brunswick, 11; Ridgefield, 10; Bordentown, 10.

In addition there are four places with 9 each, two with 8, nine with 7, five with 6, five with 5, six with 4, ten with 3, eighteen with 2 and fifty-six with 1.

The members who have dropped out this year and failed to renew this year on account of death, sickness, resignation from club, giving up riding, or for any other reason, is as follows:

Newark, 9; Jersey City, 17; Trenton, 16; Elizabeth, 14; Plainfield, 13; East Orange, 12; Orange, 11; Paterson, 11; Asbury Park, 10; and a number in other places ranging down to one each.

Fire Horses and a New Summer Resort.

A party of capitalists have purchased the Madison Vail farm at New Market, and contemplate offering it to the public soon in building lots. A portion will be reserved for an elegant summer resort house, with a fine park attached. The property borders on the beautiful lake in New Market, which abounds with game fish and other finny creatures. Maps of the property will soon be issued, and the date of sale and other information will be given in THE PRESS.

Tell to "The Round Brook Democrat".

A report having reached the ear of a reporter that Round Brook was soon to have a new weekly newspaper, he started on a tour of inspection and found the report to be true. A new Democratic paper will make its appearance there next Thursday, under the editorial management of Walter Reiss. Charles J. Wilson will be reporter. The paper will be set up and printed in New York and shipped to Round Brook for publication, as was the Rock at Dunellen. The home office of publication will be over Gillespie's livery stable.

Real Battle for the Damage.

The Dunellen correspondent of THE PRESS has been informed as to who the parties were that caused so much damage, last Sunday night, and threw the stones through the Park Hotel window. One of them lives about a mile above Dunellen, and were it not for his parents, who are greatly respected, THE PRESS would publish his name. The other two are married men, and live about the same distance from town, in another direction. Robert Lowrie proposes to have them prosecuted unless they settle for the damage they have done.

Insulted the Girl Who Waited on Him.

Saturday night, while waited on him at supper at the Park Hotel, Dunellen, and ordered beer. The bartender was at supper, and the proprietor's daughter was attending the bar, and, knowing Burk, she proceeded to fill his order without calling anyone.

Burk, meanwhile, had been indulging to the oil of joy, and did not appreciate the services of the girl, and ordered her not to draw the beer, at the same time abusing her shamefully in the most vile language. Burk then left the saloon, and tried to put Burk out, but Burk turned on him, struck him a terrific blow, and would have mashered him. Help arrived, however, and the fellow was ejected. He will be arrested when found.

Dearer at Her Son's Silver Wedding.

Saturday, Sept. 5, was the twenty-fifth anniversary of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph TenEyck, of Pleasant Valley, Somerville, and a delightful celebration took place. Many congratulations were received by their son and daughter-in-law, Mr and Mrs. William W. TenEyck, of New Brunswick. The bride and groom of a quarter of a century ago received a full share of tea in the early evening, and when they returned home they were surprised to see the house all tastefully illuminated with Japanese lanterns, and elaborately decorated with lighted Chinese and Japanese lanterns. The effect was very fine.

Mr. and Mrs. TenEyck were met at the door by their son and daughter-in-law, who had taken possession of the place during their absence. It was a complete surprise.

Good music was provided, and everybody joined in the dances. The groom's aged mother forgot her eighty-seven years, and waltzed and twisted and took part in a lively waltz.

A large design, "Father and Mother", made of wild autumn leaves, hung on the wall of the dining room, so that when the silver-wedding bride and groom entered it was the first thing they saw. The supper was splendid one, and everyone did hearty justice to it. Everything was gotten up in the style of twenty-five years ago. Handsome and useful gifts were showered on the happy couple. The event was gloriously enjoyed by all.

Robbers in the Valley.

A series of petty robberies have occurred in Washingtonville, lately. The cellar of Frank Molnes was broken into and his wife's purse stolen from the house. John Ivet's pocket-book was also stolen. The fruit had just been canned by Mrs. Molnes. Someone who knew Frank was absent on the business, and Mrs. Molnes was watched his opportunity and snatched the preserves.

A large bass was taken from John Koch's paddock about the same time.

A Father Kidnaps His Own Child and Asks for a Divorce.

(From The Daily Press of Sept. 12.)

Lewis Agage, who is well known in this city, is just now the victor in a family row which originated in the taking away of his little six-year-old daughter.

Agage married in Plainfield seven years ago, but who afterwards taken ill. His wife, it is said, yearned for more freedom than a sick room, and, after a quarrel, left, taking the little girl with her.

On Wednesday Agage learned that she was in Phillipsburg. He went there and, it is said, found her in a house in company with two men. A lively time ensued. Mrs. Agage refusing to give up the girl or tell where she was.

Mr. Agage left, but returned yesterday and learned that his child was at the public school. He went there, and after calling the child down stairs, picked her up and ran to the railway station in time for a train for Elizabeth.

He arrived at the Sheridan house Thursday night, the latter took his child to Somerville, where he says she is safe from his wife, who is enraged that her husband has outwitted her. She declares that she will get the child again. Agage says, however, he says, sat at once for an absolute divorce.

AN INTERNATIONAL AFFAIR.

Mr. Cable, Representing England, Stands on Mr. Sullivan's Rug; But Ireland Is Defeated by Deadly Ex. Bullets Armed With a Prize Packet, and Boasted Is Immediately Defeated.

Quite a lively time occurred at the Pond Hardware Store Monday evening. It is understood that about two years ago a young man named Craig came to this city from Boston and found work as a helper at the Pond Works and engaged a room at the house on West Second street occupied by a family named Sullivan, Dunellen boarders. Craig liked Sullivan, the families did not agree, so he moved to Liberty street, since which time there has been a dispute about money affairs between them; in fact, quite a feud. There had been no overt act committed up to Saturday, each party being satisfied in taking across the fence as the other would pass. On Saturday the main event took place in front of the Potter Press Works, and in the collision Sullivan received a black eye, but was getting the best of the fight when Craig was assisted by two colored men, who parted the fighters. During Tuesday morning some of Craig's friends met him and urged him not to have them meet at the noon hour; but, alas for their well-laid plans, Sullivan skipped for dinner at 11 o'clock sharp, and Craig reappeared to the shop and to his dinner pail without having satisfied his appetite for gore. While eating his dinner and "mousing" in a quiet way, his friends what he (Craig) would have done, he was suddenly interrupted by a terrific blow on his shoulder, followed quickly by another. Craig then got for enough in action to clear through the shop window and was safe, although as his No. 13 boots went through rue could hear the thump of his feet striking the floor. The third blow given by Mrs. Sullivan struck the baring mill run by Harry Coerless. Red Craig received his bruises, but was not seriously disabled. All now are asking "What will the barvest be?"

A Hill Horse Takes Fright at Sight of Water.

The horse which has been in the habit of drawing D. Hyland's milk wagon on Sher. Hills is evidently unused to seeing water squirted to-nigh a garden-hose. Friday morning it took fright at the stream being squirted on the cattle on the way in front of the Dime Saving. Institution and jumped out of the harness and ran away, smashing the wagon and its glass jars of milk, and giving the driver a thorough shaking-up. Milkman Kellogg caught the horse in front of I B Boehm's.

A Pleasant Surprise to Judge Ulrich.

The banquet tomorrday, in which was included Major-General Carnahan, General Ward, General Drake, and other celebrities, in honor of the re-election of Chancellor Ulrich, who was an unsuspecting invited-guest at the table. At the conclusion of the banquet Col. Wilson of Long Branch, an aide on the Governor's staff, steam, and in happy words portrayed successes of men who reached the Presidency from the low-path, but seldom, he said, did a fisherman reach the office of Grand Chancellor. While in this strain, he drew from his pocket an elegant scarf pin, on which a fish was suspended, and pinned it upon the scarf of the Grand Chancellor amidst great applause. Ex-Judge Ulrich then responded, and in knowing way, said he had became a fisherman and why he was so recognized by the Long Branch brethren. The presentation was a surprise to him, but terminated most happily.

Telling About the Biz Convention.

Christian Endeavor societies from all over Union county attended the meeting at the Trinity Reformed church Thursday night and listened to interesting reports of the Rev. Mr. Buckle and State Secretary Rev. S. E. Hamilton, both of Elizabeth, who were delegates to the recent convention of the Christian Endeavor Society at Minneapolis. President George W. Cross presided, and the Revs. Cornelius Schenck and A. E. Dilts took part in the devotional exercises. Rev. Mr. Buckle's address, and the meeting thoroughly enjoyable. The delegates from the convention told many things of great interest concerning their visit to Minneapolis, and the 12,000 world. The choir of the evening was composed of Horace J. Martin, Miss Bessie Bixler, Fred. Cornell, Miss Ella Bixler, Miss Ida Bixler, Miss F. Mattison, and Harry Rand. The organist was A. L. Titsworth. After the meeting in the church, refreshments were served in the parlors down stairs.

MORETON WINS THE ROAD RACE.

His Time Was Fast—Best It Would Have Been Under Ordinary Circumstances.

The 15-mile road race held on Saturday afternoon under the auspices of the Plainfield Bicycle club, was largely attended by the competitors. At 4 o'clock, the time of starting, a large and enthusiastic crowd had collected at the corner of Front and Madison avenues. The course was through Scotch Plains over the newly macadamized road to Springfield and return. The starters were Dr. George W. Moreton, P. B. C.; Geo. Maher, P. B. C.; J. S. Pike, F. W. Yates, G. W. V. Moy and Jos. Butterly.

Before the race Mr. Moy was looked upon as a sure winner, but his friends were doomed to disappointment as the race proved to be his first defeat. George W. Moreton captured the Martin prize medal, winning in 55 minutes, 53 seconds, after riding an excellent race. J. S. Pike was second, in 1 hour, 1 minute, and 10 seconds. George Maher was third, in 1 hour, 3 minutes, and 19 seconds.

Owing to the pedal dropping from Mr. Moreton's machine, which was new to him from the start, he was badly handicapped. He had to stop several occasions to borrow a wrench from Spectator W. Conrad, but pluckily remounted to continue the race after all his competitors were out of sight. Had not this occurred, Mr. Mahon would have been second, as Moreton's record for the time would undoubtedly have been even better than it was as Mr. Moreton could have ridden faster had he been pushed.

Mr. Butterly was the only one on a high wheel. He rode a first-class race and finished fourth.

The other machines were geared up to the racing notch, which Mr. Butterly's ordinary could not be, and the tire of the road was tacked up with a strong tape.

The medals were presented to the winners at the club-house on Saturday evening, after a large crowd had gathered.

The official time of starting was 4 P. M. 26, and the arrivals at the turning and finishing points were as follows:

	Springfield.	Finish.	Time.
Moreton,	4.30.35	5.26.28	55.53
Pike,	4.30 "	5.30.20	1.03.54
Maher,	4.27.30 "	5.30.49	1.03.19
Butterly,	4.25 "	5.33.28	1.08.
Yates,	4.30.35 "	5.35.20	1.09.26
Moy,	4.30.35 "	5.36.10	1.11.16

Following is a table of the best records made by horse and man, which shows that the latter is the more enduring:

Trotting at the Park.

At the Gentlemen's Driving Park, Saturday, the trotting resulted as follows:

First race—J. W. Johnson's Colonel won in two straight heats; time, 2.51½ and 2.56½; with Peter Osborne's gray Pilot a close second.

Second race—Mr. Hosher's Fred won in two straight heats; time, 2.39 and 2.42½; Mr. Hayes's Alderman second.

Third race—O. T. Waring's Copeland won 1 heat, and M. Quinn's gray George made a close finish for 2.39.

A Sunday Wedding at Netherwood.

Miss Anna Foster Crosman who, with her parents, Major and Mrs. Foster Crossman, of New York, has been spending a few weeks on Crescent avenue, was married at the Church of Our Saviour, Netherwood, Sunday. The groom was George Fawcett, leading man in the "Still Alarm" company that has just closed a successful engagement in New York. The bride is a sister of Miss Henrietta Crossman of the Lyceum, Theater company.

Major and Mrs. Crossman are old friends of the Rev. S. F. Simpson, rector of the church at Netherwood, and the Misses Crossman are well known here for him. Consequently when her wedding time came, Miss Anna would be married by no one else. The family therefore came to Plainfield for a brief stay before the happy day.

The bride has never been on the stage. The bridal party left last night for Cleveland, Ohio, where "Still Alarm" Company begins an engagement to-night.

Miss Freeman Wins a Foot-ball Prize.

The class base ball last Friday, under the management of certain members of the Crescent League, was a success in every particular. Chief engineer N. H Astfalk, of the Elizabeth fire department, had immediate charge of all details, being ably assisted by a corps of assistants from his city. John Ayers, driver of Hook No. 2, hose carriage, sading them. The game began at 2 o'clock sharp, and ended by 3 all were on hand. While waiting for the bake, which was uncovered at 4 o'clock, snow-ader and clam fritters were served, which were unanimously pronounced exquisite.

As the carriages arrived, their occupants were met by Mr Watkinson and Van Pelt, who gracefully assisted each to the other, thus all becoming acquainted and forming a jolly family party.

Prominent among those present were From Plainfield—Mrs. D. S. Roberts, Councilman and Mrs. Hetfield, Dr. and Mrs. T. Nightingale and family, the Misses Freeman, E. B. Kirby and Miss Kline, Miss Nellie Boutcher, Geo. Eyre, Mrs. Col. C. K. Moore, and James Moore 94. Mr. Barlow and family of Binghamton, Messrs. Nightingale and Hamilton of Easton, and Mr. A. L. Drake and daughter of Westfield, were also present.

Games were indulged in during the day, the prize winners at which were: Among Mr. Barlow for the best kicking and Miss Freeman for being the best sprinter on the grounds, a pair of Bellaire hats.

At what Messrs Nightingale and Hamilton defeated Messrs. Kish and Kyte in a 16 hand game of generable which, by 8 points.

The party reluctantly disbanded at about 7 after a delightful day, which they having enjoyed a perfect "bake" by the Misses of "Quality."

Music for the dance was furnished by H. Guttman.

Is it not surprising that nearly every household in the city should be acquainted with the merits, virtues, and the healthful properties of Hires's Root Beer? For years it has been a standard drink of those who enjoy a delicious temperate beverage. It tones up the system, helps nature, and is just what all need to feel healthful. How Uncle Lem Was Interested That He Had Won a Big Prize in a Lottery, and How He Made Sure He Got It.

[COPYRIGHT, 1891.]

I have been obliged to say one or two unpleasant things about my neighbor, Uncle Lem Dregs, but anybody has taken the notion therefrom that he is a bad man, I am glad to be able to correct that impression here. Uncle Lem is a man who prides himself on his unscrupulousness and honesty, and that thrift which enables him to wear one suit of clothes every week day for four years and not look ill dressed for those who know him.

One day Uncle Lem produced a worn and greasy envelope, and took from it a letter which had evidently been read many times.

"There, ain't none o' your folks in hedrin', is there?" he asked as he spread the letter out on the top of the fence. "Of course I have to be a little careful about this matter, because people round worthy purposes, that you would give largely to the poor—"

"LOOK OUT FOR UNCLE LEM," HE SAID.

"Wal, I dunno," said Uncle Lem, as if he feared I was exacting a pledge. "Nobody never gave me nothin', an' I don't feel called upon to be gruttered gust for the matter o' charity. It never does people any good. No, sir; I'm set agin it. I've worked for what I've got, an' anybody owes me a cent of it away from me has got to work harder'n I did, gust bet. He's got to have a good grip."

"Mr. Drew," said I, "this whole thing is a fraud. There isn't any lottery—"

"No lottery, hey?" he cried. "Why you see the letter yourself!"

"I've seen a hundred like it before," I replied. "It's an attempt to cheat you of sixty-nine dollars. New York has a large population which lives off the rural districts. Some of them do it by means of railroads which they steal, and others by means of buying and selling crops which they never see. There are others who resort to disguise and to the gravest business. They go at it straight out from the shoulder as your correspondent has done—for I cannot believe that anybody could suppose such a proposition as his to be honest. You'll send your money, you'll lose it, and you'll never see the jewels for they exist only in the lottery man's imagination."

Uncle Lem seemed staggered at first by this statement. Then he looked dissatisfied, and finally he muttered some thing about my being jealous of a neighbor's good fortune.

I have watched Uncle Lem with interest during the weeks which have followed this interview. I have seen him growing thinner, and more nervous. He has looked at me with an evil eye, and has evidently taken me as the author of his misfortune. He has consulted the squire (whom I have referred to in a previous communication) and there is something in the wind. Indeed the squire confided as much to me the other night over a game of forty-five.

"Look out for Uncle Lem," said he, as he raked in the stakes; "he's after you." He says you cheated him out of $10,000, and he'll get it back if there's any law in the land."

Newport Before and After 11 A. M.—The Casino With Its Brave Men and Fair Women—The Fashionable De Not Dance in Public.

[COPYRIGHT, 1891.]

He who has not seen Newport at early dawn has never seen the beautiful town in perfection. When the gray fog lifts from an emerald bay and the faint flush of sunrise touches its limpid waters; when the hush of silence broods over the luxuriantly shaded streets of the old town and the cool, salt breeze goes stealing through the thick, dusky foliage about its beautiful homes, then does one realize what a gem is set by nature and polished by art on this rockbound shore.

It is not until eleven o'clock that fashionable Newport wakes. Before that hour the streets are given over to the ordinary population of a country town of fashionable loafing. On Sunday afternoons all the world, the fashionable world, may be seen on the Cliff walk, which runs for four miles along the high cliffs against which the surf pounds ceaselessly. The Vanderbilt arch, built by Mr. Fred Vanderbilt, is one of the features of this beautiful pathway.

Newport is nothing if not respectable. This famous resort is polished beyond description. Those in the whirl here live in the same glare of publicity which surrounds them in cities. Everybody is on a continual dress-parade. No relaxation, no laying off, no slouching. Nobody is at his ease, nobody is unfashionable, hobnobbing with nature and chumming with earth and sea. One sees the fashionable girl in yellow crepe gown, yellow hat and parasol on top of the dusty yonder, on the back seat of the carriage dressing, going, dancing and eating, and long to get away from somebody, or to get back to the "gay world," or if the man with the impassive face and tired, blase eyes is one of the fashionable throng, he wouldn't like to don bagging trousers, flannel shirt and rugged shoeing-headgear, put up a pipe and a goa and take to woods?

Housetop Parties the Fad in New York Now.

How Gothamites Entertain Friends on Summer Nights—Roof Gardens for the Stay-at-Homes—Where They Originated and How to Arrange Them.

[COPYRIGHT, 1891.]

This season housetop parties are all the "go." Many and many a fashionable New Yorker who has enjoyed the novel experience tells it "confidentially" to some friend who tries it, and the friend tells it to somebody else, and somebody else finds it delightful, and so each one "opens the secret" around. What was last season an innovation is likely this summer to become a "fad."

"Can you come up to the house tomorrow evening? We are going to have a housetop lawn party." That was the gentle way my friend broke the news to me one day last summer.

"A housetop lark?" queried I.

"Yes."

"What kind of a tea is that?"

"Wait till you see one, and then you will know everything."

"All right."

"Remember, I shall expect you at eight o'clock sharp."

In fact, a few minutes ahead of time we pressed the electric button that brought the approved maid to the door.

"You will find Mr. and Mrs. —— upstairs," replied the low-voiced girl to our interrogatory. "He told me to tell you to walk right upstairs."

Slightly wondering, we mounted one flight, then another, still a third, and tired at the knees and half out of breath we climbed the steep pair of stairs that led to the roof.

Once on the roof we had come upon a quiet scene of domestic felicity. There sat our genial host, lounging in negligee attire in a big arm-chair. Smoking the pipe of peace he hoisted the picture of comfort. By his side, swinging to, and fro with the gentle breeze, his baby lay enclined in a hammock. Near at hand two children were playing and enjoying themselves to their heart's content. After the first greetings were exchanged the host said: "This is our summer tea room. What do you think of it?"

Then we took in the situation. The roof was the kitchen, dining and drawing-room. It was also a blooming flower garden. All along the edge of the roof was a double row of boxes, each one filled with plants of different colors. The air was heavily laden with the pleasant perfume. The electric wires were tickled by a stealing odor of geranium and by the delicate heliotrope. Altogether it was a desirable change, and relief from the smells that rise from the dusty streets below.

One corner of the roof seemed to be a regular bower of vines and climbing plants. Morning glories, scarlet beans and asters overran an arbor made of heavy wire. Beneath all this mass of green and color a rustic chair was almost hid from view.

The other corner of the housetop had been arranged for solid comfort. The roof was covered with Spanish matting, and in convenient places lay several fine rugs. A pretty Japanese screen shut off the entrance to a tent, the inside of which contained kitchen utensils. Thus protected, the mistress of the household brewed tea on an alcohol stove. Two or three low-sized tables were decorated with bouquets and dainty pieces of china and cut glass.

After inspecting the roof—the summer tea room, as our friend liked to call it—we fell to discussing the house top as a place to invite your friends on a summer night.

"Where," said he, in a tone of inquiry, "where can you find a cooler, more comfortable place on a hot night than on the roof? Here you can be fanned by every gentle breeze that blows, and here you can drink in the ozone that comes flying over the city from the ocean. New Yorkers who are fit to live in a summer time a great deal when they fail to utilize their housetops."

"Why," he continued, "only to-day I was reading a western correspondent's account of New York's sweltering hot weather." And then he read aloud something in this style: 'There is little relief anywhere, but the men suffered the mercury climbs up in the '90s.' The pavement beneath your feet is like a hot griddle, and the heat from the sun in grilling weather the metropolis is a good place to flee from."

"That may" he so, but the writer evidently left the roof out of his account. Those who are obliged to stay in town in July and August have a chance to enjoy summer night comfort. Here are no hot streets, no hot sun, no heat of gas, no go and festive glare, and besides you can have the enjoyment of a flower garden."

And now a few guests began to arrive. The children were marched off to bed by the tyrannical maid. A tall paper lamp of polished brass was drawn up to where we sat and it shed a mellow light over the table and the front of the tent were the rainbow lights of Japanese lanterns, dancing for all the world like fireflies in the evening wind.

"If you will excuse me," said the hostess, "I can leave tea in a few minutes." With a smile she disappeared behind the screen. The servant arrived with a second tea urn filled, and soon she announced that tea was ready to be served.

And a jolly little supper party it was. The novelty of the whole affair actually made the viands appetizing. What with cold tongue and chicken, a salad, warm biscuits, fruit, a glass of wine and a cup of tea, the hostess added, there were ill, and the conversation became animated. Later on, some one with a talent for music brought out a banjo from its hiding place. The music was soon drowned by the voices of singers, which rang out clear and strong in the night air. The little gathering broke up about midnight, and "good night" was said reluctantly to hostess and hostess who had planned so pleasant an entertainment.

One clever dame decided to give a "costume tea party." Almost all of the guests of the occasion were invited to come in costume. Tables, chairs, rugs, bric-a-brac, etc., were arranged in accordance with the costumes to be worn. Japanese fans, Turkish rugs and Persian pottery were the order of the day. Each guest was expected to appear in costume. Failure to attend this function was punished by a forfeit.

A LIFE-SAVING FASHION.

"For heaven's sake, a boat, captain! My wife has fallen off the pier."

"Is she dressed in the style?"

"Yes but quick!"

"Oh, there's no hurry. She'll float."—Puck.

SPEER'S
GRAPE WINES,
ALSO
UNFERMENTED GRAPE JUICE.
Used in the principal churches for communion. Invigorating for invalids, weakly persons and the aged.

ADOPTED TO HOSPITALS AS THE BEST FOR INVALIDS.

Speer's Port Grape Wine,
FOUR YEARS OLD.
THIS Celebrated Wine is the pure juice of the fresh ripe Oporto Grape, raised in Speer's vineyards, and left long enough upon the vines to become partly raisined before gathering. Its richness is unsurpassed.
Tonic and Strengthening Properties are unsurpassed by any other Wine. Being prescribed under Mr. Speer's own personal supervision, its purity and genuineness are guaranteed by the principal Hospitals and Boards of Health who have procured it. The youngest child and the weakest invalids use it to advantage. It is particularly recommended in the aged and debilitated, and suited to the various ailments of females and children.
This is every respect a WINE TO BE RELIED ON.
Speer's Unfermented Grape Juice
is the juice of the Oporto Grape, preserved in its natural purity and strength by the addition of pure refined sugar, and nothing else. It is delicious for table use, and for invalids, &c. Is entirely free from spirits, and will keep in any climate.
Speer's Quetsilter Claret is a pure, rich, delicious Claret, unsurpassed as a dry Table Wine, especially suited for dinner use.
Speer's P. J. Sherry is a Wine of superior excellence, and especially adapted for invalids and persons of weak digestion.
Speer's P. J. Brandy
IS A PURE distillation of the grape, and stands unrivaled for medicinal purposes. Especially recommended by the faculty as a tonic and stimulant.
See that the signature of ALFRED SPEER, Passaic, N. J. is over the cork of each bottle.

A BUCKING BY-SHACKLE.

Alice Macgowan Tells How a Tenderfoot Queered a Cowboy.

[Can be Forwarded to Make a Bicycle. Although He Considered It Tame For at First—Then Started Off on a Run] with the Usual Result.

(COPYRIGHT, 1891.)

Said the Wheelman to the Cowboy;
"I'll ride you for a ride."
Said the Cowboy to the Wheelman;
"I'll accept the challenge."

Said the Wheelman to the Cowboy;
"You accept you'll get a fall."
Said the Cowboy to the Wheelman;
"Whether girls' or as all!"

Said the Cowboy to the Wheelman,
As upon the ground he struck;
"I patted up her head an' 'lebbed her!
Jist queer fashion, now—don't you think?"

Our ponies loped easily together.
"This is a beautiful place, but so long-y," I said to the tall, grizzled rancho boss at my side.

"I've been in places where I was sorry to get out of 'em," he answered, and said he, gianching approvingly at me, "I've been where it was so lonesome a fellow was glad even to meet a coyote, and where we didn't see a strange face for miles on ede, months, and I dunno for four years, too.

"I'M TRAID IT'S TOO TAME FOR ME."

"It was down t'other side of the Devil river region, between the Rio Pecos and the Rio Grande, I was broncho bustin' for the Half Circle O. It was the lonesomest, funniest place I ever struck. Our outfit had been there three straight years, and if we ever saw anything we'd forgot it. We had worn out every deck of cards in the ground but one, and we played seven-up and a game short, and of rainy evenin's we used to have a force-for-all fight to see who should have that to play with. It was the fellers that got licked always 'mussed themselves pettin bullet holes through the cards if they got a chance, and up to the hand there wasn't no good fun in card playin'. We had rassel all the ponies so much that we couldn't tell which one we set up a race which pony'd win as we did when it was over'y. There wazzent a town in three hundred miles fit to paint red in, so when the little event happened that I'm sayin' to tell you of we nachelly thought Freemason had new whisky hand lines up was a havin', and sent us somebits' to have fun out of.

THE AUTUMN FASHIONS.

Shapes and Colors That Begin to Be Interesting.

Brownish Orange, Copper and Cardinal—The Renaissance of the Undersleeve—What the Dressmakers Are Doing—Fall Novelties.

(COPYRIGHT, 1891.)

There is a wagon tree just in front of my window and it stretches towards me a branch, identical half across the sidewalk. I could almost put out my hand and gather the yellow leaves the maple seems to be giving me. Those three yellow leaves mean autumn; the rest of the tree is green and heavy with leafage, but this three gayly dressed Cassandras flaunt their petticoats in my face every time I lift my eyes.

They move me to tell you that when I go about among the modistes I note a good deal of brownish orange going into all sorts of costumes. I see a good deal of clear red, also, and a little grayish gray, but the tint that for a week or so has crossed my path oftenest is the pale golden tint that we call champagne. A carriage dress was displayed to me yesterday, the effect of which was cold and silky and absolutely extremely beautiful. The ground was ribbed and showed the lights and shadows of wheat straw as it lies in the sun in the fields. Spread upon it were the blue flowers of the cassory and the feathery white ones of wild carrots. It was designed by some lady who loves, as I love, the warm smell of the harvest field and the hum of the locust, and it was American.

There is a blackish copper color that seems to be very prominent. It is very pretty in woolen goods, but in silk it is more tolerable. It is called sun, because they say that it is Paris and not in that of the Prosper sun rubbed about in many baskets and handled by many fingers.

Dresses of changeable taffeta are shown me. They are both for street and for house wear. The latter are lovely. They are very bright, and round flounces of black tulle is run along the bottom, and is bordered with black satin ribbon.

The most noticeable change the autumn dress will impress upon you is its more respectful attitude toward the undershirt. For some time past the undershirt has been of dead gauze. It has been recognized in polite society, but it is recognized now—and trimmed. This recognition has a meaning. It means that the train has attached itself to the street dress to stay. Consider: it is a train that is long. The sweep of a long back breadth must frequently be lifted; it must always be lifted when a woman is out of doors. This means that the undershirt must be handsome enough to show.

The undershirt adjusts itself to the situation with a care which indicates that the arrangement is expected to be a permanent one. It is made long, for it can be expect to be lifted and carried gracefully. It is made usually of the same material as the outer dress, and sometimes it is adorned with a ruche of the same. Sometimes again it carries on the flounce or a series of narrow ruffles. If a wool dress is made exactly as modiste prescribes, it should be made, this undersleeve is of silk, and if the dress is black she will even recommend to an underdress a changeable silk, though this is a measure that seems extreme.

One of the best houses in the city has completed two street dresses for autumn which are here with submitted in sketch for your inspection. One of them is of the brownish orange tint I have just spoken of. The cloth is a fine little cloth with a small nap. The skirt in front is scalloped and below is a narrow plaiting. The coat is of plain orange brown wool, fastened across with browns and orange cords, and having a front of orange silk, with black lace to subdue its vivid complexion.

The other dress is of a light blue cloth with a tinge of gray. It is trimmed with white braiding. The left side, which does not show in the sketch, has pearl buttons and loops. It is the back of the right side opened over a blue silk panel. There is a big bustle, which is plaited on one side and laid in gradated folds on the other. It is drawn about on the left shoulder in fashion that is novel and pretty, and is thrown over a blue vest with puffings. The sleeves have cloth tops, but end in silk below.

May I give you a little idea of what the house and some of the other houses are doing? I have noticed within a few days:

White felt sailor hats with orange brown wings.

A dress of golden brown homespun flecked with yellow; it has a fan back, a "dip" skirt, a yellow cloth vest, and is to be worn with a brown cloth cape, yellowish tan gloves and a brown straw turban hat with brown and yellow pompons.

A dress of dark green tweed, with clear red waistcoat braided in gold, long tweed stock and plain green cloth banded near the bottom with gold galloon.

A dress for an autumn garden party; it is of flowered silk, of the glossy green of the oak leaf, figured with Japanese pinks and Tokay. The lower part is of oak green velvet, with black lace veiling the closely buttoned silk waistcoat.

Flat black felt hats trimmed with yellow roses and black velvet ribbon.

A luxury for the autumn is a dress of brown and maidenhair color.

A reception dress of deep blue, fawn and tan, with a fawn cloth cape to be worn with a fawn colored felt bonnet but closely which is twisted a blue velvet.

A tea gown like the one shown in the illustration. It is of a silvery gray brocade and dotted with pink. It is worn over a petticoat of Venetian lace, and black sleeves, and the general impression of bombast and lacquer.

The bride was a tall, pale blonde, and she was dressed in white trimmed with embroidered chiffon. It was not one of which I started to tell you. There were four bridesmaids, and they were in pink moss cloth, made with long coats and short skirts of white chiffon. They were quaintly shaped ta

SKY-ROCKET POLITICS.

In Brooklyn, N. Y., the Fassett Republicans inaugurated their Gubernatorial campaign the other night with much noise and a fitting display of fireworks.

Sensational and nonsensical politics once flourished, but that era has given way to sensible thought. We're changed not now, to any considerable extent, be influenced by fuse and feathers, flash and farce. They demand as a basis for intelligent action solid truths, practical results, and never before in the political history of the country was partisan fiction of less account than at present.

It is a praiseworthy change.

A procession thousands strong, gotten up to order, with bright tin helmets, tin badges, tin shields, tin trumpets and tin torches, will utterly fail to convince the sensible people of the economic honesty of McKinley tariffs; and no amount of burning powder or brass band music can deaden the ugly fact that the loss to New York of the Worlds' Fair was the work of Platt Easterly politics.

The people are thinking for themselves.

The domineering rule of would be bosses is on the wane.

Let us fly refer to the past.

In 1840 William Henry Harrison was elected President because of the hard-cider, log cabin, live-coon and ball-rolling craze of that year. It was the first attempt to lower the dignity of American politics to the level of the circus ring and for the time being proved successful.

Four years later the Whigs earnestly strive to re-animate the Tippecanoe style of electioneering, but encountered defeat, as sober second thought had possessed the people.

During the then bitter contest of 1844 this incident occurred in New York:

An elaborately organized Whig procession was moving along Broadway, its ranks adorned in by richly caparisoned horses contained hundreds of mechanics and artisans busily piping their various industrial occupations, while thousands of foot-goers in line cheered lustily as they confidently marched onward to victory.

The flag-stones were thronged with lookers-on, and among them stood an old gentleman of the Democratic faith, who lodged soon by a young and ardent Whig acquaintance was thus accosted:

"After viewing this overwhelming demonstration of popular might, can you a moment longer doubt the coming election of Mr. Clay?"

"Yes sir, I certainly do," responded the Democrat.

"Upon what ground do you found such a preposterous opinion," asked the Whig.

"Simply because the sidewalks are crowded with silent but determined Polk and Dallas voters," was the Democratic reply.

The result justified the old gentleman's prediction.

So now, cities, hamlets, woods and farm lands are full of declaimers. Democratic voters who care not a pin for all the political shows on earth.

THE CONCERT SALOON MUST GO.

No More Disorderly Performances in Plainfield Barrooms, and a View of Their Interiors Must be Open to the Street All Day Sunday and All Sunday Night.

The ordinance designed to rid this city of the iniquitous and nefarious concert saloon, becomes a law Friday. It was signed by Mayor Drake last night. It will be the death blow to Joe Miller's business, and the income of the "news" that advertises the dirty performers, will thereby fall away.

The full text of the ordinance is as follows:

Section 1. That no person licensed under the ordinance to which this is an amendment, shall suffer or permit in his or her bar room, or room in which liquors are sold, any persons who are customarily sold, or in any room in the same building adjoining such bar room where liquors are dispensed or drunk, any musical performance of any kind, vocal or instrumental, or female impersonation, dancing, jig dancing, dancing, jumping, display of head, heeling, wrestling or any similar performance, show or exhibition.

Section 2. Every person licensed under the ordinance to which this is an amendment, who shall sell spirituous or fermented liquors shall so arrange the doors, windows and partitions of his or her bar room, that a full and unobstructed view of the interior thereof, including the rear, may be had from the street through the doors or windows or both, between the hours of 12 p. m. on each and every Saturday and 8 a. m. on the following Monday; and said window, blind, screen, partition, curtain or other screen shall be so left and arranged as to prevent between the hours named the full and unobstructed view from the street of the bar room or any room or bar room licensed under the ordinance to which this is an amendment.

Section 3. No person licensed under the ordinance to which this is an amendment shall sell or dispose spirituous or fermented liquors from any bar that cannot, between the hours set forth in section 2, be plainly seen from the street.

Section 4. Any violation of any of the provisions of this ordinance shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars or by imprisonment not exceeding thirty days, or both, at the discretion of the court.

A Lesson for Peach Growers.

A well informed farmer and fruit grower of the business has this to say relative to the peach crop, now nearing its close. "The present has been the most profitable year for the orchardists of the oldest peach growers; but, while the yield has been enormous, the profits to growers have been in no way proportionate to the bounty bestowed upon them. If the crop had been harvested differently—if the had marketed only the choicest—everything the inferior to a good article of peach-flavored pork or to a fertilizer—the profits to the growers would have been more remunerative. The handling of the peach crop for profit broke down the price which the better article would have commanded.

Plainfield and Somerville unlocked horns again on Saturday at the former place, and the Somerville aggregation was successful by the score of 6 to 5. The cognie was exciting throughout, as all games between these two cities are, and when victory at last perched on the West End's banner there was wild rejoicing among that club's followers. John Harkins, of this city, was the hero of the hour, and his friends gave him an ovation. He batted the Plainfield pitcher down to a few hits and fielded batted well. CRASHED THROUGH A WINDOW.

A Runaway Horsecar Suspects the Brake of a Final Smash Blow.

An exciting runaway occurred on Park avenue Tuesday night, at about 9:35.

The son of backman Kiely was driving an Eighth street passenger hoofward, and had just reached Fifth street, when a horse became pleasing the cars, and he dashed against the bank; and broke one of the shafts. The collision caused the meeting to prance around somewhat more than before, and by the time it had reached the railway bridge it had smashed the wagon to which it had been attached, dumped the driver out, and freed itself from the wreck.

It galloped up Park avenue so fast that at Front street it was unable to turn, and slid across the sidewalk and down into the area of Mrs. G. E. Clarke's fancy goods store. It lay there stunned a moment and then got slowly up. In rising it struck its head against the iron pane of plate glass nearest the steps of First National Bank, and shattered the glass into fragments. The animal was then secured, and after a while its owner led it home. It was comparatively unhurt.

The runaway was owned by John Emmons, of 134 Rockview avenue. He bought it from George W. Moore, of Elm place, a short time ago. His son Charles had been driving it, and was badly shaken up by the accident.

MRS. VAN ARSDALE'S FATAL LEAP.

The Horses Were Scented Away, and She Jumped and Broke Her Neck.

P. C. VanArsdale, who used to live at 166 East Second street, but who now has a huckstering farm at Plockamin, and sells vegetables, butter, shd eggs, to Plainfield people, arrived driving, with his wife, on Monday, back of Somerville, when his team of ponies started to run away. He told his wife to jump, and she made a frantic leap from the wagon and fell in a heap by the roadside. Within two minutes VanArsdale got his horses under control, and found that his wife was still lying pale and motionless. Horrified, he raised her in his arms, and found that she was dying. When she breathed her last her head had fallen against big stone, and her neck was broken. In five minutes she was dead. She leaves a family of small children.

PLAINFIELD WOMEN LEADING.

Prominent Parts to be Taken at the Coming County Convention.

The Union county convention of the Women Christian Temperance Union will be held in the Presbyterian church at Dunellen next week Tuesday. Mrs. M. D. Tomlinson of this city, will preside, and will read her annual report as president, and Miss C. R. Yates of this city, will read her report as corresponding secretary.

The convention will be opened with a prayer service, led by Mrs. J. C. Fernald of Plainfield, and among the reports of local conventions during the year will be those of Mrs. P. H. Bennett, of this city, on "Juvenile Work"; Mrs. S. R. Krom of this city, on "Press Work"; Mrs. J. W. Hall of Dunellen city, on "Literature"; Mrs. J. H. Coard of this city, on "Hygiene"; and Miss May Tomlinson of this city on "Kitchen Garden". Among the topics of local interest will be those of Mrs. Tomlinson of the "W's", and Miss Amy Green of the Plainfield "Y's". The other reports will be as follows:

Carpenter, Roselle; Mrs. C. T. Young, Scotch Plains; Mrs. G. S. Mosher, Westfield; Miss Kate Murphy (Y) Elizabeth.

TO ANNEKE JANS HEIRS

Those Are a Number in This City Who Will be Glad to Hear That Old Trinity Crack This Month.

One who seems to know writes as follows:

Having seen many articles published in the daily journals of this country for the last few months I notice one in particular that attracted my attention. It had a great headline as follows: "Heirs to Trinity Millions;" then went on to say that an association had been formed for the purpose of duping the heirs of the venerable old lady who was known as Anneke Jans Bogardus, and that it was a fraud and a swindle. I thought as I had the time to spare, that I would investigate the matter, and after a week's work the case; I spent some six weeks on the search and I found that there does exist such an association, that it is duly incorporated under the laws of the State of New York, numbering over six hundred members, all of whom have proven themselves heirs to the old lady and members who are millionaires and some of whom are retired merchants. A number are now citizens of Plainfield. The association is conducted on a thorough business like manner, and the officers are composed of wealthy men, who are able and responsible gentlemen and I consider it a benefit to any heir to read that there are few corporations conducted in any better manner or with more honesty. When they consulted legal proceedings this month they will make old Trinity crack from foundation to spire They have some of the most able attorneys in the land, and will be the fight it to the bitter end. I think their claim is a just one; and the heirs ought to have their rights although I am not an heir myself I am interested.

"I am a great lover of justice, and I would advise all the heirs to join the association and help them. It will be well done so, and do it as soon as possible, as I think their labors will be crowned with success, as they have a large amount of money and are willing to pay it on its merits. A LOVER OF JUSTICE."

Elizabeth's Bicycle Record.

M. H. White started from the clubhouse of the Elizabeth Wheelmen at 6 o'clock, Friday, to break the club record for twenty-four hours, which has been held for a number years by F. C. Gilbert. Mr. White rode until nearly 2 o'clock, but lost the benefit of his work, one half hours by his cyclometer getting out of order and refusing to register for that length of time.

At 8 a. m. White started out again, making twenty-five and twenty-nine-miler trips without dismounting. Both trip to Plainfield one made before the start and one after the finish. Plainfield down to a few hits and fielded batted well. Harkins is re, ended as a shining exception to the general rule that pitchers are poor batters.

CAUGHT THE ROBBER.

He Pleaded Guilty to Burglary, Stealing, and is Sentenced to Prison for Eighteen Months.

(From the DAILY PRESS of Sept. 9th.)

The clothing store of O. H. Dunham, at 46 West Front street, was robbed last night of $200 worth of goods, and the robber, who was Mr. Dunham's next-door neighbor, was promptly caught, and has confessed.

The store was entered from the rear. With a glass cutter a hole was cut in one of the sashes the catch was cut, the glass was broken, and the catch was pulled back. The sash was then raised, and the thief entered and took from one of the show cases a number of watches, watch charms and rings.

This morning sergeant Lynch received the following message:

Chief of Police, Plainfield, N. J.

I arrested a man giving his name as C. W. Dodson, with his pockets full of watches and rings. Says he lives at 41 East Third street, Plainfield. Was given 5 days by Justice Brampton. JOHN F. SANDERS, Marshal.

He had also glass cutter and chisel.

As the result of the receipt of the note, Sergeant Lynch and C. M. Dunham went to Somerville, where the prisoner was identified the prisoner as Charles W. Elston, who runs the store at 44 West Front street, adjoining Dunham's. The firm came over the store in W. W. Elston & Son. W. W. Elston is the young man's father, who is said to have been, until recently, a Pinkata way farmer. He is said to have been in business as a notion dealer a month or two ago, and offered him every chance for a successful career. He paid $600 rent for the store for one year, and told his son that he would stock up his store as fully as he desired.

Charles told him not to stock too heavily till the busy season. Charles lived with his father and mother, his sister, his wife, and his two children, in the French-roofed house at 49 East Third street.

Young Elston's father says that Charles is all right except when under the influence of liquor, and thinks that he must have been intoxicated when he committed the burglary.

Elston himself says that he was drunk, and presumes that in the intoxicated state he entered Lynch Interviewed him at the jail. Then he broke down and cried and pleaded about the disgrace to his wife only.

The way he came to be caught was this: He boarded a freight train, after the robbery, and offered one of the train men a ring. The fact that he had a handful of rings out of his pocket excited suspicion, and word was sent to officer Sebring, who arrested him for train hiding.

When Elston is released, Saturday, he will be re-arrested on a complaint for burglary sworn out by Mr. Dunham this morning. The fact that he is suspected of having been concerned in the various robberies that have been committed in Plainfield of late. Mattison's pharmacy and other places were robbed in much the same manner as was Mr. Dunham's store.

Elston is known around town as "Fac-wood Charlie". It is said that he has been in the Reform School.

The police officials give a bad name to Charles Elston, and call him "Fac-wood Charlie", who was arrested for the robbery of $250 in goods from his next-door neighbor, O. M. Dunham. They claim to have proof that he has been guilty of a series of burglaries in this vicinity for years back. In some—they say —he was caught, and compelled to confess, but out of consideration for his family he never was prosecuted. Some of his most daring ventures have been—they claim—in alleged—the theft of poor Scotch Plains hen roosts. It is charged that after killing and plucking the fowls he would take them back to the village and sell them to their owners. Another trick reported of him is that he would jump aboard the Scotch Plains stage, kick out the rotten when the driver wasn't looking, jump out further along the road, go back and get the robes, and convert them into cash. The police say they have caught one of the most desperate of thieves. When he was a mere lad he began to steal, and was sent to the Reform School for it.

WHERE IS DAVID L. CURTIS?

He Took His Girl to See the Fireworks, and Disappeared.

The clerks at J. Fred McDonald's grocery store are puzzled to know what has become of David L. Curtis, a young man who drove one of the delivery wagons of the store. Last week Wednesday night he left for home at the closing hour, bidding everybody a cheerful good-night. In the evening he accompanied a young woman of his acquaintance to the fireworks display at Netherwood, and for fifteen minutes sat contentedly by her side, munching caramels, and someone last rapturously on the quality of the caramels and the grandeur of the flights of rockets. At twenty minutes past 8 he excused himself 'just for a moment', and the damsel whom he had escorted to the fireworks has not laid eyes on him in the crowd. He never came back.

The faithful, patient maiden sat on the edge of a plank and waited till long after the last rocket left for Mars. A

CITY DEPARTMENT.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE, THE COUNTY, AND THE CITY, AND HAS THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY PAPER PUBLISHED IN THE COUNTY OF UNION.

J. A. DEMAREST, - City Editor.

ANOTHER DAY'S RECORD.

Indisputable Evidence That Boulder-Rising Plainfield's Only Newspaper, THE PRESS, is the People's Daily Medium of Public Communication.

There is no doubt of the fact that THE PRESS is Plainfield's only newspaper. That has been established for months.

But it needs that, each day for the next many weeks, evidence is presented that it is also the people's only medium of public communication.

Take Saturday's issue again for instance. It contained 20 columns of live advertising, while the same issue of the "news" had but 13 columns in all, counting the head.

The same issue of the "news" contained but 24 cents-a-word advertisements of the people's wants and offers, while THE PRESS contained 44. This one comparison alone proves that THE PRESS is the only advertising medium that the whole community recognizes.

Then take the matter of church notices. They are sent to the papers by the church officers for the information of the whole people. They are inserted gratuitously, and it is reasonable to suppose that under such circumstances the notices will be sent to every newspaper known in the city.

Saturday's "news" had 16 of these notices, while THE PRESS had 26. That proves that over 10 per cent. of the religious societies of Plainfield do not know of the existence of any paper except THE PRESS. "Daisy Dolmore's" organ could not be the decent people, at least.

It will be dead to the world within a few months.

—You and I at Music Hall, Thursday evening!

—Umpire Fass resumed the Crescents on base-running decisions, saturday.

—Engine Foreman Hall of Middlesex Hose, Metuchen, was in Plainfield Tuesday evening, Oct. 6.

—Another judgment was issued against Jos Miller, Thursday. A. Stoutenburgh is the creditor and the amount is $200.

—Kennedy's babyish actions and vulgar conduct at Saturday's baseball game disgusted even the players on his own team.

—A row occurred at a Somerset concert saloon Saturday night over the ejection of a drunken plumber. No one was seriously hurt.

—Garside Engine company have accepted the invitation to attend the coming firemen's parade at Somerville. They will take a band of music with them.

—The circulation of THE PRESS averaged 1,712 a day for the month ending Saturday last. No other paper in the city has a legitimate circulation of 700 at the most.

—At the entrance to the Crescent League base-ball grounds, Saturday, the buggy of Seymour G. Smith collided with Allen's stage, and a wheel of the buggy was smashed.

—Charles McCarthy of Plainfield avenue wishes to deny the rumor that he was married the other day. He says: "I have never been married, and this is the first time I have been accused of anything."

—Fred Belster was driving a horse at a runaway gait on Somerset street, Thursday evening when sergeant Lynch arrested him. He was fined $10 for drunkenness and disorderly conduct. John Eagler and William Brooks were fined $5 each for intoxication.

—A man with his head cut open rushed into Reynolds's pharmacy Friday night and had his wounds sewn up. He refused to tell how they were hurt, but as he was one of the New York actors in a local concert saloon it is supposed that he was cut in a beer row.

—Joe Miller's checks are marked "N. G." now. A PRESS reporter saw one of them on Saturday—dated Sept. 15, given to a butcher of this city and by him paid to the Chicago Beef company and deposited by them—returned from the bank it was drawn on as no good.

—The ugliest eye-sores in town are the advertising signs of the Dr. Miles Medical Co. which have been nailed to the handsome shade trees around town. They are a disgrace to the city, and ought to be torn down. Other tradesmen than the following Carey's suit and are nailing their signs to the trees.

—This is the deceptive way in which the Westfield base-ball team advertises itself in the New Brunswick papers: "The Westfield's are crack players and have defeated both the Crescents, of Plainfield, [!] and the West Ends, of Somerville. In games won with these teams they now stand a tie." [!]

—In justice to Herman Reiter—the North avenue coal dealer referred to in THE PRESS of Thursday as one of Joe Miller's distressed creditors—it should be said that the news was not obtained from him, and the statement was made to his surprise, as he supposed he had kept the matter a profound secret.

—The Melopoia concerts are to be resumed this winter. Owing to the limited seating capacity of the Casino, only 14 subscriptions are for sale, the balance of the 500 being distributed among the members at the rate of 4 apiece. The subscriptions examine note music superior to that of any other season.

—The Council has received a petition from some property owners on East Sixth street requesting the Council to make their sidewalk grade to suit themselves. It should be refused. If one such request is granted all others should be, and the result would be that a little side walk would be built like a Coney Island toboggan slide.

—Plainfield has subscribed $6,000 for a series of musical entertainments to be given there during the coming winter. This is very good; but what of the soldiers' monument movement that was started last fall and has died a-borning? Was it too much for the wealthy men there to carry out?—New Brunswick Home News.

—Messrs. Brokaw & Cain claim that the judgment entered against them by John Peterson, for $194, as told in these columns last Tuesday, is unjust, and they have appealed the case to a higher court. They say that the way that he had to John Hofmann, who was then a partner of Peterson, whose name was on Peterson's business cards as a partner, and who made contracts with him. They feel that whether or not Hofmann divided the money with his partner is a matter they have nothing to do with.

—A young girl Sunday forgetfulness to shut off the clock-connection caused the fire-alarm gong to sound one blow at 12 m. and 1 p. m., the same by at 2 p. m. and 3 p. m., the same by at 4 p. m. and 5 p. m. Sunday the gong was pro-fusillied to blow again. There have been no complaints against the girl, and probably no complaints against her, but she ought to have it sometime to do so. It is just as important to have the system thus tested Sundays as other days, because no one happens to notice that the alarm was not sounded. While a boarder was not sounded. While a boarder was [illegible] —Those colored base-ball champions of the World, the Gorhams, will play the Crescents in this city next Saturday.

—Tuesday at New Brunswick, John Hackaday's fine team defeated the local celebrated Gorhams by the score of 6 to 3. The Gorhams meet the Crescents in this city Saturday, if it does n't rain.

—The two giddy youths arrested for fast driving on the streets at an unearthly hour Tuesday morning were given a hearing by judge Codington next evening. One was fined $1; the other was discharged.

—New Jersey is to get $17,000 from the general Government because she is so fortunate as to have a State Agricultural College. This will help to give the farmers a great deal of valuable information.

—The players of the Crescent League ball team have been granted Oct. 3 as a benefit day. They will probably get the New Brunswickites to play against. Members of the league will have tickets for sale.

—Telephone stations have been opened in Passaic, Upper Runyon in Dr. Brakeley's drug store, Dunellen, and in Isaac Brokaw's drug store, Bound Brook, for the accomodation of the public who want to talk to Elston, Plainfield, New York, or anywhere.

—Trinity Reformed church of Plainfield will be inclined to think that, in some fashion or other, matrimony is a failure. An old bachelor made a will leaving this church $50,000. He subsequently married, made a new will, and left this church not a penny.—Elizabeth Journal.

—The Faith Curists seem to have made an unusual mockery of religion Monday night, as reported, in Jersey City, they tried to have the life let into the corpse by the church officers for the information of the whole people. They are inserted gratuitously, and it is reasonable to suppose that under such circumstances the notices will be sent to every newspaper known in the city.

—There are two agents on the Jersey Central who have been in the places they now hold for a third of a century. John Hill, of Somerville, has held his place at that station for 33 years, and William D. Wyckoff, of Raritan, has worn the thumb entirely off his right hand by pulling the date-stamp since July, 1858, when he went there to stay for a few days.

On the Road, the commercial travelers' and hotel guide of England, contains in the September issue two very interesting letters from "parsee" S. S. Halsey, of Nethenwood, one written while on board the steamship City of New York, on a recent trip, the other written at Liverpool, the journal says editorially: "S. A. Halsey, popularly known as Parsee Halsey of New York, who returned home on the 19th inst. month after a busy time of it in Europe, has promised when he next visits England to extend his journey to Scotland, and make the acquaintance of some of the leading commercial travelers there, who would like to see in active operation a powerful branch of his benevolent order. It is the only one of its sentially potential in America. We need a few more Parson Halseys. Infused with the zeal in so good a cause."

At Grandview church, Thursday night, took place the wedding of Anthony Gorwin LaBoyteaux and Miss Mattie Amanda Wilson. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Ellis, and the Rev. Mr. Rich officiated. The bride was given away by her brother, Charles F. Powlison. The wedding march was played by Mrs. B. F. Barnes. The pulpit was adorned with flowers, tastefully arraced; and the newly-decorated interior of the church formed a very pretty setting for a very pretty wedding. The church was filled with friends of bride and groom. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Powlison, 25 Grandview avenue, where a host of guests greeted the happy couple. After a short bridal tenda left on a late train for Washington. On their return from their wedding trip they will reside in North Plainfield.

A number of Plainfield's young society people, chaperoned by Mrs. J. D. Mason, enjoyed an informal dance in the Casino, Monday evening. Among those present were Mrs. L. G. ROW IN A COURT ROOM.

Borough Recorder Try to Jump on Marshal Reinders.

The court room of borough magistrate Crosley was the scene, Tuesday night what promised to be a fistic encounter. But the stern and determined attitude of the judge prevented a serious row and put an end to the open advert of hostilities.

Three young men were on trial. They were Wm. Callaway, Alfred Doersmast, and Constable Doeremast. The charge against them was for fighting. Callaway pleaded guilty and showed that he had been drawn into the fight in self-defense. He was let off with a fine of $2. The Doeremast brothers pleaded not guilty and stood trial. Justice Crosley adjudged them guilty and fined them $5 each.

Mrs. Doeremast, mother of the two prisoners, was in court. She is an excitable French woman, and when she heard the sentence pronounced she arose hastily to abuse the justice. Mr. Crosley ordered marshal Reitdorp to remove the woman, and a scene of confusion ensued. A number of rowdyish spectators who are said to "have it in" for Rutledge began to make demonstrations that if he laid a finger on anybody he would get a face mashed. Hot words passed, and blows would undoubtedly have been struck, but justice Crosley stood up, and with a firm voice told the crowd that if he follow did n't leave the room at once he would have him sent to jail for a long term. He also told all those who were making trouble that he knew their names and would commit every one of them if they did not keep quiet. The manner of the justice was so decided, and he was so unmistakably in earnest, that the disorder was quieted at once. The crowd filed slunk out of the room, muttering, but subdued. The justice said:

"A repetition of such an outbreak, and I shall certainly send the participants to Somerville and make an example of them."

Not the Great Arena Members.

The three men who were caught at Elizabeth station on a coal train the night that the Grant avenue railway station in this city was robbed, turn out not to be the fellows who committed the burglary. They are able fully to account for themselves, and a confidential invitation is extended to everyone to hear this earnest young Christian.

News of the sudden death of Robert M. Fairbairn, of Second place, caused much excitement in the Times of Thursday. He was a shock to the hosts who knew and esteemed him. He was fifty-two years old, one of nature's noblemen, and one of the best men that had been had for some years, and in that time he had not been active in Wall street, although still a member of the Stock Exchange, which was due to heart disease, occurred at Dansville, N. Y., whither he had gone in search of health.

Miss Carrie Rooine, who had been lying seriously ill all summer at the home of her grandmother, Mrs. Jane Rooine, of Washington avenue, expressed an intense desire to be taken to her own home in New York before she died. So on Friday, the 11th inst., she was taken there, where she died the following Wednesday. Her funeral took place last Friday. She was the only child left to Mr. and Mrs. Abraham P. M. Rooine. They have lost six children. Frederick, the last of them, died at 17 years of age at the Rooine homestead August 10.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Walsh returned from their wedding trip Monday night and sat down to the first tea at their own home at the table. His bride was Miss Marie Maloney, to whom he was married by the Rev. P. E. Smyth, at St. Mary's church, last Tuesday morning. The wedding trip was a visit to Washington, where they spent Wednesday at 32 Arlington avenue, the home of Mr. Walsh's parents, and he and his happy young bride left on the 4:30 train for Philadelphia, where they spent a few days. Then they went to Atlantic City, where they remained until Friday. While a boarder was not sounded by the [illegible]

FRIENDS WHO WERE FOES.

They Are Seen to Meet After a Long Separation.

Unless the fates will it otherwise, there will be an interesting meeting next December between retired United States banker Edward Z. White, of Louisiana, and Gen. Wm. H. Sterling, of this city.

A warm friendship sprang up, under peculiar circumstances, between these two men during the war, but they have not seen each other for twenty-six years.

The story of their acquaintance and how it came to be interrupted was told to a reporter yesterday by Judge Thomas S. Henry, of Newark.

"My uncle and I went to New Orleans last February to attend the carnival" Judge Henry said.—"I had letters of introduction to a number of prominent gentlemen there, and among them was Senator White, who had been a Supreme Court Justice in Louisiana. I took quite a liking to the Senator, and we had numerous conversations. One day he was talking of Jerseymen whom he had met, and he spoke of the kindness extended to him by one of them during the war. Reuben White was an officer in the Southern army, and was captured while fighting in the northern part of Alabama. He was sent around to the Libby prison in this city, New Orleans, then in charge of the Federal troops commanded by Gen. Ben. Butler. While there he was accosted by a fierce looking Federal officer, who chatted a while. Next day the officer sought him out, and finally a warm intimacy sprang up between them. Through the influence of this officer, Senator White, who was then a major, I believe, was allowed many privileges, and ultimately he was allowed to spend the greater part of every day with his family. Of course he was exceedingly grateful for the exercises made in his behalf, and he was sorry for his inability to prove how much he appreciated the disinterested kindness of his Northern friend.

"After the war, was over they corresponded for some time, but in changing his residence Senator White lost his friend's address. Strange though it may seem, he forgot this friend's name. He was puzzled himself to understand this, in view of the circumstances under which they had become acquainted, and because of the fact that the Senator has an unusually good memory for names. So it was, however.

"Senator White was very much grieved over this lapse of memory. He made inquiry everywhere that he could think of, but would find nothing to give him a clue to the name of the man who had befriended him at a time when friendship counted for something.

"He searched the army records, but did not see any name that he recognized as being the one he was looking for, and then he concluded that it was hardly likely that he should ever again see or hear from one whose friendship he was anxious to retain.

"Just after his election as United States Senator he was pleasantly surprised to receive a letter of congratulation from Gen. Sterling, dated Plainfield, N. J. In this letter Gen. Sterling reminded him of their meeting in New Orleans and recalled several incidents connected with that place.

"Senator White wrote a warm reply and told the General how overjoyed he was for the interruption to their correspondence. The Senator will take his seat next December, and when he comes North for that purpose it is his intention to call upon Gen. Sterling to revive the friendship that began amid such stirring surroundings."

END OF THE KNIGHTS' FESTIVITIES.

After a Day of Social Pleasure, They Settle Down.

The Pythian field-day celebration came to an end Sept. 16, when the fireworks exhibition and band concert were given on the Crescent League grounds. Fully four thousand people attended, and the sides every seat being occupied the field was crowded with a dense throng.

The scene by Waehler's Berwick Regiment Band was of very fine order, delicately, sweetly, harmoniously, rendered; but no one could hear it more than fifteen feet away, because of the noise and confusion. What fireworks there were, were very pretty; but in magnitude the exhibition was very disappointing. More than one of the spectators was of the opinion that if the Knights really paid $1,000 for the show they were wofully cheated.

The competitive drills in the afternoon resulted in the awarding of prizes as follows: First prize, $50—Oriental Division, Capt. Ogden Goelet, of Newport. Second Reese is commended. Second prize, $30—Unity Division, No. 3, of Elizabeth, Capt. John Farewell in command. Third prize, $20—Black Prince Division, No. 4, of Newark, Capt. C. M. Stimis in command.

The streets had been gay in the daytime with flags and bunting, but at night they were ablaze with lighted Japanese lanterns, red fires and other bright-colored illuminations. The Knights in their gorgeous uniforms, and the bands and drum corps, had possession of the city, and were followed everywhere by admiring crowds.

Drake's band, from Elizabeth, "the finest in the State", was the favorite of the day, and the fife and drum corps of G. VanHouten Post, No. 3, G. A. R., from Jersey City, ranked next in popularity. The "chimes", flute-like, alto tones of their fifes were very pleasing.

The Knights are unanimous in saying that it was the finest time they ever had.

GORED BY A COW.

Little Annie Burnett Furiously Attacked and Badly Injured.

Four-year-old Anna Burnett, of Washington Valley, was gored by a vicious farmyard while the cows were being milked, Sept. 16, and before anyone could prevent it a young cow, attracted by the bright red dress she wore, charged upon her, bellowing and snorting fiercely, knocked her down, trampled upon her, and gored her frightfully. Before the cow could be driven off she had ripped open her cheek, and tore her scalp in many places. Dr. Long of this city was summoned, and the little one is doing remarkably nicely back to complete recovery.

Williams Gets Three Months in Jail.

Charles Williams, a compositor, who, while drunk in Plainfield, stole from Charles S. Cole a suit of clothes, pleaded guilty at the Union county courts last week. He explained that his weakness for rum had got him into trouble before. He was sentenced to the county jail for three months.

The Robber of the Laundry Has Yet To Be Caught.

The local Police think that they are on the track of the man who robbed the North avenue laundry of $100 and a gold watch in cash drawer a few nights ago. He was a colored man, and Tuesday they captured from some colored boy companions a gold watch which is said on a certain person who will be arrested when the proof is more certain.

Big Time for Central Railway Men.

General railway superintendent Charles Tyler, of the Bay, is said to have given last month the largest wages ever paid for one month's service. He paid a check for $1,000 to each of the engineers and firemen who ran the special train of 21 cars that carried the Knights of Pythias to Washington and return. The check is a novelty to the railroad men, and they will frame it. Tyler, the big-hearted railroad man, is also said to have given a check for $1,000 to each of the conductors who had charge of the trains.

MARRIED AND CHANGED HIS WILL.

When John Goldsmith Paynter Got a Wife, Trinity Reformed Church Got Cash.

Some few years ago during his residence at the corner of Fifth avenue and Sixth street, John Goldsmith Paynter was one of the most regular of the attendants at Trinity Reformed church, and his relations with Rev. J. S. Shoemaker, late of this city, frequently occupied the pulpit.

Mr. Paynter was a rich bachelor of parsimonious habits, and his nearest relatives. He was well pleased with the little church on West Second street, and he set it down in his will for $5,000. He told Mr. Simonson himself before the latter died he told some of the church officers what Mr. Paynter had done.

But after living a bachelor for over half a century, Mr. Paynter, in February of last year, married an estimable woman to whom he had been engaged 26 years before, but the engagement, for some reason, had then been broken. This new tie necessitated a new will, and Trinity Reformed church, Plainfield, was forgotten. Mr. Paynter died August 11. A PRESS reporter was allowed a glance at his will yesterday. He leaves the bulk of his large fortune to his wife, Mrs. Jane Paynter, and his children. The church is not mentioned, but instead, the First Presbyterian church, Newton, Long Island, is bequeathed $61,000. To a new building fund, Mr. and Mrs. Paynter have been 'attending since their marriage.

Mr. Paynter is buried near the site of the proposed new church. It is to be built of stone. The spire of stone will cost $4,000, and a stone and iron fence around the edifice will cost $5,000. He will also bequeathe $5,000 to the church for a permanent fund, the income of which is to be used for keeping the building and grounds in order. The new edifice will eclipse anything of its kind in the neighborhood.

BURGLARS AT GRANT AVENUE.

They Break Into the Railway Station, Are Away With $80, and Are Captured.

Between 3 and 4 o'clock Friday a. m., policemen Flanagan and Kiely saw three men slip out of the Grant avenue station. They chased after them, and came as far as the North avenue station in hot pursuit. The fellows boarded a coal train, however, and escaped.

The police arrived to Elizabeth, and the three fugitives were captured there and held to await the orders of sergeant Lynch.

Night Agent at Grant avenue reports that cash to the amount of $60 was stolen from the station. He was asleep in the building while the robbery was being perpetrated.

It is thought that the thieves are the ones who have been operating so extensively in Plainfield of late.

The prisoners arrested at Elizabeth gave the names of John A. Matthews, John Kehoe, and James Beith.

Chief Ranger Indoor Rioons.

A local court of the Ancient Order of Foresters, to be known as the Pride of New Jersey, No. 8,054, was organized in this city on Friday. High court officers were present from Jersey City and other places. The following officers were installed:

Chief Ranger—Isador Bloom.
Sub Chief Ranger—Wm. H. Netherwood.
Treasurer—I. Cannon.
Financial Secretary—J. Langer.
Recording Secretary—Chas. Dodd.
Senior Woodward—T. C. Bilhim.
Junior Woodward—C. Bloom.
Senior Beadle—Wm. Bloom.
Junior Beadle—W. E. Kiely.
Medical Examiner—Dr. Alt.
Trustees—S. H. Guttman, H. Weber, A. J. Elvers.

To be Used for Evening Dress a Bicycle.

While driving a large farm wagon through Scotch Plains, Thursday afternoon, farmer McMurray ran into Mr Creedy while riding a star bicycle. Both men were thrown from his machine, and only by a miracle escaped being trampled beneath the horses' hoofs. The high horse dashed up and down on the bicycle for a few seconds, and then started off, dragging it with him. It was disengaged at the end of about twenty-five feet, and Mr. McMurray, it is said, is too much of a hayseed to stop to see what mischief he had done, whipped up his horses and started for home.

John Brawley happened to be close by at the time of the accident, and together with Sykes and Mr. Creedy, took a quarter of a mile before they met anyone who could identify the driver. Sykes says that McMurray attempted to force him into the ditch, but failed. He refused to go, but rode at the extreme edge of the good road. The horse shied and caused the accident. Suit will be brought against McMurray.

The Next Attraction.

Eight o'clock of this Thursday evening, a rare company of comic players is to begin a week's run at Dunn's Casino, musical satire, "U & I". The cast and presentation will be exactly the same as secured such a success at the Standard theater, New York. These are the players:

"The Daughter of the Regiment" Was There.

The reunion of the Seventh New Jersey regiment occurred in Trenton Wednesday, and many veterans from all parts of the State attended. A number of Plainfielders were present. Among the guests of honor at the banquet in the evening was "Daughter of the Regiment", She was married to Captain Hart in the presence of the regiment, when it was encamped at Fairmount Park. Captain Hart died many years ago. The other visitors included Gen. Joseph Dickinson, of Washington, who was Adjutan General of the Third of the Army of the Potomac; General Frank E. Price, Captain Frederick Donelan, and S. D. Rosie. The veterans had their headquarters at Hall & Washington street, and E. J. Garrison, of Paterson, was chosen President. The other officers elected were as follows: Vice-President—Captain Frederick Donelan, of Plainfield; Secretary—Captain Max; Recording Secretary—W. E. Loper, of Newark; Financial Secretary—Peter Leary, of Newark; Corresponding Secretary—John Hart; Historian—Sergeant—D. R. Adams, of Irvington; Chaplain—the Rev. Mr. Allen, of Deep Run; Historian—Dr. Bonnell, of Newark.

In the afternoon the line was formed, when Colonel J. W. Congdon officiated as toast-master, and addresses were delivered by Colonel J. W. Congdon, S. D. Rosie, Captain Donelan, Judge J. G. Rose, Dr. Bonnell, Colonel Francis Price, General Joe Dickinson, the Rev. J. C. Richmond, Peter Leary and Thomas Beasley.

Hasn't Said Boo! to a Goose Since.

Ex-Sheriff Boice has a mule which he purchased from Jacob Hoffman, of Bridgewater, Somerset county, in the early part of the year. The mule was a fine animal, and Mr. Boice thought he had a bargain. He drove the animal to Plainfield, and on the way through Bound Brook the mule became frightened at a goose, and ran away. Mr. Boice was thrown out, and the mule kept on running. Mr. Boice has not seen the animal since.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS.

[FOR THE PRESS.]

Told in many a poet's story
Rise, to win a high renown,
Knights of old fought battle for glory,
Maiden's favors just to crown.

Round the arena in the ancient See our modern Knights arrayed.
Though true love is their profession,
"The six love levers" are displayed.

Goodwill, friendship—these their fetters,
Welcome with hitherby,
Thanks to visitors and visitors letters,
Rest of all is charity.

Knights of Pythias, strong and able,
Help the helpless, aid the weak,
Grip your hands around the table,
One in purpose—evermore!

AS DUMB AS THE SPHINX.

Kinsley Rutledge Is Bewildered that the Newspapers Ain't Goin' To Have Nothin' More to Publish About Borough Affairs.

(FROM THE PRESS of Sept. 18.)

Thomas Rutledge, borough marshal of North Plainfield, has fallen foul up a newspaper critic and censor. The fact will not cause any worry to the newspaper, but the public whose servant Thomas Rutledge is supposed to be may have some interest in learning just what sort of a creature they have in their borough marshal.

When a PRESS reporter entered the store of the truly genial and efficient borough tax collector, H. Newton Spencer, this morning Rutledge was leaning against a glass case deeply engrossed in thought. As aroused himself seemingly great difficulty, from his reverie, long enough to respond gruffly to the reporter's greeting "Good morning."

When asked, in a good-natured manner, what was the day's record of the borough police court, Mister Rutledge suddenly became absorbed in the contents of a newspaper, and then inquired responded that he was n't going to give nothin' for publication. He did n't care—he continued —to have borough affairs "put in" the papers and he would n't be reported. Even when newspapers obtained the facts of a case they deliberately distorted the truth. When assured by the reporter that it was customary in refined communities outside of North Plainfield to have the official municipal records open to public inspection, Mister Rutledge reiterated that t othin' was to be got outen him, and again buried his nose in one of the untrustworthy newspapers that he affected so much to despise. The reporter retried to convince Mr. Rutledge that if the newspapers were really so terribly bad it would be great and noble in him to accept their purification as his mission; and it was pointed out to him that if the newspapers really were misleading facts to so wholesale a manner as they did, the gentlemen like himself, possessing exclusive access to the fount of public knowledge, to give information fully and freely and in a clear and unmistakable manner. Mister Rutledge insisted that henceforth none of the borough affairs should get into the papers, and he gave the reporter to understand that hereafter to reporters he would be as silent as the grave.

The newspapers, therefore, will henceforth have to struggle along without the assistance of Mister Rutledge; and in seeking to secure information about affairs the people who fire Mister Rutledge are interested in they will be blocked in every way possible by Mister Rutledge. Mister Rutledge has always been such a valuable assistant to the newspapers that he will not determined opposition will be of overwhelming calamity which must follow great grief and discomfort to the social circles of Plainfield's one soulless man, and crush all the joy that hitherto has made happy the newspaper world.

Two Elm Place Houses Robbed.

Burglars entered two houses on Elm place at an early hour Thursday. At Thomas Meaney's, No. 42, they got $2.40 in money, a gold watch and chain. At F. V. Bradley's, No. 12, they secured $25 in cash, a gold watch and chain.

The thieves obtained entrance by cutting out screens in cellar windows.

LATHE HAND.

She Grabbed the Pickpocket.

Mrs. Joel Gliddis, of Dunellen, while coming from the Somerville fair, Wednesday evening, on the 6:30 train, felt somebody tugging at her pocketbook. When she felt for it, it was gone. She grasped the arm of a man just behind her and accused him of taking it. The man's look surprised that he dropped the book, broke from her grasp and disappeared in the crowd.

Excellent Work by Plainfield Scorers.

Howard H. Wilson and Patrick McCourt, the two young men who were indicted by the premium clubhouse of the old "one-horse" cannon Club, have been discharged, cured, from the Muhlenberg Hospital. So skillfully did the surgeons handle their cases that Wilson left some scars McCourt is not mutilated at all, and Wilson lost only two finger-joints. Considering how hopeless the saving of the men's hands seemed, this is admirable work.

The Smith-Miller Case Settled by the Court.

When THE PRESS reported Thursday that Mr. Marsh was counsel for both sides in the case of Smith vs. Miller, it meant to say that it was rumored that he had acted in the capacity of peacemaker, and not at all as retained counsel for either side. We learn from the parties that he was counsel for Mr. Smith alone, and conducted the case in the settlement for Mr. Smith. Mr. Smith, himself, entirely independent of counsel, saw Mr. Miller and received the payment of the judgment by instalments.

Found Dead in His Wagon.

Two young women at Somerville were passing along High street, near the public school, afternoon of Sept. 16, when they noticed a man evidently very ill being drawn aimlessly along in his buggy by a horse. They ran to the rescue of the vestigate, and it was found that the man was dead. He was Silas Pitt Randolph, and had died suddenly of heart failure while driving along the street. Randolph resided at South Plainfield, to the Somerville fair. He was 74 years old.

The remains were given in charge of undertaker Walter Vanderveer, of Somerville, and were taken to the late residence of the deceased at Randolphville.

Dangerous Wrestler on the Varsity Nine.

Walter Vanderveer, of Railway avenue, Elizabeth, was nearly killed, Wednesday night, by colliding with an unknown wheelman while propelling his bicycle down the Westfield road. Vanderveer was buried violently into the road, where he lay unconscious. His shoulder and hip were badly cut and bruised, and his head was severely injured. His condition was pronounced serious. The other man was injured about the head and shoulders, and knocked off his bicycle. He was also badly bruised and cut. Vanderveer is a well-known amateur athlete in Elizabeth. Wanderman, who was taken insensible to a carriage by his companions, was not seriously injured. The members of the wheelmen's club who were taken to the scene of the accident, and sent by train to Elizabeth. The accident happened on a steep hill.

John Ingersoll Arrested.

John Ingersoll, of Somerville, was arrested by Constable Hoffman, of Bridgewater, on the charge of assault and battery. The prosecutor is Mrs. Ingersoll, who alleges that her husband struck her with a stick. Ingersoll was taken before Justice Van Doren, of Somerville, and held in $500 bail to appear at the next term of court. Ingersoll is a well-known character in Somerville, and has been arrested on numerous occasions for disorderly conduct.

Court Cases in Somerset.

Among Them Is Revived an Old Count Against Justice Hardy.

The September term of the Somerset county courts will begin next Tuesday. The Grand Jury will be sworn on that day, will be charged by Judge Bartine, and will retire to attend to their duties. They have several serious cases to come before them.

A number of interesting suits are to be tried this term. Probably the most important is the case of Hardy against Cook and Walk r, the persecutors of John Toms. They have pleaded not guilty to the charge of assault with attempt to kill, and on this they are to be tried. There seems to be little doubt as to their guilt, and if found guilty they will get a severe sentence, as they have caused much trouble ever since they were placed in jail.

The calendar for the Supreme and Circuit courts is not yet complete, but the following is a list of the cases to be tried in the Supreme court for trial:

George S. Corle v. John G. Schenck. Jacob J. Bergen against R. Schenck.

Charles Bohne and Lizzie Bohne for John E Reader v. Paul Wach—on contract. Jackson & Codington; Craig A. Bulloch.

Rocco Agoglia, administrator, v. John Shields—in tort. Alvah A. Clark; J. A. Bullock.

Peter Brunson v. Caroline R. Brunson et al., executor of Jeremiah R. Van Devanter, deceased—on contract. Jackson & Codington; R. V. Lansbury.

Andrew J. Berrien v. F. R. Shepherd—on contract. Wm. M. Sullivan; S. B. Hutchinson.

The list of Circuit court cases is as follows:

Isabella Lamma v. Adam Schneider—in ejectment. H. M. & H. K. Gaston; John A. Frech.

William P. Bergen v. Mary R. Gaddis—on contract. George W. Anderson; R. V. d. Laberge.

Arthur M. Griffen v. James Hardy—on contract. Jackson & Codington; C. A. Reed.

Gooster W. Venable and Moses J. Heyman v. Lewis M. Codington—replevin. Nelson T. Dungan; Alvah A. Clark.

Thieves Still at Work.

Burglars tried to break into the residence of Mrs. Clifton, on Morris avenue, again Saturday night. A member of the family on arriving home late found a man at work on a kitchen window, from which he had just cut out the wire screen. The burglar ran away when he found that he was discovered.

A Rahm Pigeons Had Two World Flights.

A homing pigeon match was arranged Saturday, and caused quite a stir in the Weeks, where the owners of the birds are at present employed. The match was between pigeons owned by James Marston and Wm. Whitehead, for $20 a side, the birds to be released in New York city at 9 a. m. They were to invite to Jersey to inspect our sites a sorting them that never before has such a display of [illegible] Harper's Young People."

THE WOMAN OF FASHION.

She Must Wear a Flowing Mantle Over Her Shoulders.

A Fashion Such as This Is the Delight of Women with Bad Figures—Summer Silk the Most Popular Material of the Season.

[COPYRIGHT, 1891.]

Aside from the convenient little blazer which every woman has in her wardrobe, it would seem as if the dictates of fashion forbade anything that was not loose and flowing in its outlines. All the sixties, especially the waistelettes, as well as the collar capes, are long and loose, enveloping the figure in a mass of folds and completely hiding it.

Of course, a fashion like this is the delight of women with bad figures, and for the time being they find themselves able to put on a very fashionable appearance. When it was the style to wear long, tight-fitting coats, they were a deep fall of gold fringe. There was a very high Medici collar embroidered on the inside with gold cord, and the shoulder puffs were very tall, extending half way as high as the collar. A full, lavishly wire framework held the sleeve puffs in shape.

The hat worn with this was made of gold lace. At the back of the hat there was a bunch of pale gray tips and upon the front were several golden ornaments. Tiny black velvet strings were tied closely under the skin.

It is quite the thing for the girl who would look pretty, and who does not wish to be monstrous in her style of headgear, to wear a bonbonnet. These sunbonnets are made almost exactly the same shape as were the sunbonnets of the great aunts days or to come nearer to the present day, as are the sunbonnets which are worn by the country school children. You will see plenty of them if you will take the trouble to go for a drive upon any of the country roads some morning before nine o'clock.

The summer girl is, however, not contented with clinging to exactly the old-fashioned sunbonnet style, and so she has varied the monotony of it by making it very full in the crown and shirring it closely to the head with several bands of fine shirring. This gives a beautiful full ruffing around the face and produces a very pretty setting for piquant features. With this bonnet the summer girl does not really need a parasol, for when she goes out to ride or to call she rather pretty and rather coy and rather bittenish for her to tie on her sunbonnet with a great big bow and then, inclining her head slightly to keep out the rays of the sun, to take her constitutional without apparently ever having a thought of observing eyes.

The favorite material for these bonnets is—some more—India silk. This will not, however, stand out of its own accord, and must be slightly wired to preserve the general effect.

Quite as pretty, though, is the dotted mull, as it is fine and sheer and will bear washing.

To dress up simple gowns, very broad collars are worn. Broad ruffs may accompany them or not, according to the taste of the wearer. If the collars are made of crash they are usually worked in work or gypsure embroidery, they become very elegant affairs, and may be worn with many odd gowns. A linen band may or may not be worn with them.

His First Rebuff.

First Young Barrister—Allow me to congratulate you. I saw you this morning hurrying along to the sastse courts with a brief bag in your hand. So your first client has come?

A SMOKIFIED OUTING DRESS.

in despair because the coats were so trying that they found that by no amount of cutting or trying could the tailor make a bad figure appear like a good one.

But with the long loose cape all this is different. A woman may have a baggy figure, a bulky waist, arms as shapeless as sausages and a country air to her, or what is much worse, a thick-set neck, and yet when she puts on one of these enveloping capes, she appears as stylishly draped and as shapely as the woman who has a figure like the Medici.

Women with very pretty figures are disgusted at the turn that fashion has taken and are deciding all they can to circumvent it with little artifices. One of their latest is such a cunning idea that it is worth calling to the notice of every woman with a pretty shape.

It is delightful by being called a mantle, although it is, as it displays no sleeves, slimy that it is scarcely worthy the name. It is ever so pretty, though, and many women will like to copy it for dressy house dress, giving the appearance of a wrap, without necessitating the hiding of the figure or the bodice. It is made of two deep lace flounces. The under flounce is the falling collar down to a point half way between the waist and the knees. The second flounce is like the first, only it is shorter but it extends only well down over the shoulders. Any kind of fine, filmy lace may be used, and, if so desired, the lace may be beaded.

If this is done the mantle is held in place and does not flare about with each motion of the wearer or at the slightest wind, but it is not as light, or as flimy, as trusted, and consequently it is not a great favorite for the summer.

The mantle is supplied with a very high Medici collar, which is likewise of lace and is supported by a fine invisible wire. The entire collar is made over a wire frame work which is put together in the same fashion as are the delicate wire frames which are used as a foundation for lace toques. If desired the collar can be lined with some color for the summer silk, such as is so popular this summer for lining capes, collars and wraps.

The mantle is supplied with ribbon strings. These may be tied in a large bow at the back, leaving the mantle open to display the front of the bodice. When so done the mantle is in the style of Charles IX., and the wearer will find that her neck arrangement will resemble the old court pictures of the lords and ladies who surrounded Charles when the latter held high festival. If desired, the strings may be tied closely in a knot and the Medici collar can be spreaded to curve outward a little to accommodate the wearer's neck and chin.

These very deep collars are becoming to women of all styles, and when first they came in vogue it was supposed that they would not become popular with women inherited with too great embonpoint, but to the surprise of even such dressmakers as Worth and Felix, these collars have proved to the becoming and have consequently met with favoritism with women of all styles.

Another mantle which has become the summer woman's liking because it tells her dress without ostentation, is of unlined India silk, with flounces instead of two. In this case the flounces were sewed on a ground work of black net, and were gathered, giving the other only a few inches. Our grandmothers wore caps similar to these, and they are, indeed, only a part of the old fashions, is again amongst us.

Still another variety of capes or mantelettes is made of unlined India silk. These are not flimy, and they have the old merit of concealing the figure and being full. Some of these are extremely pretty and becoming, and are, moreover, rather expensive that a woman may have half a dozen of them in her wardrobe, and yet have paid less for them than for one lace mantle.

At the close of the day's sport there appeared a dame which had some straggling grass on it. Some one asked the play once on the other side—just to give it a fairsian flavor. The one occasion when is made its appearance was at the races at Longchamps, and the owner, having put it made for a racing gown, decided to wear it as such in this event, although it was more delicate and flimsy than American women generally wear when they go forth on such an expedition.

The dress itself was of gray silk, very light fitting and scant in the skirt. Embroidering all around the skirt there was a hem about eighteen inches deep, bordered by a band of fine gold passementerie. The embroidery consisted of horizontal lines with very delicate tracery outlined between them. There was a ruffle of the gold embroidery and a deep fringe of the same kind of work. The gold lace was fastened on perfectly straight across the bust, so that it gave the waist almost the effect of a vest. There was a straight standing collar outlined with the gold cord.

Over the light-fitting dress fell a lovely tunic of Irish lace. The tunic was cut—if one can imagine such a thing—like the tunic of a riding habit or ordinary ulster which one sees upon the school girl. It was sewn tight-fitting in

STUDY OF THE FEET.

How Character Is Revealed in Their Attitude.

Crossed with a Purpose—Sitting on His Feet—The Nervous Person—Lame in His Feet—Other Interesting Indications.

"What to do with the feet?" is always a question which agitates a self-conscious individual. On this line, says the New York World, the study of feet—poses on the part of one's self is of interest. An American always has to do something with his feet. London, where she can and beyond doubt will take immediate steps to set at rest many of the absurd and conflicting rumors which have for so long a time been in circulation in the American newspapers in regard to her personal and professional future.

Extracts from her letters written in Yokohama to the gentleman in this city who has charge of the preparation of her theatres are as follows:

YOKOHAMA, CLUB HOTEL, June 12, 1891.

—MY DEAR ——: Just a line from beautiful Japan. I give a recital here to-night and to-morrow morning I sail for Europe on the Peninsular & Oriental steamer. This will take me to London by the P. & O. steamer, Ravenna, on August 4. How I long to be once more in touch with my native land. For nearly a year I have not seen an American newspaper—outside of the few clippings you have sent me, and since I left home, for America is still my home, the "land of my birth" and by rights I am not even half a dozen of my fellow countrymen. One I met on Christmas day at Sidney, New South Wales; it was so warm that we were dining out of doors, and I had my picture taken at the dinner table with a full emptied glass of Australian claret in front of me. I wrote you that I paid seventy-five thousand dollars of my Australian earnings for a sheep ranch up in Bushland. I have almost concluded to make my residence in that marvelous country, if the purchase of a vineyard adjoining the one on which was the wife which I am represented as drinking in this picture. It is an excellent red wine, and ought to be something of a paying.

Our performance here to-night, which is a recital in which I will have the assistance of a number of amateurs—you know I have a warm feeling for amateurs, having so lately been one myself—will be our only appearance in Japan. Admiral Belknap, who is in command of the United States steamship Monocacy, has been exceedingly kind to me and has agreed to loan me for the evening the band of the Monocacy which is undoubtedly the best in Japan. It will furnish an accompaniment during the recital and will play during the interludes.

I have heard that Americans always feel ashamed of the Monocacy when they come here, because the picturesque old craft, which has been here for twenty-six years, looks so poorly in appearance and efficiency with the warships of other foreign nations in these waters, but they forget that all the personnel, courage and gallantry of her officers and crew, their patriotism and their hearty desire to please their fellow countrymen have excellent reason to be proud. Among the crew, indeed, I understand there are very few natives born Americans; however, they are always the first on shore to assist at a fire or in any public event and are exceedingly popular with the authorities. I believe Monocacy's band has been in use until now played at a professional performance.

The time is drawing so near when I will be once more in an English-speaking country, within daily touch of my native land and of the dear city which I dearly love, that it is natural for you to ask my plans for the near future.

Personally—there are many delicate and easily-misunderstood reasons for a continuance of the "Mrs. Brown-Potter" which I have thought it due to myself and my family I should preserve since my professional debut.

Professionally—I am still at sea, inasmuch as my inclinations draw me one way and the advice of friends and those who are near and dear to me, as well as my own, seem to draw in another direction. From the accounts of the clippings you have sent me, I gather that the announcement has been made that Mr. Bellew and I will appear in London and the provinces in "Hero and Leander" and other plays in which we have been seen in Great-Britain or America, beginning at an early date this fall. This may or may not be so. At present the statement is unfounded.

Until I arrive in London, the first week in August, my arrangements for the professional future will be unsettled; they may depend more largely than you think on my personal and private affairs, which I can readily explain face to face, but about which I am loth to write even to you.

If I do not see you in London when I arrive it is possible that I may see you in New York not long after that date.

The future professionally is full of hope and encouragement to me; what per my critics may say, and I am by no means of one in the past after the years of faithful and industrious application, and if I could only feel sure of my health I am willing again to trust myself to their verdict, both in my new dramas and in the parts in which they are familiar with me.

Presentably my ventures in Australia, India, China and Japan has been profitable to a high degree.

Japan is a most lovely country. My trip of twelve days through it has been, I am glad to say, exceedingly successful. We left Bombay on April 24, on the S. S. Khedive, and sailed direct for Hong Kong, Shanghai and Yokohama. Two months came down to the Victoria dock to meet me, and I joined them with "Old Glory" in their hands and tears in their eyes, and I believe the Mears and Stebbins never had quite such an enthusiastic ovation here as in the second on the Thames when the Queen gave six plays in Bombay, "Frou-Frou," "Fron Fron," "Camille," "David Garrick," "The Shop girl" and "Diplomacy," "The Lady of Lyons," supplementing them with recitals from "Hamlet," "Romeo and Juliet," "Richard III." and "Macbeth."

It is these last that I have been asking so much of your time about. My first season in Bombay was as successful pecuniarily as it seemed to be otherwise.

On Saturday, May 16, we opened at the Theatre Royal in Hong Kong. China and Japan are scarcely large enough for a company, but for a recital tour of six weeks they offer a splendid field. They are in very close touch with the United States.

Yokohama is my more English. Tokio, the capital of Japan, is a very large city, but of course does not seem so large to the Mikado.

Japan seems to me like a toy country. The houses and towns are all so small. Of the lovely silver and the lovely curios they pass all words.

The Japanese are very artistically represented in New York or soon, but it is a great deal cheaper to buy Japanese curios there, because as it may seem time it is new in Japan, for none remain or other Japan and China are very expensive curios either to shop or buy. The ladies, particularly, are very English and Americans especially, have made this so. But a dollar here goes about as far as a rupee in India or a shilling in London.

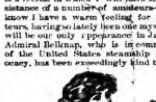
We have been in Yokohama four or five days and are delighted with the surroundings here. At the Japanese navy yard, which is about two hours' sail from here, I met an old friend, Admiral Admiral Richard Dulaney, a southerner, who is leading the most curious kind of life here. He and I were at one time, when I was very young, excellent friends, and I cannot tell you what a pleasure it gave me to find an old friend come before me after so many years' absence, in Japanese garb, with his head closely barefooted, leading the life of a hermit in a rocky cave in the hills just outside of the Buddhist temple in the navy yard.

He sent me his card—fancy a barefooted hermit having cards, but I learned afterwards that in his cave he had a great many of his American traps—and said he knew me at a glance. It was a long, long time, however, before I could reconcile myself to looking upon the face of my old friend amid the surroundings in a strange land. From what I gather, he has a religious monomania, and expects to become a Buddhist priest.

This is decidedly a foreign city, that is, foreign to Japan, there are so many Americans, English and Germans in business here. Yeddo is only half an hour away by rail. There is a splendid hotel here; by the way, several of them, indeed. S. F. Wolfe, formerly of San Francisco, is the owner of one. I like here, thought of establishing a theatre here, has a charming caravansary. Yeddo is down on the water. The growth of the city is astounding, considering that thirty-five years ago it was only a fishing village.

I judge from what you write me that a great many curious things have been published about me from time to time in the two years which have elapsed since I left New York. I rejoice that the time is so near at hand when I shall have an opportunity of correcting those that need correcting and of setting myself right in the eyes of the public which, has, here and everywhere, been so generous to me. My plans for next season are not yet settled, but I expect that they will be by the 15th of August.

Yours with friendship ever.



Swiss Peasantry.

The asylum that anarchists of all European countries have made of Switzerland has never been regarded favorably by the Swiss peasantry. The latter is not given to attacks of socialistic oratory, and in order to make it still more difficult for agitators, socialism, peasant associations—under the name of "Bauerbunde"—have been formed in many parts of Germany and Switzerland. The movement has two newspapers, one of which advocates this policy for the government: "The abolition of public festivals and government pensions, opposition to all superfluous expenditures of the state, and improved education."

Michael D. Harter, democratic member of congress representing the Fifteenth Ohio district, lives at Mansfield, O. He is the grandson of Gen. Robert Moore, who represented western Pennsylvania in congress early in the century, and is the son of the late Isaac Harter, of Canton, O., who founded the well-known banking house of Isaac Harter & Sons. Mr. Harter is forty-five years old and for nearly thirty years has been steadily engaged in the banking business. Mr. Harter will retire permanently from active business in this fall in the personnel, courage and gallantry of her officers and crew, their patriotism and their hearty desire to please their fellow countrymen have excellent reason to be proud. Among the crew, indeed, I understand there are very few natives born Americans; however, they are always the first on shore to assist at a fire or in any public event and are exceedingly popular with the authorities. MRS. BROWN-POTTER.

The Fair American Writes About Her Tour in the Far East.

She Will Be in London Early in August Prepared to Make Her Debut There—Strange Adventure With an American Now Yokohama.

SEPTEMBER, 1891.

UNDER date of June 12 Mrs. James Brown Potter writes from Yokohama, Japan, to a friend as she reached the American port for a stay of months. While in this week she can and beyond doubt will take immediate steps to set at rest many of the absurd and conflicting rumors which have for so long a time been in circulation in the American newspapers in regard to her personal and professional future.

A MILKMAID ECLIPSE.

The Cow of the Future Will Probably Be Without Any Tail.

An ingenious inventor of this city, says the Philadelphia Record, who passed his early years on a North county farm, has just put on the market a novel but useful machine. A glance at the picture will show the purpose of the invention and construction. It is to enable one to milk a cow by an improved manner over the laborious and primitive method, which is just the same now as it was when man first pressed the cow into service as a food supply.

Every one who has ever milked a cow or attempted to milk one knows that it is not such an easy thing as it looks, and that the milking of any number of cows is quite a job. By this invention the work is very much simplified. Four rubber ends of a tube are placed around the udders of the cow, which they clutch firmly, and pressure is then exerted on the tube.

The milk flows, and the stream is kept up by pressing and releasing the tube just as in the regular way of milking.

A Promising Outlook.

Gus Smoothey, Jr., a pimply, a portly-stricken youth, applied to old Mr. Bondclipper for the hand of his daughter, Angelina, in the grasp of the iron hand.

"What is your reason?" asked old Bondclipper.

"In the first place, I've sent my application to President Harrison for a position in one of the departments."

"Have you got it?" inquired the old man.

"No, not yet, but I'm seriously thinking of that civil service examination."

"Pa," exclaimed the young lady, "that's enough for me to begin with just now."—Texas Siftings.

POPE LEO IN MARBLE.

Statue of the Pontiff to Be Unveiled in Washington.

A Great Gathering of Churchmen—Second Only in Importance and Magnitude to the Centennial of the Hierarchy Two Years Ago.

SEPTEMBER, 1891.

A memorable occasion in the history of the Catholic church in America, equaled in importance only by the celebration, in November, 1889, of the centennial of the Catholic hierarchy in the United States, will be the unveiling of the magnificent marble statue of the supreme pontiff, Leo XIII., which is now fixed to take place at Washington on September 28 next. Already the arrangements for the ceremony are well under way, and it is anticipated that there will be present almost the entire Catholic hierarchy, as during the same week the church will celebrate, with unusual pomp, the centenary of St. Sulpice at Baltimore, and the papal and prelates in attendance there will doubtless avail themselves of the opportunity to attend the picturesque ceremonial at Washington also.

The statue, which is the gift of Count Gaetano Conestabile to the Catholic university of Washington, arrived at the national capital early in August. Mr. Lenhart is a wealthy New Yorker, well known in society and club circles. He is a devoted son of the church and has at different times signalized his fidelity to its interests by a lavish generosity to its institutions. For this work he selected Joseph Loubetti, one of the best of the modern school of Italian sculptors, who labored on the masterpiece for three years. A model was first submitted to the pontiff and approved by him. The finished statue, which is almost colossal in size, being fourteen feet in height, including the pedestal, is a faithful likeness of Pope Leo, not as he is to-day, frail and attenuated, but as he appeared in his mature prime, some years ago, for the face is almost a counterpart of a statue of his holiness that was exhibited at the celebration of his golden jubilee as a priest. The sculptor has represented the pope seated on the papal chair or throne, wearing the triple crown or tiara and vested with the cassock, the alb, the stole and the cape. The cassock, or long frock coat peculiar to the Catholic clergy, is draped gracefully, but a little concealed by the folds of the cape, which hang from the neck and over the shoulders to the stole, a narrow band of silk worn across both shoulders, is visible underneath, while the graceful folds of the alb reach to the feet and lie on the top of the pedestal.

But the face, around which the chief interest centers, is a remarkable study. It wears an expression of gentle admonition, like that of a father who is loving yet rather advising than reproving his children. This impression is heightened by the attitude of the figure, the right arm raised slightly with the hand open and palm turned upward, as though inviting spiritual contemplation or invoking benediction. The left hand rests on the arm of a chair. The statue is very grave, yet kindly and even familiar. It has been said of the present pontiff that he was never seen to smile; and the restful pose and calm of this whole figure would seem to corroborate this idea. It needs but a smile to transfigure the marble into life.

The surroundings of the statue are in keeping with the tone of its artistic treatment. The background will be formed of an elaborately executed niche or recess, on either side of which is a panelled pillar with carved capital, the two joined by an arch, at the apex of which is the papal arms, with cross and keys. The pedestal, which is cubical, has three sides exposed, each bearing an inscription on a square panel of somewhat darker marble. The front panel bears the dedicatory inscription that to the right of the statue is engraved with the arms of the Pecci family, to which the pope belongs, while the remaining panel has the arms of Count Loubat, whose title was conferred by the pontiff several years ago in recognition of his distinguished services to the church. The entire work cost somewhat more than $10,000 and afforded so much satisfaction to the college of cardinals, who viewed it preparatory to shipment, that it was decided to duplicate it as a gift to the town of Carpineto, the pope's birthplace. The duplicate was duly executed by Mr. John A. McSorley, custom house broker in this city, and the statue was immediately transferred it to Washington, and it is now in the "prayer room" of the university, carefully covered up and secure from prying eyes. Thus far it has been seen by few except Cardinal Gibbons, Bishop Keane (the rector of the Washington university) and Archbishop Corrigan, although the keenest curiosity has been felt among church men to look upon the statue which evoked so much admiration when it was displayed at the vatican pavilion in Rome some time ago. The illustration here is from a photograph secured in Rome by the Catholic Review of New York city, and which is believed to be the only truthful representation of the statue in the United States.

When the Catholic university was established few years ago, it was then stated that it would in future years become a Pantheon wherein might be immortalized, in marble and bronze, the great apostles of the church, but, more particularly those who had done it the additional service to America. The suggestion brings up in the minds of churchmen such names as that of Cardinal Manning, the martyr priest, and Fathers Jogues and Marquette, who also gave their lives for their faith in the early days of the church; Father Badin, the first priest ordained in the United States; Father Marechelli, the organizer of the Dominicans in this country, and a long line of others whose memories are regarded with veneration. There is also a brilliant list deserving of a like honor to be found among those who have been distinguished in the service of the church since the formation of the hierarchy in 1789, including such notable names as that of John Carroll, the first bishop, the venerable Bishop Flaget, of Bardstown, the learned Kenrick, the pioneer Indian teacher Bishop Baraga, Cardinal McCloskey, Cardinal Gibbons and others illustrious in the annals of Catholic literature. There are laymen, too, for whom this great honor might also be reserved. The university is already rich with works of art in marble and on canvas. Upon the walls of the great parlor are the portraits of Pope Leo XIII by Ugolini, of Rome, and of Bishop Carroll and George Washington, by the famous painter Gregory, of New Orleans university, besides a bust of St. Thomas, "The Angel of the Schools," by Guglielmi, and several others of rare merit. To these will be added as the years pass other paintings and statues after the manner of the great collections in the leading church edifices of Europe.

The place assigned to the statue in the prayer-room of the university is merely a temporary one. It will ultimately be enshrined in a commanding niche in the new building which is to be erected near the Theological building. It is anticipated that the memorial will be most elaborate, including addresses by Cardinal Gibbons, Bishop Keane, Archbishop Corrigan and several other dignitaries. Among those who will participate will be Monsignor Preston, New York; Monsignor Williams, of Boston, the archbishops of Cincinnati, St. Paul, Milwaukee and Philadelphia, Bishops Gilmore, Elder, Spalding, Loughlin and Doane, with priests from every state in the union. The throng at Brookland, near Washington, where the university is located, will be a decidedly representative one, including also venerated Dominicans, black cassocked Jesuits, Sulpicians, Franciscans, Christian Brothers and many eminent laymen. A prominent part of the programme will be the music. Through many orchestral aids in the arrangements, will be fully announced at the proper time.

DRESSES FOR WIDOWS.

Henrietta Cloth the Proper Thing for All Sorts of Mourning.

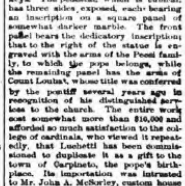
A widow's first dress, suitable for any season, is of Henrietta cloth, made with a well-belled straight skirt. The full skirt may be in the English shape, with slight plaits on each side to give folds across the front, or else it is to be bell shape, with a gored front breadth, and a bias seam in the back. The bodice has a deep yoke-shaped cape in front, and the draped vest, revers, collars and cuffs are also of crape. Crape sleeves are worn by many, but those of Henrietta cloth are more fashionable. A stiff crape collar two inches wide frames the skirt. Another dress of Henrietta cloth, for wear by a young widow, has a pointed bodice fitted—not plaited—into a band of crape. The high collar of crape flares softly. The full sleeves are gathered into cuffs of crape that reach almost to the elbow. The white band of crape vanished at the top time the veil skirt.

Widows wear white organdie about the neck and wrists, a round turnover collar and ruffles widely hemmed. A ruche of white lisse, or a puff crimped of red, is also preferred. The wrap is a short cape of Henrietta cloth, cut with jacket points; the back is belted in and the fronts are trimmed with two jabots of English crape. A broad band of crape surrounds the garment, and there is a crape collar. The small, close bonnet is made of crape folds flat on the frame with an inside puff of crimped white lisse, which prevents a widow's cap. Black grenadine ribbon two inches wide is used for strings. The veil of English crape reaches to the knee in front and below the waist in the back. It is pinned on closely with dull gold pins. Although the tendency is to shorten the time of wearing mourning, a widow's mourning is still worn a year. The cap ruche in the bonnet is worn for a year and a day, and crape for a year and one month. Lighter grays from three months to three months are the period proportions.—Harper's Bazar.

THE COLORED LEADER.

Emancipation Celebrations Inaugurated by Frederick Douglass.

August 6 is the anniversary of the emancipation of all slaves in the United States and is usually celebrated in a manner worthy of the occasion. The present year is inaugurated by Douglass league. It was in Rochester, N. Y., that Douglass started a paper called at first the North Star, afterward



FREDERICK DOUGLASS.

Fred Douglass' paper. Frederick Douglass was born a slave in Talbot county, near Easton, Md., in 1817. His mother was a negro—his father a white man.

A slave on a plantation, at the age of ten, he was sent to Baltimore to live with the relatives of his master. He taught himself to read and write in secret. He was employed in a shipyard and fled from Baltimore from there went to New Bedford, Mass., where he married. He labored in the coal mines and in workshops until 1841, when he attended an anti-slavery convention at Nantucket and spoke. After this he toward he traveled and lectured in New England and Massachusetts for upward of four years. He published his first book, his autobiography in 1845. Soon after he went to Europe and lectured in England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales to enthusiastic audiences. A subscription of $150 was raised to manumit him. He returned to this country in the spring. Fearing arrest from his supposed implication in the John Brown raid he went to Europe again for some months. It was he who suggested the formation of colored regiments and did much to help fill the ranks with his race in Massachusetts. There is little doubt that Frederick Douglass advised President Lincoln to issue the emancipation proclamation. Recently Douglass was United States minister to Hayti, but resigned shortly after his return from a long foreign tour of observation and is now without official position.

A FAMOUS PAINTING.

The Portrait of Mrs. Mackay Made by Meissonier.

In Its Time This Work Created a Tremendous Sensation—A Picture of the Land from a Recent Photograph—Striking Contrast.

The Pall Mall Budget has been enabled, by permission of Mrs. John W. Mackay, to publish a sketch from the famous portrait of that lady which was painted by Meissonier in 1887. Most of our readers will remember the bitterness which the painter's treatment of this little panel created between Meissonier and Mrs. Mackay. Rumor has it that the lady, feeling that her features were maligned, had destroyed the picture. But this, happily, proved untrue; for no worse fate befell the work than having its face turned to the wall for about eight years. It has only recently been brought to the light, and now takes its place among the valuable works of art which hang in the beautiful drawing-room of 6, Carlton House-terrace, being shown for the first time to Mrs. Mackay's friends at a reception which she gave the other evening.

There is no need to do more than recall the history of the picture, or to enter into a discussion of its merits. Suffice it to say that Mrs. Mackay considers it a very bad likeness, and that it made her appear much older than she is. Both of which faults it grossly possessed. As to the latter, at any rate, it is well known to artists that a minute attention to the details of a head—such as was essentially characteristic of Meissonier's method—does have the effect of making the sitter look older. A more tangible grievance was that of the size and character of the hands, which undoubtedly are a blemish in the picture. As a matter of fact they can hardly be said to be the hands of Mrs. Mackay at all, for Meissonier, in his desire to get the picture finished, had resort to a pernicious modern expedient, and modeled the hands from those of a model. And so the picture was finished, and nobody in Paris was more surprised than Mrs. Mackay when it was being exhibited in the salon. The controversy which ensued became so unpleasant that it is said to have greatly influenced Mrs. Mackay in having the Paris studio given to live in London, where she is now established in the house upon which Mr. Sandford spent so much money.

It is an unobtrusive little picture, the dress and hat are black, the cloak of dark fur, and the background of a sort of mahogany red color. The price said to have been paid for the picture is 20,000 guineas, and the size is exactly 21x17 inches.

THE CAPUCHIN GENERAL.

Father Bernard D'Andermott Now Visiting in This Country.

Since 1882 the Capuchin order has been established in this country. Rome is the residence of the superior general, and that official has never visited the United States. Father Bernard D'Andermott, the present superior general, recently arrived in New York.

The superior general will remain in this country several months. He will visit every Capuchin monastery here, and will preside at the chapter of the order to be held in Detroit in September. It is expected that several important changes will be made by him. He will decide what fathers are to have charge of the new Capuchin monastery in Yonkers.

Father Bernard was born in Switzerland in 1827. He joined the Capuchin order in 1855, and was ordained in 1860. He did missionary work in Switzerland, and occupied many important positions before he was elected superior general of the order on May 9, 1884. For the last two years he has been visiting Capuchin monasteries in all parts of the world. He spent a year in Africa and two years in Australia and the Orient. He had completed the visitation of the French and English houses when he sailed on the Gallia for this country.

Members of the Capuchin order here say that Father Bernard is a great admirer of this country, and that he has often said a visit here would give him much pleasure. The Capuchins have a large number of monasteries in the United States. The priest who organized the order in this country in 1857, Father Bonaventure Frey, is pastor of the Church of St. John the Baptist in West Thirtieth street, New York.

SPURGEON RECOVERING.

The Great Pulpit Orator Rapidly Regaining Strength.

Charles Haddon Spurgeon was born on June 19, 1834, at Kelvedon, Essex county, Eng. He was educated at Colchester, studied for the Congregational ministry at Newmarket. Contrary to the wishes of his relatives, who were Church of England parents, he joined the congregation of the late Rev. Robert Hall, a Baptist preacher, at Cambridge. Young Spurgeon then entered actively upon Christian work, and distributed tracts at Feversham, near Cambridge, where he became known as the "Boy Preacher."

In that village he delivered his maiden sermon when sixteen years old. In the next year he became the pastor of a small church at Waterbeach, preaching in a barn, to which crowds flocked to hear him. He began to be famous, and in 1853 was offered the pastorate of the church meeting in the New Park Street chapel, in Southwark, London, in which Dr. Rippon once preached. Mr. Spurgeon became so popular in London that in two years it became necessary to enlarge the church building, when the Exeter hall was engaged for four months.

So great were the crowds that desired to hear the preacher, who had now become the greatest in London, that the enlarged Park street church was twice pulled down and the Surrey music hall enlarged. In 1861 the latter building occurred in the fall, and it was decided to build the Metropolitan tabernacle, which was opened in 1861. Since then Mr. Spurgeon had always preached there to overflowing congregations.

Mr. Spurgeon's sermons have a circulation in printed form of 25,000 weekly. He has also published "The Treasury of David," an exposition of the psalms, in seven volumes. The Stockwell orphanage, founded in 1867, has been enlarged, and the Pastors' college, founded in 1856, has educated over 700 men. These are connected with the tabernacle. The Metropolitan Tabernacle Colportage Association has agents in different parts of the country, who sell books and pamphlets and preach from other services. His book fund, carried on in Mr. Spurgeon's house, supplies indigent ministers with books. The sermons have been literally frequented by Americans in London, to whom Mr. Spurgeon's sermons were peculiarly acceptable.

Mr. Spurgeon has tremendous influence over his audiences, although a large proportion of simple language, and possessed of no exceptional gifts of oratory.

DANCING SOAP BUBBLES.

A Trick Explained by the Weight of Carbonic Acid Gas.

Several schoolboys and a siphon with soda water are necessary to accomplish this interesting feat. The soda water is needed for filling one of the glasses with carbonic acid, which is done by pouring the water with considerable force at it and withdrawing the water by means of a straw or tube. The carbonic acid remains in the glass, because it is being as heavy as the air. To keep it from evaporating the glass is covered with a lid. The apparatus has already been prepared, and in order to make it effective for our purpose a little glycerine is added, the mixture will shasten and cost £500,000 was sold for only £25,000. The building material was worth £100,000, and its failure as a commercial speculation is the hands of its first proprietors and first captain, Mr. Harrison Ainsworth, of the ill luck which seemed to follow the undertakings of the Brunels. Among others may be mentioned the Thames tunnel, which was, commercially, a failure. One circumstance which can hardly be called unfortunate is that which its short existence upon the water is that of having laid the Atlantic cable between Valentia and Newfoundland in 1866. The picture represents the huge vessel in the course of demolition on the river Mersey, at the mouth of which, where it was beached for the purpose.

When Your Head Is Off.

As human curiosity has never been satisfied as to the precise moment of death in cases of beheading, the account of the experiment on a decapitated criminal communicated to a French medical journal by a leading scientist of Lyons is of absorbing interest. This also it results are more satisfactory than has hitherto been the case, the art of making the following statement put forward to the manifestations of consciousness after the head has been severed from the body. That the head, on being separated from the body, remains in possession of all the faculties of sensation and emotion is not pass certain limits, i.e. The proportion of oxygen in the blood is sufficient to maintain the nervous functions for a brief space, never exceeding a half minute. 2. That the repeated opening and closing of the eyes after the separation of the head from the body are nothing but the reflex action common in cases of the amphibia.

The Art as a Surgeon.

The grip of an ant's jaw is retained even after the body has been bitten off and the head separated from the body. This knowledge is reasoned by a scientist of Edinburgh, Scotland, who applied the ants to a very peculiar use. When an Indian gets a cut on the head, instead of having his head sewed together, as physicians do in this country, he applies the ants. He says he estimates that the great Greenland whale (average length 60 feet) attains a maximum speed of 10 miles per hour, 7 miles per hour, the "Finners" whale (maximum length 85 feet) often making twelve to fourteen miles an hour. Mr. Turner, in course of his lectures, said that he and John Henderson, of Glasgow, the well-known builder of the Anchor Line steamships, had spent much time in trying to arrive at a satisfactory conclusion as to the horse power exerted by large species of the whale in making a speed of twelve miles per hour. As a basis for their conclusions they took the size and dimensions of the great Finner which was stranded on the shore at Longniddry some years ago. It was 86 feet long, weighed 74 tons and 1,000 stone, and measured 36 across at the greatest end of its flanges. With these data, Messrs. Turner and Henderson calculated that it was like looking about and at last setting his worm or adjective, the best, the only one which would serve the need of his thought."

"Whose M'y Hand."

In the early days only a few scholars, priests and clerks knew how to write. It was then customary to sign a document by spreading the hand with ink and impressing it upon the paper, accompanied by the words "Witness my hand." Afterwards the seal was introduced as a substitute for the hand-print and was used with the words above quoted, the task forming the signature. This is the origin of the expression so used in modern documents.

A Trick Explained by the Weight of Carbonic Acid Gas.

Several schoolboys and a siphon with soda water are necessary to accomplish this interesting feat. The soda water is needed for filling one of the glasses with carbonic acid, which is done by pouring the water with considerable force at it and withdrawing the water by means of a straw or tube. The carbonic acid remains in the glass, because it is being as heavy as the air. To keep it from evaporating the glass is covered with a lid. The apparatus has already been prepared, and in order to make it effective for our purpose a little glycerine is added, the mixture will shasten and

STEAL NOT.

The Pennsylvania Democrats have adopted as a fitting motto for the coming election campaign in that State—"Steal not, nor steal."

That is an all important injunction, worthy of universal observance, notwithstanding the assertion of a prominent Republican ex-United States Senator that such a moral principle has no place in partisan politics.

Honesty should be the governing rule in all the affairs of life, and no where more pointedly than in official position, both of high and low degree.

There is no valid ground for the divorcement of honesty from politics. Politics means the science of government, and government—such as ours unless a misinterpreted with rigid integrity, from centre to circumference, loses its essential character and becomes a reproach to free institutions.

No objection can be justly laid against a man because he is a politician, provided, the public welfare sways the actions and not sordide pelf.

A politician certainly possesses the privilege of maintaining party allegiance, according to his own individual opinion, but not a shadow of right to steal himself or to connive at stealing by others.

The violation of that sacred moral obligation is, in so many instances, is why so much honorable repute does not attach to the name politician.

The people are entitled to honest reform. When honesty becomes the foremost credential for press and office-holding, and voters positively resolve not to be gulled any longer, then the days of the financial looseness of taxpayers will be lessened and the foundation of a good government more really strengthened.

Is this small yet steal?

The State of Pennsylvania and the City of Philadelphia have ample cause to emblazon that saving motto, because political thievery has of late years run it within their borders.

Last year a Democrat was elected Governor of the partisan Republican Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Why not Philadelphia do likewise?

Because its was a man of unwavering honesty, one who would rather starve than steal.

That he did not starve, and men wanted for public office in every State, County, City and Town throughout the American Union.

Honor honesty for the sake of pub lic and private prosperity.

A VENOMOUS SCANDAL MONGER.

Here is an Odious Fellow Who Ought to be Suppressed Summarily.

TO THE DAILY PRESS of Sept. 30:

I have waited from week to week for some one to expose the infamous lie from York city an anonymous communication conveying a scandalous story about a family prominent in Plainfield society. The article is duplicate, and reached each office on the peculiar kind of paper and marked in the peculiar way that would enable the editor to fabricate a dramatic news story from one of the metropolitan newspapers. The people mentioned were so worthy, however, and the character of the fiend who made the villainy about it, that a most rigid investigation was set on foot by each paper, both of the parties mentioned were consulted, and through resident correspondents. The result was just what might have been expected—the story was found to be the most unscrupulous invention of a disordered brain, and the papers—with two exceptions—very gladly dropped the whole matter. The two exceptions deserve to be very lightly mentioned, for that the story was found to be utterly false, and delectably loyally the good name of the family concerned was the very last it ever set afloat. It is a significant fact that one of these two papers is a journal that has a reputation for being exceedingly green for libel suits of any kind, and even it was forced to admit that the thing was an utter fabrication.

Then I read that two months ago that stories were being set afloat derogatory to the good name that the family concerned have enjoyed in Plainfield it occurred to me that the stories that were being aroused were utterly unjust and unfounded. But a certain scandal-mongrel without particular delight seems to be to blacken such reputations, to blight bright prospects, to blast home happiness, blasted himself in the matter, and the result of his machinations was the issue of an unsolicited letter to New York Monday. He need not fancy that he is undetected. Snake-like though his character may be, the public will not let the author of the anonymous lie identify. He is the same base fellow who has been responsible hitherto for spreading the unclean stories of private affairs before the world. Having no reputable business of his own, he must concern himself with other people's affairs, and by way of retribution he must go home. He is too vile a creature to be permitted to enjoy the brightness and freshness of Plainfield's sunshine. He is a pollution to a people who refuse to associate among men. Banished from all mankind he ought to be; for his sole pursuit is hypocrisy and slander, the sole thought is to wail on our ruin of home happiness.

When he sought to turn the finger of reproach to the real aspersions on the character of some of Plainfield's fairest and loveliest daughters, he committed the basest of acts, the most cruel of crimes.

This Fiend is glad to be able to assure the public—which, happily, needs no assurance—that the slanderous report upon which this low fellow has sought to bring against the family who were the subject of his fabrication, were falsehoods. The good people of a few days past have been themselves to defend by their presence and by their actions their purity and nobility of character—to counter the foul slander that have so villainously been circulated. If they will only seek out their calumniator and make him suffer the penalties he richly deserves, they will have the best wishes and the loyal support of every decent citizen.

Beginning of the New Season

The ball campaign is now on in earnest—the life as well as in political ranks. L. B. Plant & Co., of the Newark Beer Hive, are booming things in their usual hurrah style, which redounds to the advantage of their patrons. One of the most remarkable successes of their business has been the popularizing of a new millinery department, this, the second season, introducing that principle of "reasonable price" as the foundation stone on which to build. Ladies will find page three advertisement very interesting reading matter.

John have you seen that scandal monger? Sadie, I understand! What woman? That woman picking grapes for Spear's Wine. Just see her in another column, and read about it; the wines she found by chemists to be absolutely pure and fit for the table in the world. LIVELY TIME IN THE COUNCIL.

When the Fame Street Ordinance Is Rounded of Mr. Rushmore, He Refuses It Up in His Pocket and Refuses to Surrender.

Nearly an hour's time was consumed by the Plainfield Common Council Monday night in warfare over the project to widen Fame street and open it to North Plainfield.

The matter was opened by a report from Mr. Rushmore, chairman of the committee on laws and ordinances, to whom was referred the petition of citizens and that since the North Plainfield end of the matter had been so much in doubt the committee had lodged their time in sending counsel to Marsh's return from Europe. Now that Mr. Marsh was back the matter was being pushed forward. The proposed ordinance was in his hands, and the committee purposed presenting it at the regular meeting next Monday.

Mr. Hetfield insisted on having the matter pushed through at once, that very night. In his opinion the project had been delayed long enough already.

Mr. Rushmore objected, and against the imputation that the committee had been dilatory. Their sole desire in holding back the ordinance—he said—was to perfect it.

Mr. Hetfield moved to have the ordinance passed on its first reading that night.

Mr. Rushmore objected. He said that the council had had several examples of faulty ordinances, and the committee didn't want this to be one. It must be right in every passage. He preferred to have it held till it was perfected.

Councilor Marsh said that what had been proposed for immediate action by the North Plainfield and North Plainfield councilors. Under a law of '73 such action could be made. All that need be done was a joint petition of citizens, which was now being prepared; and without the passage of any ordinance at all, three freeholders could be appointed to assess damages and benefits. This ordinance that was under discussion had been prepared only so that the city might be prepared to take action on its own behalf in case concerted action should not be possible. The part of the ordinance that called for a lawyer's fee had been prepared; but since the insertion, by the surveyor of the proposed street, of the description, distances, angles, etc., it had been found necessary to make a number of interlineations, so that the ordinance was still in somewhat crude shape.

Mr. Hetfield said that the city ought to go ahead, do its share of opening the street to the brook, and leave the borough to settle its own part of the matter.

Mr. Gilman asked what benefit would accrue therefrom, and urged that the council wait till North Plainfield was ready, then take joint action.

Mr. Hetfield did not agree in the loss of waiting. Let us do our own part,—he said—open the street to the brook, and then the ordinance would be passed. The North Plainfield people were quoted as saying that they wanted further legislation this winter before going ahead. Why should Plainfield wait? There was no reason for further delay. The street would certainly go through. The city called, the I. M. C. A. would go on and build and improve, and then the open the street would not the city far more.

Mr. Hetfield renewed his motion that the ordinance be taken up and read for the first time. He said: Don't wait, if we do, we shall have to help pay the borough damages too. The ordinance ought to have been adopted two months ago; and by this time the commissioners would have been appointed and would be at work. He again charged the committee with unnecessary delay.

Mr. Rushmore for the committee denied that there had been any delay. They had held meetings and pushed the project as much as had been practicable.

Mr. Hetfield said that the Fame street people had complained bitterly of the committee's inaction.

Mr. Rushmore retorted that no grievances had been heard of by the committee, and held that if the matter was as bad as Mr. Hetfield made out they would have heard of it.

Mr. Hetfield called for the vote on his motion.

Mr. Ackerman jumped to his feet and smilingly asked how the council were going to get hold of the ordinance. Mr. Rushmore tugged at Mr. Ackerman's coat tails and in an aside urged him to sit down.

Mr. Hetfield had seen Mr. Rushmore get the ordinance from Mr. Marsh, and in consequence moved that the ordinance be the hands of Mr. Rushmore be presented. It be first reading.

Mr. Rushmore said: This ordinance is in the hands of the law and ordinance committee, who were impelled to the way it drawn. As I understand the rights of a member, we cannot be compelled to submit an ordinance we are not satisfied to. Really we therefore decline to present it.

Mr. Hetfield then moved that the previous motion be on the table, and that all the papers in the case, including a map of the Peace street project, be taken out of the hands of the committee and referred back to the board. This was carried by the vote of 6 to 5, councilmen Ackerman, Gilman, Johnston, Rushmore and See voting no.

Mr. Hetfield—I move that the ordinance be taken from the table for its next reading.

Mr. Rushmore—Another ordinance, I presume, Mr. Chairman, Mr. Smith—The ordinance committee were ordered to report back.

Mr. Hetfield—Will the committee do it?

Mr. Hetfield—It is boy's play to ask what sir, Mr. See—It is not boy's play. The amended ordinance is only a mere emendation for the convenience of the city engineer in laying out the street.

Mr. Rushmore—There is a motion regarding the minutes ordering this committee to report back. I move reconsideration of that motion now. When we have in our pocket we're not going to surrender. We've got our rights and we maintain, And we don't propose to deliver it up.

Mr. Hetfield—I move that the ordinance be passed on its first reading.

Mr. Rushmore objected. He said that the council had had several examples of faulty ordinances, and the committee didn't want this to be one. It must be right in every passage. He preferred to have it held till it was perfected.

Mr. Hetfield continued to consider order more boy's play—"and very small boy's play at that." The corporation counsel had said that he had drawn up an ordinance and that it was all there except that some interlineations had been made. All the substance was there, and it was ready for passage.

Mr. Rushmore said that he did n't want to be misunderstood in the matter. The committee would return the maps, etc., concerning the Peace street project, as it would return no ordinance, for it had none.

Mr. Hetfield inquired if the corporation counsel had not presented to the committee an ordinance in the matter, and if the committee had not such an ordinance in the possession.

No:—said Mr. Rushmore—not an ordinance.

Mr. Hetfield inquired if he was to understand that the committee refused to return to the council the ordinance given to them by the corporation counsel and now in their possession.

President Smith said that he was committee not to return the papers, etc., to the council.

Mr. Hetfield—Then I protest against the action of the committee. The ordinance is in the hands of the committee, and the protestants were not permitted to see the papers.

Mr. Hetfield argued that if an order had been made by the council, as in the present case, for the committee to surrender the papers, the attempt to enforce the order would have prevailed, would have been submitted to, by the committee.

Mr. Hetfield made some sarcastic remarks about the case Mr. Ackerman had quoted being very pertinent—as, in the at which councilman Ackerman and councilman Rushmore, who had been grinning gleefully, were ejected.

Mr. Hetfield heard the laughter, and got very red in the face.

The gentlemen may laugh, he said—but, before long they'll laugh on the other side of their mouth. They are very insolent, impudent. They're afraid we of the side of the house will get some of the credit for opening Peace street: that's why they are seeking delay.

At this the councilmen referred to laughed more loudly than ever. Mr. Hetfield continued:

Of course if the gentleman won't submit to being ordered to surrender the ordinance, I won't be the one to force it out of his pocket. At least I shan't make the attempt, or deputize anybody to. But there is a way of getting around it, and that is to have another ordinance drawn.

Mr. See interposed that he had the opening of Peace street just as much at heart as had any member of the board. It's—ejaculated Mr. Hetfield.] But—Mr. See resumed—I don't want to vote for the passage of any ordinance till I know that the ordinance I ready. Mr. Rushmore tells us that when it is prepared he will furnish a copy to each member.

Mr. Rushmore reiterated that the committee would promptly return to the council everything pertaining to the matter that the council had given it. But it did not propose to be forced to do the work of passing an incomplete ordinance. It would done work except openly, honestly, thoroughly.

Mr. Hetfield had the last word of the evening's discussion. I understand—he said—that the committee return the maps, etc.—all except the ordinance. That, then, I move that from the fact that the law and ordinance committee decline to deliver up the ordinance prepared by the corporation counsel and given by him to the committee, the motion to take up the ordinance on its first reading be on the table.

This was carried, 6 to 5, councilmen Ackerman, Gilma, Johnston, Rushmore and See voting no.

By the same vote Mr. Hetfield's motion was carried that the corporation counsel be instructed to draw up the necessary ordinance for the widening of Fame street and present it for action at the next regular meeting of the council.

In this way the matter was left, evidently to the satisfaction of both parties to the controversy, but no satisfaction could be secured.

The committee won their point in preventing the ordinance from being pre- sented, and the others did not get their week's delay they were seeking to avoid. It was n't a bowling victory for anybody.

NEW LIFE TO THE SEWER PROJECT.

Because of a Clerical Error, All the Former Legislation Has to Be Re-enacted.

Councilman Hetfield presented anew to Common Council Monday night the maps, specifications, agreement, and ordinance, for the sewer project, adopted by the Plainfield. The documents were exactly the same as those that were passed weeks ago, except that an error had been made causing a discrepancy between contract and ordinance, which necessitated the legislation being done all over again. Otherwise the sewer was the identical project of J. M. Low and his associates.

The proposed re-enactment was read. Mr. Ackerman asked if it would be carried out irrespective of the dispute between the courts of the water-works matter.

Mr. Hetfield said that he had every assurance that the contract would be faithfully performed.

Mr. Ginna thought that the sewerage contract was conditional on the L—w—e—n—c—e decision being carried out.

President Smith said that there was such a clause in the ordinance.

Mr. Rushmore inquired if the sewerage contract would be put through irrespective of that.

Mr. Hetfield responded that as was well known the water contract had already been granted, but had been hung up in the courts. But,—he said—even if the decision that came down Mr. Wells, Mr. Low Company, it could not proceed to build the works unless it built the sewers too. On the other hand, the sewers could not be built without the water-works. The one depended on the other.

Mr. Hetfield presented a resolution that the city execute the contract with the Low company. Ackerman objected to that he could n't see that this new contract was any different than the one that had been passed upon several times in the past, and he thought that the council ought to consider what the Mayor had said about the matter.

The resolution to execute the contract was adopted by the vote of 6 to 5.

The Low water-works ordinance was then put on its first reading by the same vote. Mr. Ackerman moved to table the ordinance. The motion was lost, 5 to 6. Mr. Hetfield moved that the rules be suspended and the ordinance be put on its second reading. Mr. Ackerman objected, and said that the rights of the people were being ruthlessly trampled upon. The motion was carried, 6 to 5. The ordinance was then adopted on its second reading by the same vote. Ackerman and Rushmore voted negatively.

NORTH BROADWAY.

A List of the Property the Proposed New Thoroughfare Will Cross.

Now that the project to extend Peace street into North Plainfield is taking definite shape, the public will be interested to know just where the proposed new thoroughfare will run.

To begin with, Peace street will be broadened to a total width of 66 feet. The new portion of the street will then take in the land now at the head of Peace street, a portion of the land at present owned by the Young Men's Christian Association, also a portion of the land of Ferdinand Strauss on the other side of the lane, together with a part of his house. It then grazes the buildings along the roadway at the rear of Strauss, and goes through more land owned by Strauss on the other side of the brook. It then takes all of the property of Mary Elizabeth Stage, including the large house situated of the estate of Mary Bird, takes one-third of the land of Mary McGlone; crosses Pearl street, takes in the house and all the land, except two triangular bits at the corners, of Reynitus McDonald; takes a little triangular piece of the rear of Stiger's land

With its current issue the Dover Index goes to the seventeenth volume. It is one of the newsiest weekly papers in the State, is staunchly Democratic in principle, and covers a wide field with a thoroughness highly commendable in an enterprise worthy of a daily in a big city.

The property holders on Liberty street in the vicinity of the railway track still hold by cutting down the banks of proper drainage. Every heavy rain fills their cellars with foul-smelling water which results in deadly diseases. They all want relief from the authorities.

David L. Curtis, the grocery clerk whose disappearance from Plainfield has been attended exclusively in the evil stories, has turned up safe and sound in Virginia, and wants either to come back here to work, or his friends to send remaining goods on that he can get a good job elsewhere.

Two "celluloid" boots put in a day of rest to a shed near Grand avenue station Sunday, and held quite an "elastic" time exception. All the small fry of the region, therewhouts was on deck, and while the proprietor slept the sleep of the weary the boys overhauled their goods in quiet but elegant tasks.

Not only were the West Ends afraid to play another game on that treacherous ice, but they were also afraid to. Westfield nine that the Crescents defeated with so much ease. Manager Mack of Somerville, asked the Crescent manager to refuse to play the West Ends. With the grounds as the West Ends would have a reason for not playing the Westfields.

The regular irregularity with which the Plainfield local papers treat the city is somewhat picturesque. Three days often elapses between the date of publication and the date of occurrence of the Truths run the distance between here and Plainfield in fifteen minutes, requires six it in less than an hour, horses and people require about an hour and a half or two hours, and it can be walked in about three hours. HAYSEEDS AT RICHFIELD

Horny Handed Sons of Toil Who Monopolize the Springs.

[Copyright, 1891.]

The most amusing thing about Richfield Springs is the way the natives flock in and run all the summer visitor on hotel piazzas and in the park. If there is a hop they prompt the best wallflowers, thereby preventing the visitors from indulging in the dancing from the piazzas, and when a Sunday-school picnic comes to town the summer visitors may as well quit. The picnickers shovel in like the wolf on the fold. They invest the bathing house and stove with a perfume as when a combination of the breezes in the park. The arbors are taken possession of by rustic beaux and belles, and the refreshment stand is full as soon as open and children collapse and exhaust the starving eyes and stomachs of the early risers who get up with the intention of eating as they would in a Fifth avenue hotel. In short, the Sunday-school picnic is the opportunity of the season to remove the rustic from his native haunts and transplant him in all the baby carriages and other vehicles known to polite conveyance on this continent. It is when a combination occurs of that the populace comes to the front. Doors and windows fly open, and the whole village seems startled out of its usual quiet

UNFERMENTED GRAPE JUICE.
Used in the principal churches for communion purposes. Invaluable for Invalids' weakly persons and the aged.

Speer's Port Grape Wine,
FOUR YEARS OLD.
THIS Celebrated Wine is the pure juice of the finest ripe Concord Grape, raised in Speer's vineyards, and left to ferment and mature before gathering. Its invaluable are unsurpassed by any other Wine. Being produced under Mr. Speer's own personal supervision, its purity and genuineness are guaranteed by the principal Hospitals and Boards of Health who have examined it. The youngest child and the weakest invalid use it to advantage. It is particularly beneficial to the aged and debilitated and suited to the various ailments incident to the weakness of age.

Tonic and Strengthening Properties
It is in every respect a WINE TO BE RELIED UPON.

Speer's Unfermented Grape Juice
is the juice of the Concord Grape, preserved in its natural fresh state as it came from the press by Pasteurism and electricity, thereby destroying the action of fermentation. It is perfectly pure, free from spirits, and will keep in any climate.

Speer's Sacramental Claret is used in large communities for the Holy Sacrament. It is highly recommended for Dinner use.

Speer's P. J. Sherry is a Wine of superior character, and possesses the extra good qualities for which this Wine is made.

Speer's P. J. Brandy
IS A PURE distillation of the grape, and should be used by invalids and others requiring a pure article for medicinal purposes. It has a peculiar flavor, similar to that of the grape from which it is distilled.

THE WOMAN OF FASHION.

The Dress She Is Having Made for Walking or Tramping.

A Gown Worn by the Cruising Girl—How a Dress May Be Made Warm, Yet Airy in Appearance—Pretty Dresses Designed for Favorite Fall Wear.

[COPYRIGHTED, 1891.]

In these cool, delicious fall days walking, or rather tramping, is the favorite exercise.

It is necessary to have a walking costume, and one appropriate to the season. It will not do to don the mountain dress or bathing suit that has seen hard service during the summer. The frock must first and foremost be suitable for what you want it—no frills, no furbelows, no material that will not bear wetting or is easily soiled.

Cheviot, serge or some light but warm wool fabric is best liked for such a dress. Russet brown, wood brown, green or blue make up prettily; checks are occasionally used, but the solid colors have a decided preference.

The skirt is plain, but fuller than the present style, is simply hemmed and just escapes the ground. A loose, plaited waist is worn with this skirt and made in with one of those arrangements in kid, which is properly called a girdle.

A dress that is simple but decidedly jaunty withal is of homespun in red russet brown. The skirt is plain, with a deep hem around the bottom. The bodice is a yoke waist and fastened on to the skirt. There is a deep collar of fine Russian leather, the ends are turned back and are of the leather, as is also the belt, which is perfectly plain. A brown felt sailor hat and Russia leather tramping shoes complete the costume as worn by the jaunty girl.

Another gown which is like unto this, although somewhat different, is of darkest navy blue. It is made after a similar model and is supplied with a sailor collar and cuffs of white Bedford cord. In place of a girdle, the skirt is gathered upon a very heavy white cord, to which the blouse waist is also sewed. This makes a light and jaunty suit, and is one which will be a favorite with women who wish to go upon trying tours and wish a gown which is light, comfortable and pretty withal.

Bedford cord is more popular than ever. Ribbed goods seem to be the smoothest materials and bid fair to rival the habit cloths. They are in all colors and in figures and stripes, as well as the plain ribbed material of last season. These figures are especially well made up in a gown that has a coat effect.

A frock with a decidedly chic air about it is of gray Bedford cord, so closely resembling corduroy that at a little distance it is difficult to tell the difference. The habit skirt is perfectly plain in front, with not even a fold to mar the perfect effect. In the back it is arranged in full, soft plaits, and extends just far enough to allow for a short-a-vey train.

There is a blouse shirt-waist of ponge, made not very full and belted in by a broad leather belt; this is worn with not even a buckle for ornament. Under the collar of the blouse, knotted loosely, is a four-in-hand tie of pale blue satin. A blazer of Bedford cord completes the costume.

Another pretty fall toilet is a combination of brown and tan. The skirt and coat are of brown Bedford cord. The coat is close fitting in the back and has deep revers in front, drawing close-fitting waistcoat. The waistcoat is tan broadcloth; it extends but a short distance below the waist line, and is fastened by large brown buttons. The neck is left open a little to show a collarette and a four-in-hand tie of brown surah. The revers are tan and form the collar of the coat proper. With this gown is worn a hat of brown, coarse straw. It is trimmed with wings of coarse embroidery and loops of brown and ecru ribbon; these with a small brown bird almost cover the crown of the hat. The gloves are heavy walking ones, and are of the same shade of tan to match the dress.

If you are thinking of getting a walking dress, and intend to extend the usefulness into the early winter, get a brown or a green, and you cannot go amiss. These are the colors that are going to be worn. They come in many shades and in all kinds of materials, so you will be able to suit both your complexion and your purse. You may have your gown made of different shades of the same color, or of contrasting colors.

Green and a dull Indian-red make a pretty contrast; chestnut brown with the real chestnut makes a good combination. Be careful in combining different colors to avoid glaring contrasts. Do not aim at striking effects. The suggestions given in the swell gown, one that fits perfectly and is made to suit your particular style. Black still holds its own. Black Bedford cords are more popular than ever, and come both in plain ribs and in fancy stripes.

A gown which appears light and airy, and yet is heavy enough to be comfortable, may be made of black Bedford cord. Very deep ruffs may be fashioned of embroidery and fitted on so that they will lie well to the shoulders. The front of the waist may be also trimmed with embroidery. A deep ruffle of same kind of black cord is arranged in the very graceful puffings—is fitted to the lower edge of the bodice and also around the bottom of the skirt. Two bones of the surah are used as a bead-ing between the ruffle and the dress skirt, and the ruffle is finished with long, diagonal chain lace, let in of the same surah.

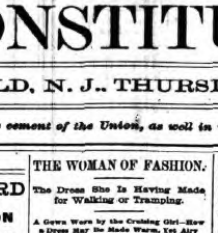
Black grenadine is made up with some bright color, either with another bone material or with jet or passementerie. Black grenadine and red, black and gilt, black with a little, a very little green—any of these harmonize well and make a decidedly pretty gown. Discretion must be brought to bear, and whatever color is combined with a black gown should be used in moderation.

A very little of a vivid red or a bright gilt goes a long way. Be a little careful; have the somberness of your black frock relieved by the bright bit of color, but do not allow it to have the appearance of a gypsy costume.

Blue is in the decline; that is, the fast shades that were worn during the summer. Navy blue is the new shade; this is a clear bright blue, somewhat lighter than a merino. There is a decided tendency towards the lighter shades of gray and coral. A combination of Henrietta cloth in pale coral and heavily corded with silk makes a handsome dinner dress. A pale French gray in cloth and bengaline makes a pretty house gown, and it can be worn at the theater as well. Have a Louis XV. coat with a full lace cravat and deep lace ruffles at the wrists.

Don't think because September is fast merging into October, that you must discard your straw bonnet. True, the shop windows are filled with hats of felt and bonnets of velvet, but do not be tempted.

Whatever you get now will surely have to be remodeled in November.



A FETCHING FALL HAT.

THE CRUISING GIRL.

even the shape of the coming hat is undecided as yet. The manufacturers are desperately to make up the season's hats in felt, but it is uncertain whether they will be able to get the little flutes and plaits which were produced in the straw.

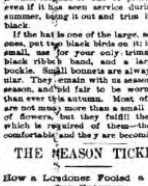
So keep your old bonnet and make up your mind to wear it a month longer. Freshen it up by altering the trimming a little. If your gown has become well faded and soiled, replace them either with wings or birds, change the ribbons slightly and you have a feeling fall hat and one you know is becoming.

A bunch of poppies and wheat heights on a brown straw rough and ready; or the same hat, with a few ribbon and velvet bows, and a brown plumassier, make a pretty symphony in browns. Attack blue cloth or renovated by a bit of blue velvet and a bunch of small white tips or wings. If you have a white felt hat or one of pearl gray, even if it has seen service during the summer, begin to add trim it with black.

If the hat is one of the large, soft felt ones, put two black birds on it; if it is small, use for your only trimming a black ribbon bands, and a fancy buckle. Small bonnets are always popular. They remain with us season after season, and fall to be worn more than ever this autumn. Most of them are not much more than a small bunch of flowers, but they look very dainty which is required of them—they are comfortable and they are becoming.

THE REASON TICKET.

How a Londoner Fooled a Railway Gateman.



THERE was no question about it, it was a most disreputable-looking individual—a kind of person whom you would cross the street to recognize on the street if you ever saw it. I dressed. I had found it impossible to sleep that night and had got up at half past three in the morning and tramped all over the west end of London until I was dead tired and ready to go to sleep on any doorstep. I had put on the oldest suit I had and wore on my head a villainous-looking slouch cap. Now there is nothing which makes a man such a pure beggar, bandog appearance as an old and bad slouch cap. I had no collar on and my boots were covered with the mud of various dirty thoroughfares. A man may be measured by his garb, as Dr. Watts told, but up to date the outside world insists on judging a person mainly by his appearance, and my appearance was decidedly against me that morning.

I came to a railway station on the line over which I had a first-class season ticket, and saw that it had been just opened and that the gateman was rawming at having to dry up so early in the morning, so I thought I would take the first train home and go to bed like a reputable citizen. I was evidently the first comer and as I passed the man he held out his hand and said:

"Ticket, please."

"I have a season," I answered sleepily, so that I may send reply to such a question.

If you are well dressed the ticket puncher generally allows you to pass when you mention the open season. "Season." Many swindlers have been fined forty shillings and costs for saying that inestimable word when they had nothing to back their statement.

"I will look at your season ticket, if you please," said the man politely.

Sleepy as I was, this at once awoke me to the fact that I was a disreputable looking citizen.

"Why do you want to see my season ticket?" I said. "It is very unusual to ask for it."

"Perhaps," replied the man; "nevertheless, all tickets must be shown, season and other."

"I have never been asked for my season ticket, and I have traveled on this line for months."

"I will look at your season ticket, if you please."

"Yes, but tell me why. You surely don't think that I want to cheat the railway company. Do I look like a dishonest man?"

The railway man's face was imperturbable, but there was an increasing firmness about the lips. He waived the question of my dishonesty by saying nothing about it.

"I would like to see your season ticket, if you please."

"I don't want to take it out on a damp, foggy morning like this," I said, in a burst of exasperation. "It is a nice, ornamental bit of white leather, beautifully stamped in gold, and it soon gets soiled and dirty, and I would rather not expose it to the morning air, if you don't mind."

The man said nothing, but looked at me fixedly and seriously, the linear about his mouth getting firmer and firmer.

I hesitated for a moment and then said: "Oh, well, it doesn't really matter," and the booking office is open; I have a ticket."

"I beg your pardon," said the man, "you will not buy a ticket. If you have a season ticket you have a right to go on the platform; if you have not, I want your name and address."

"But the booking office is open," I protested.

"Certainly it is open. I want to see your season ticket, if you please."

"Well, but if the booking office is open and if it is for the purpose of selling tickets, why do you object to my buying one? I'll run down and thinks. What do you think?"

The policeman smiled, the ticket man looked considered, and so we ended it that way.—Luke Sharp, in Detroit Free Press.

"I WOULD LIKE TO SEE YOUR TICKET."

first-class, just as you say. I would rather buy a ticket than expose my season ticket in the morning air," and as I said this I edged cautiously away from the fellow and began to look out of the door.

He promptly placed himself between me and the door and said sternly, dropping the politic "if you please" "I want to see your season ticket."

"Oh, well," I said, jauntily, "it doesn't matter after all. I think I shall walk home as it is a fine night. I have walked a good many miles already, and another mile more or less doesn't matter. Good morning!" and I left.

The railway man called a porter, who at once came to his assistance.

"Don't let this man leave the place," he said, "until he gives his name and address."

"I don't see what you want with my name and address," I said, as blandly as I could. "I have as many acquaintances already as I know what to do with. I don't want to extend my calling list. Let me out, if you please. I am going to walk."

Both men planted themselves in the doorway and refused to let me pass.

"Do you mean to say," I cried, "that you are going to attempt to stop me from going out?"

"Show your season ticket, or give your name and address."

"I will do neither one nor the other."

"Then you stay here till you do."

"I shall do nothing of the kind. You let me pass. How dare you attempt to stop me? Have you a warrant for my arrest? If you have not, then I advise you not to put your hands on me."

"John," said the ticket man to the porter, "go and get a policeman."

John toiled out of the door while the other stood in the doorway, and nothing was said for a few moments.

"Can't this matter be fixed up?" I said, persuasively.

"No, it can't."

"Isn't there any way out of it?"

"No, there isn't."

"Oh, well," I said, with a sigh, "I suppose I shall have to take the consequences. What are they, do you happen to know?"

"It will depend upon what the judge says," he answered, shortly.

"Well, that is all, candidly, "I am going to let you into a secret. I think I will manage to square you and John and the policeman, I reckon. Such things have been done, you know."

The man gave an indignant "humph."

"It has gone too far for that," he said, gruffly, and the next moment John appeared, panting, with a policeman.

"What's all this?" said the officer of the law.

"This man tried to pass the gate without a season ticket—"

"Oh, I never did anything of the sort."

"And refuses to give his name and address, and says we haven't any right to put our hands on him, so I thought I'd get somebody that had."

"HERE YOU ARE."

"Refused my name and address!" I cried, in astonishment.

"Yes, and tried to square me when John went for you; said he'd square all three of us."

The policeman, it seemed to me, rather brightened up at this suggestion.

"What did you try to do that for?" said the officer.

"I say I didn't try to do it at all."

"Didn't you say you had a season ticket?"

"Certainly I did, and I have it."

"Well, then, why don't you show it?"

"Why don't they ask for it?"

Here John broke in and said: "I heard him say he'd a dozen times."

"Oh, John, John," I cried, "how can you say such a thing?"

"Well," said the policeman, "if I had a season ticket I would show it, if I were you."

"Now, that," I said to the officer, "is the first sensible remark I have heard this morning. I never thought of that way out of the trouble. What they seemed to be anxious for was my name and address, and I knew that they ought to have asked me for my ticket if they wanted to see it. If you don't see what you want ask for it, you know."

The officer looked at the ticket man and the porter. The ticket man shrugged his shoulders and said he would like very much to see the season ticket. I didn't look like the sort of person who carried season tickets.

"Oh, all right," I said, pulling out my purse; "here you are. It doesn't look very much, but it costs a good deal."

The ticket man took it in his hand and examined it, turning it over and over, and then he looked at me as the man who had been his suddenly with a club.

"Now," I said to the officer, "don't you think that's rather cheeky of these people to pretend to me from going out, and to make the assertion to you, a responsible officer of the law, that I had no season ticket, when you see I have? It's good for three months longer yet. Here they drag you from your manifold duties to arrest a perfectly innocent man, and not to this time say to a person charged in the first-class person, too."

The policeman looked his head dubiously and said he really couldn't understand it.

"I understand," I answered, "you are afraid to their chances that I had no season ticket. Now, I say this matter is not going to end here."

"Oh, well," said the policeman soothingly, "it wouldn't be too hard if I were you."

"The matter," I repeated, "cannot end here. I think that it's as early in the morning as those men are not nightly awake yet, and I think they should be brisk to start in so, so I laid low, and made no start ter roll out or his reach least then.

"The old chap seemed to enjoy that kind of performance first-rate, an' his nose close unto me all the time. When I didn't roll fast enough to suit him, he'd give me a beetle poke with his nose.

"I got quite sore for get through that thar arena, I'd come to the conclusion that the brute was a genuine old wag, an' knowed a joke when he got his nose unto one. If I could a jest stood off a beetle to one side, an' send the brute sprawling, I'd a laughed for spite-an', if I hadn't been quite as close, I'd a done it as 'twas, but I reckoned as my duty to the show-bizz-ness way for I'd better save it a few minnits. We nabigated down that air slope 'till I struck a big fat rock that I formed a sheltered leavin' adrop of about eight feet to the next rock below.

"I JUST LAID ON MY BACK."

"Now I was jest goin to the first rock the grizzly clawed a halt. Luck war on my side, for when I stopped rollin', I war on the slantendicular, an' ready to jump.

"The sun came down behind her, in the open space an' I heard like the old chap had just had his breakfast, an' was thinkin' he'd take his mornin' nap when I disturbed him, an', now that the sunshine made him sleepy, he didn't want for to be disturbed at all, so he leged down side o' me, an' went ter sleep, or rather 'bout ez I had completed that he was ready for 'nother spell upon me, much ez he says 'Oh, I'm watchin'.' Its these cat naps seems ter grow nourish, I made up my mind the time I had come to try my level best.

"I waited till both the brute's eyes war shut an' then began to crawl for the edge of the rock. It war mighty slow work, an' I hadn't got nearly three feet away when he pulled up the left eye, an' I reckoned out to play me with the claws ran out full length, an' hauled me back.

"I'd been a bad move, an', besides, I didn't know how much more ter that kind uv foolin' the old chap would stand without getting mad. So I jest laid on my back till I knowed I'd spile my complexshun an' make the ground sacred. That war about all I could do over one; two; three!—I can tell ye my heart thumped purty lively when I rolled over that third time—but I could afford to, for the old brute snatched me up by the claws of one fore paw an' handy on that, an' I picked up that mouse a minnit ago! It didn't prick more'n.

"If it didn't feel like ez though I had a pot hook run under my back bone, an' I'm sure my head would be sore, but then I don't know how it did feel. But the old ruffian war obleegin' enough to back me down ter the ground, an' when I lay with my nose agin that rock it must have looked like ez the' I war mighty interested in its geology.

"Howsomever, I concluded it war a mighty good place ter leave. This time I waited 'till he went off ez he come way with his nap, then I jumped to my feet, leaped to the lower rock an' made for the next, an' didn't stop 'till I got to run in that keenly. I could hear, an' nigh-a-most, feel the old fury a-comin after me like a cyclone, an' I'd got ter the tree I made a jump for the lowest limb caught it, an' swung up hand over hand, an' then I looked down on me.

"I never saw man or beast half so crazy ez that bar war when he could see me up thar in that tree, an' couldn't get at me. I'd a' left he'd a' split self up—an' bowl!—you could a heard him for two miles!

"The grizzly boys heard the racket an' knowed what was up. They crept up on the old chap while he was clawin' an' clawin' away at my stump in tree, an' sent five balls inside his hide, an' he went to sleep so sound that he would a' woke up if the whole mountain had turned over.

"No, thanks; I don't care for that mouse ter a grizzly any more.

A LETTER.

Mr. F. Flaherty Insists on Telling the Public that He Does n't Own he Was a Cook, Though Subsequently Became Owner of Worse.

(From The Daily Press of Oct. 5.)

The alleged ghost which one family claims has driven it out of its house, and which has agitated the residents of the lower end so much of late, has not been so far as to cause one brother-in-law to break his kleenan's jaw and bite a piece out of his thumb in choosing the merits of his ghostability or existence, seems bent on breeding further trouble.

Last evening THE PRESS made a remark in all innocence everybody will recognize:

"They 'used to say 'It's cheaper to move than pay rent'. Now it seems some Plainfield people have discovered a way to save both rent and moving expenses. Have a ghost in the house and claim it isn't remunerative."

As a result of this publication was that the office of THE PRESS was honored at noon to-day with a call from a lady, who insisted on having a few words printed which is appended, published. She was assured that the paragraph at which she took umbrage had no personal reference, but that it was merely a general observation. "But—she said—"you had no right to publish it. If I could find out who wrote it I would make 'em suffer. I tell you I've made a good bit of money out of it. Of course you've got to print what people send in, but if you made this up out of your own head I'd make you smart."

Since the lady showed such a close familiarity with newspaper methods, and had such an accurate idea of personal and editorial rights, THE PRESS could not yield to her persuasive demand that her letter be printed. Here it is:

Oct 7 1891

To the Editor of Press In reading your valuable paper each day there is a small piece read as though it meant me by referring the cheaper to move than pay rent and save moving expenses by having a ghost in the house I have resolve to show that I paid my rent which is not due till the 11th of this month I do not owe the rent for moving purpose to now one by publishing that you will greatly

oblige

An Artesian Burned in Monte Hall.

Because of the advancing age of Mme. Jar-nasche-k, the actress, it is necessary nowadays to build her a dressing room on the stage. While in the apartment improvised for her at Monte Hall last night, Thursday evening, a piece of wire meteor fell and dropped from the mask over the gas jet on her head, and thoroughly frightened but little damaged her.

Complaints Against an Insane Asylum.

The residents of the lower end of town are protesting strongly against the maintenance of the insane asylum kept by Dr. Cooley on that thoroughfare. They claim that it is a nuisance, and that the women and children of the neighborhood are kept in a state of nervous apprehension, not to say fear, by the actions and cries of the inmates of the barred windows. They are preparing a petition that the institution be removed to some less objectionable locality. Some of the property-holders have been notified by their tenants that the continued presence will compel them to move away, and the landlords are threatened with a row of vacant houses.

Each Lamp $1 Less a Year.

The Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company will probably continue to illuminate the Plainfield streets for a year longer at the present rate. The time for submitting bids was up at noon Monday, and but company's bid was the only one received. The offer is to furnish the present service at $15.50 per lamp of 25 candle power. The rate last year ranged from $16.60 to $47.50, according to the distance from the station. The new lights added were of course in the outskirts, and were the high-rate lamps. The average cost per lamp was $16. The matter of arranging a contract was referred by the Common Council last night to the committee on public lights.

Board of Education Routine.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Education was held Monday night. Commissioners Kittner, Babcock, Dr. Stevens and Finch were present. Principal Bulkley reported tuition money received for the first quarter amounting to $641. The committee on audit of the monthly financial account, reported the books examined and found correct. The following bills were presented and order ed paid: Auto-matic Co., $193.00; C. H. Dunn & Co., $ 8; Wilcox, 215.68; McKesson & Robbins, 22.63; U S. Express Co., 6.65; G. W. Lemon & Bro., 45.09; A. R. Pommers, 8.41; The H. B. Smith Co., 2.80; J. C. Hetfield, 7.00; Hoagland's Express, 2.50; Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Co., 21.15.

The collector of taxes reported the amount of school moneys collected for the month of September and deposited in banks, to be $620.04. The present last term of the school year was reported for another year, and the necessary supplies required for use in the schools were ordered purchased.

John have you seen that woman lately? John, do answer me! What do you think? That woman pleasing grapes for Speer's Wine. Just see her in another column!

Plainfield's Bloomside Again.

Farmer Burnet, from over the mountains, will never again run against Plainfield's stalwart policemen. Some time ago officer Charles Glenn was compelled to arrest him for an obstruction on the streets. Monday afternoon Burnet and his two big sons were again in town, and the old man specially became hilariously inclined.

In their travels about town the trio met policeman Glenn, and Burnet immediately pointed himself in his direction, hiccoughed at the officer, flirted the bunch of tobacco in his jaw, and said: "The d——d old guy big boys with me."

Glenn told the countryman to move on and behave himself, but his bucolic highness continued to stagger about, using all kinds of language, until he bit three women, shook the breath out of them, and frightened the prettiest one almost into fainting in the gallant policeman's protecting arms.

Then Glenn got on his muscle, grabbed Burnet by the collar, and tied him up into a knot before the astonished gentleman from the rural district had time to draw two breaths, and proceeded to run him to the station-house. Burnet managed to get out one yell: "Come on, boys, and help!—but the big strapping young countrymen took to their heels and ran like the wind. Then, as Burnet fought and struggled, officer Glenn dragged him bodily dumped him into a truck, seated himself comfortably on his wriggling body, had him carted to headquarters, and locked him in a cell.

When presented to his honor Judge Codrington, farmer Burnet was thoroughly subdued. The racket cost him a $5 fine and costs. "Never come to Plainfield again"—he ruefully said. His sons happened around, after awhile, with a wagon, bundled him into it, and took him home.

The alleged ghost which one family claims has driven it out of its house, and which has agitated the residents of the lower end so much of late, has not been so far as to cause one brother-in-law to break his kleenan's jaw and bite a piece out of his thumb in choosing the merits of his ghostability or existence, seems bent on breeding further trouble.

Last evening THE PRESS made a remark in all innocence everybody will recognize:

"They 'used to say 'It's cheaper to move than pay rent'. Now it seems some Plainfield people have discovered a way to save both rent and moving expenses. Have a ghost in the house and claim it isn't remunerative."

As a result of this publication was that the office of THE PRESS was honored at noon to-day with a call from a lady, who insisted on having a few words printed which is appended, published. She was assured that the paragraph at which she took umbrage had no personal reference, but that it was merely a general observation. "But—she said—"you had no right to publish it. If I could find out who wrote it I would make 'em suffer. I tell you I've made a good bit of money out of it. Of course you've got to print what people send in, but if you made this up out of your own head I'd make you smart."

Since the lady showed such a close familiarity with newspaper methods, and had such an accurate idea of personal and editorial rights, THE PRESS could not yield to her persuasive demand that her letter be printed. Here it is:

To the Editor of Press In reading your valuable paper each day there is a small piece read as though it meant me by referring the cheaper to move than pay rent and save moving expenses by having a ghost in the house I have resolve to show that I paid my rent which is not due till the 11th of this month I do not owe the rent for moving purpose to now one

oblige

An Artesian Burned in Monte Hall.

Because of the advancing age of Mme. Jar-nasche-k, the actress, it is necessary nowadays to build her a dressing room on the stage. While in the apartment improvised for her at Monte Hall last night, Thursday evening, a piece of wire meteor fell and dropped from the mask over the gas jet on her head, and thoroughly frightened but little damaged her.

Complaints Against an Insane Asylum.

The residents of the lower end of town are protesting strongly against the maintenance of the insane asylum kept by Dr. Cooley on that thoroughfare. They claim that it is a nuisance, and that the women and children of the neighborhood are kept in a state of nervous apprehension, not to say fear, by the actions and cries of the inmates of the barred windows. They are preparing a petition that the institution be removed to some less objectionable locality. Some of the property-holders have been notified by their tenants that the continued presence will compel them to move away, and the landlords are threatened with a row of vacant houses.

Each Lamp $1 Less a Year.

The Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company will probably continue to illuminate the Plainfield streets for a year longer at the present rate. The time for submitting bids was up at noon Monday, and but company's bid was the only one received. The offer is to furnish the present service at $15.50 per lamp of 25 candle power. The rate last year ranged from $16.60 to $47.50, according to the distance from the station. The new lights added were of course in the outskirts, and were the high-rate lamps. The average cost per lamp was $16. The matter of arranging a contract was referred by the Common Council last night to the committee on public lights.

Board of Education Routine.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Education was held Monday night. Commissioners Kittner, Babcock, Dr. Stevens and Finch were present. Principal Bulkley reported tuition money received for the first quarter amounting to $641. The committee on audit of the monthly financial account, reported the books examined and found correct. The following bills were presented and order ed paid: Auto-matic Co., $193.00; C. H. Dunn & Co., $ 8; Wilcox, 215.68; McKesson & Robbins, 22.63; U S. Express Co., 6.65; G. W. Lemon & Bro., 45.09; A. R. Pommers, 8.41; The H. B. Smith Co., 2.80; J. C. Hetfield, 7.00; Hoagland's Express, 2.50; Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Co., 21.15.

The collector of taxes reported the amount of school moneys collected for the month of September and deposited in banks, to be $620.04. The present last term of the school year was reported for another year, and the necessary supplies required for use in the schools were ordered purchased.

Plainfield's Bloomside Again.

Farmer Burnet, from over the mountains, will never again run against Plainfield's stalwart policemen. Some time ago officer Charles Glenn was compelled to arrest him for an obstruction on the streets. Monday afternoon Burnet and his two big sons were again in town, and the old man specially became hilariously inclined.

In their travels about town the trio met policeman Glenn, and Burnet immediately pointed himself in his direction, hiccoughed at the officer, flirted the bunch of tobacco in his jaw, and said: "The d——d old guy big boys with me."

Glenn told the countryman to move on and behave himself, but his bucolic highness continued to stagger about, using all kinds of language, until he bit three women, shook the breath out of them, and frightened the prettiest one almost into fainting in the gallant policeman's protecting arms.

Then Glenn got on his muscle, grabbed Burnet by the collar, and tied him up into a knot before the astonished gentleman from the rural district had time to draw two breaths, and proceeded to run him to the station-house. Burnet managed to get out one yell: "Come on, boys, and help!—but the big strapping young countrymen took to their heels and ran like the wind. Then, as Burnet fought and struggled, officer Glenn dragged him bodily dumped him into a truck, seated himself comfortably on his wriggling body, had him carted to headquarters, and locked him in a cell.

When presented to his honor Judge Codrington, farmer Burnet was thoroughly subdued. The racket cost him a $5 fine and costs. "Never come to Plainfield again"—he ruefully said. His sons happened around, after awhile, with a wagon, bundled him into it, and took him home.

NOW FOR PEACE STREET.

At Last it is to be Widened and Opened to the Brook.

The project to widen Peace street and extend it to the borough line was given a very material push forward by the Plainfield Common Council Monday night.

Early in the evening Chairman Rushmore reported concerning the matter, for the committee on laws and ordinances.

At the previous meeting of the Council he had been asked to draft an ordinance in the Peace street project. We then declined to present what was demanded, because the papers, he said, were only a memorandum for an ordinance, and was not in shape to be legally acted on. Since then we have had several meetings, and have concluded that should the act permitting Plainfield and North Plainfield to take action in the matter no progress could be made this year, and possibly not next year. We decided, therefore, that it would be best for the city to fix its share of the work and let the borough go on when it is ready. However we have had the necessary ordinance prepared, and now present it.

Councilman Hetfield moved that the ordinance lie on the table. The motion was carried. There were nine ayes, and Mr. Senn's solitary no.

Later in the evening Mr Hetfield presented the ordinance for the widening, laying out, and opening of Peace street to a uniform width of 60 feet from the Central railroad to Green brook.

Councilman Lederman asked in what respects this ordinance differed from the one presented earlier in the evening. Mr. Hetfield replied that the latter ordinance covered more and advertised preparatory to final passage.

THE DOCTORS DINE.

And Give Thanks to Their Host at The Alden.

The Medical Association of Plainfield met again, Monday night, at The Alden. The following members were present: T. S. Doyle, J. T. Fritts, G. W. Endicott, W. H. Murray, M. B. Long, M. S. Simpson, J. A. Ellis, W. C. Boone, O. L. Jenkins and J. F. Geiger. At 9:30 they adjourned to the main dining room where ample justice was done to the following excellent menu:

Oysters on the Shell.
Celery, Olives, Pickles.
Consomme of Chicken.
Sweetbread Croquettes, with Cauliflower
Roman Punch.
Cold Meats of Various Kinds.
Pommes Parisienne.
Sweet Potatoes a la Maryland.
Spinach.
Chicken Salad.
Neapolitan Ice Cream.
Fruits.
Peaches, Pears, Grapes.
Coffee, Nuts, Raisins.

The association meets quarterly at The Alden, the first meeting was held April 6, and the second, July 6. The kindly feeling existing among the medical fraternity of Plainfield, which is evidenced by these meetings, cannot fail to produce most satisfactory results. The members separated about 11 o'clock, but before retiring expressed their appreciation of the entertainment provided for them by proprietor Miller.

Street Railway Projects.

The new street railway project of Thomas Nevins and associates, of which THE PRESS gave exclusive information on Friday, took quite quite a step forward at the Council that evening, but will probably be brought up at the next meeting.

The Columbia Commercial and Navigation Company of Asbury Addison through their application for a railway franchise, having learned that for a portion of their proposed route a franchise to another railway company, had already been granted.

Adjusting Municipal Accounts.

From the 1st of January to the 1st of August, in settlements, the city department horses have done $2,000 worth of works on the streets which the street accounts have provided for. And now the fire department account has missed For August and September careful account was kept, and the amount of work done was $217. Councilman Hetfield has a plan for transferring such earnings in the future to the fire department account. He submitted it to the Council Monday night, but action was deferred one month to get the opinion of the Corporation Counsel. Messrs. Hetfield, Rodgers and Spangenberg alone voted against the delay.

Dr. Wetsman's Terrible Fall.

Dr. Edward Wetsman, a veterinary surgeon of Roselle, had a very narrow escape from death Monday night, when he fell from a train which was running at the rate of forty miles an hour. He walked out on the platform in search of the conductor on finding that the train did not stop at Roselle, and lost his balance as the train was rounding a curve. He fell on the ground, and the passengers thought he was ground to pieces under the wheels. Dr. Wetsman's body struck the edge of the roadbed, and, rebounding, rolled down a steep embankment into a ditch. He was all out and scratched about the head and face, but no bones broken and limbs were severely bruised, but no bones were broken. He was picked up and conveyed to his home. He was doing nicely to-day.

Donaldson's Bar Club.

On Thursday evening of last week, after the adjournment of the regular Democratic caucus held at the Park hotel, it was suggested by those present that a Democratic club be formed. The proposition was received with enthusiasm, and acted upon at once. Nearly fifty signatures were secured to begin with, and the membership of a large enrollment was promptly brought. The name chosen was the "Democratic Club of Piscataway Township". The motto adopted was, "Young blood in the front" prevailed at the meeting, the following were elected officers:

President—P. Schultz.
Vice President—H. J. Senckhauer.
Secretary—H. L. Terry.
Treasurer—C. D. Bonte, jr.

The members of the Executive Committee are: W. J. Wiggen, C. H. Ward, and P. M. Isling—well known as earnest and faithful workers in the Democratic cause. Rooms will shortly be secured, prominent speakers engaged, and the campaign carried on with vigor. Committees to a man are sanguine that the club will prove a success, and do much towards advancing the principles of Democracy in this township, which can only look for the Democratic party was never brighter than it is this fall.

I can search of the head and forehead for the cause of my headache, but I can't find it. I have tried everything I have ever heard of for the relief of headache, but it still remains. A. D. Thompson, the wealthy ice dealer, lumber merchant, stock breeder, produce dealer, etc., etc., purchased a big tract of land on South avenue, adjoining the railroad track, west of the Oil-cloth Works. The purpose for which he has purchased it THE PRESS is not yet permitted to divulge.

THE BASE-BALL BENEFIT GAME.

Crescents Wind up the Local Season Pleasantly by Presenting a Victory to the Kid Brooklyn Team of King John Hartline.

'Twas a very pretty game of ball—that of Saturday—up to the sixth inning. After that its features were not so handsome, for the Crescents, as a team, and Miss New Brunswicks won with six runs to their credit, while the Plainfield players had reached the rubber only once.

The game was a benefit for Hartline in an unpleasant task, and THE PRESS may be excused for omitting some base-ball words that it might very justly say. Let it suffice to say some very good individual playing; but steady, earnest team work on the part of the Crescents was noticeably absent. A number of the Plainfield assemblage did not seem to try to bat. Instead, they waved the stick through the air in a very listless manner, as if anxious to get out and relieve from active participation in the game. The duty of each one was to give the spectators justice good of game as to by possibly could, but not all of the players were fully equal to what was expected of them. Indeed, it was openly remarked that some of the most ardent admirers of the home nine left the wicks were put out in one-two three order. But the sixth in the was fatal. In it, although Hammill struck out two men, and then made the third out himself, the Kids, as the visitors were called, succeeded in making the score of the nine-men at heart it would yield to the simple method of legislation now being employed and would no oppose the ordinance.

The ordinance was unanimously adopted on its first and second readings and ordered engrossed and advertised preparatory to final passage.

He and Mrs. Milliken, left Minnewaska Friday, and will go on to Asheville for a stay of five or six weeks, to make his recovery complete.

—Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Fowler have issued cards for the wedding reception of their daughter, Elizabeth, and Frank Hall Nevius, of Bridgeton city, Wednesday evening, Oct. 14, from half-past 7 until half-past 9, at 51 South Grove street, East orange. Mr. and Mrs Bayless will be at home Wednesday, Oct. 14.

—Senator Keys of Somerset county spent Sunday in this city in company with his estimable wife. They have been sojourning New Jersey's autumnal beauties on a driving tour. Their handsome team of horses, stylish carriage, and well-bred coachman, were a centre of attraction in front of Force's Hotel all the afternoon.

—The Hon. John H. Every of Bridgeton died at his home on Monday after an illness of long illness. He went to Europe last May in search of health, but after six weeks he returned to Bridgeton and had been there ever since. He was a great sufferer. His wife was with him when he died. Two months before his death he had his left leg cut off.

—Mrs. Elizabeth Reiman Berckman, mother of Emil Berckman of Steiner place, received considerable attention, Sunday, at the hands of the New York police. Mrs. Berckman is a very old lady, and had been there several days. He was a great sufferer. His wife was with him when he died. Two months before his death he had his left leg cut off.

—People who have occasion to use North avenue a great deal are getting impatient over the condition of the street. Work in front of Setting's half-finished new building is making Multinoma's drug store. It is a dark stumbling place at night. A gas lamp is suspended on the building several weeks.

—A young woman of the borough gave an exhibition of tree climbing in a small orchard on the corner of Grove street and Mercer avenue Friday. While reaching for a large and juicy apple she slipped, and in an instant was hanging by her skirts in a very indecorous fashion. When rescued she blushed violently.

—The base-ball nine of the Plainfield Bicycle Club has disbanded for the season. It played 22 strong games, and won 17 of 5. It played no team twice that it did not beat at least once. Next year it will be considerably strengthened. Its handsome set of uniforms will undergo repairs during the winter.

—The water mains are crawling through the borough in great shape, and that enlightened department of water supply some morning pretty soon and find itself possessed of an available means of putting out a fire—something which in the stillest nights of many the thoroughfare of a year ago would never have dreamed of.

—The West Front street block from Central avenue to New street has been greatly improved by the owners, Messrs. L. L. Manning, Jos. S. Cutler and John Abbott. The sidewalk has been lowered, the street curbed, the fence taken down, and the lawn in front of the houses have been terraced. The improvement has been so great that one would hardly recognize the locality. The property-owners deserve credit for their enterprise.

—Such roadways as have recently been repaired, given a good top dressing, and rolled hard and smooth, are now in fine condition. The work of improvement needs to be greatly extended. Fifth street near Richmond is in a shocking state. West Second street is also upon the pride of the town, is in wretched condition. Even Eighth street needs patching up. And Park avenue deserves all the care it is just now receiving, and a great deal more.

After the wedding trip the happy young people will reside in their new home at Williamsport, Pa.

BROKE, AND THEN WON.

Mr. Herbert's Colt Gives Plainfield's Speedy Trotters an Exciting Race.

An exciting race was trotted on the track of the Kenilworth Driving Park, Saturday. The contest-nts were J. W. Johnson's Colonel, Mr. Hayes's Andy, and Dr. F. C. Herbert's bay colt Reputation.

After the usual delays were given by the judges, Reputation broke and was thought to be out of the race, but, with a magnificent burst of speed, Colonel was driving him out ally get him in hand, and the colt trotted the mile in 2:39½, winning the heat. Andy was second.

The next heat was "called", Johnson's colt and Andy. The third was won by Reputation, with Colonel second. Time —2:39½, 2:42, 2:43.

M. Quinn, of Passaic trotted an exhibition mile in 2:33.

Democrats to Rest in Plainfield.

The Democratic League of Plainfield organization will be held Tuesday, Oct. 13, at 2 p. m., at Force's Hotel, this city.

An Enjoyable Time With the Masons.

The Freemasons had a fine time at Dunellen, Friday evening. Twenty-five of them they worked the Master Mason degree in the presence of the grand officers. The lodge was called to order by Grand Secretary Hall. Dr. Redway was present by special invitation, having long desired to visit Plainfield and the banner lodge of the state. After the ceremonies, a banquet was served.

Seaside Steamer Had a Bad Box.

The Independent troupe brought the Gazelle Bronco from Plainfield last "red hot" at Tuesday's parade. Indeed, they were so hot that before they had gone a block on the parade route the animal developed a hot box on the engine, and had to step awhile to cool off. They all had a big time, however, and the day off did them good.

Big Rise Saved His Head.

Harry Bush, an employe at the American Tube and Stamping, nearly lost his head in one of the ironing machines Tuesday. He got his forearm caught in the revolving cylinders, and only the fact that his forearm finger ring was caught in a bolt stopped the machinery, saved his hand from a terrible crushing, although one of his fingers was slightly bruised.

A Livery Stable in the Rich.

At last charles Hand has determined what to do with the Crescent Rink. Yesterday W. A. Woodruff secured for him from a Newark company the right to use some of money sufficient to carry out his plans of alteration. The front of the present building is to be converted into five stores, with flats above, and the rear part is to be transformed into a livery stable.

Special Music at Holy Cross.

A special musical service will be held at the church of the Holy Cross next Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock. The regular vested choir will be assisted by B. T. Barnes, leader of the First Baptist church choir, and by a Newark company like unto the Presbyterian church. These musical services will be given on the second Sunday in each month during the coming fall and winter.

The Cost and Expensive to Keep.

The amount of money expended by the Water Supply company when it shall have completed the introduction of its pipes into North Plainfield, will be about $15,000. It will be years, if ever, before the plant will pay, yet in view of the amount invested, it is not surprising that the company will also have spent nearly $15,000 for irrigation, and to get through, to prevent competition.

Junior Endeavorers Elect.

At the meeting of the Junior Endeavor Society of the Trinity Reformed church, held Thursday evening, the following officers were elected for the next six months: Pres. Vice-president—John H. VanWinkle; Second Vice-president—Sadie Hoagland; Recording Secretary—Mary Hall; Corresponding Secretary—Olive Wikoff; Treasurer—Miss Hannah Hoagland.

The standing committees were appointed, and the work of the society was received with every promise of a successful year.

Relief Association Election.

The Plainfield Relief Association met in annual business session Tuesday, and elected officers for the coming year as follows:

President—Mrs. VanNest Talmage.
Vice-president—Mrs. E. H. Goddard.
Secretary—Miss Adelaide Hall.
Treasurer—Mrs. H. P. Reynolds.

BOARD OF MANAGERS.

Mrs. D. J. Yerkes, Mrs. A. B. Rhees,
Mrs. J. E. Tracy, Mrs. P. Wykoff,
Mrs. Rowland Ott, Mrs. A. H. Drew,
Mrs. T. Ellis, Mrs. J. Hall,
Mrs. (Dr.) Carlisle, Mrs. Wm. H. Myers,
Mrs. Lucius Wyers, Mrs. H. B. Pond,
Mrs. Chas. McKibbin, Miss C. B. Webster,
Mrs. S. M. John.

Tennis in the Park.

The concluding sets of the tournament between the Racquette Club and the Washington Park Tennis Club were played Saturday afternoon on the courts of the latter. As in the previous games, the Washington Park men played all around their opponents, and had no difficulty in walking off with eight of the eleven sets contested. To the credit of the Racquette Club, however, be it said that they played better tennis than they did the week before. The scores:

E. McCutchen beat V. Baker, 6-2, 6-1.
A. VanDevanter beat G. Morrison, 6-2, 1-6, 6-4.
H. Morrison beat S. Townsend, 6-1, 6-2.
G. Seeley beat F. MacClymont, 6-2, 6-1.
VanDevanter and Cooley beat Baker and Patton, 6-2, 6-4.

THE proprietors of Sly's Cream Balm do not claim it to be a cure-all, but they do claim it to be a certain relief in the head and hay fever. It is easy in its action, and is not followed by sneezing. It gives relief at once.

A "RECORD" OF MISINFORMATION.

The Summit Paper Again Displays its Lack of Enlightenment.

A copy of the Summit Record—which seems to have developed lately into merely a record of rumor and misinformation—reaches THE PRESS with an article marked, from which is republished the following extract in relation to the recent examination before Justice Nash of the complaint of Miller, the Elkwood saloon keeper, against THE PRESS:

THE PRESS has announced that the charges upon which it was recently arraigned were unworthy of belief because the Prosecutor had written to the Justice of the Peace advising him to dismiss the complaint. Taking his cue from this announcement, the editor of the paper indulged in a lengthy harangue against the Prosecutor because of his alleged favoritism to the defendant in that case.

As a matter of fact, this charge has had not the slightest foundation. When the complaints against the editors of THE PRESS were first made, the defendants waived examination and were held to await the action of the Grand Jury, the papers in the case being filed with Prosecutor Marsh in the regular order of business. Subsequently these defendants determined that they would have a hearing before the Police Justice, and they appeared before committing magistrate, Justice V. W. Nash, to apply to have the complaints dismissed and papers in the case. This was done, and at the same time Justice Nash requested the Prosecutor to withdraw from the case, as he was interested in the outcome of the case.

The Prosecutor was the only expression of the opinion of the Prosecutor in the case, and no effort has been made to charge that he had recommended a dismissal of the complaint.

The above is more or less well enough so far as it goes, except the opening sentence. That is false. THE PRESS never complained that the Prosecutor had written to the Justice of the Peace directing him to dismiss the complaint. What THE PRESS said was:

Although there was not a particle of evidence offered that the article was malicious, and not a particle of evidence that it damaged the prosecutor in the slightest degree, the Prosecutor wrote to the justice before the case was called, and Justice Nash declined to sit in the case. And accordingly the case was dismissed when Mr Nash his written opinion that it was a "simple case" that the Justice could settle himself.

Another reference to the letter of the Prosecutor to the Justice given above, must convince even the stolid Record man that THE PRESS said nothing but the truth. According to the Record's copy of the Prosecutor's letter, the latter wrote:

"I cannot see why my influence is needed in so simple a case as this." And according to the file of THE PRESS, it merely said "The Prosecutor had already given his opinion in written opinion that it was a 'simple case.'"

FIRE HYDRANTS IN THE BOROUGH.

The Difficulties Between Council and Company Not Yet Adjusted.

(From THE DAILY PRESS of Oct. 3.)

North Plainfield has not yet settled the fire-hydrant question. At last night's meeting of the Borough Council, councilor Charles A. Reed reported that for very good reasons the proposed contract had not been drawn as directed.

The proposition of the Water Supply Company—he said was to furnish water for fire protection at $15 per hydrant, provided 5 hydrants to each mile were laid in a body, nearly lost the heat in one of the ironing machines Tuesday. He got his forearm caught in the revolving cylinders, and only the fact that his forearm finger ring was caught in a bolt stopped the machinery, saved his hand from a terrible crushing, although one of his fingers was slightly bruised.

The company would agree to furnish fewer hydrants to the mile, but would increase the rate. They thought they ought to get about $1,000 a year from the borough for fire protection.

Councilman Buckie said that as he understood it the company were willing to execute a contract by which the borough should take 10 hydrants to the mile from the start, but the terms of which should arrange that no payment should be exacted except for 5 to the mile till July 1, 1893.

Counselor Reed said that such was the case.

Mr. Buckie insisted that there was no cheaper way of laying pipes than by trenches. The borough had to be protected, and if such a contract as the one proposed were adopted appropriations to the amount of $2,000 would have to be made every year for irrigation, to get through, to prevent competition.

Councilman Needham inquired if as the company kept on laying pipe the council were to be compelled to take 10 hydrants to the mile additional mile beyond the seven already prepared.

Mr. Buckie held that the line would not be run through vacant lots just for the sake of trying to squeeze more money out of the borough. The seven miles planned for covered the settled district thoroughly.

So far as Mantle City is concerned—Mr. Buckie continued—Nature provided generously for her. There's water all around, and other flooding the city was a fire protection water couldn't help be free.

Mr. Sebring wanted the mains extended to Mantle City. The Rev. Mr. Judd—is where we have most of our fires.

Mr. Buckie admitted that that delectable region needed all the fire protection the borough could give it, but held that as it was a very sparsely district its people could not expect so good a service as the built-up portion. He said the company men thought that because they paid a few dollars taxes they ought to get all improvements in the outskirts of a place.

The whole matter was referred back to the special water committee for further consideration.

A Director Comes to Grief.

While riding his bicycle, Saturday, the twelve-year-old son of Mr. Wyckoff, of Dunellen, met with a painful accident.

He struck a tree while running at a rapid speed, and was thrown backward from the wheel. His clothing caught in the machine, then tore through his garments and terribly lacerated his flesh. Dr. Gaston was immediately telegraphed for, and soon arrived and dressed the wounds.

A Borough Man's Gift to His Native Town.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Q. Dolliver, of Manning avenue, North Plainfield, attended an entertainment and flag-pole raising at the school-house near their home on Boyntonfield, Somerset county, Saturday afternoon.

There were recitations, singing, and addresses delivered. The flag-pole was a gift from Mr. Dolliver as a token of the love and respect which he has for the old neighborhood. The flag was given by Ivanhoe Council, No. 73, Jr. O. U. A. M. of Somerville.

When baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

FORMING A BASE-BALL LEAGUE.

Plainfield Secures Set Representation in the Preliminary Meeting.

Messrs. Lee and Bennett, of Somerville, Cuding and Peek of Westfield, and Ogden and Conn of Elizabeth, met at the rooms of the Elizabeth Athletic club in Elizabeth, last night, and took the preliminary steps for the formation of a base-ball league to contest the championship of Central New Jersey, in 1892.

Plainfield had been notified of the meeting and invited to send representatives, but there was no one present from this city. Plainfield will be in it, however, and will contest for the championship. The plan discussed at that night's meeting that met with general approval, was that each team should play a series of six games with each other team. But that would make a total of 36 games if there were four teams in the league, and necessitate the playing of both Wednesday and Saturday games every week for five months. There will be another meeting, however, on Oct. 23, when, it is expected, Plainfield's representatives will be present and the project may take some more definite shape.

NOW WANTS HIS CLAIM BACK.

He Assigned a $12,000 Interest for a $1,450 Loan, and is Sorry for It.

Stephen M. Chester, of No. 2,310 Third avenue, New York, has sued John and Charles H. Moore, of Plainfield, for fifteen-thousandths of a dollar interest in the Jumel estate. The suit is in the United States District Court. Chester says that the Moores gave him a mortgage on a tract of land for a loan of $650, and that in some mysterious manner they have since kept it from him.

Bowdoin Clarke & Culver are counsel for the Moores. Mr. Clarke showed a reporter original documents, which prove that the Moores advanced $650 to Chester, and that he has still claim against them. Then they gave him $800 more and took an assignment of the Jumel claim. This, they thought, terminated the transactions.

The Moores invested their money in the claim as a "flyer". When the Court of Appeals decided that Chester's claim of $15,000 claim was valid the Moores were compelled to pay $5,200 of liens before they could get possession of the money. This with the city they took of getting nothing at all for their investment, leads them to believe that Mr Chester made a pretty good bargain.

"But"—said Lawyer Clarke—"Mr. Chester reports having sold his claim, now that at the risk is ended. He want's to regain possession of his property after have sold it."

OBITUARY.

Martha C. Brown

At the residence of her father, William L. Small, 22 Crane place, Tuesday, a. m., there passed away Martha C., wife of George F. Brown, after a long and painful illness.

The departed was truly a noble woman, one of God's jewels. Her life was one of much unselfsweetness and purity. Her death was peace.

Sunday evening she called all the family to her bedside and with face radiant with joy told them that she was about to enter the Golden Gates. She bade them all a heartfelt good-bye, and whispered a message of love and holy counsel for each. She had no fear whatever of death, as she died earthly impressed—standing as she did, her features illumined with celestial happiness, on the brink of Paradise—were good seed sown for the Saviour.

The said came at 5:25 Tuesday, a.m. and the bereaved family and their friends were left to meditate on the sad death and beautiful lesson that the death of a good woman—the flight of a Christian soul—always brings.

Mrs. Brown's husband had sacrificed everything in his efforts to restore his loved one to health. He sold out his business, parted with his beautiful home, and took his wife to California, where he spent a year in trying the benefits and remedies of that climate. Finally, however, he gave up hope and came back to Plainfield to die. Her sufferings of late were excruciating, but now she is at rest forevermore. The funeral will be held from the house at half-past 2, at Mr. Smalley's residence.

John Blunt Bacon.

John Blunt Bacon died at his residence, Sycamore avenue, Thursday, of heart failure, at the age of 41. He had been a half-or-from a complication of diseases for thirteen years, and during that time traveled to nearly every part of the globe in search of health. Mr. Bacon came to this city about seven years ago, and since he had invested considerably in local real estate, and had identified himself with the interests of the borough. He is by three survives him. The funeral took place at Troy, N. Y., Monday.

Warren R. Clark.

Warren R. Clark died suddenly at his home at Piscataway on Friday, of heart disease. He was well-known in Plainfield, having lived in this neighborhood 14 years. His age was 58. His wife survives him.

He had been feeling ill of late, and this morning almost fainted while dressing. His wife summoned a neighbor, and efforts were made to revive him, but he died in a few minutes.

Opening of the New Baptist Chapel.

The young people of the Sunday school of the First Baptist church was opened Sunday afternoon. Dr. Yerkes spoke, congratulated the young people on what they had accomplished, urged them to yet greater efforts. B. T. Barnes sang a solo. There was a large attendance, and everybody was happy.

Bills, Bills, Bills.

The Plainfield Common Council still finds its principal occupation indefinitely than to collect taxes. Monday night the amount of bills ordered paid for the month was $6,260. To meet them it had to authorize the issuance of $2,000 and the transfer of $750 from the general fund to the fire department fund. The note of $2,000 falling due Oct. 9 was ordered renewed for 90 days.

Relief Officers.

The annual election of officers for the Y. P. S. C. E. of Trinity Reformed church, resulted Monday evening as follows:

President—Miss E. C. Benedict.
First Vice-president—H. J. Martin.
Second Vice-president—W. F. Oliver.
Recording Secretary—C. D. Wansley.
Corresponding Secretary—Miss Mabel Woodruff.
Treasurer—Miss Fannie Schomp.

Citizen's Bible Meet On.

At last action has been taken to remove those ugly advertising bills which ex-policeman Carey has nailed fast to the shade trees all over town. At the meeting of the City Commissioners Monday evening councilman Ackerman introduced an ordinance prohibiting all such defacement of trees, and prescribing a fine of $10 for each offense. The ordinance was unanimously passed on its first and second readings and ordered engrossed and advertised preparatory to final adoption.

Hotel Glenlaun.

I am about to the affairs of Dr. Boone's Dyspepsia Pills and only using them myself, but having given them to several of my friends, I am informed by them that they relatively benefited by them. For cases of Dyspepsia and Torpid Liver, they are unequaled. Invaluable.

FRUITS, OF THE HARVEST.

Park Avenue Baptists Conduct a Beautiful Service of Song.

(Contributed.)

In the old days, when the Jews were the chosen people of God, they were accustomed to gather together at the close of the harvest for the Feast of Tabernacles, to thank God for His bounty and goodness. Not in commemoration of that custom, but with a like sense of God's providence and blessing, the people of the Park Avenue Baptist church generally gathered Sunday night to thank the Giver of all good for the bountiful harvests of the year. The church was most tastefully decorated with fruits of the harvest. Around the platform, like great horns of plenty, were baskets showing corn, tomatoes, turnips, and potatoes. In front of the pulpit leaned two twin pumpkins, flanked on either hand by purple egg-plants. Heads of cabbage, Spanish onions, mammoth beets, ripe peaches, and bunches of celery, were showing over and under and between the baskets. Nothing was out of place, and all made a beautiful picture. Tall cornstalks with yellow ears half husked, stems of lima beans, and sheaves of golden wheat, made a background, while the organ, back of the choir and the pulpit, 03 the left of the pulpit hung branches of chestnuts. Cornstalks and wild flowers made a novel trimming for the organ loft, and fruits and wild flowers crowned the general beauty, while down in front, on the lower platform stood a line of graceful palms and potted plants. The service began, and as the sweet-toned organ, but every heart, prompted them as a congregation to rise and sing "Praise God from whom all blessings flow". The service was a beautiful one. The two anthems by the choir, under their new leader, Mr. Roe, were well rendered. Mrs. Tyler, who came from Paterson, to be at this service, sang two solos. Her voice was sweet and clear especially in the upper notes, and she was much touched as she sang the beautiful verses of "Nearer My God to Thee". One of the most beautiful features of the whole programme, "It shall the harvest be!" Miss Runyon, who took the solo part, sang with all her heart, and the congregation were quite moved by her voice in the choir that they forgot to join in the chorus. The pastor talked for fifteen minutes on thoughts suggested by the harvest. First, the natural, beautiful harvest. Never had this land known a year of such plenty. God had greatly blessed our land, and to Him we ought to return "thanks". Then there are also an abundant that every poor man ought to be the richer for them, richer because it should take from enough out of the many purse to buy food. When God has made food so plentiful, shame to the man who would for his own private gain make the price of breadstuffs unnecessarily dear. There are harvests moral and harvests spiritual,—he continued—and in order to reap bountifully in the latter we must now bountifully. Then would have part in the great harvest-home song service at the end of the world, we must have Christ for our leader, for He is the lead that greatest and gladdest of all services. "Sing God grant—he said in conclusion—that you and I may have a glad voice in the song in the redeemed shall sing—The song of Moses and the Lamb."

Died at the Asylum.

Julia Colt, a colored woman who was sent to Morris Plains from this city some time ago, died at the asylum Friday morning. The body was put in charge of A. M. Bourjaw & Son, who interred the remains in the Methodist cemetery Monday.

Sister's Rest.

On the east side of Park avenue from Fourth to Seventh street, are eight houses six of which are the home of physicians, one the home of a dentist, while the other is empty. However, Dr. Endicott has just bought the latter and will soon occupy it.

The three houses built at present number four of Sister's Rest, as follows: Dr. M. J. Long, Dr. J. T. Fritts, Dr. Edward Redmore, Dr. J. A. Allis. Dr. Connerys Final, Dr. J. S. Davis, Dr. W. E. Stelle, Dr. G. W. Endicott.

Their Fame Has Spread to the Metropolis. From The Sunday.

The Four Colored Clowns, Plainfield's clever amateur comedy quartet, composed of George Taggart, Howard, Will and Tiffany Spencer, who did such capital work last year in George Tagart's farce comedies, "At Howling Squosse" and "Romeo and Juliet", have two new pieces in rehearsal for early production and promise another great success for the holidays. Their work is full of originality and sparkle, and is characterized by a finish that is almost professional. The appearance of this new venture is a foregone conclusion.

A Target for Neither.

The suit of Mrs. Janet Bird against the New Jersey Postal Telegraph Company was tried before Justice Nodyne Friday afternoon. Mrs. Bird, who lives in the mountains, sold to W. S. Slifer, when he was local manager for the company, a large number of wires for poles. Slifer arranged to get poles from Mr. Bird, and space for the poles. The company paid Slifer $50 apiece, but he never paid Mrs. Bird. Hence her suit. The company's defense was that Slifer was authorized to act theirs. He had contracted to build the line, and was not acting as their agent in the matter. Goldsmith & Bird appeared for Mrs. Bird, and Craig & Marsh for the company. The jury went out shortly after 5, and at 10:45 stood 6 to 6 and were discharged disagreeing.

Sister Societies Enjoyed the Anniversary.

A very pleasant welcome awaited the new organization of the Y. P. S. C. E. at the celebration of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, Thursday night. The occasion was the second anniversary of the society. Delegates were present from Dunellen and New Market, and the young people's societies of the Christian Reformed churches were present in a body.

The exercises were begun at 8 o'clock. The four hundred young people joined heartily in singing "Blest be the tie that binds". Rev. Miss Allen B. Spangenberg, president of the Park Avenue society, made the opening greeting. In a few pleasant words, to the visitors. This pastor, the Rev. Asa Reed Dolin, read a passage of Scripture and led in prayer. Then came the choir sang the anthem "Hark, Hark, my Soul". The report of the secretary, Miss Florence G. Hasbins, was read, showing a steady and beautiful growth for the society. After the singing of the hymn "Onward, Christian Soldiers" an earnest and interesting address was delivered by Rev. Dr. Twichank, district secretary of Kings county, Brooklyn. He gave sound counsel to the young, workers of this association, and was listened to with marked attention. The benediction followed, the singing of "Blest Be The Tie That Binds". Then came a reception in the lecture room, where all were hospitably entertained. It was a very happy evening for the young people.

—The delegates from this city to the national meeting of the Unitarian church council, in session at Saratoga, speak with admiration of the substitution of water for wine at the communion service conducted by the Rev. Elyeet Everett Hale. They think it a custom that is to be recommended in the interest of temperance.

BROKE HIS BROTHER'S JAW.

One Decided the Other's Superstition, and Then They Fought.

Dominick Duffy and Cormick Caufield, brothers-in-law, got in a fight near the corner of Third and New streets, Saturday night, and as a result Duffy's jaw was broken in two places and he has to swallow his food through a tube. The trouble arose over the existence of a ghost that is said to promenade Boulevard. One said he had seen it; the other laughed at him and said ghosts didn't exist. Then the term "liar" was used, and they clinched. No records were kept made, but the police are investigating.

HE WAS FROM WESTFIELD.

So He Could Hardly Be Expected to Know that the War Was Over.

Moraller, the jeweler, of West Second street, reported to the police Sunday that he had been swindled out of $50 by a passer of Confederate money.

He said that a stranger had visited his place, Saturday night, bought a $12 watch, tendered a $100 bill, received $38 in good United States money in change, and vanished. Then Moraller found that the bill was a Confederate one.

The police are disposed that the stranger was a greenhorn named Pahs, who lives at Westfield. He has been in this country just eight months, and the police think he was somewhat green to offer.

The fact is you buy what you like the best and that is necessary in that there be merit in the goods offered. Your appreciation is sure to follow.

Of course prices must be right. Profit is the left hand of business and the merchant who can't get his eye beyond profit isn't likely to be "in it" long.

We are now making a great deal of noise these days, but we are doing the business all the same. Dr. Soft word, the tender, the kind, the truthful—these are the things that help in life's fight with all—so say the wise. If you are dissatisfied, on making a call on us, we want to hear from you. "Full of Sound and Fury, Signifying Nothing"

This quotation aptly describes the noise and excitement which characterizes the business announcements of many clothing dealers. To our mind the real truthful statement is that which tells of the goods and prices plainly and in few words. Then if you are dissatisfied, on inspection of goods, we want you to bring them back the goods guaranteed and receive your money.

IN BLACK AND CRIMSON.

One of the Most Striking of Autumn Dress Vagaries.

Some of the Most Interesting Things About the Early Winter Millinery—A Grape Tea. What the Large Importing Houses Are Opening.

As I came down Broadway this morning I found myself all at once within the aura of a warm, sweet, heavy perfume. It did not come from the pinks and violets that are in the florists' window, nor from the tall spikes of orange and flame-colored gladiolus, but as I took step after step it grew warmer and sweeter and heavier until, at the corner of Twenty-sixth street I saw upself close upon a hedge of creamy-white tuberoses forcing in a street flower-seller's stand.

Reaching up to the tuberoses was a woman in black, and as I saw her in profile she looked like a big, round and creamy white of compiedesh, like the flowers. I took her for a young widow, and was struck at once with the scarcity of the tuberoses starred, but as she turned full to meet me I confronted the most broad and perhaps the most interesting of our autumn dress peculiarities. A whiff of wind turned back the flare of her sunset-like black dress and I noted it was lined with stripes of scarlet and orange silk, and a broad scarf ruffle of scarlet and orange crepe de chine black bodice from the left shoulder, passing under the right arm. She was like a flame in the midst of the flowers, or a stalk of carnival flowers, leaning over a stark pool. Her black bonnet was of a low crown and sailor shape, and, showing only when you faced its wearer directly in front was a knot of scarlet and orange silk hidden in a black rosette, an aigret and seven or eight gilt-eyed scarlet and tortoise-shell pins was the demure detail of the dress and represented the most striking departure in the way of vagaries that I have seen. If she had gone her way wearing tuberoses I should have considered it a fine woman sense of the proprieties of things, but she sent the fragrance, sensuous beauties in a black dress and a black veil with some sprig of orange-colored tassel flowers, scarlessa but vivid as a sunset, behind her left ear.

The milliners contagion is more forward than that of the dressmakers. There is sympathetic little in view yet that can be classed as winter wear, but the autumn hat is sufficiently profuse in its characteristics to give the streets a different look from any they have ever worn. It is really particularly striking, for all the various human immensity will contrive

All two-gray velvet coats are counted ones, fashion's chief favorites, and one of the most attractive costumes exhibited was a 2 gray cassimere dress, dress with such a coat lined with gray astrah shot with rose color. A gray Gainsborough hat to accompany was covered with gray plumes tipped with rose. When I write again I shall have more to say in detail about the displays at the first of the fall openings.

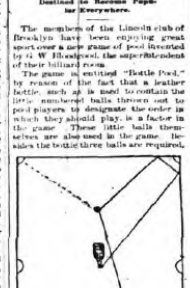
NEW GAME OF POOL.

A Brooklyn Man Invents a Mirth-Making Game.

It Affords Opportunities for Many Remarkable Exhibition Shots and Is Destined to Become Popular Everywhere.

The members of the Lincoln club of Brooklyn have been enjoying great fun during the past week with a new game originated by W. W. Blandpeel, the superintendent of their billiard room.

The game is entitled "Bottle Pool," by reason of the fact that a leather bottle, such as is used to contain the pool money, is placed over one of the pool players to designate the order in which they should play, is a factor in the game. These bottles themselves are also used in the game.



BOTTLE STANDING NEAR DOWN.

Besides the bottle three balls are required, namely, number one and number two pool balls and a cue ball.

The bottle is placed on the center of the table with the neck down. The one ball is placed on the light red spot, and the number two ball on the dark red spot. The order of playing is decided by batting at the billiards from three are only two players, each tossing out the numbered balls as in pool. After this has been done all the numbered balls are again passed around. Each player retains the one he has received, the number of which is known only to himself.

Thirty-one points constitute the game and scoring is accomplished in the following manner: By carroming on the two balls, without the cue ball striking the bottle either by carroming on it with the cue ball or touching it with the object ball, 5 points are scored, pocketing the No. 1 ball counts one, pocketing the No. 2 ball counts two, knocking down the bottle by carroming on it or striking it with the object ball counts five; turning the bottle completely over on its side counts a game at any stage of the play. With the exception of the latter stroke, which is rather unusual, the points made in the game must be added to the number on the small ball held by the player. Thus, if the ball held by a player be numbered 10 the player must gain 21 points before calling a game, and as the first-to-attain 31 points in this manner wins the game. Should a player get over 31 points in the manner he must begin all over again, but is allowed the option of drawing another number or keeping the one he originally drew, but one or the other must be returned.

When a player makes game he who is worst off for points loses the game. The number held by a player cannot be counted unless he has made other points to be added to it, and, if not, is credited with no points. A player owing a point is obviously still worse off.

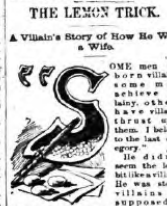
When a player is bored he may declare it; if he does not he is credited with no points at the end of the game. When the one ball is pocketed it is a scratch, and the player who makes it loses his number and the points of both the other balls are within the string when this occurs the cue ball is spotted, and the next player takes a full swing.

The bottle, when knocked down, is spotted if possible where it comes to rest, upon the table, should it rest within an inch of the rail it is spotted in the center of the table, and if it rests on the Old Man of the Sea. No more than one can be spotted in this manner. If it is knocked off the table the player loses his inning, but counts what he made before knocking it off, and the bottle is spotted as usual. If it falls in a pocket it is counted as off the table. For footing on the bottle the player loses his turn, forfeits one point, and the next player continues. The player making thirty-one points must proclaim it before the next stroke is made. If he fails to do he cannot proclaim it until the rotation of play again comes round to him, but if in the meanwhile another player makes the number and proclaims it properly he is entitled to the game.

The opening shot is shown in the accompanying diagram. The first shot is made from within the string at the head of the table. This is the original method of starting the game, but some members of the club have found it preferable to spot the No. 1 ball near the further cushion, as in four-ball billiards. The majority, however, prefer the method shown in the diagram. The object of the shot is to pocket the No. 2 ball, take two cushions, and come back on the bottle. Expert players sometimes bar straight carroms in order to make the game more difficult. It can also be played under the rules of continuous pool, where they do not conflict with the rules of "Bottle Pool."

THE LEMON TRICK.

A Villain's Story of How He Won a Wife.



SOME men are born villains, some men achieve villainy, others have villainy thrust upon them. I belong to the last category."

He didn't look a bit like a villain. He was stout; villains are supposed to have a lean and hungry look. And at that moment Bobby, his youngest little boy, presented him with a sticky pear-drop, which he ate. Who ever heard of a villain eating pear-drops? We were next-door neighbors; we were both fond of gardening, and there was a good deal of innocent rivalry between us. He was something in the city, and I was. We always went down by the same train, generally in the same carriage, and we were both first-class season ticket holders, which in itself was a guaranty of respectability. Still, he said he was a villain.

"Good gracious, Wright!" cried I, "I hope he isn't going to confide in me."

"Yes," he said; "I obtained my wife by a process of downright villainy. I should like to tell you about it."

I was sitting in this villain's garden or villain's garden—and smoking one of this villain's cigars (which wasn't at all villainous), and Bobby, aged three, had retired. We were alone, and I was in for it. I crossed my arms upon my chest, as I have seen persons do in my position upon the stage. "Go on," I said, with a melancholy smile; "your story interests me much."

"You are probably not aware that my wife is a Spaniard, is the daughter of an eminent flautist."

"I beg your pardon?" I said.

"Flautist," he repeated—"flute-player, you know." The fellow didn't look a bit ashamed at the fact of the mother of his children being the daughter of a professional musician. Now, my wife's father was an Indigo broker, and there is something very respectable about indigo.

"Yes," he continued, "my father-in-law was the celebrated Tremolo. You've heard of Tremolo—everybody's heard of Tremolo. Tremolo, sir," he added, proudly, "was without a rival until Triller came upon the scene, and he killed Triller in three days. My father-in-law, sir, measured fifty-two inches round the chest; he caused special music to be written for him which that puny wretch Triller attempted to render. You have heard the fable of the frog and the bull. Triller was just the frog, and he burst, and my father-in-law, the great Tremolo, went to his funeral. I was present, with a little distance in the suburbs. I fell violently in love with her, and I wasn't a bit sorry when I was told that she was the daughter of Tremolo, the flautist. I was only a clerk in the city then, and was earning six hundred pounds a year at that time, my dear fellow, and I had saved a little money. Now, on earth, shouldn't I marry Tremolo's daughter? I didn't know that I was a Philistine, you see! Tremolo divided the world into two classes—professional people and Philistines. Now the lady at whose house I had met my future, though she knew Miss Tremolo well enough to ask her to her little dances, was either unwilling or unable to give me a formal introduction to the young lady's papa, but I was not to be balked. 'I'll take lessons,' I said to myself, 'and get to know him that way.' So I bought a flute, and I locked boldly at Signor Tremolo's door and demanded an audience. He was awfully civil, and he was proud to take pupils. When I told him that I wanted to have some lessons, 'I shall be delighted, young gentleman,' he said; 'may I ask where you have been working at the instrument?'

Cautionary Item.

"Certainly, my daughter."

SIGNOR TREMOLO SPRANG TO HIS FEET.

"To tell the truth, Sig Tremolo,' I answered, airily, learning the flute is just a little out of mine. I only tried once, and then I couldn't get it to make a noise.'

"Sir, my life had I seen a man get into such an awful rage all at once. Sig Tremolo sprang to his feet and turned purple. 'You, sir,' he snapped, Philistine, dog, beast, toad-pig!' he shrieked, and then he clutched at his collar as though he were going to pull it off, and he began to stamp. I was quite astonished, and I said so. 'Astonished!' he cried; 'you astonished! Get out of my place, you insolent rascal!'

"I thought it best to make a clean breast of it then. 'I beg your pardon, Sig Tremolo,' I said; 'I beg that you will excuse me. I love your daughter to distraction, and I thought that I asked you to give me were a mere pretext,' but that only made him worse.

"'You—you!' he cried, in an awful voice, as he flung the door wide open; 'you! You wouldn't even give me time to tell him about your big brandied pear.

"For three months I was perfectly miserable; I had no opportunity of meeting Carlotta Tremolo, and how on earth was I to get over her father's inseparable objection? How was it to cease to be a Philistine? It is difficult to become a professional flautist if you are eight-and-twenty; and I could not very well black my face and turn nigger minstrel.

"I ran rather fond of dry reading; I like a book which is, so to say, rammed to the groaning point with knowledge. Hegel's Physiology' one day—the section on mental impressions. This was what I read: 'The first sensations of a fœtus in the cavity of full often make the mouth twitch involuntarily. This peculiarity is sometimes so developed in the sanguineous degree at the sight of a lemon as to cause convulsions. These clonic phenomenon,' etc. The idea flashed into my mind in an instant. I became a designing villain in the twinkling of an eye. 'I will go to see Signor Tremolo this evening,' I said to myself, 'and I will bring a lemon in the Old Man of the Sea. No more shall I be a Philistine, but I will be a man to be hailed for admission in the usual manner.

"I paid twenty-one shillings for a front-row seat. I took care that my victim should perceive me from the very first. I went through the various musical torments that are only appreciated by the elect, then came the selection from 'Il Flauto Magico.' Signor Tremolo stepped out to the very front of the orchestra within the string at the head of the table. This is the original method of starting the game, but some members of the club have found it preferable to spot the No. 1 ball near the further cushion, as in four-ball billiards. A PECULIAR SERVICE.

The Organization Known as the Royal Irish Constabulary.

A Force of Picked Men Consisting of Officers and Constables—Not All Ranks—Most of Them Are Irish and Roman Catholics.

The Royal Irish constabulary now consists of some 13,000 men of all ranks, under the command of an inspector general, Sir Andrew Reed, who is placed in direct communication with the executive. The inspector general is assisted at headquarters by a deputy inspector general, an assistant inspector general and a civil service staff. A county inspector is placed in charge of each county, except Galway and Tipperary, which are divided into ridings. Counties or ridings are divided into districts varying from three to ten, according to size, each of which is in charge of a district inspector, who is the commanding officer of the county constabulary. To each district headquarters a head constable is attached, who, in the absence of the district inspector, acts for him, and is the responsible officer. Belfast is under control of a special officer styled "the commissioner of police," who has a number of district inspectors under his command. Other important cities and towns have also special arrangements.

In addition to these there is a special crime or detective department, for which purpose the country is divided into five districts, each under special officers.

The constabulary man's life is a very varied one, according to the part of the country he is stationed in. Some of the barracks, in which four or more men are lodged, are in towns and prosperous districts; others are situated in wild and scarcely-inhabited localities, where even the ordinary necessaries of life are obtained with difficulty. In remote disturbed districts where outrages have occurred or are apprehended, portable iron huts, specially made for the purpose, are often erected, and a few police quartered there till the disturbance ceases. It should be mentioned that the constabulary are now armed with the Snider carbine and bayonet, and under special circumstances with revolvers. When on ordinary town duty, however, they are equipped only with batons.

There is a mounted force of about 300 men, who are distributed principally through the towns. They are a smart, well-equipped body, and are available for serious disturbances in any part of the country.

In 1839 a depot was formed in Dublin with a reserve force of about 300 men, consisting of both cavalry and infantry, and a number of officers and men under instruction. The depot is the school of instruction for police, and is established in a handsome and spacious barrack in the Phœnix park. The chief officer is the officer commanding the depot, and his assistant inspector general of the force.

The pay of a constable, says London Black and White, ranges from 1s 6d to 2s 6d; that of a sergeant from 4s 7d to 6s 2d, and a head constable from £87 to £104. An army officer starts at about £125, and the higher appointments range from £1,000 upward. The promotion of officers are appointed by selection from the ranks. The pension is £70 after twenty years' service, on a sliding scale, viz., two-thirds of pay after forty years' service. Pensions are also granted for wounds received.

With such liberal emoluments as these it may be easily imagined that there is always a large and numerous number of applications to join the force of late years, and in consequence the standard of education is gradually becoming more and more strong. It is recruited almost exclusively by Irishmen, about three-fourths of whom are Roman Catholics. Appointments in the officers' ranks are made by nomination of the Irish government for the first instance, the candidates being then subject to a competitive examination by the civil service commissioners.

The force possesses a fine band stationed at the depot, which is acknowledged to be one of the first in the three kingdoms, and has on special occasions been invited to perform at public entertainments outside Ireland.

He Forgot His Social Status.

An amateur theatrical performances recently for some natives near Richard, Ill. was given at the residence of Judge Poteety. The performers were not very well drilled, and Con De Bulk, instead of taking a position in the middle of the stage, stood off to one side. The Cretinvonian queen, in the scene when married by the stage manager saying in a loud voice, "Now you are one."

The Advent of a Reformer.

"Walter, will you please bring me a hammer?"

The loud, imperious voice rang sharply through the gilded dining hall of the banished count, and looked it an astonishment. The rattle of knives, forks and spoons ceased, and the consternation did not die away. Even the appetizing odors that hung over the bountiful repast seemed to lose their power on the senses, and a score of petrified waiters stood holding in their petrified hands petrified tongs containing petrified roasts, steaks, sandwiches, vegetables, fruits and pastry.

"A hammer, if you please, waiter," again rang out the imperious voice.

"Wh-what do you want of a hammer?" the waiter at last managed to articulate, finding his tongue at last.

"I want it," exclaimed the guest, with emphasis sometimes written in every wrinkle of his rugged face, "to break up this powdered sugar."—Chicago Tribune.

AN APPEAL TO BURNS.

It Should Move the Scottish Bard to Grant Redress.

A Plaint on Behalf of the Sufferers from the Disturbing of His Rural Peace and Quiet in Rhyme by a Bobolink Poet.

From Puck.

DEAR ROBBIE BURNS:
You wished in sensibly flowing verse,
That "some kind power the gift gie us,"
To see ourselves as others see us.
Ah! had you humbly prayed for this!
Our gives to discomfort and bliss.
"Help us to hear our pinions fall,"
And "see ourselves as lithers see us."
The meeting man your name has crossed
Who "wad the giftie gie us" to possess
(the explanation is superfluous).
For spent in power rube with reward
And you were taken at your word,
And we see without seeing how
How we appear to others' eyes.
But, Robbie Burns, in this day and time
It brings instead, much misery.

High-grown bore, that is your day,
Prompt up and down this blest highway,

ONE OF "THE MALCONTENTS."

Your gentleman—aye Christian, too—
Compared to this malcontent
That now infest each lane and street,
Who hem us in with walks and talk,
Those simply asked for watch or purse;
Those are for nothing, which I say,
Than satisfied forth with every day
Those are armed with pistol and gun
They "press a button," that is all,
But more escape than "gentle small,
And whether we're prepared or not
We're "sent to meet our maker."

I have a portrait—old, 'tis true!
But fine—and Robert, 'tis of you,

Genteel, attractive countenance,
In high color, and
In your dress.
That what may be
Of to be blessed—
But you are
Your very best.
Supreme, instead
Of your every day
Self.
Had sought you at Your very
And "found" you in behaviour.
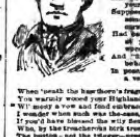
In poem, to shame
A very coarse.

When "neath the bare thorn's fragrant shade,
You warmly wooed your Highland maid,
Why! sweet it was and fine indeed,
I wonder when such was the case,
If you'd have written other word,
Who, by the treacherous birk tree screened,
The lassie's lips to kisses granted
Just as you clasped her to your breast?

Purchasers you wished to stylp stp
A friendly social glass,
Had scarcely touched the beaker's rim—
Ere quite the fashion—"Drink or else!"
And something long must day displays
Was "Bumper Toasts."

"THE BOTTOM—NOT THE THROAT—PERHAPS."

Now if your Nancy's face you limit,
Prose said we how you would love her
If you had heard that fatal man,
As you whimpered on her lap.



And she—The Jade—about to give
A well-deserved and regulated
Would you have said, then, part and pale
"A many's a man for all of that!"
For your locks you would have torn,
And groaned: "Ah! man was made to mourn."

Of this and more we've had to bear,
We turn to you in our despair,
And beg you, without meaning, pray
To redo to take their gift away,
And give us back those halcyon days,
When we were not a nuisance unto Without a thought, or fear, that we Should get boosted—as indeed we are.

More grievances I could disclose—
For these are not one-half the woes
That Bobby Burns brought to mean!
But this is quite enough, I ken,
To show my plight, and why to you
Before we lose for; then, adieu,
Until we meet to have an Ode Yours,
VICTIM OF THE CAMERA CRAZE.

The Man-Faced Crab.
One of the most singular-looking creatures that ever walked the earth or "swam the waters under the earth" is the world-famous man-faced crab of Japan. Its body is hardly an inch in length, and from the "chin" of the animal, looking for all the world like a colonel's forked beard. These man-faced crabs fairly swarm in the inland seas of Japan.

Not That Kind of Pressure.
"Your daughter refuses to be my wife, Mrs. Jones."

THE MAN WHO NEVER WAS.

Why the Ghost of Thomas J. McSwiggan Labored in Vain.

Howard Fielding Makes Public a Strange and Ingenuously Mysterious Conversation Between a Spook and a Night Clerk in a Drug Store.

[COPYRIGHT, 1891.]

The writer of the letter which is here-with given on the public requested me to send it to the Society for Psychical Research. In organization formed in Boston for the purpose of investigating things which do not exist. Without further apology I present the weird and somber narrative:

THE MAN WHO NEVER WAS.

I am a night clerk in a New York drug store and, like many other matters which, in a lesser degree, prey upon my conscience. But let that pass; it is never too late to repent.

My employers are exceptionally fortunate in the location of their establishment. All but six of the saloons in the block are out of favor with the police, and close promptly at one o'clock. From that hour until daylight our business is usually good and I am seldom troubled with ennui. But on the night of which I write trade was bad. A cold, drear wind howled along the street, tearing the flaky upper crust of ash-barrels and chunks of frozen snow as from the excavation on Broadway.

About two o'clock I could half a pint of laudanum to a woman in a calico dress who said she was unable to go to sleep. Her excited demeanor and the dark circles under her eyes left no doubt that she was truly much in need of rest and would get a great deal of it very soon. Then, as there were no customers in the back room, I tilted a chair against the counter near the stove and was in a dose almost at once.

I was awakened by a draft of cold air blowing on my cheek, and shivering at the chill of it suggested ghosts, but I couldn't suppose that the woman in the calico dress had come back so soon. It might be the one who bought Rough-on-Rats about eleven. No; it was a man figure, and it was here at the over the director. There was an air so strange about this customer that I felt he would bear watching. Presently he sighed and turned away from the book-shelves. This encouraged me somewhat. "I shall never find him. It's a weary search."

He dropped into a chair facing me, and I was disquieted to observe that the back of it was dimly visible even after he had sat down. I endeavored to maintain a careless demeanor, but in reality I fairly held my feet swallowed a half dozen.

"Do you mind my sitting by your fire a minute?" he asked.

"Not at all," I replied, hastily. "Cold night inside if you think you'd feel more at home."

"I am not cold, nor hungry, nor thirsty, sir," he began.

"These perhaps you'd better come into the back room," said I, endeavoring to brace up my courage by bandinage.

"But I am not a bad spirit."

"Then don't come. You'd feel out of place."

"Young man," said he, checking my levity with a gesture, "do you know Thomas J. McSwiggan?"

"I dunno," I faltered; "you scare me so that I can't think."

"While you are endeavoring to collect your senses," he said, "I will tell you why I wish to find Mr. McSwiggan. I am his ghost. I am appointed to haunt McSwiggan."

"Then why don't you go haunt him," I cried. "Isn't my ghost attending to his business?"

"He is," said the visitor, solemnly. "Ardnous and unpleasant as his duties are I am told that he performs them.

A DOSE FOR MCSWIGGAN'S GHOST.

would go to McSwiggan, as you suggest, but unhappily I cannot find him. Listen to my story: McSwiggan was entirely unheeded of in the place where I came from until he reached the age of twenty-one. He was of that class of age because so first saw his name on the registration list of the third district election district. He must therefore have been of legal age—"

"Well," said I, "what depends a little upon which way he was going to vote."

"I was sent to hunt him up, and selected his address from the list. It was No. 207 on this street. What was my surprise to find it a vacant lot. Nobody in the vicinity, had ever heard of Mr. Swiggan. I endeavored to obtain some information by pursuing one Bagley, who has, I am told, great political influence in the district. "Bagley carries this ward in his pocket."

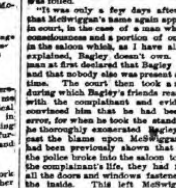
"I went to Bagley's saloon and asked about McSwiggan and he told me—well, never mind. Even if I had been sure of McSwiggan it is against our orders to reveal our mystery in the place which Bagley suggested. Something in my manner, I questioning exasperated Bagley to such a degree that he rushed me with the evident intention of biting off my nose. I immediately assumed the ragtious and unsubstantial shape which I now wear, so that Bagley went clear through me and hit a piece out of the stove. A soft answer turneth away wrath: he let me alone after that. I strolled out into the street, and then for the first time noticed the sign over the door of Bagley's saloon. It was not Bagley's name, but McSwiggan's which appeared there. I made further inquiries, but could learn nothing, except that McSwiggan had never been seen about the place."

"It's only a 'blind,'" said I, "Bagley really owns the dive."

"I next found McSwiggan's name on the petition for a license for Bagley's saloon. He certified that Bagley was a person of good moral character, and that his saloon was always quiet and orderly. It then occurred to me that possibly McSwiggan might be dead and blind or otherwise intelligence and probably under the care of others, so with these clews I continued my search, but in vain. Lastly, I was convinced that McSwiggan was not in Jersey City, nor had I found his name on the pay roll of a city department. Bagley is the immediate superior in this department, and McSwiggan's pay appears to reach him through Bagley's hands; so here again I was foiled.

"It was only a few days afterward that McSwiggan's name again appeared in court, in the case of a man who lost consciousness and a portion of one ear in the saloon which, as I have already explained, Bagley doesn't own. The man at first declared that Bagley did it and that nobody else was present at the time. The court then took a recess during which Bagley's friends reasoned with the complainant, who evidently convinced him that he had been in error, for when he took the stand later he positively swore that Bagley and not the blame upon McSwiggan. It had been previously shown that when the police broke into the saloon to save the complainant's life, they had found all the doors and windows fastened on the inside, and that left McSwiggan's escape unaccounted for until Bagley arose and testified that he had seen McSwiggan crawl into an empty beer keg through the bung hole immediately after the assault. He (Bagley) had been so much agitated at the time that he had neglected to point out the criminal's hiding place to the police. The case was dismissed.

"Then I learned that McSwiggan had influence by which men could get on the police force; but here again I found that all negotiations were made through



"I'VE GOT HOLD OF BAGLEY."

Bagley. I tell you, young man, I am at my wits' end."

"Do you mean extraordinarily simple-minded ghost," said I. "Don't you see that McSwiggan has no real existence? He's only another name for Bagley."

"Do you—do you realize," gasped the specter, "to what your view of the case would lead? I should have to follow Bagley into all the society he frequents; so do everything he does. No, no! It would be horrible. I—I—I—" I think that cyanide of potassium would have any effect upon a ghost? Give me all you have in the shop."

"It is against the law to sell poison without a physician's prescription," I replied, for a dollar I will make out the prescription myself."

He produced the necessary coin, and I gave him a water pail full of the cyanide. He thanked me for it and said he would go out into a remote corner of space and lie. For a week or more I saw nothing of him, and I began to believe that the long overdose of cyanide had enabled him to throw off his irksome responsibility and be a man again. But then again I was the strong water down below to be feared, and, consequently, you see, I was between the horns of a dilemma.

"Yet stay! Why not the salmon went. Whirr—wh—wh—went my reel. Will he ever again? Is my spook-haunting a success—and all that sort of talk. What I did with that fish! What I did with the man who was already boiled when the Maryland club sent it to me, and Hecklahr, with all his cooking accomplishments didn't know a boiled ham from a raw one. Well, now, you may be sure that he never heard the last of it."

HIS GAMEST FISH.

How Billy Florence Took a Forty-Two Pound Salmon.

It Was a Big Fish on a Short Line—A Vivid Description of a Finely Fought "Whale" from Ingersoll Thinks Agent Gaffing Salmon.

[COPYRIGHT, 1891.]

"The gamest fish I ever caught," said Billy Florence, comedian, fisherman and prince of good fellows, during a chat the other day, "well, I'll tell you. It was on the St. Stanislaus, just above a spot called Second Falls. Solhern and myself had been fishing all the morning below the falls with varying success. Solhern having landed a couple of fine fish, while I was a little chagrined and annoyed at losing three—the first by bad handling, the other two gently because Solhern had chaffed me so unmercifully about my unsportsmanlike treatment of the lordly salmon by giving him too much butt, that I forgot to examine my fly until after I had lost two fish and then found that the hook was broken.

"I at once put on another fly, and leaving Solhern below the falls, started to fish above. He laughingly bade me better luck next time as I trudged up to the landing road forming the end of the river.

"Just above the fall was a series of ledges, which made strong ripples and currents. This broken water extended about a quarter of a mile and at its head was a beautiful pool, unbroken by a ripple. I knew this was the resting place of many a salmon, for I had killed a number of them in that neighborhood.

"The first cast I made my fly (a Jack Scott) fell about thirty yards from the shore. Like a flash the surface of this glassy pool was ruffled and if monster trout ever broke water in my life—why, it went the reel and like lightning he dashed up the stream.

"Now, I had been fishing from a canoe below the falls with Solhern and was not prepared to pay out much line or have an extended run, consequently he did not have a large reel with me. The one on my rod did not carry more than ninety or one hundred yards. I therefore felt certain that if the salmon continued his headlong flight I should soon be at the end of my tether, and that was terrible me if I returned to Solhern with a broken or shattered reel, therefore I resolutely prayed that Mr. Salmon would change his royal mind and go down stream again. But then again I was the strong water down below to be feared, and, consequently, you see, I was between the horns of a dilemma.

"Yet stay! Why not the salmon went. Whirr—wh—went my reel. Will he ever again? Is my spook-haunting a success—and all that sort of talk. What I did with that fish! What I did with the man who was already boiled when the Maryland club sent it to me, and Hecklahr, with all his cooking accomplishments didn't know a boiled ham from a raw one. Well, now, you may be sure that he never heard the last of it."

REGULAR DEMOCRATIC NOMINATIONS.

UNION COUNTY.

For Assembly—1st District, JOHN CARROLL
Of Elizabeth.

For Assembly—2d District,
THOMAS F. LANE.
Of Summit.

For Assembly—3d District.
SIDNEY E. FLOWER,
Of Plainfield.

For Coroner,
DR. ALFRED Q. DONOVAN,
Of Elizabeth.

SOMERSET COUNTY.

For Member of Assembly,
JAMES J. BERGEN.

OUR PARTY.

The position of the Democratic party is clear and defined.

There is no despicable shoat it, no dodging behind false issues, no seeking of partisan success through corruption.

The views of Democracy is for popular rights, and against everything that savors of class legislation and injustice.

It boldly and without reservation claims as the true principles of representative government, principles that originated the Constitution of the United States, and the important application of which has achieved such prosperity of national strength and prosperity.

The Democratic party is in favor of the greatest degree of personal freedom consistent with law and good order.

It is hostile to every species of class favoritism, as being a relic of aristocratic methods and adverse to the spirit and interest of free institutions.

It favors all needful appropriations by legitimate purposes, but resolutely opposes extravagance and waste in the expenditure of public money.

It insists that all official and legislative positions should be held and administered as sacred trusts on behalf of the people.

It is in favor of real protection to American skill and industry, through the enactment of such equitable revenue laws as will promote the welfare of both the employer and the employed by equalizing the burden of taxation on capital and labor, and at the same time afford just encouragement to the important interests of Commerce and Agriculture.

It rightfully denounces McKinley tariffs and all of its kindred legislation as a fake, not protection, because of their artful designs to aggrandize unjust wealth at the cost of honest toil.

VOTE THE DEMOCRATIC TICKET!

THE GOVERNOR HAS THE BEST OF IT.

In the debate between Governor CAMPBELL and Major MCKINLEY, at Ada, Ohio, on Thursday, the debate was opened by Governor CAMPBELL, who divided his speech entirely to a discussion of the tariff question, which he proposed to meet by the citation of facts and figures which were practically unanswerable, and which carried home to the minds of his hearers, whether the facts were welcome or not. He argued that under the so called protective system farmers were growing more impoverished year by year; that manufacturers was swept from the scene, and we are rapidly approaching a condition which was predicted by Mr. LINCOLN, that, as in the old days of the aristocracies, those have been entitled, an era of high prices will follow, the money power will endeavor to prolong its reign until all wealth is aggregated in the hands of the few, and the Republic is lost."

Major MCKINLEY occupied the first half of his speech with a discussion of the silver question, in which he and his friends in this city who constitute him upon his succession to the high position he has so ably and successfully filled the past years. "Anyone knows, so goes the state" is an old saying and a true one. The result of Newark's election is another indorsement of Governor Leon Abbett.

Treasurer's Summer for Assembly.

The Democrats of the First Assembly district of Middlesex county met at Dunellen Monday and nominated John Woodhull Bowman, city attorney of North Amboy, for Assembly.

The Hon. James E. Martine of this city, Senator Robert Adrain, Mr. Beekman and others addressed the meeting at the convention. There was great enthusiasm.

In the evening a Democratic Thrift Reform club was organized. It is to be made permanent. The Hon. Mr. Martine, one of the organizers, made another characteristic and rousing speech.

DUNELLEN'S CLUB BOOMING.

It Will Be an Important Local Factor in the Presidential Campaign.

The regular business meeting of the Democratic Club of Piscataway Township was held Monday night at the Park Hotel, Dunellen, and several measures were passed which will further perfect the organization, and to render more effective the efforts of the club in advancing the principles of the Democratic party throughout the township. The executive committee was increased from three members to five, and Howard Bird and J. Y. Wilson were selected members of the committee.

During the evening J. K. Martine of Plainfield made a stirring speech. He spoke briefly on the formation of political parties, their government and effectiveness; and then drifted into a talk on the tariff, which last over an hour, and was received with great applause.

There was a good attendance Monday evening, and several new names were added to the club roll. The large increase in membership since the club was reorganizing, but the roll ought to contain the name of every Democratic voter in the township, and steps were taken to further that end. The sentiment is strongly in favor of making the club a permanent organization, or at least to continue it until the campaign of 1892 is over. The next meeting, the notice of which will be given, all good Democrats are earnestly and urgently invited to attend, and join the club. There are no dues or assessments, and subscriptions are entirely voluntary.

THAT SANDFORD AVENUE RETREAT.

It Is to be Re-Instituted Elsewhere of a Credit to the City and the State.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—As one who takes a deep interest in the subject of mental abberration, I have read closely the various communications in THE PRESS concerning the Sandford avenue institution and your comments thereon. The latter, especially those in yesterday's issues, are written in the calm and rational spirit that it is evident that your own heart is still clear and level and that you stand in no need of this particular medicinal treatment.

You are quite right (as usual) in supposing that the Retreat "stood entirely by itself" when the house was secured and first commenced. I am informed that this occupancy was never intended to be other than temporary and that negotiations are now pending which, if consummated, will result in the establishment of an institution which will be a credit to Plainfield and to the State.

The demand, made by one of the complaining neighbors, that the present place be broken up "at once", seems to me to be, not only irrational in itself, but unjust, since the remarks and efficient physicians who are interested in its management. There are some things which cannot be done "at once."

There are some things, also, which need not be done at all. For instance, no neighboring residents are compelled to look at the windows. If they will turn their eyes in another direction they would seem to be the humane course.) their nerves will not be rasped by the sight of the bars, or (should they be) behind the seemingly genial, but really kind, bars. It is impossible, at times, to close our ears to unpleasant sounds, but it is quite practicable, by the exercise of a little will power, to avoid unpleasant sights.

The arrival of winter and the season of closed doors and windows will give relief to the residents of Sandford avenue, and the arrival of spring, "when the robins nest again", will bring other sights and sounds to Brookside.

I will smile, just a little, if the family which shall occupy the house in question, next year, shall be compelled to some "terrible infants", a few Peck's Bad Boys, a number of wandering chickens, a clanging piano and a chaotic concert! That will rarely happen. Dr. Cooley proposed to return and bring back his mysterious patients. I have lived next to such a family as I have depicted, and can endure anything, you, an asylum were preferable.

By the way, I am informed that since the publication of the compl ints in THE PRESS, the inmates of the institution from parties outside of the city who only learned of the existence of the institution through the complaints. Hence the complaints and the publicity have been of a good work. It shows the far-reaching time of THE PRESS, and demonstrates the worth as an advertising medium. I suggest that you send a bill to the management for services rendered."

This communic tion is written "with malice toward none, with charity for all." I sympathize, to an extent, with the unfortunate fellow-beings whose illness has taken the special form of those who are under the charge of Dr. Cooley. "The cure of the human mind", says Grattan, "is the noblest branch of medicine." A very laudable ambition possesses Dr. Cooley to excel in curing and bring back his mysterious patients. I have lived next to such a family as I have depicted, and can endure anything, you, an asylum were preferable.

By the way, I am informed that since the publication of the compla

THROWN FROM THE CARS AND KILLED

Young Matthew McLernon Fatally Injured While Stealing Coal from a Train.

Matthew McLernon, an eleven-year-old lad, lived in the neighborhood of the Pearl Prune Works, and whose father is employed in the carpet factory, was killed on the railroad near the Richmond street bridge yesterday. He was attempting to get from a train of cars. While he was doing so he fell and the wheels of the sudden started and he was thrown to the ground with such force as to cut open his head at the temple and fracture his skull. He was picked up by the trainmen and over as he lay unconscious their tracks, but he did not get under the wheels, and his body was not at all mangled. He was dead when picked up. He was a member of the Boys' Club. He and his brother have both given their father a great deal of anxiety by their waywardness. The young brother is to be sent to the State Reform School.

McLernon father's name is David. He lives at 18 Kensington avenue.

FUN AHEAD.

Fred a Rarket (if which the Clergy Will Be Invited, Two Other Festivous Events.

The boys of the Steyvin Club, needed by the Patriarch, Reheming a little fun. They intend to have a private, select, and, of course, strictly moral "racket." It will eventuate at the club house Saturday night, the 24th. The fact that it is called a "racket" and that ladies will not be admitted may look suspicious to some of the mothers of the younger boys, and to some of the dear wives of the older ones, but to those whose suspicions invitations will be sent to all the friends of the boys. Moreover, those good men will be too busy on Saturday night, polishing up the points of their Sunday sermons, to put in an appearance, so the boys will have a free foot, after all.

The special attractions of the evening will be fast and furious boxing, bouts for the 400 and to Jack Ruth. In their profession they stand supreme. The boys becomes a new instrument and a soulful one indeed. Their fingers are so long them is to appreciate them; but few Plainfielders can hear them on this occasion as entrance may be obtained only by card of invitation, and but a limited number will be issued.

Late in November, or early in December, a tournament will be given at the Crescent Club house that building will have been metamorphosed into some one of the many shapes with which it is threatened—a fire engine house, a skating rink, a gymnasium, an apartment house, or a church. There will be a plenty of open events, and all the athletes will have an opportunity to cover themselves with medals.

Following the plan laid down last winter, an instructor in gymnastics has been secured to give the boys the benefit of his physical development, during the coming season. The classes will begin early in November. All those various things look to make the Steyvin people Club must a particularly happy one.

New Jersey Christian Endeavorers.

The annual State Convention of the New Jersey Christian Endeavor Union will be held in the First Presbyterian church, 826 Broad street, Newark, 23d, 24 and 25. It will be the most notable gathering of the kind ever held in the State. Delegates representing about four hundred societies will be present, including a large number from this city. The Christian Endeavor Society has branches in every city, village and hamlet. The opening session will be held Friday evening, Oct. 23d. Saturday will be given to the transaction of general business. Clergymen and others will address the convention in the evening.

2:30 Saturday afternoon Rev. Oliver E. Spanesberry of Netherwood will conduct a conference of the missionary committee.

Notes from the Food Works.

MARRIED THE GIRL AT LAST.

The Bench of Pressbo Soft Against Johnny Moore Ends Happily.

The Boston Circle of King's Daughters Hospitality Entertain the Public.

(From The Press of Oct. 9.)

HANDSOME though the interior of the Bicycle club appeared, it was always is, it presented last evening a scene of unusual brightness and gaiety, for the Dorcas Circle, King's Daughters, had taken possession of it, and had thereby spent the doors to the public and invited everybody to a charming "Yellow Tea."

The place was tastefully decorated with draperies, portieres and curtains, and flowers were abundant. The prevailing color was of course yellow. In every detail was revealed the deft work of fair hands and feminine ingenuity.

The reception room was beautifully decorated with screens, standing lamps, pictures and artistic effects. The good genii who welcomed guests and made them glad that they had come, was the daughter of the host, Mrs. Bailey. They were Miss Louise Green, Miss Thorn, Miss Mary Miller, Miss Jessie Stewart, Miss M y Kirkner and Miss Florence Smith.

The refreshment committee, who saw that each guest was served with et-cetera and wafers, if they desired, and with other good things of the like, were Mrs Bailey and Miss Rose.

The season's bountiful harvests were by requisition at a booth laden with fruits, where Miss Hart and Miss Maude Saltzman exchanged the luscious productions for the go-ler's silver.

Sweet tidings were in abundance at the candy table. Miss Aricen Crane, Miss D la Bowers and Miss Amy Green dispensed the loathsome goodies.

The Bagley-Finley fancy goods was a bewildering profusion. The wares were very tempting, and sold rapidly, especially when the praise of their merits fell to the lot of Miss Brown, Miss Mary Fritts and Mrs Mailby

The inevitable lemonade well was a favorite stopping-place of the promenaders. Here Miss Bessie Rathbaren Thorne and Miss Florence Aldrich presented no thirsty one to pass without refreshment.

The entire affair was under the efficient general management of Mrs. John M. Crane, who was mainly responsible for the fact that it was a grand success in every particular. The caterer of the evening was W. J Stephenson

OBITUARY.

Another N. Somerset.

The brief illness came to an end Tuesday evening, and there passed gently away from earth Lucy E. Emeline B. Martin, infant wife of William P. Demarest, of 7 East Fifth street. She quietly slept her life away.

"They brought her living white she sleeps, And sleeping where she died."

Her maiden name was Mersereau. She was for Clik the past year. All her life she had been a sincere Christian, and she and her two unmarried daughters were active members of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church and were especially prominent in its work.

Surviving her, besides her husband, are one only son, James Alfred, and four daughters, one of whom is the wife of James B. Weaver of New Rochelle, and one the wife of the Rev Charles E. Dunn of the First Presbyterian church of Albany.

She had been ill only a few days, but the attack was so serious that all her children were summoned to her bedside. She died surrounded by her loved ones, whose only solace in their anguish of heart is the sublime faith of the gospel promise. She was one of the jewels of the earth, and has departed from these scenes only to become a gem in His crown.

JUDGE CODINGTON PRESIDENT.

Annual Election and Business Meeting of the Plainfield Crescent League.

The Crescent League had a lively business meeting Oct. 7, when the annual election of officers took place. The election resulted as follows:

President—W. H. Codington.
Vice-president—Charles F. Leggett.
Secretary—George Helm.
Board of Trustees three years—Charles Reed, Charles K. Moore, J. T. Pitts.

Judge Codington's only opponent for the presidency was C. C. Burnet, on whose motion, after the vote was taken giving Codington a majority, the judge's election was made unanimous.

Randolph Stelle was put up against Leggett for the vice-presidency. Leggett's election was subsequently made unanimous.

Dr. Jenkins was nominated, against his protest, for trustee. He needed only his vote to be sure of Dr Fritts.

The treasurer's report showed a thrifty condition of the finances. The base-ball department made only $100 less than last year.

The opinion of the members was asked for concerning the project to go into a Central New Jersey base-ball league. The sense of the club was that if right terms could be agreed on the proposed league would be a desirable thing. To the president and secretary was left the duty of seeing that all the proper receipts of the season be posted and divided equally. Plainfield will not agree.

HYMENEAL.

Bayson—Fowler.

(From The Press of Oct. 14.)

A charming little wedding is that which is to take place at East Orange this evening at 6 o'clock, when Miss Elizabeth Sharke Fowler will become the wife of Frank Freeman Bayson of this city.

The ceremony is to take place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr and Mrs. Charles B. Fowler, "The Pines", 51 South Grove street.

The bride's costume is a rich gown of white faille, cut princess, with court train, the front is of embroidered chiffon, with reshape corsage, edged with orange blossoms and chiffon. Her veil, which is of tulle, is caught up with pearl pins and orange blossoms.

The bride will be escorted by her father, and met at the head of the parlors by the groom and his "best man", Arthur H. Milford of this city.

The witnesses at the ceremony will be limited strictly to the relatives of the contracting parties.

The Rev. Dr. A. Nelson Hollifield, of the Third Presbyterian church, Newark, is to be the officiating clergyman.

After the ceremony a general reception will be given from 7:30 to 9:30.

The house has been beautifully decorated for the occasion, being hung throughout with green, gracefully festooned with white ribbons.

The ushers, as has already been stated in these columns, are to be Charles Fowler, jr., of East Orange, brother of the bride, George C. Olmstead and F. Halsey Otis of Orange, and Clarence L. Murphy of Plainfield.

The bride and groom have been the recipients of many beautiful remembrances. They will be gone on their wedding trip until Nov. 1. They will be at home Wednesdays after Nov. 4, at 51 South Grove street.

—Major-General O. O. Howard will speak to-morrow night at the reception of the G. A. R. in the First Baptist church, next Sunday afternoon at 4:15. All men are invited.

JOEL BRIANT DEAD.

He Has Stricken With Apoplexy While Sitting in His Office.

(From The Press of Oct. 12.)

The senseless body of Joel R. Briant, general book-keeper in the Bank of the Republic in New York city, was picked up in the roadway on Park avenue at the corner of Fourth street, at 4 o'clock last evening, and at 7:45 this morning Mr. Briant died without having regained consciousness.

Mr. Briant Fuller was riding his bicycle down Park avenue, going homeward from the train, when he heard a crash just ahead of him, and, looking quickly up, saw a horse galloping straight towards him

He swerved his bicycle aside just in time. The horse's flank brushed his arm as it sped by. The quick turn of the wheel brought his machine up against the curb, and he was thrown headlong to the ground.

When he picked himself up he saw a dark form lying in the roadway ahead of him. It was Mr. Briant's body. He called for assistance, and the body was carried into Williams's pharmacy, where Drs. Tomlinson, Fritts and Endicott were quickly in attendance.

They found that Mr. Briant had suffered a stroke of apoplexy, and the story grew that his horse had been frightened by Fuller's bicycle bell, dashed into Mr. Briant, thrown him out, and that the shock and concussion had caused the apoplexy.

During the night, however, it was decided by the physicians that the stroke had occurred while he still had control of the reins and that he fell to the ground when he was thrown.

Dr. Tomlinson, the family physician, remained with the patient all night, and until the end came, doing all in his power to restore consciousness to the inanimate form, and consoling the afflicted family who had seen their head go forth a few hours before stalwart in health, and who were almost prostrated at the sudden shock of having him brought back in such a state.

Mr. Briant's powerful horse ran on, after flouing that it was its own master, up Park avenue, and down Front street. It wrecked the sulky to which it was attached, and continued on until caught at Grant avenue.

Mr. Briant had come home early in the afternoon and had taken the horse out for a long drive, as was his custom. It is considered fortunate that he was in town instead of out in the country when the ap-plexy struck him, as he might have been on some lonely roadside and lain, the re some time without discovery.

Philip Grieve, night watchman, found Mr. Briant's pocket-book, containing about $7 in money, in the roadway near where he fell, and the thought emergent Lynch restored it to the family.

Mr. Briant's widow, Mr. Briant leaves two grown children.

The pall-bearers selected for Mr. Briant's funeral were W. H. Codington, E. C. Mill ard, C. B. Mitchell, Stephen Berry, W. V. Mundy and C. H. Rugg. They were all fellow-members with Mr. Briant in both the Methodist church, of which Mr Briant was long a member, and Jerusalem Lodge.

THE TOMB.

Martha C. Brown.

All that was mortal of Mrs. Martha C. Brown was laid away to rest in Hillside Ceme ery Thursday afternoon. The funeral services, which were held from the residence of her father, William L. Smalley, 29 Craig place, at half-past 2, were conducted by the Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, of Spring Lake, for whose church she departed, taking his text from David's Psalm—CXVI: 15—"Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his s-ints". The attendance of mourners was very large. A quintette composed of Miss Edith Harold, Miss Gussie Bungow, Mr Macklymont, B. T. Barnes and L. H. Bigelow, jr., sang "Asleep in Jesus", "Blessed Assurance", and "Home Sweet Day" The services were highly impressive and deeply affecting. The pall-bearers were William Jr., Jesse Hall, David, Al. Daniel and Newton Smalley, brothers of the deceased.

FATAL EXPLOSION.

Three Children Get Fire in a Bonfire Barrel, and are Terribly Burned.

News of a terrible explosion comes from Martinville. Three little children on the Bowne farm built a bonfire near a barrel containing forty gallons of benzine. The barrel exploded, and the blazing fluid was scattered over them. Their mother heard their frantic screams, and with a woolen shawl smothered the flames that enveloped them thereby burning her own hands and arms. Two of the children were horribly disfigured, and the other was fatally injured. Dr. R. B. Matthews, of Bound Brook, says he cannot save its life.

CRATER ACQUITTED.

How He Will sing His Persecutors for Many Dollars.

The trial of J. E. Crater of this city, before Justice Nash Saturday, for the alleged embezzlement of $62 50 from Irvington Hastings, managers of the Novelties Custom and Clothing Merchandise Company of Newark, resulted in Crater's complete vindication and discharge.

Now he will bring suit for $10,000 damages against his persecutors, whom he says have been hounding himself and other former agents of theirs for having left their employ and gone over to a rival concern.

The Asylum to be Removed.

It has long been the intention of the Trustees of the Home for Disabled Soldiers and Sailors of New Jersey base-ball league. The sense of the club was that if right terms could be agreed on the proposed league would be a desirable thing. To the proper authorities to whom all the duties and receipts of the season be posted and divided equally, Plainfield will not agree.

HYMENEAL.

Bayson—Fowler.

(From The Press of Oct. 14.)

A charming little wedding is that which is to take place at East Orange this evening at 6 o'clock, when Miss Elizabeth Sharke Fowler will become the wife of Frank Freeman Bayson of this city.

The ceremony is to take place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr and Mrs. Charles B. Fowler, "The Pines", 51 South Grove street.

The bride's costume is a rich gown of white faille, cut princess, with court train, the front is of embroidered chiffon, with reshape corsage, edged with orange blossoms and chiffon. Her veil, which is of tulle, is caught up with pearl pins and orange blossoms.

The bride will be escorted by her father, and met at the head of the parlors by the groom and his "best man", Arthur H. Milford of this city.

The witnesses at the ceremony will be limited strictly to the relatives of the contracting parties.

The Rev. Dr. A. Nelson Hollifield, of the Third Presbyterian church, Newark, is to be the officiating clergyman.

After the ceremony a general reception will be given from 7:30 to 9:30.

The house has been beautifully decorated for the occasion, being hung throughout with green, gracefully festooned with white ribbons.

The ushers, as has already been stated in these columns, are to be Charles Fowler, jr., of East Orange, brother of the bride, George C. Olmstead and F. Halsey Otis of Orange, and Clarence L. Murphy of Plainfield.

The bride and groom have been the recipients of many beautiful remembrances. They will be gone on their wedding trip until Nov. 1. They will be at home Wednesdays after Nov. 4, at 51 South Grove street.

—Major-General O. O. Howard will speak to-morrow night at the reception of the G. A. R. in the First Baptist church, next Sunday afternoon at 4:15. All men are invited.

HIGHEST HONORS GO TO PLAINFIELD.

The Judges Decide That This City Has the Handsomest Young Women, and the Handsomest Girl Carriage.

There were over a thousand fine looking and handsomely uniformed men in the annual parade of the fire department at Elizabeth, Thursday, and their services, elaborate and fine though they were, were but a fitting setting for the beauty, brilliant as polish, paint and floral decoration could make them, yet the ten thousand people that came from all over the State to view them, and cheer and admiration for only the men of Alert Hose company of Plainfield, and their $10,000 silver carriage.

Alert's fine was composed of:

PILLSBURYS.

G. Lindgrove, P. O. Herring.

The other visiting companies were Humane Engine company of Morristown, Harmony of Trenton, Washington of Belvidere, Neptune and Hibernia of New Brunswick, Protection of South Amboy, Franklin Hose of East Orange, Hibernia of Orange, Chemical of Jersey City, and Excelsior of Long Branch.

The streets were packed with people, and the public and private buildings profusely decorated with flags and bunting, while arches of everyreen spanned the streets. At Elizabethport there were floral figures representing Governor Harrison and ex-President Cleveland, both fully equipped in firemen's costume. Harrison's figure was that of a man in the form of Red Jacket, a Republican fire company, and Cleveland in that of Hibernia, a Democratic organization.

The judges on viewing was the reviewing stand, were: Mayor Rankin of Elizabeth, Chief Doane of this city, and Chief Kearsted of Newark. While they awaited the occasion, the band played, Mayor Rankin said, as he stood down on the sea of faces about them, "Gentlemen, I think it is our first duty as the judges of this day, to decide who is the prettiest young woman among those hundreds." Chief Kearsted replied, "That's so!" and after casting his eye slowly over the acres of female loveliness around, said "My vote goes for that young beauty in black, over there. She's my idea."

Mayor Rankin let him, by another slowly and lingerly eye from face to face in the big crowd, and then cast his vote for the young woman that Chief Kearsted had selected. Chief Doane, on being asked, was his size, too. Then they waited to hear the verdict of Plainfield's gallant Chief who is acknowledged throughout the East as the best judge of a handsome woman. "Gentlemen," said Mr Doane, "I'm with you! Total's unanimously for Pretties girl Elizabeth to-day, and I'm proud to tell you that she comes from Plainfield." It was Miss Minnie Rickert of Jackson avenue.

The other prizes were awarded as follows: To Alert Hose company of this city, a silver cake basket for the finest hose carriage in the parade. The Hibernian boys took the prize, a silver trumpet, for the best-equipped company in line. The prize for the company having the most men in line was awarded to Hibernia Engine company of New Brunswick. The water-throwing contest was not settled because one of the steamers had no coupling to fit the Elizabeth hose. It will be decided at Bramwell's on the morrow afternoon. The Elizabeth company's did not compete for any of the prizes.

CRESCENTS WON.

John Harkins and His Team Defeated by the Plainfield Boys.

The Crescents had little difficulty in defeating John Harkins's team at New Brunswick, Saturday, although the New Brunswicks made three more base hits, and not many more men on bases. Rain was the only power to distinguish him self. He made the three putouts in the last inning—two of them by catching difficult flies, and one by a clever throw to cover which resulted in his catching a runner off base. The day was absold, and Cox, a young New Brunswicker, had not put in his place, to good advantage. Cox made two hits, helped in a run, and the third time he went to the bat flew out to left field. The Harkins's pitcher also were in hard luck. They had 10 men left on bases. Thescore:

DUNELLEN WINS THE CUP.

It Is the Trophy that Gives Its Name to the Inter State Championship.

The bowling on the green at Mr. Schepflin's home at Dunellen, Saturday, was very close and exciting. The trophy at stake was the Adams challenge cup. There were three rinks in the field, and two of these were from this city. The Dunellen club scored a total of 94, while the Middlesex club scored 92. The cup thus won will be contested for in the fall by the three clubs in the country next year. The second game will be closed with a series between Dunellen and New Brunswick, the former being after Schepflin's return from the south.

Mr. Thompson's Latest Enterprise.

The purchase by Aaron D. Thompson of a large plot of land on North avenue, west of the gil-stork works, and adjoining the railroad, was told of exclusively in The Press a few days ago. He intends to erect thereon, in the spring, large ice houses for supplying the wholesale trade and for storing cold storage to the merchants who deal in meats, fruit and other perishable goods. There will also be extensive steam elevators for unloading grain direct from cars. The plant will probably be ideided to the premises later, large coal and wood yards.

A UNION OF CHURCHES PROPOSED.

This and Other Matters Considered at the Meeting in the Borough.

The Classis of Newark had a very interesting and important fall session in the German Reformed church in North Plainfield, Tuesday. The president was the Rev. Mr. Jones of Woodside, Newark; and the Rev. Dr. Vosiage of Irvington was secretary.

The examination and satisfactory report was given by the Mission Agent of the Classis, the Rev. Mr. Jonson, of Newark, showing that the Mission work of the denomination is done in this city, the foreign field is in a very prosperous condition.

An important question which lay before the house concerned the proposed federal union of the two Reformed churches in America, the Dutch and the German. This question was unsettled—but will come up again at the spring session.

The Classis was admirably entertained by the ladies of the German church of town and in the evening. The ladies deserve great credit for the superior course dinner provided. The dining room and table were beautifully decorated with flowers by F. Doeringer. Elder Alex. Willett and pastor Schenck of the Trinity Reformed church, this city, were present as delegates.

Worthy Work of Women for Their Church.

The Ladies Christian Aid Society of the Trinity Reformed church are about to begin their winter's work towards extinguishing the debt on their church, and to aid in a way at the residence of Mrs J F MacDonald, East Front street, corner of Peace, this evening, from 5 to 9. An offering of 25 cents will be thankfully received, and by doing so the gross amount thus received will be given towards the church debt. These teas have been very enjoyable in the past, and the present promises to be one of much pleasure and profit to all who attend.

It is already rumored that Adam Kuan, jr., will be president, and Frank Bergen city engineer, of the new city that is to be elected in this city.—Plainfield Press

If this is true there's one thing certain, Plainfield's Council will know how to run water-works success fully, and will have as its clerk the best authority on municipal law U at New Jersey can scare up. Judge Green is reported, in the Trenton papers, these are just the two things Plainfield's Council stands most in need of knowing.

R. S. Lozier for Plainfield.

The nominating committee of the New Jersey Republican League met in Orange Wednesday, which met in Trenton Sept. 29th has announced the following nominations:

Chief Consul—G. Carleton Brown, Elizabeth.
Secretary—Frederick Lewis, Jr., Plainfield.
Chas. K. Bentan, Paterson.
Secretary-Treasurer—George C. Pennell, Elizabeth.

Representatives—Gardiner H. Cain, Trenton; Frank M. Traver, Jr., Hoboken; John M. Dodd, East Orange; W. H. Stauffer, Asbury Park; H. Hall, Harry's Corner; Wm. H. Hunsers, Edgewater; Thos. F. Morrison, Jr., Jersey City; W. Scott Calkins, Millville; W. A. Drabble, Newark; Harry C. Vroom, Bridgeton; Wm. H. Orange; David H. Lewis, Plainfield; W. E. Shirk, Phillipsburg; R. S. Lozier, Plainfield.

The tickets bearing the above names will be mailed to the various League members by Secretary-Treasurer Pennell on the 15th inst., and have to be signed and returned before Nov. 15 to count as votes in the election.

Pharmacist Williams Not Arrested His Pets.

The New Brunswick Home News says that Saturday's game between John Harkins's local nine and the Plainfield Crescents was "neither wildly exciting, nor absolutely interesting." Neither side was free from errors, and none of the players was specially brilliant.

Up to the commencing of the eight men with them, and Cox, of this city, played right field in an excellent manner He made two hits and some good catches.

"There was quite a crowd of Plainfield enthusiasts in the stand, and they scooped in a few dollars on the result. Pharmacist George Williams, of Plainfield, was the only pharmacist in the entire town who backed the New Brunswick aggregation, and he was rather willing to part with his dollar just to see the game won.

"Plainfield scored five runs in the third inning and thus earned a good lead. Bowman was responsible for some of the fun by easily getting on first when there was one man out. The next man struck out, and then he played without any error. The third man would have been out before all five runs were made."

Allen's Hay-Fever Cure.

ALLEN M. is sold my tribute to the efficacy of Ely's Cream Balm as a cure for hay-fever. I was afflicted with catarrh and cancers and was for years a victim to hay-fever in its worst form. THOROUGHBRED HORSES.

How They Endure the Fatigue of Long Journeys.

Two Views of English and American Methods—Some Point from John Murphy. May Well Be Called an Expert.

[COPYRIGHT, '91.]

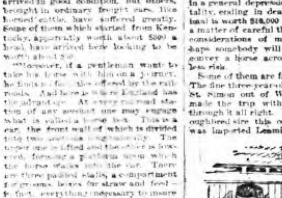
"Sunol is coming east this fall."

We had been talking about some big horse sales and the fat prices of valuable animals that had recently come to New York to be sold. Hon. Saturday Scrogginsham about the subject of their transportation.

"In this matter of horse travel," said the statesman, "America is two thousand years behind the time—behind England, I mean. You don't know how to treat a good horse over here when you have to take him on a journey. Strange, too, for America is getting to be a great horse country, both in the matter of breeding good animals and in the estimation in which they are held.

"This business of carrying horses about from place to place is enormous in its magnitude. Take Central Park, New York alone, the past winter, have amounted to hundreds of thousands of dollars, most of the horses have been brought from far away, many of them from the Pacific slope. Horses which have made the journey in private cars belonging to their owners, have arrived in good condition, but others brought in the ordinary fast-pit cars, like horned cattle, have suffered greatly. Instead of coming to Madison Square Garden apparently dead from Kentucky, apparently worth about $500 a head, have arrived here looking to be worth $100.

"Moreover, if a gentleman want to take his horse with him on a journey, he finds a great deal of trouble and annoyance. At every railroad station and ferry-boat he is obliged to explain what is valued a horse-box. This is a car, the front wall of which is divided into two parts, the lower one of which is hinged and the other is bolted. Upon each forward partition which is the rear wall of the horse-box, there are three padded stalls, a compartment for grooms, boxes for straw and feed—in fact, everything necessary to ensure the safety and comfort of the horse. The special fashion which carriages and harness are made in England, and are a mystery to Americans, because they can be taken to pieces, and when the reason for combination is in much better shape, I do not know, but I am pointed with a fair air of, expressed in



THE MARKETS OF A HORSE FAIR.

Japanese variety of heat and ventilation. I think that the latter process is the more important of the two, for the former can be easily overcome.

"These cars were very painful to my patriotism. They were expressed by Mr. Wilson, of the White Star service, under the auspices of Tattersalls of New York. He is an Englishman, as his name or his accent would indicate. He was over here but a few days when I met him talking with him I met with Mr. John T. Mackey, who looks after all of Mr. Huntington's horses when they are on journeys. He is an Englishman, too, but almost the first words he said to me were: 'England is the finest land to live in behind the times in the matter of the transportation of horses.'

"In saying for an auctioneer's natural tendency to exaggerate, this statement was not so far from the truth. Mr. Mackey, and associated to a gratifying contradiction of the abuse from our country. Both know the ins and outs of the matter, and Mr. Mackey at least is an expert on the subject of horse travel.

"Now, I'll tell you," said Mr. Mackey, "in one of the seven trains of horses I have to carry for Mr. Huntington's farm in California this winter. Ten thousand dollars would be exposed to fire and accident on the train. When I am in charge of horses on the railroad I go into a car and sleep in a berth before the horses are loaded. It is easier, happier for me to do it in advance, before I am tired out by the excitement of the loading. I like to see that everything is right with the horses, and then I go to bed. When I am in charge of horses on the railroad I go into a car and sleep in a berth before the horses are loaded. It is easier, happier for me to do it in advance, before I am tired out by the excitement of the loading. I like to see that everything is right with the horses, and then I go to bed. There were ten horses in my charge on the train I mentioned, and they were all of high breeding and of great value. Now, I am a believer in the railroad time table as a guide, and one of my rules is to be ready to start at the minute mentioned in the time table

THE WORLD'S HIGHEST.

New York to Have a Mammoth Business Block.

The Building Will Have One Thousand Offices and Elevators to Carry Its Six Constructed of Steel with a Terra Cotta Trim.

New York is to have a new business building on the Chicago model. The Sun gives the following description of the structure:

It is proposed to put up in this city the highest business buildings in the world. The site selected is the vacant ground on the west side of lower Broadway opposite Bowling Green, extending from Broad way to Greenwich street, and between the Washington building and the Stevens house. Charles W. Post now owns the property, and is trying to get together the capital necessary to carry the project through. The plans have been drawn for him by Architect F. P. Dinkelberg. The building will cost about $4,000,000.

The plot of ground upon which it is proposed to put this building is slightly irregular in shape. It has a Broadway frontage of 162 feet and about the same on Greenwich street. Its depth from street to street is about 200 feet. The building will consist virtually of two structures, the one projecting on each street and connected in the middle by a central structure which will become the tower above the twentieth floor. The floor plan of the building, therefore, will be shaped like the letter H. It will cover about one-half the surface area. There will be six stories in the tower above the main roof, making twenty-six in all.

On Broadway and Greenwich street the fronts of the main building will have a granite base. The upper portion of the first five floors will be faced with massive granite blocks, giving the whole structure an appearance of great solidity. From there up the fronts will be terra cotta, incasing the steel cone work which will go for effect, but from the street seeming to be a substantial brickwork to the roof. The terra cotta will be pale yellow and mottled. The architectural effect of the front may be seen in the accompanying sketch. The style of top will have a terra cotta skin. It will rise 350 feet from the roof of the main structure and will be topped by graceful pillars and a dome. The apex of the dome will be 550 feet above the surface of Broadway. The tower will have from the street the same appearance of ability as the building proper and will seem to depend for its support upon the walls.

There will be 1,000 offices on the twenty-six floors, all of which will be open to light and air. The average floor space for each office will be 800 square feet. The tower is not a mere ornamental adjunct. It will contain offices on its floors. The plans provide for an arcade on the main floor similar to that of the Equitable building, only not so long. The Equitable arcade is 300 feet. This will cover the 900 feet between Broadway and Greenwich streets. It will be 50 feet wide. Costly decorations, booths, telegraph, telephone and messenger offices, and a room where speaking to be communication may be had with every office in the building will be the features of the arcade. On this floor also will be fireproof storage vaults for the larger offices of the tower. The ground story will be 22 feet high, the second story 17 feet, the third story 15 feet, the fourth story 13 feet, the fifth story 12 feet and the upper stories 11 feet each. The first, second, third, fourth and fifth stories are to be fireproof, and will be given up to large offices for the use of big companies with many employes.

Getting Along Nicely.

There is a bright Bohemian in this city whose appearance has for some time made his friends anxious about his health.

"How are you getting along, Smithson?" asked one of his acquaintances.

"First rate; better than I have expected," he answered in a tone of enthusiasm.

"Gaining in weight?"

"No, but I've got sixty dollars saved toward my funeral expenses."—Washington Post.

Things She Won't Confess.

That she laces tight.
That her shoes are too small for her.
That she is ever tired at a ball.
That she paints.
That she is as old as she looks.
That she has been more than five minutes dressing.
That she has kept you waiting.
That she blushes when a certain person's name is mentioned.
That she ever says a thing she doesn't mean.
That she is fond of scandal.
That she—she of all persons in the world—is in love.—Philadelphia Record.

Bright Prospects.

"Dickie, how am I coming on? Is your father going to be happy?" said a very sick man to Dr. Blister.

"Your chances are the best in the world. The statistics show that most persons in ten recovers," replied the doctor.

"Then there is not much hope for me!"

"Oh, yes there is. You are the tenth case that I have treated, and the other nine are dead. I don't see how you can help getting well if the statistics are to be relied on."—Texas Siftings.

A SAN FRANCISCO RELIC.

One "Red-Tiled" Adobe Structure to Remain Standing There.

San Francisco is singularly lacking in any of the monuments of the old mission days, says the Chronicle. While there are still many structures in Santa Barbara, Los Angeles, San Luis Obispo, Monterey and other places that date back to the coming of the founders of the missions, San Francisco has preserved almost nothing of its sort. The hand of the iconoclast has not been stayed, and the mania for "improvement" has swept away almost the last vestige of the founders of the mistress of the golden Gate. For many years there were in the vicinity of the old mission a number of adobe buildings whose crumbling walls and tile-clad roofs were objects of curiosity to thousands of visitors, although their very existence was unknown to many who had been born and brought up in the city. But within a recent period these have all disappeared save one little building which stands on Sixteenth street, just around the corner from the old Mission church. The adobe walls have become so weakened by the storms of a number of years that they are partly covered with boards, but the old tile roof remains, and this, with the occasional glimpses of the gray, crumbling walls seen through the interstices of the outer sheathing, stands out in sharp contrast with the latter-day efforts of our unartistic buildings which surround it on every side.

FOND OF EXERCISE.

Favorite Pastimes of the Lovely Queen of the Belgians.

The queen of the Belgians, who is recovering from the severe attack of illness which seemed to threaten her life a few weeks ago, is one of the most athletic of the active lady sovereigns of Europe. It is one of her fads never sits down except when she is playing at the piano or the harp, with which instruments she plays with "the touch of the master hand." Altogether her majesty is passionately fond of music, and one of her chief amusements on a visit to the theater or opera, where, however, she is content to sit quietly in her box rather than weary seat a single lady-in-waiting with taking part in an entertainment for which she has possibly have no taste. Another of the queen's amusements is horsemanship. She has not only a splendid manege in her own, but she takes a special pride in breaking in her own saddle horses, and is a teacher of equitation. As Laeken and Ostend, her favorite summer seats, the queen delights in long walks, and spends long hours, together with her daughter, in fishing expeditions.

Marvelous Fecundity.

The reproductive powers of many bacteria is so marvelous as to border upon the fabulous. Prof. Tait has experimented with several different forms which were capable of doubling their number every hour. Under the best condition a single bacterium will give 16,777,000 individuals in the short space of twenty-four hours. In forty-eight hours the offspring from a germ not measuring more than the one-thousandth of an inch will have increased until the bulk cannot be put in a half-pint measure, the total number of individuals then exceeding 281,500,000,000! If these deductions are correct and scientists say they proved that they are, as near as such figures can possibly be from the very nature of the experiment, it is not to be wondered that contagious diseases are so difficult to control?

Can Animals Talk?

Sir Thomas Brown, in dealing with "Vulgar Errors," not only maintains that animals may be made to talk, but gravely cites instances to prove that elephants, at least, are intellectually taught to speak. One of these knowing creatures in Portuguese, India, acquainted with the Spanish tongue, refused to do what he was bid until it had been commanded solemnly in the name of the king of Portugal, which he understood answered: "I will, I will!" very distinctly in the Malabar tongue. Sir Thomas is also at great pains to point out the fact that the oral conformation of the human family is capacity for reasonable articulation. We know that birds of no intelligence whatever have human articulate powers in the acquisition of language.

The Sailing Passion.

A woman in a telegraph office is almost as much out of her element as she is at a teller's window in a bank, or as a man is in a silk goods store. A young lady of Dutchess county, to send a message to a friend whom she expected to visit her, and on the blank wrote: "Coming to-day on Hyena, which may or may not be there." She carefully underscored the words she wanted emphasized and consequently handed in the message to the operator.

An Agreement of Opinion.

"What do you think of married life?" asked the newly-wedded man, addressing the youthful bridegroom.

"Bliss is no name for it," said the young husband enthusiastically.

"You are right," said the henpecked man, gloomily; "bliss is no name for it."—N. Y. Press.

THE BALANCE ROCK.

Argentina's Wonderful Freak of Nature at Tandil.

It Is Poised on the Sloping Side of an Enormous Stone and Rocks at Equilibrium in Perfection—A Peasant's Mad Act.

When European tourists visit the United States they turn towards the falls of Niagara as the greatest natural wonder of the land.

Argentina, with its grassy plains and bare rock-hills presents few great works of nature to interest the stranger save at this quiet village in the southern-most portion of the province of Buenos Ayres, writes a correspondent of the New York World from Tandil, Argentina. English travelers especially take a run down to Tandil from the capital to see the strange rocks, a freak of nature which is quite unique, and is as much of a sensation for unfamiliar visitors as the great cataract of the Niagara river.

BALANCE ROCK.

Tandil is located 160 miles from Buenos Ayres. It is a peculiar town, named after a famous Indian chieftain who waged incessant war with the Spanish colonists. Coming to Tandil over the Ferro Carne del Sud, and after breakfast on pasters, the invariable Ayres steak dish, mounted a Spanish horse and rode a league up the hills to the moving rock.

The scenery along the path was picturesque. The river Tandilleofo, flowing down from the Sierras and winding among the hills, irrigates the adjacent country and waters the numerous herds and flocks. The huts of the peasantry, shabby but quaint and attractive in their squalor, lay on the slopes, and the ragged children, with eager, gleaming black eyes, ran along the path begging for dinero.

The rock is of granite formation and weighs, according to the estimate of scientific authority, about 800 tons. It is poised on the sloping side of an enormous rock which is several hundred feet long and which rises high above the ground. The surface of the latter is smooth; in the vicinity there are signs of the passage of a glacier.

The illustration affords a good idea of the appearance of the moving rock. The point on which it rests is about eighteen inches in diameter, and the stone was poised so exactly by the hands of men in the world left in position that by a pressure of the hand I was enabled to stir it with a swaying motion sufficient to set it back four inches. The wind was calm and insufficient to move the heavy mass, but when the Pampas wind blows the rock is said to rock and impinge on the bowlder it rolls to and fro.

Notwithstanding the ease with which the rock is swayed, there is a limit beyond which it will not go by any power which has been applied. Gen. Roca, during his dictatorship of Argentina, made a request that he would pull the rock from its position by attaching 100 horses. The attempt failed, and Roca, becoming incensed, swore he would overthrow the monster anyway. The number of horses was increased to 500, the rock, however, went to the limit of its motion and no further. The supply of available horses being exhausted, Roca was in the point of using gunpowder to accomplish his purpose, when his attention was drawn elsewhere by political events, and the rock of Tandil remained unmolested.

One terrible tragedy occurred beside the balancing rock in 1874. A fanatic named Sola-Dios collected nearly 150 deluded followers for the purpose, as he claimed, of making a new Jerusalem. Suddenly he commenced a massacre and killed forty-one persons before he was overpowered. He had hidden firearms in a crevice of rock and shot women and children indiscriminately.

A Curious Name Combination.

"What is in a name?" has been a question sufficiently unanswered to still remain a subject for discussion, but what is in two names should have a double interest. If you don't think so, take the names as well known as any in American history and look at them. They are the names Lincoln and Hamlin. Of course, there is nothing particular about them as they stand, but set them differently and observe the result. For an instance, place them thus:

HAM LIN
LIN COLN

Read up and down and then across. There is something in that, isn't there? Now again:

ANNA HAMLIN—COLN

Can you find two other names of two other men whose official lives and names combine as these do?

They Are All In It.

The Centralia (Mo.) Fireside Guard prints this curious announcement: "The editor and his entire family now comprise the working force on the Guard. Mr. Rodemyre does the editing and Mickie type on the local page. Mrs. Rodemyre is local reporter and gathers the local items. Edgar, the oldest son, attends to the job department, and the youngest son, Homer, aged fourteen, makes himself generally useful. The whole family stick 'em and that is why we are enabled to get out a nine-column paper and do job work cheaper than any print-shop in the county."

Johnny—You ain't goin' to lick me are you?

Father—Certainly I am. Didn't I tell you this morning that I would pay you for your behavior?

IN THE FAR NORTH.

How the Boundary of Alaska Has Been Marked.

The Dividing Line Between American and British Possessions—Tall Cottonwood Forest Far North of the Arctic Circle.

In their long stay among the wilds of Alaska and on their long journeys through a practically unknown land, the members of the general surgeon of the party, made the country, its people and their customs his particular study, and took many photographic views of what he observed.

"We began the building of our main camp about August 12, 1890," said Dr. Kierulff to a San Francisco Chronicle reporter, "and we soon had a comfortable house for the winter built of stout logs, tightly roofed and partitioned into five rooms. We called it Camp Columbia. It was located about half a mile over the boundary line on British territory. When we started home on July 14, 1891, we turned the camp over to the English missionary, Wallace, who had moved with his family and supplies into the camp as a dwelling house, and has put up a school building near by and begun work on a church.

"When the work of tracing and establishing the boundary was completed the party set up a monument of granite stones, about twelve feet high, at a visible mark of the dividing line between American and British territory. Of course there is a check on this in the shape of a securely concealed stone, accurately marked, at the head of the base line, near the main station. When we were about to break camp it occurred to me that no photograph of the monument had been taken, so I took a camera up and sighted it and then climbed on top of the rocks and had a curious native shoot the machine.

"My experience with Alaskan winters was rather disappointing. The greatest degree of cold we experienced was 50 degrees below zero, and that was when Mr. Turner extended his trip North along the boundary line for 300 miles. From what traders and missionaries told us of previous years it would seem that the winters of 1890 and 1891 were exceptionally mild.

"Even at the low temperature of this region the great cold of Greenland is comparatively regal, but as there are only three months of growing weather this is usually accounted unfit for food. Ground grasses six feet high along the Yukon and Porcupine lowlands, a more remarkable fact when you consider that the Porcupine extends many miles above the Arctic circle. There were also salmon berries, blueberries, currants and raspberries in profusion and hundreds of acres of cranberries. Of timber the finest that the Indians store large quantities for winter food.

"If the gentle Yankee found a 'color' of gold on nearly every spot I examined, but nowhere was there any indication of the precious metal in paying quantities. There may be plenty of gold there, but it will take much capital and labor to make it available. I returned by the way of the season among the miners had been unusually profitable.

"Of what is known as Far Yukon we could find only a part of what seemed to have been the foundation of a fireplace. I found among the ruins the weather vane which was placed in the old fort at the time of its erection, two hundred years ago. It is in the shape of a rooster and is carved out of oak.

"The country seems to be inexhaustibly supplied with timber. The largest specimens of early spring carry down to the coast millions upon millions of feet of timber, chiefly of cottonwood, straight trunks. Last spring the Yukon was not navigable for steamers for a long time on account of the quantities of driftwood that it carried. For several days the river was solidly blocked."

The Human Family.

Of the entire human race, 500,000,000 are wholly civilized, that is, they wear garments of some kind; 350,000,000 habitually go naked, and 700,000,000 only speak parts of the body; 500,000,000 live in houses, 500,000,000 in huts and caves and 250,000,000 virtually have no shelter.

Good Reason.

Tramp—Please, sir, give me a quarter!

Lawyer Howe—A quarter! Why do you ask me for a quarter?

Tramp—Because I didn't like to ask you for half a dollar, for fear you wouldn't give it to me.—N. Y. Herald.

THE ROSE AND THE THORN.

The rose, indeed, is back in fragrant choice,
Or how it came to be I do not know;
But I have ceased to care to wear a rose,
Since I have had a thorn to call my own.

FACTS.

Inherent weakness afflicts any political organization that is driven to the necessity of inventing and parading false issues.

Past political history in this country clearly proves the truth of that, and the Republican party of to-day is no exception.

In Pennsylvania its leaders are now endeavoring to divert public attention and judgment from glaring official delinquencies, while in New York its candidate for Governor foolishly hopes to make the people believe that Tammany Hall is the entire Democracy of the State, and an embodied monster seeking to devour every man, woman and child throughout the rural districts, and in Ohio, McKinley and Company result, if they could, obscure living questions with partisan dust.

Political fiction will not pass current.

Why politicians may gloat over their imaginary decoys is still,but they tread on slippery ground.

The American people demand facts, and never before were they so determined and well qualified to practically judge them for themselves; and parade the solid grain of truth from the windy chaff of pretense.

The Democrats frankly come before the people with definite principles and measures applicable to the vital issues of the day, and availing of legitimate political criticism, charge various misdeeds upon the Republican party,among which the following are prominent specifications:

For endeavoring forcibly to make the elective franchise subservient to corrupt partisanship.

For the wanton waste of public money through unjustifiable Congressional appropriations.

For enacting a tariff under the fictitious name of protection, a measure conceived in the very spirit of treason for their own special gain and to the detriment of the general public welfare.

Facts are what the people want and what they will have. The question must be settled at the bar of public opinion.

VOTE THE DEMOCRATIC TICKET.

THE COLORED DEMOCRATS.

The colored men of New York are rapidly becoming Democrats through sheer force of intelligence.

The men of their race to whom they look for counsel and guidance are not deceived by parrot cries of prejudice. They see clearly that there is no reason why a colored man should be regarded as "belonging," in the chattel sense, to a particular political party than why any other American citizen should be bound in like manner to the service of a master.

They understand the hollowness of Republican professions of friendship for their race. They know that the suffrage, to be of any value to them, must be used in accordance with the dictates of conscience and enlightened self-interest.

Being in the main men who earn their living by work, they are victims of the unjust laws enacted by the Republican party in the interest of monopoly. Their natural place, as parties now stand, is with the Democratic party, the party of the people, of equal laws and low taxes. They are learning more and more to recognize this truth and acting upon it, as witness the rapid growth of the colored Democratic clubs in this city.—N. Y. World.

HARD SCOTCH SENSE.

Sandy McPherson: You callants, Flower and Fassett, are makin' muckle talk I' the papers just noo. Of the two, Rotie, which will ye vote for? Rotie McFassett: Hoot, I dinnae ken the bawbees, ye ken, but I'm inclined to the mon Flower. I'll no vote for an administration that favors the makin' of a siller dollar that's a saxpence short in weight. Sandy: I'm wi' ye, mon, I'that.—New York Daily News.

The Elizabeth Herald advocates the name of William M. Oliver as the next candidate for Mayor of that city. A better or more suitable selection could not be made.

The Democrats of the First Ward contemplate forming a ward organization in anticipation of the election of 1892. A suitable location and rooms are now being sought for.

A vote for Sidney E. Flower as Assemblyman in the 3d District of Union County will represent honesty and capability. Every Democrat and conservative man should vote for him.

The Democrats of Somerset should see to it that Hon. James G. Bergen is re-elected to the House of Assembly by a handsome majority. He has proven himself a capable legislator in the past.

And now the Republicans of Newark want to contest the election of Mayor Haines on the ground of fraud. When will the g. o. p. get over that cry, which they inaugurated in the Tilden campaign?

Robert Field Stockton, son of ex-Attorney General Stockton, and familiarly known as "Ed" Stockton, died at his home in Trenton, N. J., Tuesday morning, after a short illness from pneumonia.

The Republican press of New Jersey is raging the members of the g. o. p. to "get together." They are orders—the good old Democracy has "got together" and learned to stay here for some time to come.

The Democracy of Rahway, says of our candidate for Assembly honors in the Third District: "Mr. Flower is an excellent man, and will receive the undivided support of the Democracy of the District."

The members of the Grand Army Posts in the Third Assembly District should not forget the fact on election day, that Sidney E. Flower is an honorably discharged soldier and a member of their organization.

The Democrats of the Third Assembly District of Union County should remember that the same has in times past been represented by a candidate of their own political faith. In the person of their present candidate they have a man well worthy of their support. Vote for Sidney E. Flower.

All manner of nice little presents are being sent to Hon. Grover Cleveland, who might appropriately be styled the national baby. The presents come from associations as well as from individuals, and from near and far. The latest received in this line are a souvenir spoon from the Philadelphia Clover Club and a gold badge from the Vanderbilt Benevolent Association of Charleston.

Election on Tuesday, November 3.

Of the seven counties which elect Senators next month there is a reasonable certainty that four of them will return Democrats, as follows: Robert H. Hoagland, from Hunterdon, John Adrain, from Mid-Hesex; William A. Martin, from Hontercdon, and John McMickle, from Sussex. Burlington is more likely to send Mitchell S. Bergen, the Republican candidate to the opponent, N. W. C. Hays, and Cape May and Passaic are both doubtful as to the Republican nominees.

The New Brunswick Times in an editorial referring to the good work done by the State Board of Taxation, and other advantages gained to the State by Democratic measures, correctly says, ing which the party in power is being denounced by its enemies, closes as follows:

"But so long as our Democratic State officials keep on doing, and results vindicate their deeds, they can afford to let the dissappointed ones denounce them as they please. The intelligent people will know and always will rage."

The business failures occurring throughout the country during last week number for the United States and for Canada 30, or a total of 270, as compared with totals of 230 for that week before, and 244 the week previous to that. For the corresponding week of last year there were 215, the number representing 186 failures in the United States and 29 in the Dominion of Canada. It will thus be seen that the list of failures does not decrease in number, notwithstanding the promises to the contrary made by the McKinley bill.

A CATASTROPHE AVERTED.

Presence of Mind and Quick Action Save a Residence from Destruction.

Sunday night, while Col. Moore of Fanwood was residing to his son in the parlor, Mr. Moore being upstairs, a cry was heard as of a rushing wind. On investigation the hanging lamp in the dining-room was found to be ablaze and about to explode. Quick as thought a rug was grasped from the floor with one hand while Jimmy, who is always at his father's heels, was lifted with the other and thrown from the room. The next instant the room was in flames, the lamp having burst and the burning oil scattered in all directions. Hastily moving the dining-table aside, an attempt was made to smother the fire, but it gained in intensity. One chance alone remained to save the house, and it was accepted. With fire all around him, the large floor rug was torn up by Mr. Moore, and, by quick and dexterous handling, the flames were smothered but not extinguished. Help at last arrived in the presence of H. P. Robinson, and, by the combined efforts of the two men, the burning curtains and other furniture were thrown out the window to the lawn and left to their fate. It was a close call, but the damage will not exceed $300.

FANWOOD'S FAIRY.

Little Lilly Fancher Has a Birthday Party.

"That was an awful pretty party page" Such was the remark of one of the guests of Lilly Fancher last Saturday, after attending her birthday celebration. The games provided and improvised engaged the attention of the youngsters from 3 o'clock until supper was announced at 6. The procession for the dining room was led by Master Victor Downer, escorting the little hostess. Following was the crescent Lengrer master of the Greek Kew, the others in order, with Teddy Fancher and Lulu Bates on the extreme left. The table arranged by Mrs Fancher was a marvel of neatness, and the candles burning in the cake, which was of course the center-piece represented the years the little lady has been with us. Dainty fare and pretty were the birthday gifts, prominent among them being a magnificent doll house presented by the parents, and antique cradle from Aunt Mary and Aunt Lane. At about 7 o'clock, the children reluctantly took their leave, all saluting and congratulating "the fairy" on the success of her party.

A SON OF THE OLD BAY STATE

HAIL TO SIDNEY ELMER FLOWER, THE TRUE-BLUE CANDIDATE FOR ASSEMBLYMAN!

As a Boy He Was Given the Best of Breeding Among the Bare Old Hills of Massachusetts—In a Boy He Was Loyal to His Country in Her Hour of Need, and Shed His Blood in Her Defence—His Life Record Is One of Which Any Citizen Might Well Be Proud, and Other Services—As a Valiant Soldier, a Comprehensive and Trustworthy Citizen, a Stalwart Patriot, He Richly Deserves the Legislative Honors His Party Have Offered Him.

In nominating Sidney Elmer Flower of Plainfield for member of Assembly from the third district of Union county the Democrats have chosen a man who when elected will fill the office capably, honestly, and satisfactorily to every citizen of the district, and especially to those who truly at heart. Mr. Flower is a man who can be trusted implicitly to represent his constituents faithfully, to work ardently for such measures which will bring benefit, to aid materially in accomplishing reform where it is needed, to achieve by straightforward methods and energetic and untiring efforts those ends for which will win the confidence of every doubting partisan heart and the applause and inducement of every patriotic citizen.

To be a gallant son of Massachusetts to be a man of stanch integrity; and the more matter of birthplace therefore had not at Oxford, and that of the leaning "true metal"; for in the cultured city of Boston of the old Bay State he first saw the light of day, Dec. 8, 1845.

He was a child in arms when he left his native place, and his boyhood was spent in Ashfield, up in the Hampshire Hills, in the northwestern part of the State. Ashfield is famous throughout New England for its schools, and there it was that young Sidney received the rudiments of his education. He was eleven years of age when his father took him to the far West, into a new country in Michigan. Here, amid the wilds, lived Sidney till he reached his eighteenth year, when the war broke out and he enlisted and went to the front.

As a valiant soldier in the 1 t Michigan Volunteer Cavalry he saw much hard fighting. His service was continuous throughout the whole Rebellion. He was not off duty a single day during the entire period of the war. Although twice he was severely wounded—once at the second battle of Winchester, and once in a cavalry skirmish at Brentsville—he pluckily kept in the ranks, and bold through the pain and weakness and fatigue. He still carries with him the honorable scars that he received in the fight which he defended his country.

At the close of the war, in 1865, he went with his regiment to the frontier, to do service against the Indians, and Arapahoe Indians; and, as in the Rebellion, did excellent service. He was finally given his honorable discharge at Salt Lake City, Utah, in March, 1866, when he received a certificate signed by Captain Frank Hattan and Brigadier-General Peter Knagg, one of Sidney's heroes, testifying that Mr. Flower had participated in 42 general engagements, and at least 300 minor engagements and skirmishes.

During his service, Mr. Flower was captured by Mosby's Guerillas and robbed of all his money and very nearly all his clothing. He escaped barefoot during the night, and rejoined his detachment. He took part in many thrilling events of those bloody years, but never has he been heard to boast of the deeds of bravery which were his and which would make the pages of an historian's chronicles glow and tingle with their record of vigorous and stalwart patriotism.

Settling down to a life of peace again, Mr. Flower lived several years in New York city, and some time in Buffalo, where he helped by his vote to elect Grover Cleveland sheriff. While in Buffalo he was nominated for the same office for himself, but he is now re-ing the Democratic ticket, in a district that had for years been a Republican stronghold. He made a highly creditable run, and cut down considerably the Republican majority that so long had prevailed. Last year, in Plainfield, on the local ticket, he was the nominee for city treasurer, and was 90 votes ahead of his associate nominees.

Mr. Flower was married Oct. 10, 1881. His bride was Mrs. L. M. Pinkham, daughter of a prominent New England family. Her father was a sea-faring statesman, and served forty years in the Legislature of New Hampshire.

Mr. Flower has now well-known to Plainfield the past nine years. In his daily life he has always been modest and unobtrusive; in all business transactions with men he has acquired an enviable reputation for honorable dealing and true manliness. Not the slightest breath of suspicion has ever been breathed in his name. With his estimable wife he has established a flourishing business and the most peaceful and happy of homes. His qualities of head and heart have won the respect and esteem of all who have come in contact with him. This sketch would be incomplete without a private, hearty and sincere, to his integrity of character and principle, his sterling worth as a man, his dignity and fidelity as a citizen.

During his residence in this city Mr. Flower has become prominently identified with various of its societies. He is a member of the Royal Arch Masons, the Red Men, and accepted Masons, the Knights of Honor, the Improved Order of Red Men, the Grand Army of the Republic, the Order of the Iron Hall, and the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Of the Knights of Honor he is a past dictator; of the Iron Hall order he is past chief justice; and of the Grand Army Rank, Knights of Honor, he is commander.

Altogether he is a man deserving of any citizen's vote. He will ever be found loyal to right principle; he will ever be found on the side of honesty, truth, and justice. A vote cast for Sidney Elmer Flower will be an honorable vote, a credit to the man who made it. A vote for such a man as Mr. Flower can never be a vote thrown away.

The Four Leaf Clover quartettes—amateur comedians of Plainfield, N. J.—are at work on some new specialties for this season. The quartette consists of the Spencer brothers—Howard, Will and Tillary—and George Taggart. It did some excellent work last year in sketches by George Taggart.

End of the Vendanet Pin Contest.

The proposed contest over the will of the late Theodore Vendanet, Jr., Plainfield is at an end. The latter came up before the orphans court at Elizabeth yesterday, and after the examination of the witnesses to the will,one will was offered for probate without protest on the part of the contestants. The decree thereafter stands as rendered, and its provisions will be carried out without litigation.

THAT CLEVER ENGLISH SWINDLER.

When in Plainfield He Was from Oxford, and Then in Oxford He Was from Plainfield.

A young fellow of very plausible address came to Plainfield last March and told a pitiful tale about taking a theatrical company to New South Wales in Africa or some such place, otherwise unknown, and trying to make his way home without money. He claimed to be a brother of Walter Besant, the English novelist, and he managed to secure a number of citizens out of small sums of money.

Later his rascalities were exposed in the London papers and the world in England. A few days ago an Associated Press dispatch stating that a man claiming to belong to Plainfield, N. J., and giving his name as Balkwell, was arrested for swindling. The sequel proves that this man Balkwell is the same shrewd scoundrel who passed here as Alfred Herbert Besant. The story of his schemes possesses a peculiar interest. He came to grief in London, and from there the following summary of his swindles is sent:

The man Balkwell was arrested in New England last week for obtaining ten shillings under false pretences, in the clever swindling game victimized gentlemen of the highest people in several parts of the United States, under the alias of Alfred Herbert Besant, a reputed nephew of Mrs. Annie Besant. On March 31 last "Besant" appeared in New Hampshire and New Jersey towns, and told a pitiful story. He victimized several Rutgers College graduates, and had a purse made up for him by the members of the English organization, the Sons of St. George, of New Brunswick. He started in Princeton, where, as a graduate of Oxford University, he impressed many professors and students with the belief that he must be what he said. The swindler spoke familiarly of Oliver Wendell Holmes, whom he said he had met at Oxford, and had the use of the name of the leading authors at his tongue's end. Princeton students remember him for two or three top-of hours. "Besant" next appeared in Philadelphia, were a collection was taken up for him by Pennsylvania people. He boasted there of being well known by friends of George W. Childs, and of having made a deep point to the affections of the liberal people of Philadelphia. He went to Baltimore next. There he became a relative of Walter Besant, the English novelist. In another part of Maryland he passed as a cousin of the William Gladstone Cumming, of baronet fame. In New York he became a nephew of Sir Morell Mackenzie, and swindled several people, some of them well known.

THE JOB MALE WILL CASE.

The Dead Man's Sister-in-Law Describes the Scene in the Sydne Ann's Room.

Testimony in the matter of the application for the probate of the alleged nuncupative will of Job Male, Plainfield, was taken in this city, Monday, by Herbert W. Knight, Master in Chancery. The history of the case has already been published at length. After Mr. Male's death a will was produced by Craig A. Marsh, in which his property was disposed of just about as Plainfield people had always supposed it would be. It was alleged that after Mr. Male had instructed the lawyer how to make the will he became unable to sign it. The lawyer, it was held, took the dying man's hand, and, placing the pen in it, signed his name. Mr. Male nodding his as-ent to the action taken. When the will was produced for probate it was promptly contested by the dead ex-Mayor's relatives.

Mr. Knight, Monday, took the evidence of Sarah Ann Male, the old lady, the sister-in-law of Job Male. The witness is 80 years of age and so rheumatic that the evidence had to be taken at her home, 18 Cox street avenue. She testified that she lived with Job Male six years before his death and was in the room at the time he attempted to make a will. She heard him give instructions to Mr. Marsh how to draw the document. She was about six feet away from Mr. Male, and heard all that was said. When questioned as to particulars the old lady became very confused and said she could not remember. Mr. Male had told her, she said, that he would be too fearful to live a week to execute the will. They were alone in the room at that time.

"I am sure," witness said—that he told me this before Mr Marsh was writing up the will, for then he was very much excited—could, his face was." Afterward witness admitted she was not sure whether Mr. Marsh had arrived or not when the remark was made. The old lady could not say whether she was interested in the will or not, but said that Job had told her that a he should have the house he lived in then as long as he lived, and that after his death Mr. Male's nephew of the deceased, should have it. He told her that on his death-bed The witness also said that on the occasion of hearing Marsh ask him whether that was his will, and Male replied "Yes".

A large number of lawyers were present when the hearing began. Craig A. Marsh and Craig A Marsh for the proponents of the will. Theodore Runyon on behalf of Robert A. Male; R. V. Lindabury for Charles H. Male, and Charles A. Reed for Sarah A. Delaney.

The importance of the testimony of this witness is due to the fact that the disputants of the will are striving to show that the contents of the will were dictated by Job Male, jr., who is largely benefited by it, and not by the dead man.

THE MANLY ART OF SELF-DEFENSE.

An Interesting Friendly Contest Between Local Devotees of the Sport.

The manly art of self-defense has many enthusiastic students in Plainfield, and a number of the young men of the city have made considerable advance in the study of the science. Interesting friendly bouts are a frequent occurrence, and the sport is one of the favorite nooks on private lawns. At some educational institutions boxing has become a recognized part of the boys' course of study. These facts account for the rumor that a friendly affair some over-sensitive people might imagine, but are, nonetheless, a good-humored way, and an entirely fri ndly contests. Such an one may be seen every week at the Harned Academy on Park avenue, and such an one was witnessed Thursday afternoon by a sparring match between two warm friends, who enjoyed it and obtained instruction and benefit from it, as did the other students of the academy.

The hand-coverings used were 4-oz. gloves. Five rounds were fought, and Marquis of Queensbury rules governed. The contestants were M. Briggs and W. Meehan S. B. Pearson was time-keeper, and P. G. Bleakley was judge.

The conflentants toed the mark at 8.10 o'clock. After an excellent battle the match ended in a draw, through the inability of the contes ants to continue longer.

The story by rounds:

Round 1—Meehan leads with a side out, but is parried, and in return gets an undercut on the nose. Then follows some sharp in-fighting, in which the honors were about evenly divided. The round was ended by Meehan knocking Briggs down, and the round was awarded to Meehan.

Round 2—Briggs leads carefully for Meehan's nose, and lands on it. Meehan, in return, lands on Briggs' left eye, and follows with a fusillade which leaves many clear in-fighting. The round was ended by Meehan knocking Briggs down, and the round was awarded to Meehan.

Round 3—The round opens with heavy exchanges, in which Briggs' left eye suffers severely. Meehan's nose is also damaged. Briggs' lip is bleeding from a cut received in the second round. Meehan's left eye is closed. Briggs' left eye is also closed. Meehan's nose is bleeding freely. Briggs' lip is bleeding freely. Meehan's left eye is closed. Briggs' left eye is also closed. Meehan's nose is bleeding freely. Briggs' lip is bleeding freely. The round was evenly split.

Round 5—Meehan's left eye is closed. Briggs' left eye is also closed. Meehan's nose is bleeding freely. Briggs' lip is bleeding freely. The round was evenly split.

Round 6—Meehan's left eye is closed. Briggs' left eye is also closed. Meehan's nose is bleeding freely. Briggs' lip is bleeding freely. The round was evenly split.

At the end of this round it was announced that Meehan had received a severe injury to the ankle. They were evenly split.

Round 7—Meehan's left eye is closed. Briggs' left eye is also closed. Meehan's nose is bleeding freely. Briggs' lip is bleeding freely. The round was evenly split.

HYMENEAL.

Crawford—Gay.

The wedding of Miss Alice May Gay, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew H. Gay of Rahway, to Harry T. Crawford, took place in the Rahway First Presbyterian church last Thursday evening. Miss Gay, now Mrs. Crawford, is a granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Beach, and a niece of Mrs. W. A. Woodruff, of 46 East Second street, and has many warm friends in this city, who will be interested in the announcement of the nuptials, from the Elizabeth Herald.

A beautiful church wedding took place at the First Presbyterian church at 6.30 o'clock last evening, it being the occasion of the marriage of Miss Alice Gay, daughter of ex-Councilman Matthew W. Gay, to Henry T. Crawford of the firm of J. W. Crawford & Son, leather merchants of Williamsport, Pa.

The church was decorated with palms, ferns, potted plants and smilax.

The bridal party entered the church in the following order: The ushers, Messrs. Joseph Gay, Frank Woodruff, brother and cousin of the bride, George Daily of Woodbridge and Frank Halsday of this city; Miss Minnie Gay, the maid of honor, followed by the bridesmaids in white organdies, then the bride, who looked lovely in a rich costume of white brocade and taffie, with diamond ornaments. She was unattended by a best man. He was resting on the arm of her father. The bride's manly little stepbrother, Master Herbert Gay, brought up the rear with the bride's bouquet of bridal roses.

The reament the bridal party reached the entrance to the church the great organ, under the masterly skill of Prof. George E. Oliver, sent forth Lohengrin's wedding march, and when the wedding party reached the chancel rail they were met by the groom and best man, J. Plumner McIlarrah of Wilkesbarre, Pa., and the Rev. George Hubbard Ayres, pastor of the church, who immediately commenced the ceremony, which was impressively done.

The moment that the bride's father had given her away, he stepped back to the first pew nearest the bridal party and seated his hand on the shoulder of Mrs. Gay, the bride's mother, who wore an elegant costume of black velvet and pink faille, with pink feather trimmings and diamond ornaments.

After the ceremony Gay did his part so well as pace and handed the bride her bouquet with such polished grace that he was awarded with a complimentary smile from the several hundred guests present.

As soon as the ceremony was completed the happy pair returned to their carriages, which led the procession, led by Prof. Oliver's rendition of Mendelssohn's wedding march.

They returned to the residence of the bride's father on Seminary street, where an elegant wedding supper awaited. When this had been enjoyed to the utmost, Yantyvis and Vantyvis the best musical furnished excellent music, and dancing was indulged in until 10.30 o'clock, when the bride and groom took a train for New York en route for points in the south.

Among the notable guests were noticed the mother and sister of the groom, Mrs. VanKirk of Boston, Mass., Miss Sarah and Miss Louisa Voorhees both of Elizabeth, Dr. and Mrs. Randolph of Brooklyn, Prof. Cuttay of Plainfield and George Hunt of Newark.

The presents were rare, unique and numerous.

McNally—Quinn.

A notable wedding—the most brilliant that ever took place in the sacred edifice—was celebrated in St. Mary's church Tuesday afternoon at 4.30.

The contracting parties were well of Plainfield. The bride was Mary J., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Quinn. The groom was John McNally. The Rev. P. E. Smyth officiated

The bride's costume was a handsome one of white silk, with point lrpin, veil, and orange blossoms. She carried an ivory-covered prayer-book, gold bound. Her ornaments were pearls and diamonds.

The bridesmaids were the Misses Gargrity of New York, whose costumes were of cream white silk. They carried bouquets of chrysanthemums

The "best man" was Frank McNally, of Jersey City, brother of the groom.

The bride was escorted to the altar and given away by her father. She was preceded in the bridal procession by the groom and his brother and bridesmaids.

The wedding march was beautifully played by the organist of St. Mary's.

After the ceremony a reception was given at the home of the bride's parents. The guests were numerous, and the gifts were very handsome. The father's gift was a deed for an acre of land at Grant avenue.

The happy couple went to Philadelphia next morning, on their wedding trip.

Grand Fruit From the Rosebush Orchards.

There was sent to this sanctum to-day some specimens of that magnificent apple known as the "Priest", from the orchards of William T. Boorille, near Greenwich, Conn. The grand rose colored fruit averaged from 12 to 16 ounces each, and was of the most delicious flavor.

The entire bunch of the appellate court concur in the decision that handsomer or more luscious fruit never reached Plainfield, and adds to making the growers of many golden returns from his valuable graves.

Mr. Boorille is private secretary to C. F. Gallaudet, president of the Southern Telephone and Telegraph company, New York city.

Keep the Best Boy.

It is not every boy who can make a bed well. Beds should be stripped of all belongings and left to air thoroughly. Don't, however, leave a window open directly upon the bed and linen, with a fog or rain prevailing outside. Don't, however, make the bed in the bedding hanging out of a window, and, perhaps, not actually falling, but with the appearance of hankering in that direction. Don't make the bed while the occupant is still in it. Don't make it in the room where he got his cold. A room may be aired in cold weather, but the bedding and bed must not absorb any dampness.

He Knew Her Way.

"Today is my birthday," said Mrs. Gayboy, to her husband at the breakfast table, "and I'm 30 years old."

"So it is," said the young man. "You must be nearly as old as I am now; sit, down and eat your breakfast."

BAPTISTS' BIG CONVENTION.

In Spite of the Storm, the Worthy Pastor Has a Time of Rare Christian Pleasure.

(From The Press of Oct. 21.)

The Baptists were of course not exactly elated over the deluge of rain that fell, yesterday, but nevertheless their spirits were not dampened, and the convention of the East New Jersey Baptist Sunday-school Association" held in the First Baptist church was in every particular a glowing success.

The devotional services of the morning were in charge of L. H. Biglow, jr., of this city. After singing and prayers by Rufus K. Tase, assistant superintendent of the First Baptist school, made a hearty speech, welcoming the delegates in a most cordial manner. He spoke in touching words of the tender ties which bound them together as co-laborers in the Master's vineyard, and urged all to greater efficiency in winning souls to Christ. He spoke of the political conventions, which nominated candidates; but we—he said—have no candidate to nominate—but Jesus Christ is our King, to whom we owe allegiance. The political conventions—he concluded—have platforms of political fidelity; but we have a platform, with a thousand planks, strong enough to bear up all mankind.

George Vaughn, president of the convention, responded in a brief and fitting manner, and reviewed the work of the past year and the opportunities that had been laid before us to improve. He spoke of the great responsibilities resting on the teachers. They must lead gently and earnestly the ones in their charge, to the Master, and to depend upon the aid of Heavenly Father for guidance and strength.

After the singing of "Blest Be the Tie that Binds", the regular order of business was taken up. The reading of letters from the different schools was first on the programme. Reports were received from the church, showing a large number of very healthy growth, both as to numbers and in a spiritual sense.

"Laughing in the Sheaves" was sung, and the Rev. Dr. Luther of Newark delivered an address on "Conversions in the Sunday-school", which was very helpful. He gave a number of practical suggestions as to how conversions were to be accomplished, after which the subject was discussed by several present.

The appointment of committees resulted in the following selections:

On Place of Next Meeting—C. Hann, West-field; T. S. Smith, South Church, Newark; the Rev. W. A. Bowers, Irvington.

On Programme—W. McCutchen, Plainfield; the Rev. J. Newton, Newark.

On Enrollment—Fred. Speer, South Church, Newark; Albert Conner, Plainfield.

On Nominations—Rufus K. Tase, Plainfield; G. W. Lawrence, Newark; H. L. Goodrich, Plainfield.

On Resolutions—The Rev. R. M. Luther, D. D., the Rev. M. Redfoord.

On Music—Miss Lizzie K. DeLemos, Newark; D. Turton Newark; J. M Hough, Jersey City.

A very excellent dinner filled in the recess and in the afternoon the several committees reported.

The nominating committee suggested those resolutions, which were unanimously adopted:

President—Geo. Vaughn.

Secretary—S. D. Thurton.

The committee on finance reported that the sum of $29.40 had been contributed by 26 schools, for the convention. Five schools had not contributed. From them $11 was due. For the various departments of the year's work $16,960.14 had been subscribed.

The enrollment committee reported that the delegates numbered about 500.

The digest of letters gave the following statistics:

Total number of schools in association, 78; total represented, 76; total number of teachers and officers, 68; total number of scholars, 4,000; total number of scholars enrolled, 3,000; total number of schools baptized last year, 16; average attendance of teachers and officers, 10; average attendance of scholars, 2,000.

The report of Plainfield's First Baptist Sunday-school was as follows:

Total number of scholars, 500; number of superintendents, 3; main superintendent, C. H. Hendricks; superintendent primary department, with 18 scholars, L. H. Biglow, assistant superintendent, Rufus K. Tase; scholars baptized last year, 60; amount contributed last year for convention expenses, $21; teachers and officers, 30; monthly school exercises; members of church, ——.

Question was chosen as the place of the next meeting.

The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That the thanks of the Convention are tendered to the ladies of the church of the First Baptist church of Plainfield—and especially to the ladies of the church and school of the Second Baptist church—for the bountiful entertainment of the delegates and friends in attendance upon the 17th session of the Convention; and that the presence of the missionary are also tendered to the church.

Resolved, That we earnestly advise each school connected with this union to put into practice the plan of "Duty Money" as recommended by the school to missions at home and abroad. Wherever schools where it is possible to appoint one of their number as a Missionary Money whose duty it shall be occasionally to address the school in missionaries on the field and thus awaken sympathy and establish communication with those who are carrying out the Lord's great commands.

Resolved, That we recommend our pastors to God for the number of scholars brought to Christ during the past year so far as reported here. We deem that God has answered prayer, and we most heartily recommend to our school the fields and the method of special prayer for the conversion of those for whom we are not of Christ.

We would recommend for this day the 23d Lord's day in December.

The Rev. H. R. Goodchild gave a very interesting address on the "Duty of the Blackboard", and discussion of the subject followed.

The Rev. Asa Reed Dilts of this city treated the subject of "Duty of Teaching Her Class". He spoke of the teacher being adapted to the scholars—first, as a friend, by which she must interest herself in the peculiar circumstances of her scholars in every phase of life, learn what they are interested in, and study their likes. Second, as a teacher, which she must get the scholars interested in themselves and acquainted with each other. She have an object; for instance, a certain class are supporting a boy in the mission India; another class of girls raised $15 towards the church debt; thus the scholars get into social contact with each other. A teacher's example must be the best. She must refrain from all questionable amusement. Third, she must adapt herself as a saviour. There is one great Saviour, and she must participate in His work as a saviour of her class. What new scholars come into the class, she must find out their spiritual condition, and feed them as they need. She must pray earnestly and unceasingly for the aid of the Spirit.

Under the head of discussion of the subject several delegates took part, among them a number of ladies. The meeting proved to be very profitable to all present.

In the evening a service of song was conducted by L. H. Biglow, jr., and the meeting was opened by prayer by the Rev. D. J. Yerkes.

The first address of the evening was given by the Rev. B. D. Hahn, of Newark, on the "Progress of Sunday-schools". It was very interesting and helpful. He spoke showing that he was master of his subject. He gave the history of the school was making rapid strides towards improvement and held it up as the grandest school in the world as an educational institution.

"Christianity in Our Work" was the subject assigned to the Rev. Dr. W. W. Boyd, of Newark. Serious defects—he said—were apparent in every phase of our work; there are spots on the sun, and spots in Sunday-school work. Enthusiasm means "God in us", a possession and mastery of that kind. "I must work" is the thought that fills one while it is day; the night cometh when no man can work. Apart from Christ we can do nothing. If we receive the Holy Ghost Christ we receive also power. Life is the test of work. Christ told the Apostles to tarry at Jerusalem, and they were filled with the Holy Ghost, and ready for service. Whoever is touched by the Holy Ghost becomes an irresistible force, and a very mouth of the Holy Spirit. The supreme end of the Sunday-school is the conversion of the soul and a feeder to It. And it is for the conversion of the children. What was needed in each heart was an indwelling presence of the Holy Spirit. In order to do this we should give the most helpful gatherings the First church has ever had. Too much cannot be said in praise of the ladies who, in charge of Miss Florence Mann, provided so efficiently for the delegates.

—County physician Westcott of Scotch Plains was called on to examine the body of James Hookes, Pennsylvania railway baggage master on the early morning paper train, who fell dead in his car, Saturday, and gave burial permit.

J. A. DEMAREST - - City Editor.

—Have you bought your seats for the Musin concert, yet?

—There are not more than a hundred choice seat left for the Musin concert. You would better buy now.

—There were indulgent in the liveliest kind of a street fight on Craig place, Saturday night, and of course the police were far, far away.

—A Sunny man about town says that it is seemingly proper that the local clergymen should not be active, as it is a seemingly occupation.

—There was some thick bowling at the Crescent League club-house, on Monday. Dye Brothers team rolled 839, as follows: Williams 171, Teel 169, Rogers 167, Hines 160; Reed 153.

—Rev. Cox, of West Seventh street, had his knee severely hurt and lost time, from its proper place, during a foot-ball game Saturday. He will travel on crutches now for some days to come.

—The next meeting of the Central New Jersey League will be held at the club-house of the Elizabeth Athletic club Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. It is understood that Plainfield will be represented.

—The finest celery that comes to Plainfield's market, is that raised by Thomas Vail, Esq., on the William B. Stewart farm on Clinton street. He will be in the city with his first load from there this week. It is the best grocers of this city buy of him.

—The Courier noticed by those of the Catholic faith that under the head of "ice cream pudding," "charlotte" and "black jack" are proper knaves, speaking of a dead horse as "one given the other day, said: "Every one to his taste, no two alike display."

—A fair for the benefit of the church building fun will be given at the Tabernacle, corner Somerset and Park place, Friday, 23, from 4 to 10. Fancy articles will be on sale. The general sale will be continued all day Saturday, and will be made of especially attractive lines of goods.

—Supervisor Judge Brooks and Thomas Barkley, of the Potter press works, are putting a new boiler in the Jersey City Dispatch press room. The boiler was built at the press works here from the designs of the inventor, who is foreman in the Journal establishment.

—Burglars attempted a raid on the house of Peter Hall, on Park avenue, Sunday evening. They tried to get in through a broken window sash, throwing dust in their eyes, but were frightened away by the family. Mr. Hall is a grave, quiet man, and passed the night with his gun and pistols both ready. But the late the intruder feared him exciting hail fire.

—Conductor McVey and Frank Platt had an accident in the stock of Rogers Bros., the show steamer, at the entertainment sale to-day. They had $2 000 to cover the contents of the show, and Platt, who was in charge was first the property of D. F. Randolph who ran the Rogers Bros. concerned. When it was burned McVey and Haffner stepped forward and, it is said, advanced $1,000 each, and bought Randolph's claim.

—Dead Rose, the watermelon contractor, has erected a small-pox shanty on the Italians' Saturday night. Some Italians who had been discharged were around furnishing beer to the men at work in the excavations, and generating trouble. The contractors came along, smashed the beer bottles, and drove the pilsners away. Then, seeing that a big job was involved, refused to pay the men off until the morning, so that they could not get drink over Sunday.

NOTES OF THE BOYS' CLUB.

Sunday Speech in Benchmanship, and Fine Entertainment Tonight.

The average attendance per assembly last week was 68. The largest was 74, and the smallest 58. The number of visits to the club the week was 97.

All those who have not yet joined the class in penmanship are requested to hand in their names to the superintendent, as soon as possible, as the class is limited to 50. Five cents will be allowed to work one evening a week.

Five boys joined during the last week, making the membership of the club to date 189.

An entertainment will be given next Monday evening, beginning at 8 o'clock. There will be instrumental and vocal music and a short talk by E. T. Fraser of North Plainfield. Mr. Fraser has addressed the boys before, and all are well acquainted with him. Both the boys and their parents are invited to the entertainment.

The entertainment to be given the boys, on either the evening preceding Thanksgiving or Thanksgiving evening, will depend upon the number of visits paid to the boys. A small stage will be put up, and all will be treated to a short theatrical performance by talent from North Plainfield and New York city.

Looking for Her Fugitive Husband.

A handsome little woman from Brooklyn, Stapleton, N. Y., got off the train at the Central depot, Lynch Tuesday. She was in search of her husband, Frank Adams who had deserted her after a honeymoon of about two weeks. She had left him in disgust, and had promised faithfully to write to her no matter where he was. Not having heard from him, she set out in search. She suspected that he was with a bad book woman at Plainfield, but left a week ago. The sad-faced bride is still on his track.

Mrs. Barick's Narrow Escape.

Just as the Farmington express arrived at Bridgewater on Monday night, a stone came crashing through one of the car windows. A Mrs. Barick sat in the seat opposite, and the stone just grazed her face. She fainted and was driven all over and about her. Another woman near her, also barely escaped injury. It is not known who threw the stone or why it was thrown, apparently. In all probability it was the act of some thoughtless person.

Mrs. Barick stood the shock bravely, and, unlike most women, was not at all excited when interviewed by a Press reporter a few minutes after the occurrence.

In the Interest of Negro Education.

There will be a public meeting in the interest of negro education as represented by the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, at Tuskegee, Ala., in the Crescent Avenue church, Tuesday evening of next week at 8 o'clock.

A quartette of students will sing negro songs peculiar to the "Black Belt of the South."

Two of the students will speak; one will tell how he is getting his education and at the same time learning the printer's trade, and the other will tell of how he is supporting and learning blacksmithing while studying. Remarks will also be made by Booker T. Washington, principal of the Tuskegee school, and others.

ALLOW ME to add my tribute to the efficacy of Ely's Cream Balm. I was suffering from a severe attack of influenza and catarrh, and was induced to try your remedy. The result was marvelous. In three days I was entirely free from the influenza, and my catarrh was greatly relieved. I can recommend it as a most pleasant, convenient and effective remedy for catarrh and cold in the head with which I was afflicted. I strongly recommend it to all sufferers from that disease.—Leading Dealer of the U. S. Hon. Grand Opera Co.

At the close of the "grand and welfare" part of the programme, and with the last strains of the orchestra, the company repaired to the supper room, where a fine collation was served by the popular caterer, Stephenson, of North avenue. The entertainment was held at each meeting the pipe of peace and good-will, and allowing the foreign friends time to catch the 11.30 train for home. All were thoroughly satisfied that the evening had been pleasantly spent.

Defending the Dead Lad.

To THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—In your paper of the 15th inst. you published an account of the sad accident which caused the death of Matthew Mc-Lernon, one of the members of our Boys' Brigade. Statements were wrong in many particulars, and very unjust. He was not a bad boy, and had never given his parents any trouble in any way. He was one of the most loyal boys stated, but was playing with his brother in a detached car. The unexpected coupling of the engine caused the boys to fall from the car, in this way throwing him to the ground and breaking his neck. It is but just to his memory as a good boy that you in a proper manner make the correction in your paper. By so doing you will oblige

W. B. WAINWRIGHT.

Plainfield, October 21st, 1891.

Plainfield, N. J., Oct. 19, 1891.

[The Press is very glad to find so valiant and excellent a defender of the dead lad, but in justice to itself it must state that the statements Charles Kelly, Jr., and the Rev. Charles Clark, made in those columns were furnished by eye-witnesses and were well corroborated. Concerning McLernon's character, The Press never said he was bad. What it did say was: "He and his brother have both given their father a great deal of anxiety by their waywardness. The surviving brother is to be sent to the State Reform School." This statement, like all the others in the article, was made on excellent authority, and THE PRESS has the fullest confidence in those who ought to know all about it that it was entirely correct in all it stated. It may be added that all of the accounts of the accident agreed, and agreement which was not true was published by the newspapers, on the point that the unfortunate lad was obstructing coal from a car when the accident happened.]

Jim has you seen that woman lately? John, in astonishment! What woman? That woman picking grapes for Quinn's Wine. Just see her in another column, and read about it; the wines are formed by chemists to be absolutely pure and equal to the best in the World. Sold by leading druggists in large cities and localities. Hospitals have adopted their use where wines are ordered.

THE SEWER ORDINANCE ADOPTED.

This and Other Business Before the Common Council.

The City Common Council delighted the hearts of the reporters Monday by getting down to business at 8:20 and adjourning at 8:45. All of the councilmen were present except Mr. Gioss.

The committee on buildings was given power to grant to Dr. G. W. Endicott the privilege of erecting a frame barn on his land at Park avenue and Seventh street.

William Mesereschmidt was appointed inspector of election in the second ward, vice Charles Van Winkle resigned.

Councilman Spaulding introduced a resolution empowering the Mayor and City Clerk to execute for the city a street lighting contract with the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light company, such lamps to be 25-candle power and the price for each lamp one year to be $15 50. The proposed contract was read, and all voted aye. Mr. Ackerman and Mr. Spaulding dug ee-dit by stating that Mr. Pope of the company had told him that Mr. Spaulding had tried hard to get a lower rate even than this, which, thanks to his efforts, is lower than last year. Mr. Pope had said that this was the lowest possible rate for which the company was just $1 each lamp a year. The new contract will begin Nov. 1, for 12 months.

Mr. Spaulding introduced an ordinance fixing a fine of $50 and 30 days' imprisonment for malicious injury to street lamps or fire-alarm boxes. It was hinted that a minor correction might be made.

On motion of Mr. Moffett the application of Edward Allen for another hackman's license was reconsidered and unanimously granted.

The ordinance giving to J. M. Low and his associates a sewerage franchise was unanimously adopted on third reading and final passage by the following vote:

Ayes—Councilmen Gallup, Hetfield, Moffett, Reinvale, Smith and Spaulding—6.

Noes—Councilmen Ackerman, Johnston and Reed—3.

Mr. Ackerman tried to have it tabled, but was unsuccessful.

CRESCENTS DID THEM 28 TO 0.

Not After That the North Sides Lost Two Games and Won an Amateur Championship.

The following is from the manager of the North Side Athletic club's base-ball team that the Crescents met with Taylor in the box, defeated by the score of 28 to 0:

To the Editor of The Press:—As the base-ball season is over, I send you the score of the game played between the Crescent League, whose kindly attended that game of Sept. 26, and the North Side Athletic club, and as North Side Athletic club that the attendance was not large after that game and subsequent games, I think it would be interesting to you to publish such startling news, as the score was 28 to 0 in favor of the Crescents with a percentage of 66, saying we won 28 out of 28 games played among the association clubs of Union county, and the Crescents of New York city. The standing of the clubs at the end of the season, both home and away, was as follows:

	Won.	Lost.	Percent.
North Side A. C.	28	0	1000
Crescents	18	10	643
Volunteers	7	20	259
Taylors	3	25	107

Next year I'm sure Plainfield, it will be with a flag that is not to be hauled at, if we have to pay for it ourselves. Base-ball, foot-ball and lacrosse will be played, and we will be in battling and runs secured.

THE HONOR LEGION ENTERTAIN.

Grand Officers Visit Plainfield, and the Evening is Delightfully Spent.

Ivanhoe Council, 1074, American Legion of Honor, met Tuesday night, with a large membership present, and entertained the following grand officers of the State: Grand Commander Tilton, Deputy Grand Commander Ridell, Grand Secretary Clinton, and Grand Treasurer Dunscomb. Remarks and addresses were made. Each of the visitors was enthusiastic over the advancement the order had made in the past few years. It was shown by the official report that it was one of the most solid fraternal insurance orders in the United States, having a member-ship of 45,000 and not one dollar of debt. It has a reserve fund of over $500,000, and had paid to widows and orphans over $10,000 this. This year it had paid a death loss to all members who have been in the order for 5 years. So satisfactory were these reports that the speakers were frequently applauded with applause from the members of the order.

Music and recitations were given in the course of the evening. Robert Gorton sang a solo, and Miss Mary Hall gave a recitation, accompanied by Miss Gorton on the piano. Both were encored.

Anchored, by Watson. The piece was beautifully rendered, and received much applause from the audience. Then the order's old-time friend and companion Carney gave his side-splitting Dutch conversation with Mother Liberty, and Old Jersey at her back.

At the close of the "grand and welfare" part of the programme, and with the last strains of the orchestra, the company repaired to the supper room, where a fine collation was served by the popular caterer, Stephenson, of North avenue. The entertainment was held at each meeting the pipe of peace and good-will, and allowing the foreign friends time to catch the 11.30 train for home. All were thoroughly satisfied that the evening had been pleasantly spent.

A MANLY LETTER FROM DR. COOLEY.

He Has Been Trying for Months to Avoid Any Scandal for His Retreat, and Now Wants to Settle His Fines.

To THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—As both Friends and foes have been active in bringing my name and private business into prominence through the columns of The Press, I must ask you to grant me space to reply, in part. Neither time nor circumstances will enable me to cover the entire ground.

I left the Sanford avenue property for a farm of years. After obtaining possession, I told Mr. Loomis that I would wait for exploration of the first term of the lease if objections were made to the institution. The first term expires the beginning of April; and as objections have been made, and as I find the home unsuited to my purpose, I have worked diligently, for months, to effect the promised and necessary change.

I am ready to announce that I have purchased the old Wadleigh place, on Somerset street, and that I will begin occupancy immediately and will finish by the first of April.

The grounds cover seventy acres; they are, as you are aware, beautiful as they stand, but they are capable of, and will receive, further development.

The building, planned by architect A. L. C. Marsh, will be of brick, heated by hot water, and lighted by electricity. Its exterior will be attractive; the interior will be equally so, and filled with every modern appliance which will enhance the comfort and assist in the cure of the inmates.

While the latter object is the first and chief in view, and while no patients will come from many States, I do not forget that I owe much to my fellow-citizens, and I will endeavor to discharge that indebtedness, in part, by the creation and maintenance of an institution of which they will be proud.

JUDSON H. COOLEY.

AN EVENING OF SOCIABILITY.

First Baptist Young People Readmonstly Entertain their Friends.

That wide-awake organization of the First Baptist church, the Young People's Society, gave their first sociable of the season, Thursday night and entertained an audience that well-filled the lecture room. The enjoyable programme was as follows:

Other Interesting Exercises Held Upon the Fifth Anniversary of a Flourishing Young Society.

The fifth anniversary of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the First Presbyterian church, Dunellen, was held Thursday night. An interesting entertainment, of which the following is the programme, was given in the church:

Organ Voluntary	Miss Maggie Swackhamer
Singing—"Onward Go"	Rev. J. A. Cuthbert, Society
Responsive Reading	Rev. W. C. Kinney
Prayer	Rev. E. E. Symon
Singing—"Work"	Society
Report of Treasurer and of Secretary.
Singing—"Precious Seed of Blessing"
Address	Rev. J. P. Searle
Singing—"Speed Away"	Male Quartette
Singing—"Loving Hearts"	Society
Benediction

After the entertainment a reception was given to the visiting societies in the Sabbath-school room, and after numerous social greetings the company were served with refreshments. A token of remembrance in the shape of a large crystalized monogram was presented to the Dunellen society by M. M. Dunham, representing the Warren Mission of Plainfield.

The Rev. A. I. Mathise, the newly elected pastor of the society, responded in thanking Warren Mission for their remembrance and all the visiting societies for their presence. A large company was present from Plainfield, representatives from the Epworth League of Dunellen, and the Y. P. S. C. E. of New Market.

A Fisherman's Tribute to His Old Commander.

Major W. D. W. Miller fought the battle of Gettysburg over again at the Y. M. C. A. rooms Thursday, and a large audience paid close attention to his graphic description of the greatest battle of the Civil War. As a member of General Hancock's staff he had exceptional opportunities for knowing the exact truth in concerning certain matters of historic dispute. He was present when the commander of the Second Corps received his instructions from Meade; and whoever else may have doubts in what capacity Hancock appeared at the front to call officers off the field, there were those who marked the close of the first bloody day, he evidently has none. His eloquent tribute to the memory of his old commander drew tears from the eyes of many veterans, foremost of the magnificent service rendered at Gettysburg by the unfortunate Warren, will long be remembered by his listeners.

He'll Appear On the State With His Team.

Here appears one for the people! At a meeting of the trustees of the Crescent League, on Monday, Thomas R. Keller, after sufficient solicitation, agreed to accept the position of base-ball manager for next season. He's already got his eye on some phenoms for Plainfield's champion team of '92.

New York's Mayor Gets a Plainfield Race.

Dr. Monroe B. Long of this city exchanged, Oct. 14, with William H. Clark, the convention nominee of New York city, his trotting mare "Lady Allen" for a stallion road mare suitable to the doctor in his practice.

Mr. Clark had been in Plainfield several times recently, speeding the mare, with which he was greatly pleased. It is understood that the exchange was made for New York's Mayor, and that "Lady Allen" is to have a place of honor in the private stables of Hugh J. Grant.

Artists Who Are Coming Here.

The Musical Courier has the following to say of the New York Philharmonic club that D. Bowman has secured to give three concerts in this city during the coming season:

"The New York Philharmonic club started last week for the West and California and return December 6. The concerts in New York and vicinity will be given with the following soloists: Emil Fischer (bass), Campanini, De Vere, Marion S. Wood, Ans der Ohe and Richard Hoffman. Some of the novelties are capellmen composed and dedicated to the club by Heinrich Zoellner and Theo. Gney; posthume by Auger Hamerik, of Baltimore, for solo, flute and string quartette."

FANWOOD'S FLAMES.

Plainfield's Fire Chief Summoned to the Scene.

At about 7 o'clock Tuesday night flames were discovered in the residence of Charles Richardson at Fanwood.

The fire department being in session at the club building, it was quickly on the ground. On its arrival, and, while hunting for a hydrant to which the hose might be attached, a bucket brigade headed by Baron Ewing was organized for the purpose of protecting the next residence, that of Wm. Pentz.

It was then known that Mr. Richardson's house could not be saved, attention was directed to that of Mr. Pentz, as it was known that should he burn out, with the strong westerly wind blowing, nothing could save Clarence Smith's or E. L. Kich's properties. The entire building, of Mr. Richardson was consumed, and but for the active and effective work of "The Baron", assisted by Messrs. Frank Queenan, Harry Robinson, Judge George Mayo, Lawrence and "Chubby" from the Homestead, the Pentzes would also have been homeless.

Water was passed in any available vessel from the kitchen faucet to a man at the window of the dining room, who passed it to the man on the outside. The water being dashed against the building, extinguished the flames as fast as they broke out. Chief Doane was summoned by wire, and, appearing on the scene, said that all was being done that was possible, considering the intensity of wind, and added that the workers should be congratulated in saving the adjoining property. Mrs. John Pentz was hospitably entertained there of the foremost workers at the fire, and she has their thanks for virtually saving their healths, if not lives; for, being thoroughly drenched, pneumonia was would undoubtedly have been the result but for her ministrations.

David P. Hall arrived at the fire after all danger was over, helped and piped, much to the amusement of the younger generation. Frank Anderson was also conspicuous, astride of the ridge pole on Mr. Pentz's house, ready to extinguish any sparks that might alight. Chief Doane was heartily thanked for his prompt appearance, and for the assistance in the event of Plainfield requiring extra assistance, it would be furnished from Fanwood.

Mr. Richardson and family, having lost their all, were invited by the gentlemen present to accept the accommodations of their houses, and they accepted that of Mr. Kich, where they are now temporarily located.

The fire pompanies from Scotch Plains hurried to the burning dwelling, and did all in their power to save it from total destruction.

In remembrance there is always a hero. At the fire there were three. So much cannot be said in their praises. Frank Queenan, station agent Seymour, and Charles Richardson, worked like Trojans. Each lost valuable articles in his own home in ruins, turned to save that of his neighbor.

The men had the gumption on their backs to remain, and their flesh terribly blistered by the awful heat. Any community may feel justly proud of such self-sacrificing men, and Fanwood is made up of that class.

The extent of Mr. Richardson's loss, and amount of insurance, have not as yet been definitely stated.

The reflection of the flames was seen in this city, and an alarm was sent in from Box 15, but a recall was immediately sounded, as the fire was far beyond the city limits. One of the hose carts, however, was permitted to go to Fanwood's assistance.

A PROSPEROUS CHURCH.

Favorable Reports on the Reduction of Church Debt, and New Officers Elected.

The annual meeting of the Trinity Reformed church was held evening of Oct. 14. Clerk D. Van Winkle, who is a member of the finance committee, had prepared a statement of the financial condition of the church for the six months ending Oct. 1. The report showed a gradual decrease of the bonded debt, and that every department of the church is in a healthy condition.

The election of three elders and three deacons, for the term of two years each, resulted as follows:

Elders—R. E. Fleid, O. W. Dunham, C. Q. Dellive.

Deacons—E. E. Anthony, T. E. Hazell, F. C. Adams.

Pastor Schenck and his consistory and congregation have much to be grateful for to their Father for the glorious results of the year's labor; and their hearts are greatly cheered by the prospects of the future. The society is rapidly growing in numbers and in earnest endeavor and fruitful results.

NEW HOME FOR THE "PS".

Then Will Come Renewed Efforts, and a Winter of Business Work.

The "Ps" are again to have a home of their own. This was decided at a special meeting of the union afternoon of Oct 14. The meeting was to be held in Bethel chapel, but at the opposite of hour the session did not appear. Then it was decided by ballot to go to one of increased earnest endeavor and fruitful results.

A Worthless Woman Injured.

Mrs. Thomas Love, of Westfield, was severely injured Saturday morning by being thrown from the seat of a wagon she was driving on Mountain avenue when a team attempted to pass her. HERE'S A HERO!

He Broke His Leg to Save the Life of Another.

(From The Farm of Oct. 15.)

Gideon Hunt Mason, manager of the Crescent pharmacy, corner of Park avenue and Fourth street, Plainfield, N. J., had a lamp in the office of the building Tuesday evening, carried it up the narrow stairway and through the store, set it down in the office of the store, and then sprang back on the sidewalk just as the lamp exploded and threw the burning oil for many feet in all directions.

The lamp was filled with kerosene and out as Mr. Mason carried it along. When he stopped at the head of the cellar stairs to open the door, the burning oil was set afire over and dripping from the wooden floor patches of flame that he stamped out as he walked along. He expected an explosion every moment, and as it had been only the ignition of the lids of the building Mr. Mason would have left the lamp where it was. But he remembered that in apartments overhead Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbeek was lying very low from fever. If the building burned, it might be impossible to get the sick man out; and if he were carried out, in the cold air as was then blowing, he would surely die. So Mr. Mason risked his own life to save another's.

The cellar of the pharmacy heaped full of empty pine boxes and inflammable packing. It is lighted with a lamp that under all ordinary circumstances does not endanger anything. Tuesday evening, however, Mr. Mason, who happened to be standing fronting the soda-water counter, noticed through the cracks in the floor where the pipes run up from the syphons, that there was more glare in the cellar than the lamp ever gave before. He turned down the light, but the flames, shooting high out of the top of the lamp chimney, and blazing oil running down its sides.

He knew there would be an explosion in a few seconds, and his first intention was to set the lamp as far from the boxes as possible and fight the fire with his own life. But when he remembered the sick man, that grand old courage that comes with his Southern blood swelled every vein in his body with determination. He grabbed the lamp and started on his perilous journey without a moment's delay. Had he been twenty seconds late r the lamp would have exploded in his hands and he would undoubtedly have been burned to death.

Not He Was a Sanctioned Leaguer, and He Robbed a Fifth Street House.

A jauntily dressed young fellow, with a brown derby hat on his head, and kid gloves on his hands, and a flower in his button-hole, sauntered up to the house of William C. Scrugham, at Fifth and Madison streets, opposite the Bethel chapel, afternoon Oct. 16.

Mrs. Scrugham rang the bell, and the house was locked up. She was gone only an hour—from 1:30 to 2:30—but when she came back she found the house rummaged from top to bottom, and her own gold watch and $30 in cash were missing.

The thief had tried first to force open the back door, but though he broke the glass in the top sash, he failed to get the stained entrance, however, by ripping open a pair of shutters and pushing open an inner door. He then searched the house to his heart's content. Those he left escaped arrest, by the police think they can get him.

Thomas Hazelwood-Keller has been urgently solicited to accept the management of next year's ball team. He has not signified if he will or ungenious. If he does, Plainfield will beat the world next season on the ball field.

A Close Shave and It.

The office of the Asbestos Company Limited, on North avenue, opposite the railway station, was threatened with destruction by fire Monday night. The smouldering dies attempt is suspected of having set fire to the sawdust in a cupboard. The volume of smoke issuing from the building was first seen at 11:30 o'clock, from box 23 being sounded. A number of papers were consumed, but the fire was out before the department arrived.

SAVED A LIFE.

How an American Boy Won Fame at a French School.

SUPPER was over in the college of Sainte-Barbe. The lessons for the next day were all prepared, and the boys were getting ready for bed. A merry lot they were in the preparatory department this year, French, of course, with a little Englishman fromacross the channel, and in one of the beds in the long dormitory slept a small representative of our own republic. Frank Harrington, as the boys parents had left him to receive his winter's schooling at Sainte Barbe, while they went traveling abroad. He was a great favorite among the boys—bright, cheerful and manly, as an American of that kind of every true American boy. And Frank Harrington, if the truth must be told, rather enjoyed all this admiration, and was not a little proud of being a leader among the French boys.

At the extreme end of the dormitory stood the bed of the only boy who refused to join in the laughter from the preparatory school of le petit diable anglais, as Frank was called. A proud, haughty boy, this Louis de Chaves, with the lastest a long line of titled ancestors. His three brothers, all older than he, and haughty with an inherited hatred all that savored of republicanism, and this younger lad, Frank knew several years, he seemed to have taken an instinctive dislike to the careless, happy-hearted Yankee, and against this he succeeded in bringing him into disgrace.

It had been a holiday, and the boys had been having a very jolly time, or being unusually good-natured they were unusually subdued and, after a whispered word or two about the games of the day, went quietly to bed to sleep. Gradually the few noises about the college ceased, until the ticking of the clocks could be heard through all the buildings. Outside, the streets of Paris grew more and more deserted, and the lonely footsteps of the sentinelle sur la salle were the only sounds which broke the stillness of the night.

Frank Harrington had passed a little too hard that day, or his supper, somewhat better than usual on account of the holiday, had disagreed with him, for he was very restless, and started many times in his sleep. But at last his eyes opened wide and would not close again. It was very still. Frank was inclined to believe awake in the night, and it seemed to him he had never felt anything more oppressive than the silence of the room, and the regular breathing of the sleeping boys. The moon shone in full through the window just above his head, and threw long shadows over the floor, which he fancied took weird shapes as they crept near him. The sight that chill struck two, and he started, so loud it sounded through the room. At last he began to grow sleepy and was just beginning to drive comfortably off, when he saw a small, dark figure coming slowly toward his bed. Now Frank had been a little nervous for some time, though he wouldn't have admitted it for the world, and his heart gave a bound, and for a moment he held his breath. Then the figure stepped into the moonlight, and he saw that it was Louis de Chaves. His eyes were closed, and Frank saw instantly that he was walking in his sleep. He felt a little ashamed of his fear a moment before, especially as he had often heard the other boys say that Louis was a sleep-walker.

"It is always he," he thought, presently. "I would never think it if it wasn't for the noise little Pierre and Louis stood for a moment, as if locating, and then began walking slowly along the length of the dormitory. Frank watched him curiously until he saw him reach the door and, to his surprise, Louis opened it and passed out, closing it quietly after him. Frank's first impulse was to spring out of bed and follow him. "He will come to some harm," he thought, "if he stays out just outside." Then came a selfish thought. "It is cold. He wouldn't like to have me follow him, anyway. I think Harrington was fast asleep.

Every morning at half past five the bell of the college rang, to announce the death of the college. A half an hour later it rang for prayers. But the hands of the clock pointed to twenty-five minutes to six, and one after another the boys awakened, wondering what time it was. But Louis de Chaves had never failed in his duty since their acquaintance began, and they were not left long in suspense. Through the long corridors one of the monitors ran, calling out in a loud voice:

With a finger on his lip commanding all such silence, and to the frightened boys who sprang out of bed, he motioned them to follow him. Then, creeping on tiptoe, he led the way through the long corridor, and down the great stairway, to the door which opened into the garden. Here Louis de Chaves stopped for a moment, and then, with a firm step, walked to the end of a long line of flower beds, and began to climb the steep roof of the further building, his feet sweeping over the tops of the flowers in the beds without showing him to be asleep. The wondering boys saw him were severely grieved, so they said, at any one who had accidentally reached this position was to be found out of his room, and in which the professor was standing, walked over the roof below, and crossing a narrow bridge between the two buildings. The professor stood for a moment horror-stricken, then rushed with the alarming news to the head of the college, who commanded that the tocsin should not be rung, but sent immediately for the nearest sapeurs for assistance, and so perfect is the police system of Paris that, by the time the boys had hurried by pulled on their clothes and collected outside the building, beds and bay were piled on the ground, policemen were stationed at the two streets running into the Rue de Reine to prevent passage of vehicles, from passing, and others were ranged all along the walls to maintain the perfect silence which was absolutely necessary, for everyone knew that at any sound awakening the little sleeper would be instantaneous death by causing him to fall from his dangerous position down the fearful iron bar of feet which lay between him and the ground.

The question now arose as to how the help was to be served. There seemed but one way; to take out the grating as quietly as possible from the window above, and let some one down to him by a rope.

But who would undertake so hazardous a thing? All held back afraid. They knew that one false step, or the least want of steadiness would be the instant cause of his death on the ground.

Frank Harrington, too, heard the reason told in whispered tones and the bell was silent. He stood now among the group of frightened boys, his eyes fixed in horror on the helpless figure so far above him, for he knew that he

BERNHARDT'S TOMB.

It is to Pere Lachaise, and the Actress Herself Inscribes It.

Mme. Sarah Bernhardt has already had her coffin and her tomb made, says the Boston Post.

The story about the coffin was published some years ago. It was a magnificent receptacle, covered with silver. The actress had herself photographed in it.

A correspondent has just discovered her tombstone in the cemetery of Pere Lachaise in Paris. It is in an out of the way place, where visitors do not go, so that persons wishing to see it will have to make a short and laborious walk. It is on the slope of a hill and is overshadowed by another tomb of grayish and sombre color. It bears the strikingly simple inscription—Bernhardt."

The most remarkable thing about the tomb is that when this correspondent saw it it was covered with faded wreaths of fleur and violets, and so have been placed there by the tragedienne herself. The flowers are faded because of her long absence in America and Australia. It is supposed she will renew them as soon as she returns.

PUNCHING THE BAG.

Actor Billy Crane Plays Pugilist with Some Success.

Three Bouts Which a Tourist in Colombo Had with a Bengal Bandit—Story Bits of Interesting Personal Talk.

One summer's day, when the glorious sun was shedding its warmth on the sequestered sweet-scented little village of Cohasset, there occurred on the back piazza of Dr. Sparrow's cozy, old-fashioned little cottage, a four-round battle.

It was about eleven o'clock in the morning, says the Boston Globe, when John J. Murphy, of this city, landed at the front door of Billy Crane's cottage and pulled the bell. The scandalized wife of the celebrated actor answered the silvery jingle and informed Mr. Murphy that her husband was in the back piazza taking a sun bath.

John walked through the house to the back door and was about to discover himself to his friend when he was arrested and not a little startled by an angry voice.

The voice belonged to Billy Crane. Here it is—Mr. Crane in shirt sleeves, walking gingerly around on his bare feet and eyeing it with the grim resolution of a meat axe:—"What's that?"

The tone was not gently to the pressure of the breeze, and Billy jumped lightly to one side, as if to avoid a blow.

"Now look a-here, young feller, I don't propose to take any of your cheek."

"You don't give or what?"

At this point Mr. Murphy stuffed his coat-tail down his throat to prevent an explosion.

An addition of life to the breeze gave the ball a playful impulse. This happened as Mr. Crane was about turning on his heel.

As quick as a flash he was on guard—a pretty, graceful one, too, a perfect counterpart of Jack McAuliffe.

"O, ho, so you would; you'd try to get one in on the old man while his back was turned, you're a new one, you are. What?!"

Bing—

"You'd knock my whiskers off and spoil future frolics of the sephyrs, would you—"

Bing, bing—

"You're dead funny, you are; you put me in mind of a friend of mine who's mistook the gravy pitcher for the one containing the cream, spoiled his coffee, and told the waiter that he was sorry."

By this time the ball was flying around like a chain shot on a mission of death. The perspiration was doing a steeplechase down Billy's sunburnt face, and he was blowing like a blacksmith's bellows.

After a moment's sparring to gain rest and a supply of wind, the fun began anew.

Mr. Crane (affecting the vodabulary of the "deen, dem and dose" fraternity) "You'd swipe me in a d—n, would you? You'd trow me down an' plant daises on me bloomin' chest, would you? Well, I'll show you I'm in dis biz, see? The last feller I pionis to have his face amputated, an' if you stay with me long, there'll be another new harp player on the other shore."

This outburst was followed by a smashing left-hander, then a right and left in quick and terrific succession. The returns of the ball were deftly dodged by the actor, who showed marvelous agility.

"A man in Oshkosh insulted me one day just as you have done, my boy, and there was a funeral in that town twelve hours after; so you—"

"Ha? Of course 'twas his; d'yer think he'd be the first of a wedding and a funeral?"

The ball swayed and twisted itself in a way that seemed to say: "I don't believe you, I don't believe you, I'd—"

"That does it, then, at last, sah!"

"Now I'll show you a move that Harry Leslie put me on to. He once tried it on a New Hampshire man who threatened to 'swat' him.

"That so? Course that's so.

"And, after he offered to give him a decent farm if he'd become a citizen of that state and fight Sullivan."

"You don't go to me! Well, I'm after you," and with this Billy feinted with his left, sent the right full on the forehead of the ball, and got away without being touched.

He next assayed an upper cut, but missed, and the ball landed fairly on his mouth, with a noise like that of a bass drum.

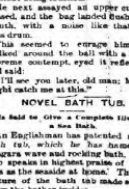
This seemed to enrage him. He walked around the ball with a look of supreme contempt, eyed it reflectively and said:

"I'll see you later, old man; Murphy might catch on to this."

NOVEL BATH TUB.

It Is Said to Give a Complete Illusion of a Sea Bath.

An Englishman has patented a novel bath tub, which he has named the Niagara wave and rocking bath, and he also speaks in highest praise of its virtues as the means of the bath. This is a picture of the bath tub made so as to show the bather inside:



The inventor says it gives the fullest illusion of a sea bath, that no water splashes out, that only three pails of water are necessary, that it keeps the blood in active circulation, and that invalids, delicate persons and children fairly revel over the bowl.

The Man for the Place.

Awkward Youth—Say, can't yer give me a job on this 'ere paper? I don't know what I'm goin' to be a editor, but I'm told there is other sorts of work in newspaper offices.

Mr. Dashwell (great editor)—You might suit in some capacity, perhaps. Do you know anything about book-keeping.

"Nope."

"Are you good at figures?"

"Ah, yes. I'm good at figures."

"How much are 9 and 7?"

"I cannot see. Put down 9, and then put down 7 alongside of it, an' that makes 97."

"Well, sir, you would not do for the counting-room, but I see no reason why you should not rise to proud eminence in the circulation department."—Good Days.

civil war with Peru and greatly distinguished himself. To his military tact, bravery and ability as leader of the rank of colonel. He is one of the few officers of short of stature and of swarthy complexion. When trouble was brewing between Balmaceda and his cousin Col. Canto proposed a toast to the constitution and the three powers it established—the legislative, the executive and the judicial. Balmaceda ordered his arrest and Canto suffered several months' imprisonment and was finally sent to the north of Chili in exile.

When the revolution broke out Canto escaped and immediately joined the congressional party and was put at the head of the fast forming army. The wisdom of the choice had been apparent. He felt that he was leading one of the most righteous revolutions that ever took place in South America. He fought as he felt. He will now undoubtedly be promoted to be full rank of colonel. While he will not be the highest in rank, there being several veteran generals still alive, he will be the idol of the country.

YE OLDE STONE HOUSE.

A Guilford (Conn.) Residence Built Several Hundred Years Ago.

What is probably the oldest house in the United States stands in a good state of preservation in the pleasant village of Guilford, Conn., says Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper. Besides its antiquity the structure is extremely interesting from its novel construction. The house stands on Whitfield street, the approach being a wide pathway across the broad lawn. Guilford was called Menunkatuck—was settled in 1639 by a party from England, headed by Rev. Henry Whitfield, and the stone house was built in that year, so that it is now over two hundred and fifty-two years old. The walls are of stone, some four feet in thickness, and plastered inside and out, narrow fissures being left in them through which muskets were pointed at the redskins. The timbers and floor boards are of massive oak, hewn out with primitive tools. On one side is an immense chimney, built outside the walls. All fireplaces being about ten feet wide and six feet high. The rooms are small and dark, owing to the deeply recessed and small windows, and the ceilings are scarcely seven feet high. The house has been altered and refurnished, the features in the walls being no longer visible, and the fireplace has been boarded over. The property is in the House Farm headquarters, but it remains one of the most interesting relics of a past generation to be found in the country.

Sensations in Hanging.

Capt. Montague, who was executed in France during the religious wars, but was rescued from the gibbet by a Marshal Turenne after having hanged by the neck for nearly three minutes, said that he had lost all pain the moment the trap-door fell, even while he was being rescued and taken away from a beautiful light that defied description. Another culprit who escaped through the breaking of the rope said that after a second or two of suffering a light appeared, and presently a beautiful garden of trees. All accounts seem to agree, in one particular, at least, that the suffering is but momentary, and a delectable feeling immediately succeeds; that colors of various hues start up before the eyes, and that when these have been gazed at for a limited space the rest is total oblivion.

The Devil's Knell.

Among the famous bells of Dewsburg, Yorkshire, Eng., is one known as "The Devil's Knell," which was presented to the church in expiation of a murder. "Black Tom" is always rung on Christmas eve while solemn tolling as it strikes the first tap at exactly midnight is known all over Yorkshire as the "Devil's Knell," and from the notion that when Christ was born the devil died. Legendary superstition has always been credited with having lous powers and strange influences, but why the so-called spirits of darkness are credited with a strong aversion to their din has never been satisfactorily explained. In many Catholic countries bells are rung during the time of great storms, "so that the devil may take flight and the tempest subside."

RIDING ON A SHARK.

Daring Feat of a California Swimming Teacher.

He Mounts a Big San Monster and Shows Considerable Horsemanship of a Gigantic Member of the Rush-ing Shark Family.

That a man should take a ride on a live shark's back, apparently with all the delight of a wild cowboy breaking in an unruly mustang, would be difficult to believe, unless circumstances were presented to verify it.

For the past few years the fishermen in the northern part of Monterey bay, near Santa Cruz, have been greatly annoyed by basking sharks. These sharks, in search of food, often run into the nets of fishermen, and the thrashing about and trying to escape from the meshes which enfold them, tear the nets and injure them so that the fishermen at times suffer the loss of hundreds of dollars. Sometimes a shark struggles about so much in the water as to wrap the nets around it in such a manner that escape is impossible, and the huge fish dies from the exhaustion produced by its wild efforts to get free.

A few days ago, says a writer in the San Francisco Chronicle, a huge basking shark, about thirty or forty feet long, became entangled in the nets of some fishermen off Soquel point, about four miles from Santa Cruz. The shark, still alive and enfolded in the nets, was towed by the fishermen in boats to the wharf at Capitola. Its arrival created great excitement among the visitors at that resort. No amount of assurance on the part of the proprietors of the hotels or the fishermen that basking sharks were not man-eaters, and that many had been caught with no accident happening, could entirely quiet the fears of the visitors, and bathing was almost given up.

Some regular demonstration of the fact that a captive shark was harmless therefore became necessary. Swimming Teacher Swanson, of the Capitola baths, then determined to give an exhibition with the shark which should convince the most timid. A performance followed, the like of which no man ever participated in before. Swanson got on a bathing suit and swam to the wharf where the partially exhausted monster lay, still partly wrapped in the torn and tangled fishing nets. Slowly approaching the gasping yet enraged monster, a whale in size if not in species, Swanson swam close to his side and then clambered on top, with a moderately easy task to accomplish. The shark lay almost entirely under water. Sitting astride the huge fish like a baby on an elephant, the bold swimmer shouted in triumphant derision at the several hundred people on the wharf, who had gathered to witness the strange performance.

His song of success was quickly cut short, for as soon as the shark realized it had gathered something more on his back it commenced to thrash about and threw Swanson off. Women in the crowd shrieked in fear and men held their breath in excitement. It was hardly a minute, however, before Swanson appeared unscathed and laughing outside of the thrashing tail of the shark's struggles. The unabated swimmer again went to the side of the shark and once more mounted his marine steed. The shark again showed its fear and anger by shaking him off, but not so violently as before. With great perseverance Swanson again climbed on to the monster.

What seemed before to the many spectators a most foolhardy act, and but the courtship of death, now became a strangely comical sight. Swanson mounted the fish, and the shark, becoming accustomed to its queer burden, merely rolled the man off each time he got on its back, simply turning lazily in the water and shaking himself. This was repeated several times, and the large crowd of people who came expecting to see the man killed and eaten departed laughing.

Portrait of an Englishman.

it is submitted that the accompanying illustration, which is taken from recent issue of Judy, is as neat a bit of Englishness portraiture as has been shown for some time. A NEW DYNAMITE GUN.

The Latest Invention of Gathmann, the Rain Producer.

Dynamite Projectiles Thrown a Distance of Six Miles—New Era in Coast Defense—Invented for the Stand No Show in Battle.

Louis Gathmann, the discoverer of the Chicago process of producing rain, has, according to the Chicago News, also invented a new method of throwing dynamite shells from an ordinary cannon. If Mr. Gathmann's scheme proves to be practicable, the future of the Battle of the future will be a very brief affair, but full of results.

The destructive agent in wars of the coming century will be dynamite, nitroglycerine and gun-cotton, unless in the meantime a more terrible explosive shall be discovered. It is a well-known fact that a shell containing two hundred pounds of dynamite will blow the biggest ironclad afloat out of the water if projected against its side or on deck. The trouble has been in discovering a means of throwing the treacherous explosive that would be effective and at the same time safe for the manipulators of the gun. Fired from an ordinary cannon the dynamite shell explodes, blows the barrel of the arm, carrying death and destruction in its path. The powder charge sufficient to project the shell with nitroglycerine or dynamite by means of compressed air is not sufficient, by a full extent in the matter of range, the gun not being effective at a greater distance than a mile. It can, however, be handed principally for coast defenses, but a toy cannon would be just as formidable if the limit of the projecting gun is one or even two miles. The great gunboats of any European country would be blown to pieces from shore and shell our coast cities and our pneumatic guns would be powerless to retaliate.

The accompanying illustration will serve to make plain Mr. Gathmann's scheme of using dynamite shells. It is from a cannon, ordinary gunpowder being employed. The powder chamber is of such larger caliber than the bore through which the projectile is thrown. Back of the powder charge are two cylinders or brass cylinders containing carbonic-acid gas at a pressure of 500 pounds to the square inch. They are fitted with two plugs, the largest end being inside. Upon firing the gun the force of the explosion drives the plugs forward, releasing the gas, which, being at a temperature of about 70 degrees Fahrenheit when first released, expands as the exploded powder, thus preventing heating of the ordinance and at the same time deadening the shock of the propelling force. This keeps the barrel of the gun cool, permits rapid and continuous firing and greatly prolongs the life of the ordnance.

The cut represents a longitudinal section of the gun charged with its dynamite projectile, which is marked S. The bore is charged by the powder charge and two capsules of carbonic-acid gas, the letter C.

Only a comparatively small amount of powder to the size of the chamber is used. While the force of the explosion is sufficient to project the shell through the chamber acts as a reservoir for a prolonged supply of power. The passage leading to the capsules behind the powder charge, acts as a further cushion to the dynamite, hidden shell and starts it with comparatively little force, because as this governs the walls of the shell can be made much thinner, permitting the charging of the projectile with a greater mass of high explosive and yet the shell be of the size described above. The capacity of a 6-in. could withstand a charge of 100 pounds of this kind of exploding on the side or deck. The building of heavy-armored, expensive ships will be a thing of the past, and the battle of the future will be the light, speedy cruiser.

LONGITUDINAL SECTION.

der being expended at once upon the base of the shell, but on the other hand it is more economical and lasting. A hollow globe filled with carbonic acid gas and provided with plugs, the largest of the capsules behind the powder charge, acts as a further cushion to the dynamite, hidden shell and starts it with comparatively little force, because as this governs the walls of the shell can be made much thinner, permitting the charging of the projectile with a greater mass of high explosive and yet the shell be of the size described above. The capacity of a 6-in. could withstand a charge of 100 pounds of this kind of exploding on the side or deck. The building of heavy-armored, expensive ships will be a thing of the past, and the battle of the future will be the light, speedy cruiser.

An Intelligent Pony.

Miss Stanhan, Mo., has a remarkable pony. He has not only almost human intelligence, the power of knowing to the minute his feeding hour, but the ability to distinguish persons he has met before, but can run errands. His owner has a small bag, which he keeps on the pony's neck, and on being told to bring the mail the pony marches off with much dignity to the post office where the genial postmaster receives the bag, and, upon depositing the mail, tells him to "take it home," which he does without a mistake.

An Ancient Clock.

A clock said to have been the property of the great reformer, John Knox, is now in the possession of a lawyer in Huntingdon, Pa. W. H. Woods. This venerable relic was made in Edinburgh, Scotland, was handed down in the Knox family for many hundred and fifty years, the Philadelphia Press says, and finally came into the hands of John Witherspoon, father of the signers of the declaration of independence. From John Witherspoon, the son, left Scotland in 1768 to take charge of Princeton college he brought the old heirloom with him across the broad Atlantic, and when he was elected to the continental congress the old timepiece was ticking in his parlor and indicated the hour for departure to transact his patriotic duties. Mr. Woods' mother was the daughter of the youngest Witherspoon.

Almost a Wife.

Business Manager—You are an applicant for the position of assistant cashier. Are you married?

Applicant—No, I am a single man.

Business Manager—That's awkward. You see the boss told me not to hire any unmarried man as cashier.

Cashier—Then to get the place I've got to marry?

Business Manager—That's about the size of it. You have got to marry some girl at once. Come around and dine dinner with me and my daughter. I think this thing can be arranged.—Texas Siftings.

For Member of Assembly,
JAMES J. BERGEN.

Election on Tuesday, November 3.

TRUTHS OF DEMOCRACY.

The true intent of a government sure as ours is to equitably protect and encourage all the people in the enjoyment of life, liberty, happiness and the pursuit of business and varied industrial vocations, to provide for the common defense, and to promote the general public welfare through the enactment of laws totally devoid of class discrimination.

Taxation to be just must be strictly impartial, and founded only upon absolute public requirements.

Needless taxation is localist oppression.

Lower the taxes are, both direct and indirect, better will the taxpayers financial condition be.

Labor is the architect of real wealth, and therefore ought to be the foremost object of protection, not only against inadequate wage compensation, but against exorbitant living expenses.

Capital legitimately invested and employed is a public benefit, but when combined for the purpose of unjustly greed and gain it becomes tyrannical.

Public office is a public trust, and should be officially administered with the most rigid oversight and integrity.

The only proper qualification for office holding, from the highest grade to the lowest, is not money or ancestral blood, but personal ability and industry, unsullied moral character and adamantine honesty.

To vote according to his own individual judgment is the positive right of every American citizen, whether native born or naturalized, and any species of interference therewith is rank disloyalty to the letter and spirit of free institutions.

VOTE FOR FLOWER.

WHAT IT HAS WROUGHT.

Under the above caption, in speaking of the efforts made to defeat Hon. James S. Bergen, of Somerset County, as member of Assembly, the Messenger says:

What has Democratic legislation we say? It has given to the people $700,000 annually in State railroad taxes, $400,000 of taxes annually on miscellaneous corporations which never before had been taxed, $300,000 of tax taken from the Morris & E. and R. R. besides smaller increases in State income.

Its lavagant appropriations by Republican Legislatures, amounting to $600,000, which bankrupted the treasuries, have been met, imp rtant improvements ordered by the Legislature have been carried out, the miserable ar rangement grinded at Sea Girt has been purchased for the State, a new Soldiers' Home has been erected at Kearny, and not a dollar of tax has been added upon the people to meet those extraordinary expenses. Both cratic legislatures provided the money by adding over a million dollars to the annual revenue of the State Treasury from sources other than taxation of individuals.

Such a record of the legislatures of a party will not and cannot defeat its nominees.

VOTE FOR FLOWER.

The Democratic candidate for Assembly honors in the First Middlesex County District should be elected by a handsome majority. He is most eminently qualified for the position. His name is J. W. Beekman, of Perth Amboy.

The Democratic candidate for Assembly honors in the First Middlesex County District should be elected by a handsome majority. He is most eminently qualified for the position. His name is J. W. Beekman, of Perth Amboy.

Hon. John Carroll from the First and Hon. Thomas F. Lane from the Second Assembly Districts of Union County are making splendid canvasses and will undoubtedly be renominated, as they should be. They both made good and able representatives in the last Legislature.

Senator Robert Adrain, of Middlesex County, made an excellent presiding officer of the State Senate last year He should be returned by a handsome majority, and we believe the Democrats of Middlesex, under such able management as that always given by Hon. Miles Ross, will see to it that Senator Adrain will be accorded that distinguished honor.

VOTE FOR SIDNEY E. FLOWER.

If the voters of Somerset County fail to return Hon. James S. Bergen to the Assembly, next Tuesday, they will have made a grave error. A man who so ably handled the House of Assembly as did Mr. Bergen last year, as Speaker, should not only be honored by a renomination, but ought to be returned by an overwhelming majority, as we believe he will be. His enemies are active and it becomes the duty of every Democrat to go to the polls and vote for him.

It is a striking fact that in the eleven State Legislatures, which first voted on ballot reform bills, 466 Democrats voted aye and only 50 no, to 280 Republicans in the affirmative to 309 in the negative. Democratic States were the first to adopt ballot reform and the typical Republican States of Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire and Pennsylvania were among the last. And yet there are Republican spouters who shout that the Democratic party is opposed to honest ballot.

Help elect a Democratic Assembly man by voting for Sidney E. Flower.

An organization known as the "Tin-Plate Consumers' League" has been formed in New York, with the object of "shaking off all the tin-plate bars in the United States." The purpose is a laudable one, but the association has attempted a tough job. The tin-plate liar is the most industrious, inveterate, inventive and elusive of all liars.

VOTE FOR SIDNEY E. FLOWER.

Reports from various parts of the State up to yesterday are indications favorable to the election of a Democratic majority in both branches of the Legislature. It is conceded that we shall carry four, if not five, of the seven Senatorial candidates, and by less than thirty-five, and possibly forty, of the Assembly candidates.

A glance at the political situation points to the necessity of the Democrats electing Flower, of New York, by a large majority. Campbell is doing trojan work in Ohio, and has a chance of carrying the State against the Republicans. Mr. Boies' friends in Iowa are confident of success, and even Pennsylvania is claimed by the Democrats.

There should never be any off year with Democratic voters. Because there will be no Governor or Congressman to elect should not keep any Democrat away from the polls. Although the Assemblyman elected this year will not vote for a United States Senator, there may be very important questions before the next Legislature. Keep in line for 1892

VOTE FOR FLOWER FOR ASSEMBLY.

Said Gov. Campbell of Ohio from the stump the other day: "While you Farmers were raising a howl against the Republican ticket on the strength of McKinley's promise of 40 cent wool, a lot of other fellows in the East, were at work, too. They weren't raising any howl, they were quietly at work over your eyes. If they were shearing anything, it wasn't sheep."

VOTE FOR FLOWER FOR ASSEMBLY.

Next Tuesday is election day. Let every Democratic and conservative voter go to the polls and vote for Sidney E. Flower for Assembly and Dr. Harold Ed. Coriner. We believe they will recognize the honest and economical government of New Jersey and its capable official Gov. Leon Abbett. A vote for Mr. Flower may secure, as it should, the election of Leon Abbett to the United States Senatorship.

By voting for Sidney E. Flower every Democrat will help reduce the Republican majority in the District.

An organization called "The Cleveland Democracy" of Monmouth county, with upward of fifty members, including many of the leading citizens of Asbury Park and vicinity, was formed in Asbury Park last week and declared that ex President Cleveland was their choice for the Democratic candidate for President in 1892. The organization will have a club room. Its members say that this is the beginning of a movement to be made throughout the State in support of Mr. Cleveland. Committees have been appointed to arrange for a permanent organization.

A vote for Flower for Assemblyman is a vote for honest government.

Notes from the Pond Works.

Two years ago last summer, the workmen employed at Pond's gave up their position from which they realized quite a snug sum of money and finally concluded to use the same as a nucleus for a mutual aid society. The society was formed, and the company, being pleased by having it named after them, gave the workmen Five, which, with the excursion money, gave them quite a start, and the society boomed. But there was a screw loose somewhere, for although they had raised between four and five hundred dollars and had to work right; jealousies crept in; had management followed; and finally it dwindled down to nearly a cipher. An appeal was made to our superintendent, C. C. Stebbins, through Messrs. Fred. Wharton, Daniel Miller and Donald Mc-Innes, as a committee, and a notice was posted that they would be allowed that they ought to have such a society and saying that it was for their interest to belong to this one and that the use of the announcement also notified them that no more papers should be allowed circulation asking for sums for needy cases. A vote was to be taken on the re-forming of such a society having for its basis the payment of $5 per week in case of sickness, and $100 in case of death. In order to have a full vote, the works were shut down, and it was to give Mr. Morgan authority to deduct 10 cents per week from his wages. The vote was taken as agreed, and resulted in a decided majority for the new society which will arise Phœnix like from the ashes of the old. We can only say that it is the best thing for any shop as large as the Pond Machine company's, and in their new plan they have a winning card. But they should go further and do as other shops do, and require every workman to become a member, if it is for their own good.

We must now chronicle a failure. Some of our apprentices styled the dirty dozen, started a club and hired the empty store room next to Eddy's meat market, and vowed they should be. They both made good and able representatives in the last Legislature.

Hon. John Carroll from the First and Hon. Thomas F. Lane from the Second Assembly Districts of Union County are making splendid canvasses and will undoubtedly be renominated, as they should be. They both made good and able representatives in the last Legislature.

Senator Robert Adrain, of Middlesex County, made an excellent presiding officer of the State Senate last year He should be returned by a handsome majority, and we believe the Democrats of Middlesex, under such able management as that always given by Hon. Miles Ross, will see to it that Senator Adrain will be accorded that distinguished honor.

A GREAT DEMONSTRATION.

Senator Sterling of Schlenzville Democrats Who Are Marching on to Success in Middlesex.

Tuesday at Dunellen patriotic citizens trimmed up their places of business and residences with bunting and lanterns, and it was apparent that something of a national bearing was about to happen; and sure enough, the good Democrats had been also busy trimming the school hall for the meeting fully advertised. The hall was a mass of light, and was filled with enthusiastic citizens as it had never been filled before, at the back of the speakers' platform were two immense American flags, before which sat the following prominent gentlemen—Ex Hon. Robert Adrain, Hon. J. W. Beekman, Judge Daly of Hoboken, W. J. Winges and P. M. Ising.

W. J. Winges opened the meeting with an appropriate speech, and introduced Hon. Robert Adrain.

Mr. Adrain is a man of good appearance, over 6 feet tall, and of elaborate speech. He said he had been in the Republican party for 30 years, people disgusted and would support him by their votes he would go back another, as one term was not sufficient to put through the reforms he desired. A thorough democrat had to do after ousting a Republican administration.

In reference to his present, Mr. Adrain said: "I believe I have an opponent, but don't know whether I have or not. However, I believe the Republican party, after several trials to get somebody against the candidacy, got a person by the name of James Goodwin of Cranbury township to accept, on the principle that they were willing to be put on the funeral pile and willing to be burnt for the sake of the party."

At the same time Mr. Adrain related the old fable of the lion and the man, who, perceiving the theory that he might catch his opponent sleeping in the race and thus win.

Since April, 1890, Mr. Adrain has not only been Senator for Middlesex county but public prosecutor as well, and certain political critics have argued that this was not right. But Judge Beasley saw fit to appoint him, and in the face of such objections retain him, and as a similar instance in other parts of the State he refused to Judge Vanderpool's appointment of Senator Marsh as Prosecutor in Union county.

Since his appointment in 1890, Mr. Adrain says he has never had anyone to assist him in criminal trials and the public prosecutor's office has been run on economical the cost originated in the past ten years. He says he holds one other position, which is Colonel of Governor Abbett's staff, and although he is a private citizen of the Governor's appliance he would be willing to give it to anyone who could accept as it is a position which not only requires time and ability, but considerable of patience and finance.

Mr. Adrain went to the Senate in 1889, after a Republican rule of the previous year, and did many things to advance the interests of the people.

The expenses of New Jersey are—he said—small in comparison with those of other States, and as good for the money better justice is secured. For instance, we pay our supreme Justices only $10,000 per year, where a common police justice in New York city receives the same salary. Other officers are salaried in the same careful manner.

The Republican party is making the cry "Look at what the Democratic party are doing on this salary question." See what they did!

In 1888, when the Legislature was Republican, they increased the salary of Major Anderson from $6,500 to $6,000, and State Treasurer Tuttle, who received the same salary, had his raised to the same amount. This raise was entirely uncalled for, and made these officials bold in their assurance that they if not the Republican party had come to stay. Then when the Hon. "Bob" was made president of the Senate he had the pleasure of ousting them both and appointing new officials in their place at a reduced salary.

Mr. Adrain said that the Republican party was composed of mostly all of the moneyed men of the State, such as the heads of insurance companies and railroads, and presidents of large incorporations, and therefore had the power to influence and buy the workingmen's vote, as well as other influential support. Yet were they could pass any bill they wished without the great uproar that would be caused if the Democratic party should try the same schemes, because monopoly would be against them.

The Republicans have not elected a Governor since 1856, and seeing that all chances for them on that score were hopeless, they determined to deprive that power of its right to appoint, and did so by electing a Republican Senate and Legislature, and up to the year 1888 they succeeded. By this latter success they took from the Governor the power by appointing the board of trustees for the State school for boys and the State school for girls, and the board for asylums. The appointees for the boards were all Democratic, and Mr. Adrain was one to vote to restore the stolen power assumed by the Senate to be reverted to the Governor.

The Republican party also passed the "Sunset Law," which called for the opening of the poll at 6 a. m. and 7 p. m., allowing the working-man to have a vote without losing time from his work. Mr. Adrain said the first vote he ever cast was for the repeal of this law, and it was repealed, and now the working-man has from 6 a. m. to 7 p. m. to cast his vote.

Mr. Adrain in reference to the forming of the Democratic club, said he is a friend of the people and a man of the people. Why? Because he has done more for the taxpayers and citizens than any other man.

"In the face of 21 large railroad corporations he fought for and defended a bill that the taxation on railroad property and corporations was too small, and that the valuation of their property should be brought on a par with other property. The State Gazette calls Gov. Abbett a leader. Mr. Adrain here read from the paper that he was in favor of increased taxation on railroad property and thereby lessen individual proportion of taxation. They thought he ought to let the tax bill alone.

You see—he continued—after all of Gov Abbett's trials and troubles in trying to secure the individual taxes, the bill was lost by the Supreme Court pronouncing it unconstitutional; but fortunately this State contained a board of errors and appeals, and it is to be in their hands. Mr. Adrain referred to an article in The Star-Spangled Banner, which says he is not a Democrat because he voted to repeal the "Prohibition Law". But he thought that every man had a right to use his own good judgment in that doctrine. He said the New York papers had misconstrued his meaning on that subject greatly. Mr. Adrain referred to a paper called The Reporter, which is published by one John W. Hayes in Philadelphia. Mr. Hayes through some way or another, did not receive a valuable appointment, and says it was the influence of Mr. Adrain's influence that he was kept out of it, and now he is publishing these untruths about Mr. Adrain, especially the Labor Bureau of Philadelphia. Mr. Adrain did not, however, cast the deciding vote in his case, and this Mr. Hayes was a direct enemy of labor during the strike.

Mr. Adrain referred to many labor bills that were passed during his administration and in pursuit thereof quoted them from the Journal, and says he has never and never will vote against anything that is an advantage to the laboring people. He also referred to the Labor Bureau of Philadelphia, which, he said, was a direct opposite party for the United States Senate, and said he should be the next United States Senator. Soon applause followed—was rubbed out for the night of this office once before, but will never be again.

He mentioned a number of bills the Republican party tried to pass; particularly the Force Bill, and impressed upon the audience the responsibility of a State Senator, at the same time showing why Mr. Abbett was the right man.

In conclusion, he drew a very brilliant picture of the ability of the Hon. J. W. Beekman, candidate for Assembly, and recommended the party to support him and he was a man of true Democratic principle, and one who would look after his country's interests. He also said: I will stand by anything I have said, and if I am not a true Democrat go find one.

Mr. Winges, chairman of this meeting, after a few remarks introduced the Hon. Judge W. D. Daly of Hoboken. Judge Daly is a most eloquent speaker, and pleased his hearers greatly.

He said it was his intention to speak to the people of his own county that evening, but through the earnest request of his friend Mr. Winges he came here to speak to Dunellenites and was just as pleased to do so as they were all Democrats, no whether he was at Hoboken or Dunellen it is just the same. Mr. Daly reviewed the working of the Democratic party, and had said that during their session no bills had been passed that would increase the taxes of the citizens, but on the other hand a number proposing to lessen the State board of taxation had been created to proportionate the taxes for each landholder, and thus proving that as assessment could not in his iniquity tax the people at his own will. A committee of banking and insurance has been create; at no expense to the State, as the fees paid by companies incorporated the fees collected from these institutions. The Republican party calls it a surplus, but the Democrats call it from as h party, making it absolutely non-partisan, and greatly reducing expenses.

Mr Daly said it was our duty to see that the State was kept intact, and so placed in districts that it shall be Democratic according to the pupil of note, for the Democrats, as he thought that had been done, and now in the face of all this it is your duty to support our distinguished fellow citizen, Hon. Robert Adrain for Senator, and the Hon. J. W. Beekman for Assembly.

Much—he concluded—depends upon the result of this election, as by it alone Somerset New Jersey always goes Democratic, and our State is always foremost in supporting the party that has done so much for us. Hoping I shall have the pleasure of seeing you again, I ask you to support the entire Democratic ticket.

Mr. Beekman was next introduced by Chairman Winges, as a son of Somerset, and kept his hearers in laughter most of the time. His principles were purely Democratic, and he spent most of his time in tell ig the faults of his opponents. During his speech he told many little stories which pleased the audience and caused much laughing. He assured them that if elected he would do all in his power to effect good laws and vote for any bill in favor of the working people. In conclusion he hoped to hear the same good report as a result on election as a year ago.

Mr. Winges proposed three hearty cheers for the speakers, which were given by the entire audience, and the meeting was adjourned.

The chairman, Mr. Winges, then invited the speakers and a number of the guests to a banquet, which was served at Taylor's Hotel.

This was one of the finest dedications which Dunellen has ever presented, as there was nothing lacking to fill any mean of the occasion. Neat, tasty, master ceremonies, made its guests feel at home, and served the collation with his usual good taste.

Dunellen has never seen a greater demonstration.

Bitten by a Friday Dog.

The son of Mrs Fernala, a colored woman who is employed on East Fifth street, Plainfield, but whose home is in Dunellen, was bitten by a dog belonging to Abraham Heary, a day or two ago, when the animal bit him on the hand The boy was throwing stones for the dog to run after, and the dog and boy tried to pick up a stone at the same time when the dog's teeth scratched the boy's hand, causing a wound which through inflammation has become quite serious.

A Flower to Adorn the Assembly Banquet.

The Union Democrat of Rahway prefaces with the following its presentation to its readers of these columns of a biographical sketch of Sidney Elmer Flower:

The Democratic ticket is the result of the Democratic Assembly Convention in this the 3d district, which was the nomination of Sidney E. Flower, of Plainfield. At that time we were not sufficiently acquainted with the history of the gentleman to be able to refer to his record, though from all sides we heard nothing but commendation, and the highest opinions of him as a citizen, business man and neighbor, and one eminently fitted to represent the people of the district in the Assembly. Nothing is much more so than the Republican Kyte who must have soured so high that scarcely anyone knew there was such a man as he, or was just House of Assembly. Let the voters rally to the support of the Democratic candidate and we will adorn the Assembly with a Flower that will emit a noticeable fragrance in that body as his colleagues, as he would better state them than to quote the following article on the subject from his home paper, the Plainfield Press.

Old Comrades in Plainfield Recite War Reminiscences.

On the occasion of Major George] O. O. Howard's recent visit to Plainfield, two of three old soldiers were sitting with the general discussing some biscuit and coffee at Major Miller's hospitable home, when comrade L. V. F. Randolph mentioned that Howard a story of the battle of Oaks battle he had heard, and asked if it was true. The general confirmed it, saying, indeed, the story about as follows: "My right arm had been ruined in the fight, and I was on the way to the hospital, when General Kearney rode up, and dismounted, and spoke to me. I knew and I had always been warm friends, and he said 'Howard, I am sorry to see you so badly hit. He had lost his left arm in battle, and he took my left hand in his right hand as he spoke. The two hands pressed for a moment together. They spoke about the same size, and I remarked 'Well, General Kearney, there's one comfort about it, we can buy our gloves together hereafter.'"

A Thrash Antediluvian.

Jeptha A. Wages of, of North Plainfield, has been awarded the first prize at the great American Institute fair in New York—one for the best display of cattle roots—beets and similar fodder products; one for the best five named varieties of peaches, one for the best six named varieties of apples, one for the best collection of vegetables grown in the open, and one for the best collection of table vegetables. Mr. Wagoner took a small plot of land that three years ago would not produce an ear of corn, and by the use of his own method, has made a garden spot of what had been a barren waste. He has received a letter from a prominent seedsman in Philadelphia, in 1840, and has been handed down to him.

PLAINFIELD IS PROUD OF ITS ARTIST.

His Fame as an Illustrator is Already Widespread, and He is Fast Acquiring Reputation as One of the Foremost Painters of the Age.

The Recorder of New York yesterday contained a most artistic sketch of a Vestal, in illustration of a poem by Richard Wharton Edwards of this city, expressly for that paper, from his original painting; and in addition thereto The Recorder published the following interesting biographical sketch of Mr. Edwards from the pen of that ablest of art critics, Porter Maxwell:

Born in Fairhaven, Connecticut, some thirty-odd years ago, there lived a bright-eyed boy who, as he grew in years, developed a remarkable aptitude for drawing. Barn doors, well curbs and dog houses were decorated by him with white chalk in the most approved style. Later on the youthful draughtsman began to make for himself a local reputation as an artist of much power. The boy was George Wharton Edwards. It was not many years afterward when they began to appear in some of the better known magazines sparkling illustrations, full of vigor, snap and originality, at once by the critics pronounced the work of a boy worthy of remark right here that one can seldom pick up any of the best periodicals to-day without finding the name of George Wharton Edwards attached to at least one fine specimen of pen and ink or monochrome work.

Coming to New York in his early manhood, Mr. Edwards became a decorative designer, in which line he displayed an unusual fe city for form be uty, now and then, a delicate fancy and a refined and subtle imagination. With innate artistic qualifications and a strikingly original method of composition and modeling, Mr. Edwards was the kind of artist to remain for any length of time under the dictation of a publisher. He resolved to be a painter first and last. Illustrating should be his recreation, painting his real vocation. That he has kept his resolution all the art world knows. Year after year witnesses the completion of at least one masterful canvas, be say nothing of a dozen or more breezy water colors and a triple score of monochromes.

One is at a loss to decide in which of the two forms of his genius Mr. Edwards is more happy—that which delights with the realism of the sea and the robust life of fisherfolk scenes, or his imaginative and poetical productions. Certainly he is most pleasing in the latter when the pen point is the medium through which he translates the fantastic play of his imagination. There is a dash and cunning, coupled with an individuality of handling, in all of Mr. Edwards's work in black and white, that places him quite apart from other talented illustrators. It is, however, as a painter, that this artist will be known and judged, and as a painter the country that harbors him may some day claim him with justifiable pride.

In sympathy with the sea and its fascinating grandeur Mr. Edwards pens as well as paints, and more of its varied action into his pictures. The surge and thunder of a breaking billow, the graceful eddying of the tide about the rocks, the sweeping curvature of the incoming surf and the rolling of the deeper sea, are such as familiar to this artist as his pastoral and meadow lays are to him in drawing, he is also somewhat weak at times in his application of color. This is more true of his earlier work than of his recent productions. That one who has worked so much and so long in monochrome as Mr. Edwards has should lose much of his finer color feeling is not at all surprising. That such year his pictures are becoming more and more luminous with concordant color is a noted fact by those familiar with the studies made by Mr. Edwards during the past summer and which he purposes working up into finished paintings will finally establish his position as one of our foremost painters of marine.

In 1862 Mr. Edwards made a tour through Belgium, Holland, England and France, a journey that inspired some of the cleverest pen drawings and short stories (for the subject of this sketch, as most people know, is quite as facile with his writer's pen as with his artist's pencil) that have been seen hereabouts for many days. Mr. Edwards has since spent three years in Holland greatly to the enrichment of his portfolios. One of his triumphs during his stay abroad was the hanging of one of his largest canvases, "Dutch Fishing Boats," in the Salon of 1883. He has a charming studio and possesses personal qualities that make him a host in himself. Plainfield, not only its present but its future, is to be congratulated that a man of such fine artistic feeling, such genuine worth of character has cast his lot within its borders.

When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

IN MEMORIAM.

Cornelius W. L. Martine.

From The Journal of Elizabeth is taken, the following biographical sketch of the late Cornelius W. L. Martine:

There was no public man in this vicinity more widely and favorably known than Cornelius W. L. Martine, the ex-director of the board of chosen freeholders, and the announcement of his sudden death has caused a universal expression of sincere regret.

Mr. Martine died about 10 o'clock Friday afternoon at his home in Fanwood. He had been in his usual health, and in the morning went to the village post-office to mail letters of thanks to county clerk Crowell and Senator Marsh for contributions they had sent to him for the Fanwood public library, of which institution he was the treasurer.

He returned to his home between 9 and 10 o'clock, and remarked to a member of the family that it was a chilly morning. He made no complaints of illness, and went into the cellar, where he was occupied for a while in hunching down some cobwebs. When luncheon was ready it was supposed that he was in his room, and the servant went to the door and called him. He was not there, but a moment later was found lying on the floor of his sister's room. Life was extinct, and it was apparent that death had come with but little warning to him. It is probable that he felt faint, and went to his sister's room to inform her. He must have fallen immediately on entering the room. His head struck the stove, and there was an abrasion on the forehead.

Dr. Woolcott was immediately summoned, but said it is probable that Mr. Martine had been dead half an hour before he reached the scene.

Mr. Martine was 64 years of age. He was born in Elizabeth, but for many years ago was engaged in the hardware business in New York. His father was the late H. Martine, and he was brought up their residence. Westfield township in 1850 their home being in that section which was in 1875 set off by the act of legislature as Fanwood.

The elder Mr. Martine was a public-spirited man, and he immediately associated himself with the interests of the township, and did much for its material advancement, being the youth as on the committee and other local offices. The son imitated his father in devoting himself to the welfare of his home, and was his wise always active in affairs in which he could be best of service. He was also honored with local preferment, and was for a time a member of the board of freeholders from Westfield township. He continued his representation in Fanwood after its organization, and he was elected from the new township. His associates in the board recognized his executive ability, and selected him director of the board, holding out until 1887 he held that office, with the exception of one year, when Mr. Parse was elected by the Republicans. Mr. Martine was connected for the last year and ranked a member of the board and its director until defeated by George Kyte.

Mr. Martine was a Democrat, and while a man of decided convictions he was a man of strict integrity and fairness, very courteous, and was greatly respected by his fellow townsmen. He was also connected with him by party affiliations. He was a faithful public official, and while a member of the board was very attentive to his duties. He was regular in his attendance at the county buildings, every day spending a portion of his time in this city, and closely supervised all the work of the board. A very large per centage of the personal attention to county affairs he gave gratuitously, having retired from active private engagements, and devoted himself to public business without any expectation of remuneration but with sincere interest and a desire of serving his time. In this, however, was done with much sacrifice. His administration of affairs was frequently commended by those politically opposed to him, and his terms of office were in years of prosperity to the county.

After his defeat as a freeholder he was candidate for the legislature, and Mr. Kyte was also the successful opponent, defeating him in that contest likewise.

Mr Martine was foreman of the May term of grand jury. He was in attendance at court the opening day of the present term, and was in the city on Thursday. He seemed well, and was in his usual cheerful spirits. He was a respectable conversation with many friends.

He was a cousin of James E. Martine, of Plainfield, and a nephew of Judge Martine, of New York city.

Editorially, The Journal makes the following comment on Mr. Martine's death:

The sudden death of ex-director Martine removes from the county and from politics a man who in all his transactions, acted with honesty of purpose and fidelity to the trust reposed in him for the best interests of the county. As a public officialship record is one of honor, integrity and economy. It is with sincere regret that we chronicle his sudden death, though his skillful and influential opponent in politics he was one of those who commanded respect by carrying it, and whose character was beyond the reach which the too often believe in politicians. It is only just to say that in his careful management and close attention to the multitude details of the office while a member of the board of freeholders, Union county owes not a little of her excellent financial condition and reputation to-day.

In The Times of New York the following bit of eulogy is contributed to the memory of the deceased:

The sudden death of Mr. Martine has caused great sadness throughout Union county. He was the slated candidate of the Democratic leaders in this county for Congress next year in the new district. He was a man of unimpeachable integrity, and probably the ablest member that ever sat in the freeholders' board. He was undoubtedly was the ablest director that ever filled that chair. Mr. Martine, when a member of the board, was always on the up offications for any work contracted by the board, and thus saved the taxpayers the expense of a county engineer. He was also a leader in reform farm and kept a great admirer of Grover Cleveland.

Damages for Shooting Mrs. Faulkner's Bull.

Before justice Sperry and a jury in North Plainfield, the other day, Mrs. Faulkner and James Stewart sued David W. Moore and son, all of Green township, for damages for Mrs. Faulkner's bull which the Moore's had shot with beans until it was sore, and thereby bawled and bellowed for several weeks.

The trial took the entire day. William A. Goddington was counsel for the bull and William M. Stillman for the bean shooters. Eighteen witnesses were examined. Counselor Goddington's mastering handling of the plaintiff's case won for her a verdict of $50 and also put the costs of court on Mr. Stillman's clients.

The County Schools to Start in Plainfield.

The twelfth annual convention of the Union county Sunday school association will be held in the First Presbyterian church, this city, Thursday, Nov. 5. Three sessions will be held—morning, afternoon and evening. Several interesting addresses will be made and conference will be held, and it is hoped to make this the most successful convention yet held in the county.

Among the speakers engaged are the Rev. Daniel H. Martin of Newark, the Rev. E. B. Osborn of Elizabeth, the Rev. S. D. Loomis of Newark, W. M. Patton of Camden, and John Y. Foster of Newark. The ladies of Plainfield will entertain the delegates.

M. M. Dunham is president of the association, and Dr. Hartbert is on the executive committee.

CITY DEPARTMENT.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE, THE COUNTY AND THE CITY, AND HAS THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY PAPER PUBLISHED IN THE COUNTY OF UNION.

J. A. DEMAREST - - City Editor.

—A fifteen-year-old girl named Hefferin, living at 62 West Third street, had a leg fractured by being run over by a coal cart Friday.

—The Misses Bates and the Benson triplets are visiting, and their respective mammas are getting also glad as nicely as could be hoped.

—The lawn at Fourth street and Grant avenue was tested last night. With of the aid of the engine a stream was thrown 200 feet.

—S. H. Hadley will speak to-day in the M. E. church next Sunday at 4 p. m. The Rev. Mr. Mills will attend services fully to get him to Plainfield last fall.

—Attorney William Archibald Codington has fitted up new offices at 28 West Front street, and is now located in the quarters of two members of the bar in New Jersey.

—T. F. Buckley has just sold his house and five acres of land at Netherwood, to Louis Hill, for $6,000. Also at the same time 213 on Leland avenue to William H. Birge, of New York, for $500.

—There are a large number of guests at The Arlington to-day, many take here for the purpose of resting for the remainder of the season. A prosperous fall and winter season is assured. Monday dinner was served in the dining room to about 30 cyclers from New York and Brooklyn.

—The Rev. Mr. Arthur Cushing Dill resumes the services next Friday of eight o'clock in the morning by pointing his former well-remembered voice. He will also conduct services in THE PRESS at the time. It is said that a detective disguised as a tramp visited the saloons of Dunellen under which the arrests were made.

—The limit of 50 having been reached in the Lutheran singing school that could has been extended to 50. The first lesson will be given by Prof. Lentz at 8 o'clock. All who couldn't be members in full of the class, or who want to join, must be in and at the room, 4 second floor, over the Post Office, by that time.

—The Riverside Tennis club deserves much credit for its courage in organizing Mack Hadley gives a lecture in this city. His subject will be "Ireland as I saw it through French spectacles." He will appear at The Casino, Thursday evening of next week. Admission, one dollar. But a few seats remain which will have the pleasure of hearing him.

—For the second time within a few weeks some persons have been invaded, and robbed of their money. The latest victim is Blacksmith Jacob Emig, street. The robbers showed a general scattering of overcoats and everything in the clothing. Mr. Emig will add $5 together to the contents of the locker, who will be wise not to repeat the offense.

—The Woman's Branch Alliance of the Children Church held its first meeting of the season Tuesday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Edward Cowell. The call they made was a very pleasant one.

—W. B. Ann'ld, who in soon to appear at Music Hall with the Blue Jeans company, made his first appearance on any stage in this city, taking the tambourine and in a small way knocked down. This happened only 40 years ago, when Plainfield was some what smaller.

—Relatives and friends from Metuchen, Oak Tree, Rahway and Plainfield attended the wedding of C. A. Campbell and Miss Bertha Commons at Woodbridge last Thursday. It was a very fashionable affair. The bride wore white satin and diamond ornaments.

—Ex-Councilman B. O. Bowers and Mrs. Bowers, ex-Councilman William Thompson and wife and Miss Thompson, are among the New York guests at the opening of the wedding of Miss Maud Prentiegast and William Methven Leslie, at the bride's home, Clinton street, Brooklyn, on Monday evening of last week.

—After a short residence in Westfield, and an enjoyable vacation at Belmar on Assemblyman John Urich has returned to Plainfield and is again at home in the old ward, the second, where he has lived for twenty years. He has leased the house at 61 Leflandre avenue, and his wife and family in the city will sincerely welcome him back.

—The many friends of Mrs. Eliza Coles, mother of Mrs. P. M. Demarest, will be pleased to know that the doctors say that she is confined to her room most of the time she is greatly advanced in years, having celebrated her ninety-second birthday anniversary, but is still in continuous excellent, and she goes freely about the house and joins the family at the table, at usual time, Sundays.

—Harper Brothers have in the same delightful sketches in St Nicholas for November. His initial pieces to "Tom Paulding", the new serial by Brander Matthews, are very artistic and very appropriate, and the illustrations of the Tennessee story. "The First of the Eatchemakers," and of "The Broke Boy," are superb pictures of his skill in pencil making. With the abundance of such talent at its command, St Nicholas cannot but continue to be a most charming magazine for not only juvenile readers, but children of a larger growth as well.

The Rev. Mills at Elizabeth.

—The arrangements for the visit of the Rev. Dr. Fay Mills, the great evangelist, to Elizabeth, are nearly completed. He will begin his engagement about Dec. 20, and will conduct a series of meetings for three weeks of the winter. The leaders of the city will meet Thursday evening to plan the meetings. The downtown clergymen have decided to open their church to meetings in that section of the city.

Shall I Prove Myself a Star in the Title Role.

—There is a number of the amateur actors of the city who are to appear on the stage at The Casino, Thursday evening, November 12, meet and rehearse Mrs. Fannie Hodges Hamilton's new play drama, "Esmeralda". The entire cast is making most creditable progress, and the large audience present will be assured of a most useful.

—Mr Blake of New York, one of the cleverest amateur actors and a really talented director, is coaching the company. He knows what he is about. But the shining success of the event will be Mrs Saunders's interpretation of the title role. In the last scene especially, her emotional acting as Esmeralda will be a veritable surprise and highly appreciated.

Mulford—Baker.

—The marriage of Miss Laura Frances Baker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Salmon Crowell Baker, to Arthur Harrison Mulford, took place in the Methodist Episcopal church at 9 o'clock Tuesday night. It was a very pretty event. The front of the church was artistically decorated with masses of rich autumn leaves. The church was thronged with guests. The bridal party entered to the beautiful strains of the wedding march from Lohengrin, and proceeded up the central aisle to the altar. The bridal party consisted of the maid of honor, two and two, and the bride followed, leaning on the arm of her father, who gave her away. The groom and his best man stood in front of the chancel awaiting the bride. The ceremony used was that of the Methodist Episcopal church. At the conclusion the entire bridal party left and repaired to the Ladies' Parlor. The responses of the bride and groom were remarkably firm and distinct, and could be heard in all parts of the church. Mendelssohn's wedding march was played as a recessional.

The costume of the bridesmaids and maid of honor was of white Bengaline silk with embroidered chiffon, court train, veil, and Elizabethan collar. Her principal ornament was a diamond brooch, the gift of the groom. She carried her marriage certificate, bound in book form, in white and gold covers.

The maid of honor, Miss Jessie Marie Stewart, looked more than charming in a costume of pink China silk. She carried a bouquet of pink roses.

The best man was Wilbur T. Hall of New York. The ushers were Clarence L. Murphy, Warren S. Burt and Theodore J. Miller, jr., of Plainfield, and J. Clifford Wright of New York.

The officiating clergyman was the Rev. Charles Bayard Mitchell, pastor of the church, assisted by the Rev. Augustus W. Kingsley, of Taunton, Mass., an uncle of the groom.

The music was by Mrs. William A. Freeman.

After the marriage a wedding reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, 42 West Fifth street.

Miss Ida J. Mulford, mother of the groom, was notably handsome in a rich costume of black silk velvet, en train, with delicate pink brocade and embroidered chiffon. Her ornaments were diamonds and included a magnificent bro-ch.

The bride's mother looked very beautiful in an elaborate costume of cream silk faille, en train, with diamond ornaments.

Other prominent guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Frank Freeman Bayson of East Orange, Mrs. Bayson wearing a rich bridal costume of white silk, court train, trimmed with embroidered chiffon and lace, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles McIntyre, Mrs. McIntyre wearing white silk, court train, with duchesse point lace and diamonds; Miss Pryor, in pretty pink silk, with chiffon trimmings; Miss Mary Fritts, in pink cashmere and silk; Andrew Fritts; Miss Thorn, in pink cashmere; Miss Josephine Mulford, of Mortimer Day, Mr. Cock, Miss Kidner, in white silk; Mr and Mrs. Clarke, Miss Green, in blue silk; Miss Amy Green, in pink silk with gold trimmings; Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Dilts, in gray silk; the Rev. and Mrs. C. B. Mitchell, Mrs. Mitchell in black silk and lace; Mr and Mrs. Loomis, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Mott, Miss Mary Mettlee, Mrs. Mettlee in black silk; Frank L. C. Martin; and many friends and relatives from other places.

A delightful wedding supper was provided by caterer Stephenson.

The happy couple were the recipients of an extensive and beautiful array of gifts, including much gold and silver ware, cut glass ware, royal Worcester ware, and bank checks from the parents of bride and groom.

The house decorations at the reception were tastefully arranged autumn leaves and chrysanthemums.

Mr. and Mrs. Mulford will be at home at 14 Sandford avenue, Tuesdays, after November 24, in the house just completed by the groom to receive his bride.

FIRE ON THE MOUNTAIN SIDE.

The Stone-Crushing Works of Smalley Brothers Totally Destroyed.

The stone crushing works of A. I. and E. B. Smalley on the mountain-side back of North Plainfield were destroyed by fire at 4 o'clock Friday morning.

Incendiarism is expected. The engine and feeder in the engine house were uninjured, and the boiler roiled twenty feet down the hill.

The buildings were insured for the amount. The loss is estimated at $2,500, insured for $1,000.

GOOD BOWLING BY PLAINFIELD.

The Elizabethans Come to Town Loaded for Bear, but They Could n't Stand the Pace that Brett Set.

The Crescent League bowlers did some great work Friday, when they defeated a crack team of bowlers from the Elizabeth Athletic club by the score of 2,546 to 2,485. The scores were most all excellent, but Brett's was stupendous. The evening's complete record is as follows:

THE WAY TO WALK.

A Few Words About Heel and Toe Pedestrians.

Fair Betting Compassed with Some Useful Methods of Quitting Over the Ground—Odds of Judges of the Game Scarce.

There is no branch of athletics in which eminence is so difficult to attain, as in the heel-and-toe walking. A man, to excel at this grind, says the New York Recorder, must be remarkably strong in legs, loins, back and lungs, and he must be as prime as the tradesmen pedible. He must practice long and steadily to maintain a style suited to his physique, and even when that is accomplished his gain in speed is remarkably slow. A natural sprint runner will, with practice, get to the limit of his speed in one season under advantageous circumstances, while under the same conditions a walker's speed increases by a very small ratio. This is due to many causes chiefly, however, to the lack of encouragement a two gets. If in a race he is momentarily carried away by excitement and breaks or skips, the enterprising judge of walking yells: "One caution!" rattles the scorer's bell and with the second offense the latter is disqualified. In the meanwhile the old campaigner, with his eyes on the judge, deliberately lapses into a trot and overtakes the leaders. The deliberate "runner" uses his knowledge of how to skip and trot when and where to peter; the youthful but honest "ped" is rattled by the judges and loses a trophy.

What is needed, both in this country and in England, is a judge of walking who knows a fair stride from an unfair one, and who can attend all meetings and officiate in all races. He should be paid, as the official handicapper is, and should be responsible to the A. A. U. Such a man would do more to promote interest in the game than all the valuable prizes ever offered. Such a man would, I know, be hard to get. There are very few I know now left to mind who are capable of filling the position, and fewer still who would accept it. Tom McEwan would fill the bill, but he would not take it, and the only man available is Sam Austin. Sam knows what walking is, and I believe he would act in the capacity I suggest.

AN UNFAIR STRIDE—GOING WITH BENT KNEES.

I have often been amused by the encomiastic of English critics during walking competitions. Men who have attended athletic games for years, and men who have competed in field sports, display a staggering ignorance of what is a fair style of going. I have heard loud praises for men who were going with a pronounced bent, in a style suited only of hurdle racing, and I have seen fair walkers laughed at by the spectators.

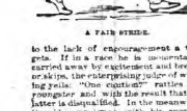
The true method of walking fair as well as fast cannot be told in type. The novice must learn by watching experienced men. Only the expert can judge the style he acquired. The accompanying cuts, however, give good representations of various gaits. No. 5 shows a man walking fairly. It will be seen that the left foot is on the ground at the same time as the toes of the left foot. The knees are straightened out and there is almost imperceptible sinking of the left hip. This is due to the hip acting as a pivot from which the leg swings. It is a true stride. No.



A CLIMBER.

2 shows a pedestrian also with his heel and toes on the ground, but with his knees bent. This is unfair and the alleged walker could top small hurdles. This was the gait adopted by Billy O'Keefe when he top-mounted. No. 3 shows a stilty walker, one who has little or no hip movement, but who walks from the knees alone. It would be impossible for a man to move fast and fairly who has this style. No. 4 portrays a walker with a stride which will cover the ground at a remarkable pace, but as he is in the air half the time, he might as well get a horse the judge gives him permission to enter.

A WELL-KNOWN EDITOR.

Something About the New President of the Editorial Association.

Hon. W. E. Chandler, president of the National Editorial association, is editor of the Nashua (N. H.) Daily Press, and in point of leading newspapers men of that state. He was born in 1835 and was brought up working at the printer's case. In addition to making an enviable reputation in journalistic circles Mr. Chandler has been elected and appointed to many offices of honor and trust. He has been county auditor of Cincinnati, chairman of the Ohio republican committee and occupied other prominent positions in state politics. He is a man of great executive ability, untiring energy and much shrewdness. He is a prominent odd fellow, having been grand master of Ohio in 1876. Personally he is popular, of pleasing address and fine social qualities. The association, says the Journalist, made no mistake when it elected him to the presidency.

CHIEF WEATHER PROPHET.

Prof. Mark W. Harrington, and Sketch of Gen. Greely.

With the transfer of the weather bureau from the war department to the department of agriculture Gen. Greely, who relinquished his post of chief to Mark W. Harrington, who since 1879, has been professor of astronomy in the state university at Ann Arbor, Mich., and is also editor of the American Meteorological Journal. He is forty-three years old, and an authority on meteorological and climatic problems. He has had considerable correspondence with the department relative to climatic matters in relation to agriculture, having conducted a bulletin on the subject, which is about to be published through the forestry division of the department. He graduated in 1868 at the University of Michigan. In 1871 he was acting as astronomer with the United States coast survey on the coast of Alaska. After this he returned to the university of Michigan, acting as instructor in the biological department. In 1876 Prof. Harrington went to Germany to pursue his studies, remaining in Europe about two years. It was while he was in Europe that he was offered the position of professor of astronomy and mathematics in the school of the Chinese foreign office at Pekin, and as director of the observatory there he introduced into China the first large telescope which had been seen in that country. In 1878 he accepted the professorship of biological sciences in the Louisiana state university. He returned to Ann Arbor in 1879, taking the position which he has held up to the present date. He has published several papers and pamphlets on scientific subjects and compiled an almanac for the Chinese government.

A JEWISH DIGNITARY.

M. Jacques H. Dreyfuss, the New Grand Rabbin of Paris.

M. Jacques H. Dreyfuss, the new grand rabbin of Paris, has no easy task before him. He will be succeeds the brilliant orator, professor and scholar and thorough man of the world, M. Zadoc Kahn, who was last year promoted to the higher office of grand rabbi of France. M. Dreyfuss is, however, no novice in the duties which in Alsace forty-six years ago, he was appointed rabbi at Sedan in 1873, and seven years later he was elected chief rabbi of Belgium, an office he has held until his recent call to Paris. In literature he is extremely popular, and his sermons for his new office is plowed by his having been selected in preference to many of his seniors in age and in service, such as the grand rabbins of Bordeaux and Lyons. M. Zadoc Kahn, as grand rabbi of the Consistoire Central des Israelites de France, naturally has a more important status than his successor as the Parisian rabbinate, but in the capital itself Grand Rabbi Dreyfuss will wield greater power, for the Consistoire refers to no particular synagogue; the latter, however, has a stall at the Talmud Synagogue in the Rue de la Victoire, and was the sermon he preached there that March that gained him the most cordial praise from the head of the Jewish clergy in his new province.

AN OCEAN ADVENTURE.

A Warship Rams a Whale in the Mediterranean Sea.

While cruising with the channel squadron, writes an officer of H. M. S. Immortalite, at nine o'clock on the morning of May 26, in latitude 36 degrees 7 minutes north, longitude 9 degrees 19 minutes west, steering south one-quarter west (about midway between Sardinia and the African coast), and going at a speed of thirteen knots, she struck a whale, about fifty feet to fifty feet long, with our ram. It was unable to clear itself, which necessitated our going full speed astern to get the whale sunk. It must have been asleep. At the same time we noticed another quite close on our starboard bow.

A CLIMBER.

Romance of a Shirt.

A young workingman in Dubuque, Ia., bought a ready-made shirt. In trying off the tag he discovered under therein sequence of the collar a piece of paper with the maker of the shirt in a New Jersey manufacturing town, who stated that she was working for starvation wages, and hoped to find a home and a husband, when she would be happy. The young man was pleased with the description and wrote to New Jersey and married her. Three weeks after they were married the young man's father died, and he inherited the home of his ancestors, containing a vast fortune and a tobacco farm. The bride of the shirt is now heir to a fortune of over $1,000

A Seventy-Thirteen Coincidence.

Nathaniel Withered, who died at Gilead, Me., in 1870, also expended himself a living oddity. He was the thirteenth child and the thirteenth boy in the family, and the youngest child in the family. Mrs. Withered, who still survives, was also the youngest child in some relative position in her father's family, being the thirteenth and youngest child. She was working for starvation wages, and hoped to find a home and a husband, when she would be happy. Withered was born in 1783, and died in 1870, 87 years, 7 months and 13 days old.

A Duel and Shoe Mosaic.

One section of the great historical collection at Dresden is literally a museum of boots and shoes, being, it is believed, unequaled in the world as a repository for the footwear of celebrities. Among the things of interest known as a result of these worn by Martin Luther at the diet of Worms, and the toilet slippers of Maria Theresa. In a case by itself is a case are shown the boots worn by Napoleon at the battle of Dresden, and the jack boots of Peter the Great.

How to Fold an Umbrella.

Many umbrellas are broken by the careless manner in which they are folded and put aside after using in the rain. When folding an umbrella the cover should first be drawn to each and all the folds be free from the ribs. Then catch the ends of the ribs near the handle in the right hand and close the left hand firmly around the cover near the point, push the umbrella through it, gently turning the whole structure from left to right until all is neatly folded. After using an umbrella in the rain it should be allowed to dry, handle downward.

How to Treat a Beggar.

Chesterfield was once asked: "Would you recommend to a man to exercise his say son to so and so?" and he replied: "Learn how this merchant treats the poor and then use your own judgment." There was a wisdom in this reply that should sink deep into people's hearts. Our treatment of the poor and unfortunate is the truest indication of our character. All that can be added to this excellent parable is, when one who is in want applies to you for assistance, imagine yourself in his place and "do as you would be done by."

MIGHTY HAMMER.

Built to Forge Armor Plates for Uncle Sam.

It Drops a Ram of 120 Tons Weight a Distance of 18 1-2 Feet, and There Is None to Equal It in the Whole World.

The capacity of the ordnance department of the Bethlehem iron works to produce armor plates and other heavy forgings will be greatly increased within a few days by the starting of the gigantic 125-ton steam hammer which it has taken almost two years to construct.

Begun in 1886, the Bethlehem plant is now said to be the largest and best equipped in the world, outrivaling even the establishments of Whitworth, Schneider and Krupp.

The hammer building says the New York Sun, is situated at the extreme eastern end of the works, and covers ground that was formerly an island and the southern channel of the Lehigh river, the river having been turned from its course to make a site for the structure. It is 300 feet long, lighted by windows at the sides and a lantern in the roof, and besides the hammer contains a 6,000-ton hydraulic bending press and an armor-plate rolling mill.

The hammer and anvil foundations are elaborate specimens of masonry. A pit 58 by 62 feet large was excavated down below water level. Then a heavy walls, 30 feet high, were erected on a pile foundation along the northern and eastern sides, for the use of the frame to rest on.

In the space between these walls is the foundation for the anvil. It consists of piles driven to bed rock, with a timber frame on top, and on this stone and iron slabs arranged in longitudinal and transverse layers. On this the anvil was built. It consists of 72 blocks of solid cast iron, of an average individual weight of 76 tons, arranged one over the other in pyramidal shape. The topmost one, on which the material to be forged will rest, is faced with steel.

The space between the anvil, the frame supporting the hammer, was closed with cribwork. The whole surface even with the floor line, the only visible portion of the entire mass of oak and iron forming the anvil, which weighs 1,500 tons, being the small frame which is capping the pyramid. This block is wedge-shaped, being 11 feet long, 6 feet wide at the bottom and 8 feet wide, and 4½ feet high. The hammer and anvil foundations are in no way interlaced; the dandation for the hammer consists of a way is slight, but should it be displaced by the powerful blows, the hammer and its foundations will remain secure.

Superimposed over this cyclopean mass of masonry and iron rock is the hammer frame, substantial and powerful, rising to the height of 90 feet.

In building the frame which supports the hammer 36 pairs of iron columns weighing 130 tons each which the somewhat in the form of a quarter-circle on the inside, but of rectangular cross section on the outside, to form an arch curving gracefully upward. The two end castings are known technically as housings. The longitudinal width of the housings is 62 feet, and the distance from housing to housing is 32 feet on the floor line inside of the arch. The housings are 16 feet and 12 feet by 8, are clamped to the foundation walls.

Exactly in the center of the arch formed by the housings is the trip or ram, an enormous mass of metal 194 feet long, 7 feet 6 inches and 4 feet thick, the weight of which is almost 100 tons. It is composed of three single pieces, the lowest of which is a large block of iron faced with steel, is called the die. It is on this die that white pieces are being forged. The ram works in slides arranged along the inside of the housings, the bearings of the section above the housings.

Connecting the ram with the piston rod is a huge casting 16 feet long, and a splendid specimen of perfectly wrought steel, 40 feet long and 16 inches in diameter. The piston has a stroke of 18½ feet, which is the height that the ram can be raised above the anvil. The weight of the piston rod and piston together amounts to 125 tons. They are united in such a way that the steam only lifts the hammer and allows it to fall of its own weight. It is when this fall of 18½ feet is stopped from the height of 18½ feet that the hammer exerts its greatest power.

The weight of the entire mass of iron and steel used in the construction of the hammer and its frame amounts to more than 900 tons.

ABDUL-HAMID-KHAN.

Present Characteristics of the Commander of the Faithful, his majesty Abdul-Hamid-Khan II., he now in his forty-ninth year. He succeeded his brother, Murad V., dethroned by the Young Turks, July 31, 1876. Typically, says the New York Sun, Abdul Hamid is a Turk. He resembles neither his father, Abdul-Medjid, nor his uncle, Abdul-Aziz. He is not so tall or so slender as his father, and is of the Armenian-Arab rather than of the Turkish type. His mother was a Georgian. The sultan's general appearance is characterized by a sort of tired dignity, mingled with an expression of melancholic sadness, which is not without charm. His black beard, now slightly tinged with gray, is short, thick, and trimmed almost to a point. The lines of the head is broad, lightly bulged above the eyebrows, hollow at the temples, and arched all over. The lines run straight down to the base of the nose, which indicate profound and meditative thought, are accentuated by a slight curve in the angry man. Robert Louis Stevenson nostrils. The eyes, dark gray, large, well formed, pensive, slightly veiled, penetrating, kindly, very changeable and active, it is impossible to orbit, although the ocular globe is prominent. The eyelids with their thick lashes are more or less slumped. The eye is that of a thinker, of a suspicious meditator, with a subjective will power. The nose is long and thin at the base, bony and strong at the nostrils. The mouth is large, and the teeth, rather yellow than white, are widely separated. The lower lip is stronger and thicker than the upper one. The expression is energetic and reveals a mixture of pronounced sensualism and real kindness. The sultan's hair is black and cut short. The skull recedes towards the top, the little brain is strongly marked. The ears are long and vigorously cut. The complexion is a dark Arab brown. The hands are fine and aristocratic, the finger nails long and cut short. The feet are arched and slender. Abdul-Hamid's voice is sympathetic and sonorous. He speaks very little to his subjects, and smiles but little in the presence of strangers. He has an excellent memory for faces, but recalls names with difficulty

SULTAN OF TURKEY.

A VERY OLD COIN.

It Is a Shekel Struck by the Hebrews's Commonwealth a Yatters.

There is in this city $ relic of the days when the Hebrews were oppressed in Palestine by the Romans. It is a shekel struck in the year 131 A. D., nearly 1,800 years ago—in honor of the taking of Jerusalem and other places from the Romans by the Hebrews its der the leader Simon Bar-Cochebas, who was then proclaimed ruler of the Hebrews.

The New York Coin and Stamp Company is the owner of this interesting antiquity. Manager Proskey interpreted its curious characters and symbols to a Sun reporter.

"On the obverse," he said, "is a conventional representation of the beautiful gate of the temple at Jerusalem. It is, perhaps, the only picture of that edifice extant. The Hebrew characters signify Simon or Shimon. Above is a vine, alluding to Simon's surname, Bar-Cochebas or Cochab, which signifies 'the son of a star.'

"The reverse bears the inscription: 'Second year of the deliverance of Israel.' The two emblems are the ethrog and lulab. The ethrog is a species of citron. The lulab, a bunch of palm branches, in olden times was used in the temple, in the house of prayer when the Hallel psalms were recited, and was seldom out of people's hands in the day time. About the base of the lulab is basket. The ark is a sacred basket with which wealthy Israelites used to adorn their tombs before the churches now ornament their graves. Of the four or five coins that have been found, there are exactly alike. Perhaps a separate die was used for each. No satisfactory explanation of the fact has yet been offered. This shekel was the last coin struck by the Hebrews as a nation."

The bullet-like shekel closely a series of half effaced devices were found.

"That's another chapter of the coin's history," Mr. Proskey said. "These coins were struck to carry the news of victory. It was a proof of the fact. Under the palm branches and Hebrew letters—the ethrog and lulab—are a cup and 2 lashes wide one-half the distance from the small bee to the heel. The cup is a sacred vessel, and the lashes only shows the toes, five in number, the whole being a perfect impression of a shapely left foot. The left foot is American, and in what part of the world did he step on that page of soft clay long ago to have it transformed into a solid rock?

THE LEPER PRIEST.

A Memorial to Father Damien Soon to Be Erected.

How Have We Cared Up His Life for the Unfortunates of Molokai Honored by the Best People—Stirring Verses by Rose Gertrude.

The paths of fame and notoriety lie perilously near together, sometimes so close that it is difficult to point out the dividing line. Only lately, writes Flavel Scott Mines in Harper's Weekly, is that which exists after the hero's death, even though the hero be unknown, while notoriety is like a bubble on the river. And there are degrees of fame, and the prize paid is not of gold or silver, but often the joy of life. For many years Father Damien immured himself in the leper colony of Molokai—gave up his life to save the souls of others, and the outside world knew it not. For many years he struggled, as the unknown priest, on that horrible island of the Pacific, knowing that an awful death would be his; had his services and ministrations were dot of this world, and he sought not fame. But the fame of his work was his, after all—the sweet fame that is likened unto love, which is given freely, and cannot be bought by any man. Robert Louis Stevenson found the man, and told the world about him, and perhaps a sweet breath of incense may have come to that lonely isle and refreshed the passing hours of the unconscious life. For the leper was of the sweetest—the love and the prayers of the outside world which were given to the dying man will be sought it not; and when the end came, and people wished to look upon the man, rather than the photographs, were denied that had been quickly made after his death in the rude habitation of a leper. That was fame, and the story reached the uttermost parts of the earth; and while men listened, another man was busy compiled with his, and people heard that a "sister Rose Gertrude" was to follow in his steps, and voluntarily cast away all the joys of the earth to relieve the stricken beings at Molokai. This was glorious fame, and now and then we found in the self-appointed "sister" a pleasing subject, and the newspaper editor gave up a column to tell the world what she was going to do and to show what she looked like. The London reporter interviewed her, and when she came back to the city the "interviewing" was going through with, and so it was all the way across the continent. People gave up their homes and left the gentle face in the sister's hand, bought her photograph, and bade her a sorrowful good-by. Then she went forth veiled, bearded face, plushed and wan, that lay upon the pallet at Molokai. Then Sister Rose Gertrude went forth to carry her mission, the doors of the outside world were closed, and the people made veiled at the supervision of her when the successor to Father Damien was mentioned. But the fame of the leper of Molokai lay very near together then.

Meanwhile in England a memorial was being prepared for the National leprosy fund, and is just finished. It is in the form of a cross of red Peterhead granite, and is to be erected over the grave of Father Damien. Upon the front face of the pedestal is a finely sculptured relief, in white marble of the steps of the pedestal, in English and in the Hawaiian tongue, are these inscriptions:

Joseph Damien de Veuster. Born January 10, 1840. Died April 15, 1889.

"Greater love hath no man than this that a man lay down his life for his friends."—John xv. 13.

This memorial is raised to his memory by the people of England.

Just as the memorial is finished comes stirring verses from London, which people wonder. Sister Rose Gertrude has returned unheralded, given up the world which she had left for love, and married. This she had a perfect right to do; she made no vows, but she found that the love for God and the world were barely closed, and the echoes of her "noble sacrifice" that had been heard for such a little time came back to the ears of many, and the strains are of the lonely-hearted sister who has returned. Many love is a time when the paths of fame and sacred offerings, and men recognize the difference.

Strength of Men and Ants.

An ant three eighths of an inch long, weighing about one thousandth of a grain, moves at the rate of one mile in eleven hours. This weight—a small ant—is capable of lifting 170 times its own weight. This is equivalent to a man lifting 170 pounds, carrying a ton and a half of lead from St. Louis to Jefferson City, and back again in twenty-two and a half hours.

Millions in Postage.

The bulletin des statistiques et de legislation compares, of the French ministry of finance, contains an interesting account of the progress achieved in the large governments of the world respecting the mails. The account it appears that civilized humanity spends 1,500,000,000 francs every year on postage. Of this sum Europe pays 1,000,000,000 America come in for the largest share, 323,000,000 francs postage, without telegraph communications. Great Britain and Germany, spending on postage and telegraph communications $93,000,000 francs. Great Britain spends 200,000,000 on postage alone. France spends 143,000,000 on postage and telegraph. Russia spends 75,000,000 francs on postage and telegraph. The smaller governments spend from 45,000,000 down.

JOHN STEPHENSON.

The Man Who Built the First Street Car in America.

At Eighty-Two Years of Age He Retains the Vigor and Judgment Necessary to Run a Business Employing Thousands of Men.

The camel of the eastern caravan, the Roman chariot and the sweeping English stage coach of the Georgian era, are not more characteristic of their times than is the railroad car of the last forty years of the nineteenth century. We are informed with considerable frequency that the age specifically is in which we live; it is the age of this, of that, and of the other, from steam, steel and electricity, down to friction matches and postage stamps. But with great reason it may be said to be distinctively the age of cars. They are, with slight exceptions, the one vehicle of public conveyance by land in civilized and semi-civilized states. The number of them in use has attained a surprising figure, says the Mechanical News. If we include freight cars, there are in the United States 1,690,813 cars, but of these only the comparatively insignificant number of 32,465 are devoted to passenger traffic. This, however, is an army which would be appalling if it could be included in a single view. Assuming the average length of a passenger car to be sixty feet, the train thus made up would be about 367 miles in length, and would reach in an unbroken line from New York to Concord, N. H. Night and day the vast network of 162,000 miles of railroad which knits the continent together is traversed by a never-ending deviations of this great army of cars. If one can fancy their roof to be made strongly transparent, it is quite possible to take in at a single bird's eye view the whole surface of the country from the sea-board to the western limit of the Mississippi valley, these flitting streaks as they run to and fro across the map would suggest a not inapt comparison with an exaggerated fire-work.

The subject is one which tempts the mind to imaginative flights, but it is nevertheless an intensely practical one, and is to the huge combination of figures of practical men that we owe the inestimable convenience of the modern railway car. Chief among these men, by common consent, is John Stephenson, who has been justly called the father of American car-building; and our portrait of whom will be regarded with interest as representing one of the great personal forces in railroad development. John Stephenson is of Scotch-Irish descent, belonging in that particular to a class which has been singularly prolific of active leading and successful men. He was born in County Armagh, North Ireland, on the 4th of July, 1809, the birthday, as it happened, of the nation in whose upbuilding he was to render such important service. His father was an Englishman, and his mother of Scotch descent. The family came to New York in 1811, and the boy was educated at the Wesleyan seminary and free school of the city. After three years of this experience, however, young Stephenson's turn for mechanics manifested itself so strongly that at the age of nineteen he was apprenticed to a coach-maker in Broome street, and his father fitted up a room for him, with tools and appliances, in the family home. His evenings were devoted to the study of his trade, and especially to drawing and designing. Two years later he made his first business venture, establishing his own shop in May, 1821, at No. 667 Broadway. In this shop he designed and built the first omnibus, strictly so called, in which New York had ever seen.

JOHN STEPHENSON.

About 1831 the first street railroad company was organized, with John Mason of the Chemical bank as president, and the "Mason," the first street car ever constructed in America, was built by John Stephenson and used when the road was opened in November, 1832. The patent for this car issued to Mr. Stephenson was signed by Andrew Jackson.

We have spoken of Mr. Stephenson as the father of car building, referring to that industry in its general scope, but he is more distinctly identified with street car building, which has been his specialty for many years. Regular railroad cars of all styles were constructed in great numbers at his shops, which were soon enlarged to accommodate his increasing business, but street cars soon became so popular in all the cities that it taxed his facilities to supply the multiplying systems, and he built a new factory in Harlem. In the great panic of 1837, which was peculiarly destructive of railroad values, Mr. Stephenson was overwhelmed in the general disaster. But in course of time, with the indomitable courage of his race, he rallied his energies for a new and successful effort, and soon entered on a career of prosperity which has suffered no interruption. And it is furthermore recorded, to his lasting honor, that he insisted on paying his bankrupt debts to the last dollar, firmly refusing to avail himself of the release afforded him by the law.

Deserved the Place.

"I have done innumerable favors to members of the banking profession," he said, as he placed his fat and capacious comfortably on the president's table, "and now I want you, in my extremity, to give me a position as cashier or teller."

"What is your present business?" was the question.

"Nothing just now. I recently failed in the Montreal hotel line."—Judge.

Colored Mendacity.

There was a large boiler of scalding water over a fire in the yard and several black imps playing near it. Suddenly a shrill voice was heard from inside the shanty.

"You, George Washington, keep away from dat ar biler. D'reckly you is gwine to upset de biler and scald yerself to def, an' den you, you'll be de first one to say: 'Twasn't me, mammy.'"—Texas Siftings.

A Smart Girl.

Pearl—I don't see how Vera can stand the attentions of that cigarette fiend, Hudson Parke.

Jennie—She chooses the lesser of two evils.

Pearl—How so?

Jennie—As long as Hudson smokes his cigarettes, she's not bothered by mosquitoes.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Business Is Business.

Alarmed Stranger (out west)—Look! Isn't that a cyclone coming this way?

Real Estate Agent—Certainly. It's a cyclone. It will pass about 100 feet east of you. Shall I sell you a lot right here, and I'm offering you these lots at only $15 a foot.—Chicago Tribune.

By Inviteation.

Mrs. Minks—Why didn't you come home to dinner?

Small Son—I had my dinner, ma. I took dinner with Willie Minks.

"Did Mrs. Minks invite you?"

"Yes, ma. I smelled apple dumplings cooking, and I told her I liked apple dumplings awful."

"Oh, you did!"

"Yes, ma. Then she said maybe if I went home I'd find you had apple dumplings for dinner too."

"Humph!"

"Yes, ma. But I told her mayn't always so busy ma wouldn't let me eat any, an' then she invited me to sit down."—Good News.

In the Connecticut Valley.

Mrs. Birmingham—Was that poor, miserable tramp, studying those cruces plants. With all his wretchedness and degradation he still has an eye for the beautiful.

Rosebush Weeks (regretfully)—Always disappointed! How I did hope that them blades was turbacker.—Judge.

Doing His Duty.

Mrs. Spasejerumind (handing a strap)—I think it's an outrage and a shame that a tired woman has to stand up in a street car.

Great Editor (from behind his newspaper)—Yes, madam, I'll write a scathing editorial on the subject for to-morrow.—N. Y. Weekly.

Where He Could Be Found.

Collector—I have been to your office a number of times, but I have never succeeded in finding you in. Where can you be found?

Impecunious Ipsitor—I am always in financial distress. You can always find me there.—Texas Siftings.

Expectants Dogot.

"I've got ten thousand dollars; I want to build a house."

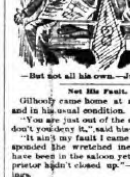
"You can't do it."

"Why not?"

"It takes twenty thousand dollars to build a house for ten thousand dollars."—Puck.

A HAIR-GWING OCCURRENCE.

Beautiful hair.



—But not all his own.—Judge.

Not His Fault.

Gilhooly came home at a late hour, and in his usual condition.

"You are just out of the saloon. Now don't you deny it," said his wife.

"It ain't my fault I came home," responded the wretched inebriate; "I'd been in the saloon yet if the proprietor hadn't closed up."—Texas Siftings.

Had No Chance.

"Your husband," said the caller, sympathizingly, "was a man of many excellent qualities."

"Yes," sighed the widow. "He was a good man. Everybody says so. I wasn't much acquainted with him myself. He belonged to six lodges."—Chicago Tribune.

Giving Liberal Measure.

"How did you say it was from the station to the house, Dennis?"

"Two miles, sir?"

"Two miles! Why, we have been over three already!"

"Well, sir, the roads are bad about here, so we give good measure."—Life.

What She Was Most Afraid Of.

Miss Cumso—Here's what Miss Fangle calls "a little note." There are six pages of paper. It's the longest note I ever saw.

Cumso (with a sigh)—Then you never saw a thirty-dollar note for five hundred dollars.—Detroit Free Press.

A Cure for Vanity.

"It is an odd thing," Jones is such a modest man that I never saw him look in the glass; and yet he wears the loudest kind of neckties."

"He doesn't dare to look in the glass, my boy. His wife buys his neckties."—Puck.

The Height of Bliss.

"Now," said the teacher, on the opening day of school, "I want you to tell me what you all enjoyed most during the vacation."

"Sleeping late in the morning" was the chorus.—Harper's Young People.

Too Fast.

He—Will you marry me, Eveline? She—I—

He—I beg your pardon.

She—Again? Really I wanted to see whether you were in earnest or not.—Jury.

Special Measure Required.

Housekeeper—Look here, to me that quart measure of yours is awful small.

Milkman—My cows is the small kind, mum.—Good News.

A Frank Reply.

Teacher—Did you find any hard problems?

Bad Boy Winks—I didn't look for any.—Puck.

Mighty Necessary.

"I wonder what Simson keeps an office for?" said a business man. "He never has anything to attend to downtown."

"I suppose," was the reply, "he has to have some place to go while his wife gets the housework off her hands."—Judge.

Not Available.

Proud Father (to editor)—My eldest boy—only six—got off a pretty good thing the other day. I thought you might like to print it.

Editor—I am very sorry, sir; but we employ a man especially for that kind of work.—Puck.

Those Reminiscents.

Miss Wayback (first visit to the sea beach)—How awfully dirty the ocean water is! Ish! It tastes horrid, too.

Mrs. Upstyle (a cottager)—Yes, it has always been so. I suppose it's these excursionists.—Good News.

Always Remembered.

Boggs—There is one thing the young man who goes through college never forgets.

Foggs—What is that?

Boggs—To mention the fact.—N. Y. Herald.

Very Much Alike.

Tommy—Pa, Mr. Bixby said to-day that I was very much like you.

Pa—I'm glad to hear it, my son. How did he come to say it?

"I asked him for a quarter."—Puck.

KING OF CHEPIWANOXET

The Romantic Story of a Rhode Island Crusoe.

He Lives Alone in His Little Kingdom in Narragansett Bay—A Life Ruined by the Liquor Habit—The Palace of the King.

Capt. Willett Sherman is the Robinson Crusoe of Rhode Island. He lives on a little island in Narragansett bay, and is known for miles around as the "King of Chepiwanoxet." In the early fifties, says the New York Sun, he was the best known pilot on the sound. He stood in his day as Capt. Hank Haff and the Ellsworths do in theirs. At that time new packet lines were being constantly established between New York, Boston and intermediate Sound ports, and new vessels built. Great rivalry existed on the water then as now, and each owner would go to show her heels to the whole pack if she hoped to amount to anything. Capt. Sherman's knowledge of the sound gave him great prestige, and he was in constant demand, either to steer a new craft to victory or to hold a reputation previously made by an old one.

Then he fell in love with a woman unworthy of him. She lived in the little town of East Greenwich. Immediately upon arriving from each trip Capt. Sherman used to harry over, loaded down with presents, to see her. On one visit he learned that his sweetheart had made a dupe of him. She accepted his attentions to get his presents and then ran away with another man. This shattered Capt. Sherman's faith in human nature. He got drunk and remained drunk longer than any one can remember. He bought an old boat, which he fitted up with a cabin. This craft he made his home, floating about Narragansett bay for years. He lived on the fish, the clams, and the quahaugs which he caught. He realized enough by farming the sea to buy all the whisky he wanted.

Everything ran smoothly with the captain and no one interfered with the life he was leading till he became an oyster pirate. Then he was arrested and fined $20. The captain didn't have $0 cents, so he was sent to jail. He didn't mind the confinement, but he kicked because there was no roll to the bunk and no whisky or liquor in the hold. Two days there more than satisfied him. It was the beginning of the war, and the captain struck upon a novel scheme to effect escape. Sending for the jailer, the captain said: "Look here, I don't want to stay in here twenty years. There's no whisky and no tobacco. If you will enlist me I'll give you all over $500." The jailer accepted his offer on speculation and marched him to Norwich at the muzzle of a loaded rifle, where he enlisted him for 1600.

When the war was over Capt. Sherman laid his course for land and bought and put his abandoned houseboat in commission again. He lived aboard the Red Lion, as he called the boat, as long as it would float. Then he beached it on the little island of Chepiwanoxet and built his present abode. It is a little wooden shanty, with bootleg hinges on the door. In the winter the wind is prevented from whistling through the cracks by covering it completely with sea weed.

When not fishing the captain spends the time in making sail cloth mittens for winter wear. He wears a shirt and overalls. They are the same that he donned when he began his Crusoe-like career. He intends to wear them till he dies.

A City's Stocking Bill.

Leaving men's socks or "half-hose" out of the calculation, it is reckoned that the women, girls and children of New York city wear out an average of three pairs of stockings each in the course of a year, or a total of some 3,000,000 pairs. As to the cost, the range is almost unlimited, from 10 cents a pair for the cheapest cotton article up to $20 a pair for the triumphs of the hosier's art in pure silk, figured, open work, hand embroidered miracles which are worn by women in the boxes of the opera and other fashionable gatherings, upon which money is freely lavished. It is safe to put the price of a single pair of silk stockings made to match a costume, has been known to reach $100. Altogether, it is computed that New York spends annually $3,000,000 for stockings for its women and children, two-thirds of that outlay being for the high-priced qualities worn by a comparatively limited class.

Science Halts.

Layman—I understand that you have devoted your life to the study of disease germs?

Great Scientist (proudly)—I have.

Layman—Have you found a remedy for any of them?

Great Scientist—Well, no; but I have succeeded in finding good long names for them all.—Good News.

Oregon Jersey.

New Yorker—Your police force here does not seem to amount to much. Have you found the perpetrator of the last murder that was committed?

Local Official—Wall, no, we haven't got no perpetrator yet, but we found the corpse of the victim.—Texas Siftings.

Why Not?

Elderly But Well Preserved Widow (to bachelor)—This is an employment agency, is it not?

Manager—It is, ma'am. What can I do for you?

"AN ABLE FINANCIER."

George J. Gould, the Promising Son of the Famous Jay.

The eldest son of Mr. Jay Gould is the capitalist and railroad proprietor, had placed upon him when he was barely of age responsibilities which would have staggered many mature men who do not think lightly of their own ability. Mr. George J. Gould, who is about thirty years old, did not receive a collegiate education, but as soon as he came of age was taken into his father's office and into partnership with the firm of brokers of which Mr. Jay Gould was at that time a member. He must have learned the mystery of finance very rapidly, says Harper's Weekly, for very quickly he was made a director in this company, and that, until soon he sat at the council board of pretty nearly all the corporations in which his father held a large interest. And what was more, the father soon learned to rely with implicit faith upon the son's judgment and business acuteness.

At an age when the sons of rich fathers are usually cutting a pretty wide swath in society, and sowing an abundant crop of wild oats, Mr. George Gould was as hard at work as any bank clerk in Wall street. And it is pretty certain, too, that he had the natural inclinations of youths of his age. But he felt his responsibilities, and in consideration of them suppressed all wayward fancies and fast-come desires. Since then he has been his father's confidential adviser and associate, and on more than one occasion of long duration, when Mr. Jay Gould has been abroad, the son has had complete charge of all the immense and complicated interests of the father. He has been the president of the Pacific Mail Company and of other large corporations. All the while he closely tracked all the details of his father's business, and has gained the respect of all the shrewd men who are associated with Mr. Jay Gould in his various enterprises.

Mr. George Gould is of manly bearing and handsome appearance. In manner, though he is quick, he is courteous, and he impresses any observant visitor with the idea that he is a young man who knows pretty well what he is about. He is a man of family now, and has developed such quiet domestic tastes that he is rarely seen in public except in his journeys to and from his office.

NEW USE FOR WOOD.

Wooden Pipe-Line Irrigation in Pedro Valley, California.

Irrigation is one of the oldest of the arts, and many of the ancients practiced it with as great skill as has been shown in our own time, when by its help what less than a generation ago was looked on as the Great American desert has been converted into so fruitful farming land as any in the country. In such an old art it is interesting to note anything that is new, and something in this direction, says Harper's Weekly, has just been accomplished in California. The usual method of taking water from place to place for irrigating purposes has been by the construction of canals, and that was the universal practice in ancient times. But in the western part of the United States, for some time past, large pipe lines have been laid, and have been used with much success. There is a long pipe line in California from the Sierra Bear reservoir in the San Bernardino mountains, which extends for forty miles into the Perris valley in southern California. This steel pipe line has now been tipped by a pipe line seven miles in length made of redwood staves from twelve to twenty feet long, and bound together with steel bands or hoops. This wooden pipe is thirty-six inches in diameter, and will carry a large volume of water. What is new in this line is the use of wood for constructing so long and large a pipe as this for irrigating purposes. Wood is not usually plentiful in sections needing new irrigation works, and it is therefore not likely that this plan will be imitated to any considerable extent.

Some Interesting Statistics.

The investigations of an inquiring statistician have brought out the fact that getting born costs the people of the United States $30,000,000 annually; that the total expenses of getting married are $900,000,000, and that getting buried costs $75,000,000. After adding to the fact that getting drunk costs us $600,000,000 per year adds a new and sarcastic impressiveness to the admonition: "With all say getting get understanding."

THE FALSE AND THE TRUE.

The present existence of millionaire fortunes, derived to a large extent through speculation, inflated securities and monopolistic combination, is no evidence of national resources and popular prosperity, but quite the contrary.

The concentration of enormous wealth in the hands of the comparatively few bodes no good for the general public or the stability of free institutions.

Its influence is detrimental to legitimate business, its animating spirit being self-interest, and its legislative interference the source of political evils of the worst kind.

Diffusion of riches, whether personally much or little, as acquired by honest industry and enterprise, is the truest token of a free and independent people and the guarantee of national strength.

Every person ought to enjoy the unmolested opportunity of making and saving money through his or her own individual efforts, and no enactment or custom should for a moment be tolerated that unjustly enhances living expenses, and gives the plethoric capitalist, combine or operator any special advantage over the humblest accumulator in the land.

Consolidation is the laying of violent hands upon the rights and liberties of the people.

It is equally as obnoxious financially as it is politically, and repugnant to the height of the American Constitution.

It is Hamiltonian Federalism.

That country is only really strong, rich and prosperous, whose entire population have an equal chance to honestly earn and safely invest, unvexed and unspoiled by adversity, legalized or otherwise.

That is Jeffersonian Democracy.

PLAINFIELD CASES IN COURT.

Decision in the Original Water-Works Contest Is Expected To-Morrow.

The following report was prepared and filed by the common council Monday night:

[Herald of October 31st.

GENTLEMEN:—Hereewith I submit the titles of cases now pending and undetermined in which the city is interested as a party.

In the supreme court there are four cases, as follows:

The mayor, Israel Lewis, prosecutor, v. John H. Moore and others, defendants, on the Second Water Works company, defendants, on certiorari.

The cause has been argued, and a decision is expected on Thursday of this week. Your solicitor feels somewhat sanguine that the informal reports with the questions raised in the case.

The Rahl, Plainfield Gas and Electric Light company, prosecutors, v. the inhabitants of the city of Plainfield, defendants, on certiorari.

The nature of this action also was described in my last communication, and the case is still young up for argument at the present September term.

The State, Elias B. Pope, prosecutor, v. the inhabitants of the city of Plainfield, defendants, on certiorari.

This action presents the question of the validity of the contract with the Plainfield street Railway company and the ordinance granting permission to said company to lay its tracks. The taking of testimony has been begun and has been temporarily suspended in view of the appointment of a committee now under consideration of a committee of the common council.

The State, James W. Tice and others, v. the inhabitants of the city of Plainfield, on certiorari.

This action brings up the ordinance and consequent making by the supervising of the city with a view to the Plainfield Avenue improvement in accordance with the proposition of J. M. Low. The proceedings have been had in due course, and unless we show us within the time limited the form heretofore Nov. 6, it will be impossible to bring on the argument of the case until the February term of the court. It is now the duty of the city to compel the prosecutor to proceed earlier.

In the Union county court of common pleas the following appeals are pending:

William Caldwell vs. the treasurer of the city of Plainfield, on appeal.

John Plankenton vs. the treasurer of the city of Plainfield, on appeal.

The last named causes have been set down for the 9.

Respectfully submitted,

CHARLES A. MARSH.

COUNSELOR REED TO THE RESCUE.

The Borough Appeals to the City to Free It from the Peace Street Project.

Charles A. Reed, borough counsel of North Plainfield, was given the floor at Monday night's meeting of the city council to protest against the adoption of page age of the proposed ordinance to widen Peace street and open it to the brook.

He said that the effect of such action on the part of the city would be to block the consummation of the extension project on the other side. Under the terms of the deed the only way in which North Broadway could be opened was by the appointment of a joint commission. The borough of itself could not open it. The city, therefore, should not bring the improvement of further legislation. If the city opened up the street to the brook, then the proposed thoroughfare would be all in one county, and action under a joint commission of city and borough could not be taken. If the council fished its time this before proceeding the scheme would in two weeks prevent the petition necessary for the appointment of a joint commission, and the proposed improvement be pushed forward by harmonious action.

It seemed to be tacitly agreed that the passage of the proposed ordinance of the city should be deferred pending the presentation of the petition under which both city and borough could act, for the ordinance was not brought up for consideration.

The necessary petition of the borough property-holders along the line of the proposed street had been ready since last Friday, but it has to be advertised ten days before municipal action on it can be taken.

From The New York Journal.

Every seat, and practically all the standing room of Library Hall, was occupied last evening with an audience of ladies and gentlemen who had assembled to attend the second lecture of the Young Men's Christian association for the present season. Preceding the lecture the orchestra of the association, with its full ranks of eleven men, rendered a programme of choice selections.

Robert Anderson, chairman of the lecture committee of the association, then stepped to the front, and in a few choice words, introduced Mr. Robert Roshmore, of Plainfield, N. J., who, for over an hour and a quarter, held his audience with an interesting description of "Life in Texas Among the Cowboys." His description of the life on the ranch, the method of catching and training horses and the peculiar experiences enjoyed by the cowboys in this work, kept his audience in the best of humor during the entire evening.

I was so much impressed with curacy it seemed to me that I must write you and tell you of it. I was troubled with a severe cough, which finally settled on my lungs, and finally developed into consumption. I was induced to try Piso's Cure for Consumption. I used two bottles and was entirely cured. I have since recommended it to many others, and it has never failed to cure. Mrs. S. A. Jackson, Fortsmouth, N. H.

DEMOCRACY TRIUMPHANT!

New York!
New Jersey!
Massachusetts!
Maryland!
Iowa!
And the Whole Country Goes DEMOCRATIC!

An Off Year.

BUT LOOK OUT FOR THE RESULTS IN 1892.

The result of Tuesday's elections was most gratifying to the Democrats and the people generally. With all the machinery that Boss Platt and his adherents could bring to bear against the Democratic candidate for Governor of New York, Roswell P. Flower, that gentleman has carried the State by a grand majority. This result settles the question as to how New York State will vote in the next Presidential election. It will be Democratic. Governor Flower's plurality is over 60 000 in the city of N w York and 45 738 in the State, the Democrats making big gains in the rural counties of the S a e. Gov. Russell, D. ocrat, carries the Massachusetts by a plurality of about 9,000.

Iowa re-elects Gov B ies, Democrat by an increased plurality.

New Jersey remains true to her Democratic principles and increases her majority in the Assembly and Senate.

Pennsylvania went Quay-ward as was expected.

Ohio stands by McKinley.

All over the country the signs from Tuesday's elections prove that the next President will be a Democrat, and lots of people think as we do—his name is Grover Cleveland.

The following is a list of Senators and Assemblymen elected in this State:

New Jersey Legislature, 1892.

The following Senators and Assemblymen were elected in New Jersey. The figures of Republicans appear in Roman type and those of Democrats in Italics. The next Legislature, therefore, will contain 5 Republican Senators, 16 Democratic Senators, and 20 Republican Assemblymen and 40 Democratic Assemblymen. Members who are re-elected are indicated by a star (*):

THE ELECTION IN THIS CITY.

A Light Vote Polled in Plainfield, and Little Interest Manifested—The Complete Returns in Detail.

So far as Plainfield was concerned, Tuesday's election was utterly devoid of notable features. The delightful weather took many of the people out of town, on pleasure bent; and all who could, observed it as a holiday, and went driving, or gunning, or sight-seeing, or to the theatre in the metropolis. It was a far better day for sport than for election. So far as chasing after voters was concerned, apathy prevailed in every ward.

The vote polled in Plainfield was one of extraordinary lightness. Out of the 3,772 voters registered, only 1,662 cast ballots.

The Hon. Elmer Flower, the local candidate on the Democratic ticket for Assembly, made a highly creditable run. His canvass had been an honest and straightforward one, and in the contest a score of people who a booth and prepare his ballot secretly.

Several had an idea that they were required to deposit their ballots in the booths, and started to walk serenely away after having done so.

Somebody in the Second ward voted an advertisement of Warburton's watches.

A Railroad Run Badly Hurt.

A smash-up of freight and coal cars occurred on the Jersey Central near Greenbrook just beyond Dunellen early on Thursday. A number of cars were wrecked, and the railroad officials had to put two wreckers into service to clear the tracks.

The lineman on a Baltimore and Ohio freight closely following the wrecked train was putting on brakes to help bring his train to a stop when he was struck by a water hooker for locomotives, jumping over the tracks, and his head was cut open. He was brought to this city, where Dr. Kittle sewed up his wounds, and he was sent to his home up the road.

KNOWN HIS INCREASE FOR KYTE.

He Makes Big Gains All Over, and Runs Especially Where He Was "Wanted".

This year the Hon. George Kyte, Republican Assemblyman from this district, goes into the Legislature with bells on. True, he might as well be defeats for all he is allowed, any voice or vote in the affairs of State, but then he is a good and popular fellow, well-liked by all in the house, and the forty Democrats who really compose the Legislature hope he will come down and be his usual jolly self for the pleasure of his association.

This year his vote and his majority were increased everywhere. There was much apathy among the Democrats, and many did not vote. Mr. Flower's Simon for the office was unquestioned, and both parties united in praising the Democratic candidate's clean and upright canvass, but all knew he had no show on earth of election, and he was in consequence neglected. The vote of last year and this is as follows:

	1890		1891
	Kyte.	Cook.	Kyte.	Flower.
Plainfield	994	893	1051	699
Railway	208	201	222	164
Westfield	240	240	246	168
Fanwood	154		160	97
Linden			32	23
Clark	32	39	33	30
	2,139	1,867	2,197	1,521
Majorities	263		676

Union county as a whole, however, went Democratic, giving as far as heard from, 500 majority for Morris B. Heddell, (Dem.), for Coroner. John Carroll (Dem.) has carried the First District for Assembly by over 700. Elias F. Lutes (Dem.) has 400 majority in the Second District for Assembly. Elisabeth gives a Democratic majority of over 1,600.

JAMES J. BERGEN AGAIN.

The Finest Speaker the Assembly Ever Knew, Re-elected.

Here is not the least part of the good news that is making Democratic rejoice all over the country:

SOMERVILLE, Nov. 4.

New Market's Small Republican Margin.

The result of the voting at New Market gives 205 votes cast, with a Republican plurality of 13.

SET AFIRE BY EJECTED TENANTS.

Clawson and His Sister Charged With Arson at Hazelwhirlin.

Peter Clawson and Caroline his sister were lodged in jail at New Brunswick, Friday afternoon, charged with Arson.

They have been residing in a house at Hazelwhirlin, Piscataway township, near Plainfield, belonging to Luther Boles, and Thursday were ordered to leave for nonpayment of rent.

Clawson became very angry, and, running into the house, seized an old gun, with which he threatened to shoot Boles.

Wm. Randolph, who lives on the opposite side of the road, saw a suspicious flight back of the house Thursday night, and found that one end of it was ablaze, and hay and straw had been stuffed under the floor from the outside and fired. Straw was found scattered across the yard and out to the road. Search for the two was made but unsuccessful. Mr. Randolph at once gave the alarm, but the house, being an old frame one and very dry, could not be saved.

The house was a long one story and a half building, erected about seventy-five years ago, and considered at that time a very fine residence. It was valued at $1 800 and insured for $700.

The Clawsons were atti e the neighborhood before fire fire started, and after removed all their furniture, though they had empti d the section where the fire was first detected.

Constable Perine, who arrested the prisoners, says they are both demented, and they are so regarded in the neighborhood. Preparations were begun a few days ago to obtain an order from the court to commit them to an asylum.

Clawson is 70 years old, and his sister seventy-five. Both children are demented, but are quite hooking people and very reticent. At the jail on Friday Clawson said:

"I did n't make the fire, and I don't know who did."

Miss Clawson refused to say anything.

They Played a Tune That Hasn't Played' Nothing for Some Years.

The fall meeting of the Gongress national church Friday night was a very pleasant event. The musical entertainment arranged by Mrs B T. Barnes included a piano duet and violin duet by Mrs. Barnes and Mr. Conde, being one of the difficult selections that Mozis rendered at Music Hall, a vocal duet by Miss Kirkner and Mr. Barnes, a harmonica duet by Wyatt and Malcolm Barnes, a solo by Miss Kirkner, being a beautiful German song that she learned while abroad, and a piano solo by Miss Wingaker. The audience testified by frequent applause its appreciation of the many good things.

After the musical refreshments were served, and the evening was p sed very enjoyably. The attendance was large, and included many young people

THEY ACT AS PILOTS.

Little Fish That Guide the Big Fellows to Food.

The Jellyfish and His Lively Pathfinders—How the Sharks Find Their Meat at Sea Prey—The Hermit Crab and Its Satellites.

It is a popular belief among many seafarers that the shark depends to a greater or less extent upon the pilot fish for information, and is guided by this little sentiment to the various toothsome dainties that float in the sea. How much truth there is in this it will be difficult to determine, but, says the New York Herald, it is barely possible that the shark may be attracted by the attack he does to find the action of the pilot fish.

Once when sitting in my boat fishing I noticed the negro-like fin of a large shark moving about in the vicinity. It had evidently scented a bunch of fish which I had hung over the stern, and came up the lake in the current in rapidly decreasing circles.

It passed so near that I could have touched the big dorsal fin, and I had an excellent opportunity to note the action of the pilot fish. They were only half a dozen in all, two or three being pilot fish, and the rest the curious sucking fish, or remora. As the shark swept around the pilots—little striped fellows, three or four inches long—kept at its head, making short excursions from it at every object that appeared like food.

Once when drifting along in the warm waters of the Gulf of Mexico I came upon a number of large jellyfish. Now and then they came lazily to the surface, expanding their rounded, glass-like domes. Tipping one over to obtain a glimpse of the lower and its mass of tentacles, I noticed a number of little fishes darting about, as if terribly excited that their umbrella had been upset.

They darted here and there, one or two taking a hasty peep through the boat, but when the jellyfish righted itself back they swam, and I could see them among the tentacles, evidently perfectly at home in a mass of what are deadly weapons to a large number of fish.

One of the most attractive pilots or consorts is found up under the physalia, or Portuguese man-of-war. The latter is a floating community of zoöids, left upon the water by a bubble, richly tinted with pink and purple, from the upper surface of which floats a sail that can be furled or drawn in or thrown to the breeze, as the case may be.

From the lower portion extend long streamers or tentacles of an intense purple and a virulent poison—so powerful that the slightest touch is fatal to fish of large size. Up among these poison darts live a number of fish of the exact hue of the tentacles—a remarkable case of protective resemblance.

If appearances are to be considered, then certainly the sea anemones must be included among the pilots, as there is no one kind, if not several, that is an incomprehensible way takes up its position on the tiptop of a crab's back and there lives, moving about with its host, and we can imagine keeping its myriad eyes open for the main chance; but that it tells what it sees to the crab that is thus forced to bear it we may readily doubt. Why the anemone take this position, and why the crab permits it, open up a wide field for speculation.

Something Off.

A Maine man, notorious for his "shortness," according to the Kennebec Journal, lately went into a meat shop, and inquired the price of a certain scuff of beef.

The proprietor of the shop is a generous fellow, and in answer to the old man's question he said:

"Oh, I'll give you that."

The old man reached out his ear. He is hard of hearing, and had missed the reply.

"Eh?" he said, "call it ten cents." And the old man went home with a comfortable sense of having driven a good trade.

MOVING BUTCHER SHOPS.

Meat Sold in Modern City Comes on Hooks or Pulleys Overhead.

Only the better class of Mexicans eat meat, and one of the great fields of American investment is in the packing interests of Mexico, says the New York World. Hams and beef bring high prices, and the meat business of the city is managed by monopolies. Good beeves are worth from $35 to $50 a head. There is more mutton eaten than beef. The meat regions of Mexico City are mules. Take one of the prosaic, dirtier mules you see and feed and fasten a framework of hooks to a saddle on his back. Let this framework extend above the head over the mule and on the hooks hang the halves and quarters of beeves, so that the blood drips from them to the ground. When the mules are small the meat almost touches the ground. Then you have the Mexican butcher cart of the mountains. The butcher or meat peddler wears a great blanket about his shoulders, a broad-brimmed hat on his head and his feet are bare. If you buy a quarter of beef he will carry it into your house on his head, and if you want a slice he will hack off a piece for you and charge you about the same for the work as the loin. The Mexicans sell every part of the animal, and in every market you will find little cosy shops in which shreds of beef are fried and offered for sale. These are for the Indian customers, who stand about and eat the greasy morsel with their fingers and without the use of knife, fork or plate. In Mexico City the butchering is more carefully done and beef is comparatively cheap. You can get a roast for eighteen cents a pound, but pork is more expensive. The pork business in Mexico City is controlled by a woman, who has made millions out of it, and he is now putting up one of the biggest packing houses in the world. She has his agents all over the city, and he imports his hogs from Kansas.

A WORK OF ART.

A Grand Monument and Receptacle for Columbus's Remains.

Christopher Columbus died May 20, 1506, and was buried at Valladolid, in Spain, but his remains were soon exhumed and transferred to the monastery of the Carthusian brotherhood of Las Cuevas, Seville, where, in the centre of the choir, the bones of his beloved son, Diego, were laid in the consecrated ground by the side of his illustrious father. Here they reposed until 1536 when with solemn ceremonies they were exhumed, carried across the sea and deposited in a vault or pomp in the cathedral of Hispaniola (San Domingo.) As the life of Columbus was one of constant wandering, his bones seemed destined never to rest quietly in their sepulchres. And in 1796 when San Domingo was ceded to France the bodies of father and son were again exhumed and sent with great state to the cathedral of Havana. The sacred dust may, even now after three hundred and eighty-six years since it was the abiding place of a great soul, be again borne over the sea and upon the continent of North America, to the spot upon which the gallant admiral of the ocean sea never set foot, they may repose at last. Of the many monuments projected to Columbus that recently modeled by the Spanish sculptor is the most striking, being at once a monument and a receptacle for his dust. It is designed for execution in marble and to several full-length figures.

A Collector of Idols.

S. H. Zhan, of Lancaster, Pa., is a collector of idols. Amongthe many heathen gods to be seen in his collection are Aztec idols from Mexican mounds and tombs, many of them thousands of years old, a Hindoo idol with real gems for eyes, ten or fifteen Japanese and Chinese gods, including the "God of Darkness," of the last-named people. He also has Indian idols taken from sepulchres in mounds in Africa, Tennessee, Kentucky and Missouri, besides a great Indian god, made of sandstone, found somewhere in the Valley of the Susquehanna river. It is thought that Mr. Zhan's agents were among the worldly buyers who fell over each other at the London auctioneer who sold the pure gold Persian idol on the Strand in July, but as that idol of Mithra-Baal was knocked down for nearly $50,000 in our money, it does not grace his collection.

DEATH TO FISHES.

An Electrical Device by Which Angling Is Made Decidedly Easy.

The fisherman who uses a smattering of electrical knowledge has great pleasures in store for him, according to the Electrical Review, as can be seen from the following outfit, with which at least a modicum of truth can be furnished for some of the fish stories so frequent during the summer months. That paper's electrician, when preparing for a day off, adds to his store a battery, pondering over the "Sure Thing," with enough insulated wire for a line. A movable cup (A) slides on a rod and can be set at any point by a spring. The line is made of flexible wire rubber, covered, the hook being insulated with rubber tape, excepting a small portion near the barb. The battery (B) and condenser are connected to the boat, one end of the latter being grounded by a plate (G) in the water, while the other is connected to the wire (F). The line A is connected to the cup sliding on the rod, and the contents of the condenser, thus paralyzing, if not killing him outright. The fish will then float to the surface and can be landed with a scoop net. As will be seen, it is not necessary to land the pole at all after a bite, but leaving it in position, as the working is entirely automatic.

Memorial Day of Caribou.

Every bay and inlet on the coast of Ceylon abounds with musical fish. Their song, if it can be called a song, is not one sustained note like a bird's, but a multitude of tiny, soft, sweet sounds, each clear and distinct, but all something like the vibrations of a violin string when its rim is rubbed with the moistened finger. In the harbor of Bombay, India, there is a fish with a song like the sound produced by an Æolian harp.

—The annual convention of the Young Men's Christian Association of the fourth district of New Jersey will be held at Rahway Nov. 12, 13 and 14.

—Dr. G. W. Endicott is about to enlarge his newly purchased house on Park avenue. He will make an addition to be used as a dining room.

—A child born to Mr and Mrs Nathaniel M. Dunellen, Tuesday morning, died a few hours afterwards. Mrs. Dutton is very low.

—The Emerald's first issue of a new fire exchange has been issued by Agent R. Kney, of this city, in the interests of the Catholic society of this place.

—The ordinance covering Carey's case, and providing for the payment of the assessment of trees in the city was adopted on final passage by the common council Monday night.

—Mr. Hendricks' Crescent pharmacy will remove this week from corner of Park avenue and Fourth street, to the Scheppig building, corner of Front and Grove streets.

—Landholders desiring notices to post up warning the people that if found guilty of their being stay they will be prosecuted according to law, may be procured at this office.

—James Babbitt, who was accidently shot in the arm, Monday, by a friend, is improving at Muhlenberg Hospital, and will be out before long. He turned out Tuesday to vote.

—Now that the gunning season is open, you want a first-class gun. The Martin Fire-Lock gun, whose advertisement appears in another column, can supply you better than anyone else.

—A quartette composed of members of the Y. M. C. A. choir will sing at all the meetings to be held under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. in the M. E. church Sunday at 4 (5) p. m.

—A change in the advertisement of Mullins & Co. the famous Newark furniture and carpet dealers, will appear in our next issue. They will announce extraordinary bargains in furniture, carpets, &c.

—The Washington Star says of the speech delivered by judge Ulrich before the recent reunion of the 15th N. J. Vols., that the remarks were remarkably well chosen and enthusiastically received.

—A vicious bat got into a Bay street trifler last night and gave the head of the family a lively fight. The unfortunate man has several bald spots on his head from which the bat pulled glossy black locks.

—A most wonderful book is "The Story of Mary," of which the advertisement in another column gives information. Write to the local agent, Lock box 707, Plainfield, N. J., for sample illustrations, free of charge.

—Dominick Duffy, the man who was so badly injured in a fight with his brother-in-law, Cornelius Caulfield, is in as bad a condition as when he was brought to Muhlenberg Hospital, where it is feared that he may die.

—The Relief Association gratefully needs clothing for the boys and young men. Any person who have cast-off garments of that description will confer a favor by sending them to the Relief rooms, 45 West Second street.

—The lantern evening of the Camera club, Tuesday, was greatly enjoyed by a fine audience. The views, exhibited by Charles B. Davis, were superb, and H. M. Fogg's address on "Art in Photography" was fully appreciated.

—Bills amounting to $5,700 were presented to the common council Monday night. To pay them, $4,000 had to be borrowed, and a note of $2,500 about to fall due was renewed. Accounts are to be squared up before Jan. 1.

—There are no reasons for the charges of inhuman treatment made against Warden Dodd of the county jail, and the attack upon him by some New York papers, and copied in the Courier and the News of this city, was an outrage.

—The Bound Brook Democrat says that Chester A. Crowe is clearing off a number of valuable lots on the top of Mt. Pleasant, south of Bound Brook for Mr. Vail, of Plainfield. It is a beautiful location for building sites, with scenery seldom excelled.

—The councilmen all were present at Monday night's meeting. The session was begun at 8:20, and ended at 10, when adjournment was taken to Nov. 16th. The council chamber was very chilly. It is hoped that the furnace will do better work during the winter.

—The Women's Temperance Aid Society desire to express their sincere thanks to the many kind friends, who during the past year of their work, have in various ways shown interest, helped them in their efforts to lead others to a better, better living. A. T. Mason, Secretary.

—Woodland avenue from South avenue to LaGrande avenue is to be macadamized. The necessary ordinance was passed on first and second readings and ordered engrossed and advertised preparatory to final passage. It was laid over at the meeting of the common council Monday night. Mr. Hetfield introduced the ordinance.

—The trial of the 4-way hydrant at Madison avenue and Third street, Tuesday, was a great success. No matter whether one or four lengths of hose were playing, they would throw streams over the highest buildings and 150 feet along the road, without the aid of an engine. The water in the standpipe was kept at 150 lbs. pressure.

—Tampering with the fire-alarm or electric light system is to be severely punished. At Monday night's session of the common council, Mr. Spangenberg introduced an ordinance imposing heavy fine and imprisonment for malicious injury to the boxes or lamps. The ordinance was passed on first and second readings and referred engrossed and advertised.

—A precedent has been established for those who delight in blocking up the sidewalk with show cases, boxes of goods, and other things that ought to be kept inside property lines. Though the sidewalks ought to be reserved entirely for the use of foot-passengers, the common council on Monday night granted to a local firm permission to keep a big show case standing between the curb and building lines.

A YOUNG GIRL FATALLY BURNED.

She Ventured Too Near a Bonfire, and Was Enveloped in Flames.

The six-year-old daughter of Charles L. and Ellen Wall, at Dunellen, was fatally burned Tuesday. She was playing about the yard, and ventured too near a bonfire of leaves that her mother had made. Her dress caught fire, and in an instant she was enveloped in flames.

Mr. Benedict, who was passing, ran in and wrapped the overcoat about the child, but too late to prevent frightful injuries.

The child was almost entirely paralyzed from the shock, and the physician who was called saw that she could not recover.

She died in great suffering at 9 o'clock Wednesday. The sad affair has cast a gloom over the entire community.

"Esmeralda" By Amateurs, Nov. 19

The first complete public rehearsal of the four-act comedy, "Esmeralda," to be given at the Casino Nov. 19, was held last Saturday evening, and the result proved that the play would be a good-starting the next month by the energetic young ladies and gen lemen engaged in the company. Should the performance be repeated a crowded house will be assured, as the play is pu-hly performed. Amateur actors usually are unwilling to give the necessary time and labor to the proper preparation of any piece in which they undertake, but such has not been the case in regard to the cast secured for "Esmeralda". A competent director was engaged some time a month ago to take entire charge of the rehearsals, and he has come from New York at frequent intervals in his capacity of performers in their lines and business. In order to secure thoroughness in the acquiring of these each rehearsal, until the one given last Saturday, has been devoted to the study of part of the play, so that scenes and situations have been practiced and repeated with much more care than is usually the case.

The complete cast, which includes, as will be seen, some of Plainfield's cleverest amateurs, is as follows:

Esmeralda, a mountain lassie, ... Miss Wm. I. Saunders
Old Schiffgarus, her foster father, ... Wm. H. Cook
Mrs. Rogers, an ambitious woman ..... Miss Maude Bowers
Dave Hardy, a young Mountaineer, ... Mr. Wm. Pelletier
Jack Desmond, an artist, ... Mr. Edward C. Perkins
Mrs. Desmond, } the shrews,
Kate Desmond, } ..... Miss Carrie Cook
Mrs. Joseph Mason and Miss Van Buskirk, Gossips, a scheming mother and daughter, ... Mrs. Wm. I. Saunders
Paul Estabrook, philosopher, artist and lover, ... Mr. Paul Estabrook Marquisette Montesani, an adventure ..... Mr. Kaufman Nanette, a Parisian maid ..... Miss Cadet
Mr. Rogers, who can't see the play of "Esmeralda" as presented by professionals in previous seasons will appreciate the difficulties attending its performance by amateurs. Those who have had ambitious play yet undertaken here by local amateur players, and it is hoped that the hard work that it is to them so conscientiously is done by those who will meet with due recognition when the performance is submitted to the well-known critical taste of a Plainfield audience on the 19th.

The piece contains a judicious mingling of the humorous and pathetic. The more serious parts are the life like portrayal and interpretation of which, by Mrs. Saunders, will be somewhat of a revelation, and the character of Dave Hardy, the lover of Esmeralda, in which Mr. Wm. I. Saunders will be supported by Mr. Pelletier, offers excellent opportunities for strong acting, including some important emotional situations. The comedy element will be supplied by Mrs. Mason, as Nora Desmond, a flirtatious young artist, by Mr. Cook as an old-fashioned North Carolina farmer, and by Mr. Kaufman as an easy-going, philosophical man of the world.

Particular attention is being paid to the stage-setting, which are being designed and prepared by Joseph Mason. In one scene, representing a conservatory, the stage will be filled with a profusion of potted flowers and palms. Wigs, costumes and other accessories will be obtained from New York. In short, every effort will be made to make this performance of "Esmeralda" as complete as possible in every detail.

PERSONALIA.

The Hon. J. R. McPherson, United States Senator, has procured a re-issue of a pension for the borough veteran, F. M. Whitley.

Miss Victoria Hand of this city was married in Rahway on Saturday, to Frederick I. Smith of Brooklyn. The Rev J. H. Parks, D. D., officiated.

The numerous warm and sincere Plainfield friends possessed by J. Augustus Green, will be glad to know that he is not in at The Albion and promises to remain there for some time to come.

Congratulations are now in order to Mr and Mrs James W. Leal of East Ninth street, for a daughter sent unto them on Friday. Mr and Mrs. Samuel H. Milliken are now grandparents.

General passenger agent Joseph E. Baldwin of the Jersey Central has held that position for several years and has a big reputation. He was at one time general passenger agent of the Reading in New York.

Foster Milliken, of Spicerance avenue, has entirely recovered from his late serious illness and is now at Asbury Park, with Mrs. Milliken. He went quail hunting the other day and shot a haystack. It hurried up and cost him $12.

Edward Leal, jr., who was injured in a game of football two weeks ago, is still confined to the house. The injury is to his kneecap, which was smashed out of place. He will be able to engage in active sports again this season.

Signor J. E. Fucci, manager of the Postal Telegraph office in this city, Elizabeth and New York, has been confined to his home by painful injuries received a few nights ago in jumping from a Jersey central passenger train that he thought was carrying him past his station.

Frank C. Green, who formerly kept a big furniture establishment in this city, died at his late residence, 241 West 115th street, New York, after a lingering illness. Tuesday. Funeral services will be held from the Seventh-Day Baptist church in this city Friday afternoon at half-past 2 p. m.

After Truman Adams, second son of Mr and Mrs. F. C. Adams, 43 Madison avenue, died early Sunday morning of heart disease. He was a bright little boy, nearly seven years old. He had recently passed through sickness of spirited, which left him with rheumatism; then followed heart trouble.

A pleasant surprise was given to Mr. and Mrs. James H. Christopher, of Orchard place, who recently moved from Tottenville, S. I., by a party of fifteen ladies who drove over from here. After partaking of a bountiful dinner they took a walk through Plainfield's beautiful streets and returned home carrying pleasant memories of the city, with many promises to come again.

A Dunellen Bee Stinging.

Geo. Vroom who lives on Bath avenue, Dunellen, left home last Saturday as usual and has not been seen since. His family are greatly alarmed over his absence.

—Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock; locomotive sparks set fire to the grass in the Potter Press works yards, and from thence spread to a pile of lumber. After making an effort to notify the watchman in the office, Fritz Frage and Billy Bilsen climbed the fence and after a hard fight saved the buildings from catching.

A SECOND VICTIM.

John Fitzgerald Falls from Grace Church Belfry and is Killed.

(From The Press of Oct. 29.)

The workmen on the new Grace church building had a terrible experience this morning, when they saw one of their comrades dashed almost to pieces on the stones far beneath their feet.

The accident happened at about 8 o'clock. The unfortunate victim was John Fitzgerald. He made a false step backward from the scaffold at the top of the church belfry, and before the fellow workmen could spring forward to catch him he went whirling downwards to the street, a distance of building since sixty-five feet below.

The workmen clambered down from their gaddy height as quickly as possible, and tenderly picked up the mangled, bleeding and senseless body of their comrade, and conveyed it to the Muhlenberg Hospital.

Fitzgerald died at the hospital at 1 o'clock this afternoon, without having recained consciousness. The internal injuries from which he suffered are frightful. He had contained hemmorrhages from the kidneys, and bled freely from other organs.

He leaves a family at Germantown.

This is the second man who has been badly injured by a fall from Grace church belfry.

FIVE YEARS IN PRISON.

That's the Penalty Elston Gets for Robbing O. M. Dunham.

At the Union county court in Elizabeth, on Saturday, sentence was pronounced on Charles Elston, who some weeks ago stole a quantity of watches and jewelry from the store of O. M. Dunham, 302 West Front street, this city.

The court was of the opinion that Elston was too bad a character to be permitted to roam at large, and therefore sentenced him to five years' imprisonment at hard labor.

Plainfield Real Estate Transfers.

Real estate transfers recorded in Union county include the following from this city:

Frank A. Barnaby, widower, to Anna M. Barnaby, widow, lot on Second street, corner land of M. Hiles on Second street, date of deed, Oct 22, 1891; consideration, $1.

Mary Ann Sherwood, by her guardian, David J. Kenyon, and both wife of Netherwood avenue, to Charles Dodd, lot on Netherwood avenue, deed dated Oct. 26, 1891; consideration, $200.

John J. Matthews and wife, to Fairfax Hodges and wife, property on the north side of Front street, fifty feet westerly from Catharine street, 24x120; deed dated Sept 17, 1891; consideration, $1,000.

Mary C. Cummings, husband and others, to Jeremiah Manning and others, tract containing four acres, more or less, on the north side of Second street; deed dated Sept 12, 1891; consideration, $1.

Winnifred L. Brown and husband to Adelia J. Hoff land in Park avenue; land of L. Brown, 200 ft. and deed Sept 12, 1891; consideration, $—.

Plainfield's Good Health.

The following statistics concerning the healthfulness of this city are from the annual report of the secretary of the Plainfield Board of Health to the State board:

PREVALENCE OF DISEASES.

During the past year the prevailing diseases have been consumption and heart failure which have proved fatal in a greater number and scarlet fever among the children, though not of a serious character.

The total number of deaths for the twelve months ending Oct. 1, 1891, has been 198 from all causes, giving a rate of 18.9 per 1,000 population of about 12,000.

The number of deaths of those under 5 years of age is 70, which is 35 from heart failure, apoplexy & paralysis & accidents 2, Bright's disease 2, and about 50 per cent of death record was claimed from among the very young and those advanced in years.

VITAL STATISTICS.

A careful and thorough collection of all vital statistics has been made, and in the registry the following figures are compiled:

Marriages solemnized, 98 births reported, being 104 males and 79 females, the sex not stated, estimating 2 children of 5 years and younger, 42 persons between 6 years and 20 years and 24 of 21 years and over.

WORK DONE.

The year just closed, Oct. 1, 1891, has witnessed a good deal of work done in making after the sanitary condition of Plainfield. The Health inspector has reported 211 visits to specific made of different properties and about 150 mandatory requirements for the removal of nuisances detected and kept by. During the past twelve months 440 complaints have been registered, all of which have been carried out.

The collection of kitchen garbage is attended to regularly in closed vehicles, and often enough every week to prevent any accumulation, which has been found to be healthful.

In these ways and many others the local Board of Health has done a large degree of beneficial service, by exerting its means for preventative disease. H. B. Leonard, sec'y.

Ending Their Second Century.

The Rev. I. E. Livermore of the New Market reformed day Baptist church writes to The Sabbath Record as follows:

"We are fourteen years from the two hundredth anniversary of the founding of our church. The present pastor first came to the pastoral care of this flock fourteen years ago last April, and for the succeeding fourteen years hence he will greatly desire to utilize such appropriate celebrations. Hence I [illegible]

"Since the organization of this church in 1705 there have been thirteen pastors, covering 186 years of pastoral service and averaging 14 the whole time. We have got out a pastor. Their names and respective terms of service are as follows. The Rev. Edmund Dunham, 27 years; the Rev. Jonathan Allen, 32; the Rev. Solomon P. Rogers, 10, the Rev. Henry M. Lofferty, 12; the Rev. Gideon Wooden, 18; the Rev. Eli Forsythe, 3; the Rev. Wm. B. Gillette, 14; the Rev. H. H. Baker, 5; the Rev. L. C. Rogers, 10; the Rev. L. A. Platts, 8; the Rev. I. E. Livermore, 6, and the present pastor, 14 years. The Rev. J. G. Burdick, 3; the Rev. L. E. Livermore, 4 (3) pastorate. Of these pastors the six last serving are still living. Six have died in the ministry, brother L. C. Rogers and L. A. Platts, have encouraged us with their presence and good words one each, during the summer.

"We anticipate having brother and sister Davis with us soon to spend a Sabbath in giving us a fresh inspiration for missionary work.

"We have greatly enjoyed having the Rev. W. C. Titsworth and family in Dunellen during the summer. They left us for their winter home in Shiloh, Fla., Oct. 13."

CONTRACTOR LOW AND HIS SEWERS.

Rarer Gilbert Presents a Yale, and the Council Overrule It.

The proposition of J. H. Low of Kingston to build sewers in Plainfield bobbed up again at Monday night's meeting of the common council. First reference tip it was made by Mayor Gilbert in the following veto:

To the Honorable Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

GENTLEMEN:—I return herewith, without my approval, "An Ordinance to Provide for Sewerage in the City of Plainfield," adopted on Oct. 19, 1891. This ordinance, with the exception of a corrected date, is similar to the one vetoed by me on the 21 ult., and all of the objections urged against the adoption of that ordinance except the one which had reference to the erroneous date apply with equal force to this.

Accompanying this ordinance I find a description of the system which Mr. Low proposes to construct, by which we are informed that "a main trunk sewer should start from the corner of Richmond and Seventh streets at a feet below the surface with a grade of 2 feet to the mile, and pass through Seventh street, Franklin place, Ninth street, Portland avenue, Eighth street, Plainfield avenue, to Front street, there to be met by another main trunk sewer, which should start from the intersection of Front and Richmond streets—both sewers to continue along the streets, and pass through Front street to West End avenue, (now Grant avenue), through West End avenue, to embankment, to the outlet, with manholes at the sewage works, or to continue to Green to surface drain. The sewage to pass through pipes at the outlet, or through sewage tanks at the sewage works, where it is treated by the chemicals, the solid constituents are precipitated and drawn off, while the liquid part is filtered and allowed to flow through into the earth."

Just what this means it is difficult to tell. There is nothing in the description which clearly influences what Mr. Low proposes to do; he does not say that he is to make the sewer works at Grant avenue and Front street, although by suggestion he would have to do so. He does not say how the sewage is to be disposed of, he leaves us to draw our own inferences as to whether it is to be by irrigation, chemical precipitation, or some other way.

That Mr. Low should expect his scheme so vaguely and indefinitely is not a matter of surprise, for I am informed that he has never constructed a sewerage system, and he is a stranger of having a franchise that will enable him to obtain one such as he now proposes. But that your honorable body should, on such an unsatisfactory description of his system, also without any definite plans, be willing to grant him a franchise, is sufficient to justify a grave doubt of your wisdom. It is very much difficult to find another instance of a municipal co-operation granting a franchise for so important a work as the sewerage of a city without expert advice, and without having plans and specifications of the work to be done.

What kind of a system are we to have? Is the sewage to be disposed of by chemical precipitation, irrigation, or how? Is it to be discharged into the Raritan river? Is it to be carried to Green brook? Is it to be carried to Harr ary? Tests have been made to determine the advantages of the soil to filtration purposes? Have any tests been made to determine the advantages of the soil to filtration purposes? Is the sewage to be carried to the outlet by gravity? Is it to be pumped? Is it to be carried to the outlet by gravity? Is it to be pumped? Is it to be carried to the outlet by gravity? Is it to be pumped? Is it

HIGHER THAN OTHERS.

Chicago Odd Follows to Erect a Thirty-Four Story Building.

"I Will Be as Tall as the Washington Monument—New Architectural Devices for Making the Huge Structure Safe.

The odd fellows' hall to be erected in Chicago will be the highest building in the world. The architects are Adler & Sullivan, who made the plans for the Auditorium. It will be seventy-five stories and seventeen hundred and fifty feet high. The construction is an original one. The structure is cruciform in shape. This form, symbolic in a sense, is made use of the most important principles of the construction, as by it the weight of the building is utilized to buttress the great tower on every side, making the wonderful height of thirty-four stories absolutely secure. The central part, from which the tower rises, is flanked by twenty-two stories on each side. As the central part goes up twelve stories higher than the rest of these wings, and as the tower itself is built in still less gigantic offices building in itself, one can comprehend what a stupendous undertaking the building is.

In the substructure riveted steel pillars and steel girders will be immovably and together at all floors, vertical as well as horizontal, by steel or iron rivets, and a system of diagonal windbraces of steel, so far-reaching that, reinforced by the masses of masonry which will surround the pillars in the lower parts of the structure, a perfect resistance of all wind strains is assured. The building will cover 45,000 square feet of ground. The dimensions are 175x100. The whole of the interior 8,000,000 cubic feet of contents—will cover an area of about 4,500 square feet. The total cost of the building will be about $3,000,000. The cost of both the building and ground will be about $6,000,000.

The first and second stories of the building are planned for stores. The dimensions of the largest stores will be 60x40, those facing the court on the inside, 40x40 on the corner and 20x40 on banking purposes. The stores in the second story will be similarly arranged, the largest of which will be 60x40, and the smallest 20x40. The third, fifth, sixth and tenth stories will be devoted to lodge rooms and parlors, the largest of which will be 60x40 and the smallest 20x20. Above the twenty-first floor are the elevated floors of all, for the use of the odd fellows—and it is expected that the grand lodge of the United States will have its headquarters there—a number will be rented to other orders, and any floor space not taken will itself of the ordinary one building offices.

On the northeast corner of the ground floor of the building there will be a large lobby. In the tenth story will be a great drill hall, 175x45, for the order, measuring 45 feet in height. This hall can also be utilized for a banquet or ballroom. The other stories are arranged in offices of about the same size. One hundred and ninety-two of these are up in the tower, in a space seventy feet square. One set of elevators will run to the tenth story, another set to the twenty-second, and another set between the thirteenth floor all the way to the thirty-fourth. The space above the thirty-fourth story and the roof will be occupied by the machinery of the elevators, also their run and the tank which will supply the building with water.

HATS FOR GENTLEMEN.

The Crown Is the Same As Last Year, But the Brim Is Broader.

In hats one has not a distinct change, writes a New York correspondent. As many men know to their sorrow the prevailing style in derbys for several years has been the narrow rolled brim, very much "pinched" front and crown. This sort of hat is still put forward by some first-class hatters, and I am told that the vogue in England, but those who want something different can have it, and feel sure that he is in the advance guard of fashion. The crown is of the same shape as last year, but the brim is much broader and flatter, and the turned edge is nearly horizontal at the sides instead of being tilted up at an angle. There is a change in the trimming, too. Instead of the leather and narrow band of fine ribbed cloth, a coarse ribbed band a quarter of an inch wider is worn, and is much more handsome.

The bell-crowned "pipe" hat I have already spoken of. A new thing in a soft crowned hat which is not to be worn creased. The top is to be pressed in gently, leaving a symmetrical hollow that does not show except one looks down upon it. Those who wear this hat has the effect of a square-topped Derby.

The hats I have described are in three colors: Seal brown, pearl brown and black. Browns are coming into fashion —are "in fashion, indeed—and many swells will make a satisfying harmony to-day with brown hats and brown coats.

Too Large Quarters.

"And you rejected him?"

"I did."

"He has the reputation of being a large hearted man."

"That's the trouble with him; he is too large hearted. He can love half a dozen of women at the same time."—Chas Coal Hazen.

ACROSS THE ATLANTIC.

Two Journeys Made in Open Boats by Two Daring Navigators.

Bridge-jumping and parachute tumbling are not edifying spectacles, nor, says Harper's Weekly, are they attempted in the interests of science or practical morality. Fortunately the men who go into such things are not counted by the thousands or even hundreds, and there is no likelihood of their attaining to the dignity or numbers of a profession. Crossing Niagara on a tight-rope may be a pleasant better, for practice and skill are here necessary, while the element of luck predominates in jumping from a bridge or dropping from the clouds with the aid of a parachute.

The natural instinct of man is to hold on to his life at all hazards, and there are generally ways of making a living other than risking that life in the attempt. Most people regard such exploits as savoring of bravado rather than courage, and the men thus gaining notoriety are to be placed on a par with the person who points an unloaded gun at his friends. It is tempting Providence and exhibiting almost Shchristian spirit. Merely as the useless loss of life of continual danger, as is illustrated by the boat-race and the accidents falrly-about on that head, it cannot be too plastically engaged in handling explosives; so it may be that sailors grow familiar with the dangers and learn the power. At least that is the impression that one receives after reading about the journeys of the Spray and the Mermaid across the Atlantic.

These names are suggestive of the ocean, and that is original, as is the name with all sorts of aquatic performances, but when small open boats adopt these titles and do wonderful things, it is worthy of record. The wonder lies in the fact that their perilous exploits are still alive. The two boats started from Boston, each bearing one man, on a race across the ocean for a silver cup and three thousand dollars. Two hours after starting the boats lost sight of each other, and each man's head-of until August 5, when the Sea-Serpent, with Capt. Lawlor on board, arrived at Cowrack, near Lizard point. The boat was 5th and mainsail rig, fifteen feet long, and buoyed, fore and aft, with seven eight-compartments.

Twice during the voyage she capsized, and was righted by Capt. Lawlor clambering along the keel and once a large shark attacked the boat and threatened to overturn it. Indeed the skipper had to feed him a dynamite cartridge, which effectually disposed of any danger on that particular shark. Very bad weather was encountered and Capt. Lawlor reached England, as the dispatches state, "in a great and ragged condition." The Mermaid was sixteen some days later, and all was reported well by Capt. Andrew Hall to his sea-spread losing all the emoluments arising from the perilous journey.

TWO CHARMING WOMEN.

The Famous Stonehenge.

Stonehenge is a famous ruin of great but uncertain antiquity situated in the center of a plain near Amesbury, in Wiltshire, Eng. At present it is merely a collection of huge, rough, upright stones, which it must be closely inspected in order to trace out the original form, which was that of a circle of large upright stones enclosing two ellipses, the whole surrounded by a circular ditch and high mound. The wall being 15 feet high and 7 feet in circumference, with a number of breaks at regular intervals among the stones which form the original building, monument or temple. The ruin is so large that it is generally believed to be the remains of a Druidish temple erected long before the Christian era. Tradition says

A DRAMATIC CAREER.

Life History of the Widow of Michigan's Ex-Governor.

There is living in Cleveland, in seclusion, a woman who has had a varied career that in her years runs the blood red of Russia, who has been the wife of an American governor of an American president. She is Mrs. Pauline Mason, widow of Michigan's Mason, the "boy governor" of Michigan. She was born in Pennsylvania nearly years ago, of Russian parents. Her grandfather, Gen. Beaufandorff, was commander in chief of the Russian army under Alexander I. He was exiled to the French and Russians he was granted a large estate, which later became a part of Holstein. Her father, Count Nelson, according to the story she tells, was educated at Zurich and became an associate of Alexander II. of Russia. While she was yet a child Mrs. Mason's father was killed in an accident, and so she reared her. The uncle was a professor of mining engineering in a Philadelphia institution of learning, and one of his pupils was Steven Mason, afterward governor of Michigan. After Mr. Mason became governor he developed Mrs. Mason's uncle to study the mineral deposits of the upper peninsula of Michigan. Mrs. Mason, just graduated from a convent, went with him, and in Detroit met and married the young governor. Mrs. Mason was well to do until a number of years ago she lost all her property through the failure of banks. She has supported herself by the practice of medicine, and is reported to be skillful. She exhibits a letter written by Empress Eugenie after her return from Napoleon. She retains an heirloom articles from the Beaufandorff estate and gifts from Russian potentates.

MRS. PAULINE MASON.

THE GRAND OLD MAN.

Extracts from Russell's Monograph on Gladstone.

The Statesman's Life at Eton and Oxford —His Religionism One of the Strongest Features of His Character— Early Love of Oratory.

Mr. George W. E. Russell has contributed to "The Queen's Prime Ministers" series a monograph on Gladstone which is characterized as a model of condensed, thoroughly—well-informed, concise and judicious. Mr. Russell devotes a fourth of his space to Mr. Gladstone's youth. As he points out in the preface to the little volume before us he has "touched lightly on those later events of Mr. Gladstone's career which are within general recollection," and "dwelt more detailed attention on the early stages, which are now to most people either unknown or forgotten." Hence the many pages devoted to his life at Eton and at Oxford.

"He entered Eton after the summer holidays of 1821, under the head mastership of the terrible Dr. Keate. To quote the emphatic testimony of the Duke of Somerset, he was 'the most pevtinent little boy that ever went to Eton.' He was 'fagged' by Monro, a boy at the sixth, and of the most evil in front of the schools' factor' for the sake of that high authority he thoughtfully engaged in handling explosives; so it may be that sailors grow familiar with the dangers and learn the power. At least that is the impression that one receives after reading about the journeys of the Spray and the Mermaid across the Atlantic.

These names are suggestive of the ocean, and that is original, as is the name with all sorts of aquatic performances, but when small open boats adopt these titles and do wonderful things, it is worthy of record. The wonder lies in the fact that their perilous exploits are still alive. The two boats started from Boston, each bearing one man, on a race across the ocean for a silver cup and three thousand dollars. Two hours after starting the boats lost sight of each other, and each man's head-of until August 5, when the Sea-Serpent, with Capt. Lawlor on board, arrived at Cowrack, near Lizard point. The boat was 5th and mainsail rig, fifteen feet long, and buoyed, fore and aft, with seven eight-compartments.

Twice during the voyage she capsized, and was righted by Capt. Lawlor clambering along the keel and once a large shark attacked the boat and threatened to overturn it. Indeed the skipper had to feed him a dynamite cartridge, which effectually disposed of any danger on that particular shark. Very bad weather was encountered and Capt. Lawlor reached England, as the dispatches state, "in a great and ragged condition." The Mermaid was sixteen some days later, and all was reported well by Capt. Andrew Hall to his sea-spread losing all the emoluments arising from the perilous journey.

HATS FOR GENTLEMEN.

The Crown Is the Same As Last Year, But the Brim Is Broader.

In hats one has not a distinct change, writes a New York correspondent. As many men know to their sorrow the prevailing style in derbys for several years has been the narrow rolled brim, very much "pinched" front and crown. This sort of hat is still put forward by some first-class hatters, and I am told that the vogue in England. But those who want something different can have it, and feel sure that he is in the advance guard of fashion. The crown is of the same shape as last year, but the brim is much broader and flatter, and the turned edge is nearly horizontal at the sides instead of being tilted up at an angle. There is a change in the trimming, too. Instead of the leather and narrow band of fine ribbed cloth, a coarse ribbed band a quarter of an inch wider is worn, and is much more handsome.

The bell-crowned "pipe" hat I have already spoken of. A new thing in a soft crowned hat which is not to be worn creased. The top is to be pressed in gently, leaving a symmetrical hollow that does not show except one looks down upon it. Those who wear this hat has the effect of a square-topped Derby.

The hats I have described are in three colors: Seal brown, pearl brown and black. Browns are coming into fashion —are "in fashion, indeed—and many swells will make a satisfying harmony to-day with brown hats and brown coats.

THE CHILIAN CAPITAL.

A Picture of Life in Santiago with a Cup of the Congressional Poison.

Life in Santiago centers in the Plaza de Armas, which is the principal square in the city. In its center is a garden filled with rare and beautiful trees and shrubs from various regions of South America. These surround a large and very ornate fountain decorated with statues of Indian youths and maidens. On the north side of the square is the intendencia, the seat of local government. Fronting this is a large building originally intended for a grand hotel. But the project was premature, and it has since remained patched up and vacant. Arcades at its base shelter between their supporting piers stalls for the sale of fruit, cakes, pretty haberdashery, trinkets, tobacco, etc. The block is further covered by passages akin to those of Paris. The most important, the passage Matte, running parallel to the facade, is the Burlington arcade of Santiago. On the eastern side is a similar block. The passages contain a number of shops, mostly drapers, milliners, mercers and the like, and there are passaged here as well, one of the largest of these being on the western side of the square is the cathedral. Externally it is a plain, brick-faced building, and as to the interior it can only be qualified as hideous. The proportions of the nave and isles would not be bad, but they are overlaid with by the tawdry decorations. In fear of the cathedral is a block containing the congressional palace. It is a very imposing structure, in the classic style, with two imposing porticos. They are imposing because the columns supporting them profess to be stone, and are only stuccoed brick. Santiago abounds in such deceptions.

The Plaza is an excellent spot for noting the life and movements of the city. In forenoon it is thronged with women passing to and from the cathedral, carrying books of devotion and the little square prayer-carpets which possibly the Spaniard bortowed from the Moor.

No one in a bonnet is admitted into a Santiago church, so rich and poor alike are closely swathed in their mantas—large squares of, fine black cashmere, often richly embroidered round the borders with silk of the same hue. The best of these come from China. The young Santiaguenas have good complexions and fine, upright figures, and are in many eyes more personable than the plump and pasty-faced Limenas a short while ago. Travelers there have went to rare. During the afternoon many of the wealthier of these dames and dassels re-appear in fashionable walking dresses, erring on the side of rich material and bright coloring, and stop in the passages. Professional men, affect the chimney-pot hat and frock coat. The throng of clerks, shoppers and the like are mostly clad in close clothes, approximating in cut and style to those of shopkeepers in southern Europe. Local color, however, is imparted by "ponos" in Panama hats and striped ponchos, and by the soft felt mushrooms and many-buckled leather leggins, and soldiers in blue uniforms and French kepis, and brandishing with the silver star of Chili.

THE RHESUS MONKEY.

A Half Dozen of the Red-Headed Apes in New York.

There is a new cage in the Monkey house, and its half dozen inmates, says the New York Sun, are about the most interesting monkeys in all the menagerie that the Central park monkey house has yet sheltered. They are half-grown, very pretty, and by no clevever or stupider than other monkeys. Hair in their skins are reflected most of the tints that make glorious the autumn landscape. They are Rhesus monkeys from Farway India.

They are not believed by the natives of India, because they are harmless and inoffensive, and stupid that the ordinary devices against monkeys fall utterly. In youth they are fairly good-natured, but as age advances they get cranky. The last at ten years old they snap and bite when disturbed from their moody reflections.

These now on exhibition are about two years old, and will not get their full growth for four years yet. Superintendent Conklin does not think well of them, declaring their odd coloring. He likes bright, good-natured animals about him. The Rhesus monkeys, by the way, can easily be told from each other sort and just about as much heat as can be turned on.

SMOKELESS POWDER.

Samples Brought to the United States from Europe.

The Force of the New Explosive Most Greater Than That of Ordinary Gunpowder—The Secret Is Known in France and Germany.

The war department sent a special agent abroad nine months ago to get samples of the different smokeless powders used by the European powers.

The United States agent, says Once a Week, found it impossible to get samples of the smokeless powders used in the armies of France, England and Germany. All he could do was to buy samples from private powder-mills.

Capt. Blunt, of Springfield, at the head of the board of ordnance officers testing the new magazine rifles to be introduced into our army, was assigned to thoroughly test these powders.

According to Capt. Blunt's report all the smokeless powders brought from abroad, as well as the one manufactured by the United States navy, is valueless for use in small firearms such as infantry rifles.

The force of smokeless powder is much greater than that of ordinary gunpowder, and is one of the high explosive character of the substances used. Its dissolution is so rapid that one grain more than the normal charge of a cartridge will cause an increase of 15,000 pounds pressure to a square inch in the breech of a gun. Unfortunately the most skillful hand cannot measure a powder charge to the ninety of a grain, more or less.

The increased pressure causes an increased velocity of the missile, and so by far the largest number of cartridges will be a trifle irregular in weight, the greatest accuracy of the rifle and velocity of each bullet will differ. With such material marksmanship would be worse a farce, and an infantry body forced to use it might as well throw rifles away and essay to hit the enemy with a bullet.

The normal charge of ordinary powder for an eight-inch rifle is 130 pounds, the projectile weighing 200 pounds. Only forty-five pounds of the German smokeless powder were used and the low pressure of 30,000 pounds per square inch to the breech of the gun with the extraordinary velocity of over 3,000 feet per second were obtained. Taking into consideration that the full charge of 130 pounds ordinary powder with a pressure of 45,000 pounds to the square inch would not have given more than 1,750 or 1,800 feet velocity, it would stop in the passages. Professional men, affect the chimney-pot hat and frock coat. The throng of clerks, shoppers and the like are mostly clad in close clothes, approximating in cut and style to those of shopkeepers in southern Europe. Local color, however, is imparted by "ponos" in Panama hats and striped ponchos, and by the soft felt mushrooms and many-buckled leather leggins, and soldiers in blue uniforms and French kepis, and brandishing with the silver star of Chili.

Record for Her Husband's Sake.

Not long ago Queen Victoria conferred the rank of a knight's widow upon the wife of the late C. H. Ba Gwyn, the Bengalese philanthropist. With a heavy purse, a clear head, a heart ingrathough his own country he has planted benefactions right and left among them. Colleges, hospitals, churches, agricultural charity foundations, all come from his open hand. In addition to this he has built and in experimental farm near Columbo, Ceylon, his native places, and sent a liberal donation to the London hospitals and charities. For all this and many more liberal, small, good deeds her majesty has given to the husband's widow the title. His death from hydrophobia prevented, but his wife will henceforth write "Lady" to her name. The honor is one enjoyed by no other Bengalese woman—and now first given to one born in "the garden of the tropics."

Worse in Russia.

The old-fashioned Russian wagon driver (tchoomak) who carried passengers and freight in a rickety, springless self-constructed vehicle, is still competing successfully with the steam horse at the land of the white czar. A merchant of Simferopol has recently forwarded a large consignment of salted meat to Poltava by tchoomaks, paying them forty-eight kopecks per pood (thirty-six and one-half pounds) for transportation. The same freight would cost sixty-two kopecks per pood by rail. For every 100 miles Besides the expense of fourteen kopecks per pood, the merchant saved gnawing bills caused by the railroad officials whose manners are sometimes annoying.

An Irrigating Plume.

The farmers and others east of Fresno, Cal., have united in a project to irrigate a large area of foothill lands on which they will raise oranges. The water will be conveyed from Stevenson creek, in the Sierras, along the line which itself is twenty miles long, thence to Dry creek and into the foothills. The water will come down from the foothills by a V-shaped flume, and will convey lumber to the farmers who are to locate on the lands under the scheme. The flume will be about forty-two miles long, will cost from $125,000 to $150,000, and will serve of great advantage, to that region.

European Fashions.

The statistics of the average size of families in the various countries of Europe are as follows: France, 3.25; Switzerland, 3.61; Hungary, 3.75; Belgium, 3.84; Austria and Bavaria, 4.00; England, 4.32; Germany, 4.35; Sweden, 4.12; Holland, 4.20; Scotland, 4.40; Italy, 4.50; Spain, 4.68; Russia, 4.80; Ireland, 5.20.

moved to the western part of the state, where he began the nursery business. The present chief of horticulture went there to live with his father's family, where his education was completed. When 17 years old he established the Louisiana nurseries at Shreveport, La., remaining there until 1874, when he returned to Kentucky and secured a one-half interest in the Mammoth Valley nurseries owned by his father. This interest he still holds, and he has also established fruit orchards in the states of Mississippi, Florida, California and Tennessee, at one time having 150 acres of strawberries alone. Mr. Samuels has been a horticulturist all his life, devoting his time to growing and dealing in fruits, trees, plants and flowers. In following these pursuits, he has visited every state in the union except two. He has spent some time in principal horticultural centers of Europe, and has become familiar with the details of nearly every branch of fruit growing. The firm of which he was a member exhibited extensively at the New Orleans exposition, and obtained 35 premiums, and 5 gold and silver medals. Mr. Samuels is eagerly awaiting the opening of the horticultural interests and exhibits at the fair, and has already obtained important concessions, which have increased the area to be devoted to the outdoor plants and flowers.

Speer's Port Grape Wine,
FOUR YEARS OLD.
THIS Celebrated Wine is the pure juice of the Concord ripe Sporty Grape, raised in Speer's vineyards, and left to ferment in the wood over four years, thereby retained before gathering. In unadulterable are unsurpassed by any other Wine. Being prescribed under Mr. Speer's own personal supervision, its purity and genuineness are guaranteed by the principal Hospitals and Boards of Health who have examined it. The physician, child and the weakest invalids use it to advantage. It is particularly beneficial to the aged and debilitated and suited to the various ailments that affect the weaker sex.

Tonic and Strengthening Properties

It is in every respect a WINE TO BE RELIED UPON.

Speer's Unfermented Grape Juice
Is the Juice of the Sporty Grape, preserved in its natural state, and is as free as it was from the press by Sanitation and electricity, thereby retaining the nutrient of fermentation. It is perfectly pure, free from spirits, and will keep in any climate.

Speer's (Socialite) Claret
Is held in high estimation for its richness as a tonic. Takes First, especially with the dinner course.

Speer's P. J. Sherry
Is a Wine of superior character, and partakes of the rich qualities of the grape from which it is made.

Speer's P. J. Brandy
IS A PURE distillation of the grape, and should be used in this country for medicinal purposes. It has a peculiar flavor, similar to that of the grapes from which it is distilled.

THE GREAT LIBRARY.

A Building Which Will Be a Credit to the Nation.

The New Congressional Library and What It Will Look Like When Completed—The Structure to Be in Exterior Arrangement.

Three hundred workmen, under the supervision of Gen. Thomas Lincoln Casey, chief of engineers, are making rapid progress with the Congressional library building, sketches of which as it looks at present and will look when completed are given herewith.

THE LIBRARY AS IT WILL BE.

For more than seventeen years, says the Chicago Tribune, this project was before congress, and about five years ago its construction was intrusted to a commission consisting of the secretary of the treasury, secretary of the interior and the architect of the United States capitol. Matters did not progress very favorably under commission methods, and hence congress turned the matter over to the chief of engineers, who has given proof of his ability in carrying out to a successful issue the building of the now famous Washington monument.

Four acres of ground adjacent to the capitol in the east have been secured and on the property there is now in course of construction a magnificent white marble building, 470 feet in length, 340 feet wide and towering heavenward to a height of 170 feet. The Italian Renaissance is the style of architecture, the granite used on the exterior being Muscovite Biotite from the Concord (N. H.) quarries, while in a portion of the interior and court work stone from the quarries near Woodstock, Md., is utilized. When the building is completed—as it is expected to be five years hence—there will be accommodations on the shelves for 2,000,000 volumes, and the estimated cost of the finished structure is within $6,000,000.

A feature of the interior will be an octagonal-shaped reading-room 160 feet in diameter, and over sixty miles of book readers desires a book it will be brought to him by means of a mechanical device similar to that used in carrying parcels and cash in all the leading retail houses in this country.

In the accompanying sketch, showing the condition of the library building September 16, 1891, it will be observed that the foundation and first story are completed to the arches and coverings of the second floor, and for that portion upward it is expected that at least five years more will be consumed to put the building in condition for occupancy.

Having no great colonnades and projections as adorn the capitol and other public buildings at Washington, considerable ornamentation in the shape of carving will be necessary to prevent the broad surfaces from looking bare. Therefore it has been determined that the front and upper part of the building shall be very ornate, the granite carving being elaborate and in good taste. There are thirty-three arches on the four sides of the building, and in ornamenting the keys to these arches, which correspond exactly with the recognized number of races of man, it was suggested to have sculptured in bold relief on the key of each arch, a typical female face. With the assistance of Prof. Otis Mason, of the Smithsonian institution, and an authority on ethnology, casts of thirty-four typical types have been secured, each being strongly characteristic, as was the main plan the purpose. A number of these have been finished and put in place and are very effective. For the arches of the main entrance, which will be from the west, will be the types of the higher order and the very lowest types will be at the back of the building.

The outer walls of the building are of granite, and in the interior there are already over 14,000,000 bricks have been laid. All the brick facing inside the four courts is of yellowish white enameled surface, giving a very handsome effect and insuring an abundance of light.

Petroleum as Fuel.

Reports are received by the bureau of American republics to the effect that the experiment of using petroleum for fuel on the Oroya railroad in Peru has proved successful. The trials were made at an altitude of 3,600 feet above the sea with the locomotives from the Rogers works of Paterson, N. J. The oil used is the crude petroleum, but a residuum oil. In the trials the average consumption was 38.59 pounds per mile, while with coal it was 79.30 pounds. It is reported that the Oroya Railway Company has decided to use oil fuel on all of their locomotives.

Dr. Pill—Then why do you have him visit you?

"Well, I'll tell you—but you must not betray me. My wife does my cooking, and I want to ruin his digestion."—Jury.

THE ORIGINAL HORSE.

A Beef Animal Discovered in the Central Part of Asia.

A small party of French men of science, which included Prince Henry, of Orleans, and M. Bonvalot, has lately returned from a journey of exploration through the vast and almost unbalanced regions of central Asia. The expedition, says the Youth's Companion, brought back several stuffed specimens of rare animals found in that part of the world, and among them a specimen of the hemionus, or Kiang horse. This animal probably approaches as near to the primitive horse as any now found in a wild state.

The horse of the Kiang horse is the high plateau of those Turkestan, between Lake Lob Nor and the mountainous region of Thibet. This plateau is covered with a growth of short grass, which the wild horses graze. The climate is very cold, the mercury in winter sinking to forty degrees below zero, Fahrenheit.

The Kiang horse is a shaggy, unkempt looking beast, having bodily somewhat the aspect of a donkey, except as to the tail and ears. It is, however, a genuine horse, having rather delicate legs and feet, and ears by no means resembling those of a donkey or mule.

The color of the head and of the upper part and sides of the body is a reddish-tan, shading to bay, and though this color grows lighter from above downward, it contrasts strikingly with the pure white of the animal's belly and the inner side of the fore-legs.

Along the spine runs a well-defined stripe of thick, blackish-brown hair, extending to the root of the tail. The hair is long and shaggy, and adapts the horse to living in a cold country.

The Kiangs, like all the other wild horses, live in bands or herds of one hundred to two hundred individuals, each presided over by an old male. This leader gives the signal when any danger approaches.

The Kiangs are preyed upon frequently by wolves, but their most terrible and dreaded enemy is the ounce, or Turkestan panther, several specimens of which were shot by Prince Henry.

IT DRIVES HORSES.

The Latest Use to Which Electricity Has Been Successfully Put.

The electric inventor has applied the whole current to another use than that for which he claims is both effective and healthful. The application in this case is to the reins on ordinary sets of harness so that a whip to urge the horse along is not needed. The reins for a portion of their length, where they are over the horse's back, are wrapped with copper wire. The wires are carried up to a battery, which can be put under the seat. When it becomes necessary to urge the horse a little, by pressing a button a current is sent through the reins to the horse's back, and he feels a sharp though not painful pricking sensation and wakes up to business at once. The inventor claims that small quantities of electricity so administered are healthful and that the invention is humane and harmless.

IT DRIVES HORSES.

THE MAN OF FASHION.

Prince Albert Coats of a Peculiar Cut Are the Rage.

The Prince Albert coat, hitherto the least used, perhaps, of any garment in the ordinary man's wardrobe is being brought forward by fashion this season. To my eye, writes a New York correspondent, it is uglier than ever. Because it is now being worn considerably for late afternoon promenade, I will discuss its new form here. It is shorter waisted and longer in the skirts this fall. The fashionable garment does not commit the excesses of that coat which came over here a little while ago from England, and failed to achieve a conquest, but that same coat or somebody's idea that made it has exerted an influence which is now taking visible shape. Not only in the Prince Albert, but in all coats, the tendency to longer skirts and shorter waists can be seen. Society has had a chance to admire these long-tailed, short-waisted, double-breasted coats, with the accompanying bell-crowned hats at some of the recent swell weddings—the Cannon-Thompson and the Eliot-Hargous for instance. They are undoubtedly the correct thing for day weddings, and the difference between the present cut and that which has gone by would be distinctly noticeable. They must go out with the gaps.

One authority tells me that indications of the lengthening of this style of coat may be found in the increasing vogues of the bell-crowned hat, and in the tendency to cut pantaloons narrower than heretofore. He pointed out the fact that these three fashions have always been found in company, and here they are again. There is no doubt about the bell-crowned hat and none that the fashionable pantaloons have less cloth in them. They are cut from half an inch to an inch narrower than last year.

GLORIOUS RABY CASTLE.

The Magnificent Seat of the Late Duke of Cleveland.

The Most Perfect of England's Northern Castles—Battle Abbey, Near Hastings, Now the Property of Lord Rosebery—The Duke's Bequest.

The funeral of the fourth and last duke of Cleveland took place recently from Raby castle. The coffin was deposited in the family mausoleum in the churchyard of Staindrop, near Darlington, where the three previous dukes were all buried.

Raby castle, the magnificent old seat of the nobleman who has just been buried, was described by Leland as the "largest castel of logyinges in all the north countrey." The Vanes, says the Pall Mall Budget, bought Raby from the lessees of the crown in the person of Sir Harry Vane the elder, of whom it is related that he applied to James I. for his sanction to the purchase, representing the castle as a mere hillock of stones. Afterwards, when Charles I. visited Raby, he exclaimed: "Odds! troth, my lord, ca' ye that a hullock of stanes? By my faith, I ha' na ale anither hillock in a' my domain." The opposition of Sir Harry Vane the younger to Cromwell in council caused the last sentence for eavesdropping passage—like Negro iron tori across immense satin sleeves—and nothing much occurred; most of the dogs died down, and was succeeded by his son, Christopher, created Baron Barnard. The grandson of the latter became earl of Darlington in 1754, and his grandson, Marquis of Cleveland, in 1833, and duke of Cleveland in 1833.

A mansion existed before 1379, when John de Neville obtained a license "to make a castle of his manor of Raby, and to embattle and crenellate its towers." This building was immense in size, and inclose three courtyards, the whole being surrounded by a broad and deep moat. The principal front is a lower, supposed to be older than any part of the castle. The center of the south front was added by Inigo Jones. "With this exception," says a contemporary writer, "Raby is the most perfect of our northern castles, retaining in the mass all its ancient features." The hall is of great size, and above it is the Baron's hall, where "assemblies, in the time of the Nevilles, 700 knights who held of the family." From the latter a staircase leads to the chapel, which was entirely refitted by the second duke, and contains two fine pictures by Murillo. The dining and reception rooms are also rich in paintings by Vandyke, Leig, Titian, Teniers and Claude Lorraine. The rest of the interior is modernized.

We give here a sketch of Battle abbey, near Hastings, handsome seat of the late duke's, which it is supposed will now become the property of Lord Rosebery, his stepson. The abbey was built by William the Conqueror in 1067, and although over 800 years have passed away since its erection, it is still a magnificent structure.

Gods of the Heathen.

The great majority of the Hausta people of South Africa have no idea or place of habitation or mode of existence of their deities; some of the more enlightened, however, especially those who have had some communication with the Boers, have an idea that the Great Spirit lives some place above them, most of them believing that his place of abode is in the top of an immense tree. One curious fact regarding Hausta superstitions is this: Although the more northerly tribes have an idea that the Great Spirit resides in some place above them, those to the south, which are in contact with the Boers, almost every day in the year, cannot be persuaded that their deities do not dwell in holes in the ground and under caverns underneath the earth. Before their intercourse with the whites it never entered the Hausta mind that the acts of this life could have any effect upon the spirit after death.

Remedy for Snake Bite.

The news comes from Berlin that Dr. Engels has discovered in Africa a remedy for blood poisoning caused by the bites of adders and rattlesnakes. This remedy is the "wild-growing noble black palm." It is stated that 500 negroes bitten by poisonous snakes were treated with the extract of the palm and all were cured in five days. Of sixty-five farmers and planters bitten by rabid dogs all but two were saved. The extract is injected under the skin and causes a moderate fever. On the third day the fever and inflammation disappear, and on the fifth or seventh day the patient is cured.

THE DOGS' ORCHESTRA.

An Amazing Performance Which Delights Visitors of Londoners.

We have all been dogs stand to bands of music—generally German bands—and howl, and most people consider they do it because they don't like the music. Of course the animal that does it frequently, that chases up to a band and sits there moaning, may be a "dog of parts," with an exquisite "ear," who thus protests against improvised discords, false notes and atjohoof "time;" but few people have seen them sit mute and play on instruments themselves.

"The dogs' orchestra," with Prof. Lavater as the Conductor, now performs daily at the Aquarium, says the Pall Mall Budget. Tim, a rat dog, plays on the big drum. Shnozzle, a white terrier, clashes the cymbals; Bob, an Irish spaniel, tinkles on the kettle drum. Prof. Lavater stands in the middle and leads. Then, on the other side, Jack blows the trombone; Spitz, a Pomeranian, saws on the violin; and Tantalum, a fox terrier, gives at the big violon-cello. That is the full strength of the band, and they none of them howl. Both ocular and aural proof was given of this virtue of the band dogs later, for while the sketches were being made in the adjoining room behind the stage, the professor, as a complete answer to the query, took up an old violin and played for four excruciating passages—like Negro iron tori across immense satin sheets—and nothing much occurred; most of the dogs sat down, and was succeeded by his son, Christopher, created Baron Barnard. The grandson of the latter became earl of Darlington in 1754, and his grandson, Marquis of Cleveland, in 1833, and duke of Cleveland in 1833.

It is stated that 500 negroes bitten by poisonous snakes were treated with the extract of the palm and all were cured in five days. Of sixty-five farmers and planters bitten by rabid dogs all but two were saved. The extract is injected under the skin and causes a moderate fever. On the third day the fever and inflammation disappear, and on the fifth or seventh day the patient is cured.

NO DEMOCRATIC TICKET.

Instead a Citizens' Movement is Substituted, and the Battle-cry is "No Bosses for Plainfield!"

The delegates elected by the Democratic primaries of each ward to attend the city convention met last Tuesday night at Outten's hall to nominate their candidates for city offices.

When delegate Love nominated Seymour G Smith for councilman and it looked as though there was going to be no opposition, judge Louis F. Wadsworth took the floor and contended that it was contrary to all party usage to place a Republican in nomination on a Democratic ticket. Peter Flynn then moved that the convention adjourn without day, and the motion was carried.

A few minutes later a call was filed in the hands of the secretary for a citizens' convention, and the voters present proceeded to organize such a convention.

There was little opposition to the slated candidates and the list of nominees was completed as follows:

For Councilmen-at-large—Daniel S. Roberts, Seymour G. Smith, Elmore D. Moffett.
For Assessor—Joseph A. Hubbard.
For Collector—John Johnson.
For Treasurer—Alexander Titsworth.
For Chosen Freeholders—J. Frank Hubbard, Andrew Vanderbeek.
For Commissioners of Appeal—Manning Vermeule, Jeremiah Manning, John B. Brown.
For School Trustee—DeWitt C. Irving.

The following platform was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That in view of the blighting effects of the McKinley tariff upon the business of Plainfield and vicinity, we, the citizens of Plainfield in convention assembled, do most emphatically protest against applying any system of experiments that may lead to the burdening of our city with the necessity of issuing bonds, and we nominate that they shall oppose all measures that may tend in that disastrous direction.

A motion was carried accepting the regular Democratic ward nominations as the ward nominations of the convention.

The citizens, evidently alarmed at the prospect of having a non-political ticket in the field, are to-day seeking to prove that the citizens' convention was illegal. The petition that attached to the call were the signatures of leading Republicans who, on being told that for signing the call they would be cast out of the party and out of public office, protest that they never signed. They further claim that some of the signatures are of men who live over the brook, and that the call lacked by many names the requisite number of genuine signatures. On the other hand it is believed that the proceedings were proper and legal in every particular, as will be seen when a copy of the call is filed according to law with the city clerk, and that all the charges brought against the citizens' movement are the invention of a desperate partisan enemy.

With New York restored to the Democratic column in 1892, the vote in the Electoral College, as compared with that of 1888, will stand 223 Democrats to 197 Republicans, with Minnesota doubtful and Iowa possibly to swell the majority. The Democratic skies are bright.

The defeatof Governor Campbell of Ohio will be regretted as much by those who consider the courage and gallantry of his canvass as by those who weigh the ultimate results. Governor Campbell deserved well of the people and they recognized it; but it was too much to expect that the Federal Administration would yield up Ohio with any thing less than the utmost effort to save.

Ex-P ostmaster General Don M. Dickinson, who was interviewed in regard to the results of the Ohio election and its influence upon the approaching campaign, expressed the opinion that from a party point of view the election of McKinley would prove a benefit to the Democrats, because it would compel the Republicans to stand up to the fight in defense of the McKinley law, which, of course, is what the Democrats want. He said:

"If McKinley had been beaten, the Republicans would probably be now looking around for some other issue. I think the Democracy is sure of success in 1892 on the tariff issue. The tariff will be the issue upon which the campaign will be fought. I do not think that the next question will figure in the campaign."

Continuing, he thought the result of last Tuesday's vote made things look particularly bright for Mr. Cleveland, and that the party point of view will be the same upon him. He also predicted that upon the tariff issue Iowa would cast her vote for the Democratic nominee for President next year, and that Cleveland was the nominee, he would carry Massachusetts and Wisconsin. Relative to Michigan, he said:

"The Republicans cannot carry Michigan on a tariff issue. The fact that the Republicans elected their member this time was that the vote which is peculiarly Democratic was divided between two candidates. The combined votes of the straightout Democrat and the Prohibitionist candidate was very much larger than the vote by which the Republican was elected. In the campaign the vote will go to the Democratic candidate."

THE CITY WINS THE FIGHT.

The Supreme Court Holds the Plainfield Ordinances Constitutional, and the Water-Works Contract Valid.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE PRESS.]

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 3.—The city wins the Lewis case. The suit is held constitutional, and the contract valid.

[The case in question is that of The State, Israel Lewis, prosecutor, vs. John R. Moore et als (calling themselves the the Plainfield Water-works company); defendants; on certiorari. The contract at stake was that granted by the Plainfield Common Council to the company managed by Charles K. Moore of Fanwood. Israel Lewis was merely a figurehead chosen by the present Water Supply company's stock-holders to defeat the water-works project. The contest was a most bitter one, and corporation counsel Craig A. Marsh deserves the utmost credit for bringing the matter to a successful issue for the city and securing a recognition by the courts of the validity of the city's ordinances.

THAT WICKED BIG 6 AGAIN.

They Are Charged With Blame Because the Benefits They Put Within the People's Reach, Were Obstructed by Incendiaries.

A misinformed New York paper intimates that the "Big 6" are to be disciplined at the coming municipal election, because "Every important ordinance of theirs has fouled its way into the courts under one pretext or another."

The councils of the "Big 6" have passed more ordinances of importa nce to the city's prosperity and of great importance to the people's welfare and interest, than has been done by all the other councils of the past ten years. The "Big 6" provided for completion in two years of a system of sewerage, and brought about finer street- for two-money more thorough outdoor lighting of the lower price, horses for the fire department, an electric stand service, and filled other less felt wants' too numerous to mention. They deserve the people's credit and support for all of that, and they will have it. If defeated on December 1, it will be merely because the Republicans vote in this city are so much greater than that of the Democrats.

Everybody in Plainfield knows that it was not the fault of the "Big 6" that their "important ordinances have found their way into the courts under one pretext or another." Everybody in Plainfield knows that those ordinances were attacked in the courts under one pretext or another by the Republican l eaders of this city simply for selfish and political purposes. The Republican leaders have been subjected to taxes of competition in water rates, and street cars, and sewers, by the Republican bosses who are now striving by class of street cars of their slaves, and trying to defeat the "Big 6" with dishonest methods and lies that the people know are lies.

The Official Vote of Union County.

Excellent Results Already Accomplished.

(From the New York Journalist.)

Two Plainfield newspaper men—James Alfred Demarest, of the Press, and Frank Willets Rankine, of the Courier—have made a theatrical venture this fall that is meeting with very gratifying success. They have taken hold of the Stillman Music Hall, the principal theatre of the place, and have already accomplished excellent results. The hall had suff ered greatly through the laxity of management on the part of the board of directors, and its patronage was so poor that it steadily lost money for the stockholders. Demarest & Rankine, however, have infused vigor and enterprise into the body corporate, and the result is a gratifying transformation. From being a cheerless barn-like place, the hall has been changed into a cosy, handsome theatre of decided "swell" appearance, so that what was before almost hideously unattractive is now a thing of beauty. The acoustics also have been greatly improved. The new managers are booking none but first-class attractions, and are being rewarded with large and delighted audiences and big box receipts.

—Thos. H. Sandford sold to Frank Dell, recently, a lot on the north side of Stebbins place, 50 by 126 feet, for $625.

The great question of the day is: "How to keep the little children of summer in health?" Every mother can answer it. Give each one a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. Price 25 cents.

—The wrought of the ages—Satisfaction Oil, a first-class illuminant, for 25 cents.

THE BUILDING OF THE CHURCH.

Collection Day, the Consecration of Their New Home of Worship.

The corner-stone of the new Unitarian church building on Park Avenue, near Seventh street, was laid at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon. The Rev. Robert Clark, pastor of the church, presided at the service, and the Rev. Daniel W. Morehouse, secretary of the Unitarian conference for the United States and Canada, pronounced the stone well and truly laid, when it had been lowered into place, and prociined an open-air sermon on "The Modern Church". The list of contents of the box sealed up in the stone was read by Henry B. Wells. The new church is to be a handsome edifice of stone. Its cost will reach considerably more than $10,500, the amount originally estimated, but it will e practically free from debt. During the services hymns were sung by the congregation. The following paper was read by the Rev. Mr. Clark:

RECORD OF THE BEGINNINGS OF THE FIRST UNITARIAN SOCIETY OF PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY.

Prior to the year 1886, A. D., there were living in this city, mostly within a mile of one another, and connected with other churches, or with no church, Unitarians who had come to them from other parts of the country. Some other earnest, liberal-minded Christian men, who were not calling themselves Unitarians, although in sympathy with the spirit and purposes of the movement known as Unitarianism, had also settled in the place.

John Shinn, a smiling, ruddy-faced farmer, living on outskirts of the borough, asked to be made a special m-rshal, to enable him to arrest trespassing gunners. His request was granted. Louis Gunther, a licensee of an epoptal manshal was revoked, he having moved out of town.

The committee on fire, water and lamps were authorized to examine the fire hydrants and see if they were put up according to contract.

The council adjourned for one week.

ALL A LIE.

President Smith Denounces the False and Malicious Publications of a Few.

President Smith of the common council took the trouble last night to deny what every sensible person in town knew was false—that ridiculous story of an imaginary combination for redistricting the city so as to change the p olitical complexion of the majority in some of the wards.

President Smith said that the story was all a lie from beginning to end, that there was no foundation for it, and that everybody knew that it emanated from the mind of the "journalist" who published it in his paper. No such a scheme, he said, had ever been contemplated. The thing was all fiction—false and malicious; and no one could be strong enough to denounce it as it deserved to be.

No meeting of the council was held. Instead, adjournment was taken for one week, to enable the Republican members to attend the city convention.

A TEN YEARS' CONTRACT.

The Borough to Have Thereafter Its Free Bottles as Long.

The borough council of North Plainfield met Monday night in joint session, Friday night. All were present.

A communication was received from Frank Borgen, president of the Plainfield Bottling Company, notifying that the offer of the 5 drants for the borough were already in operation and that the others would be ready in three weeks.

A petition for a sewer on the southeast side of Manning avenue, from Patrick Duffy's place to Westervelt avenue, was referred to the committee on streets, as was another petition asking that the northerly end of Summit avenue be accepted.

The special water committee, having concluded its labors, was discharged.

Bills amounting to $451.36 were ordered paid.

The contract between the Water Supply company and the borough for fire-hydrant service, was read and accepted, and the mayor was authorized to sign it for the borough. It provides for 70 hydrants at an annual rental of $15 apiece, but only 28 are to be paid for until July 1st, 1892. The contract is for 10 years, and has been signed by Frank Borgen and E. R. Pope for the company.

The proposition to purchase 800 feet of fire hose was laid on the table on the grounds of unsatisfactory finances was settled.

John Shinn, a smiling, ruddy-faced farmer, living on outskirts of the borough, asked to be made a special m-rshal, to enable him to arrest trespassing gunners. His request was granted. Louis Gunther, a licensee of an epoptal manshal was revoked, he having moved out of town.

The committee on fire, water and lamps were authorized to examine the fire hydrants and see if they were put up according to contract.

The council adjourned for one week.

CITY DEPARTMENT.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE, THE COUNTY AND THE CITY, AND HAS THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY PAPER PUBLISHED IN THE COUNTY OF UNION.

J. A. DEMAREST - - City Editor.

—The Holy Cross choir boys will have a hard-and-bound run next Saturday afternoon, starting from the choir room at 1 o'clock.

—The New Jersey State Rifle society will hold its 42nd anniversary in the First Presbyterian church, Dunellen, next Thursday.

—The Crescent League shooters will roll against the celebrated Irvingtons, on the alleys of the latter in New York city, Friday evening.

—John Morton, the leeman, is full of praise for Plainfield's fire-alarm whistle. He heard it two miles west of Basking Ridge, Friday morning, and counted the ten strokes.

—The Plainfield Choral society never before had so large and well balanced a chorus as that of this season. There are 120 voices now pledged, and they are unusual element of a Plainfield chorus—tenors.

—Trinity Commandery, No. 17, R. T., held a special conclave Monday night, and received two applications for membership. One new member was elected. At the next monthly conclave the Grand officers will be present.

—Councilman Burkle of the borough reports that not half of the subscribers have paid their subscriptions for the Interlaken-avenue sewer extension. The money is needed to lay crosswalks and make other improvements with.

—The ward tickets nominated by the Democratic party at their primaries were adopted at the citizens' meeting Tuesday night, and those men receiving each honor, nominations alone entitled to support as the nominees of the Democratic party.

—The municipal election in Plainfield will take place Dec. 1. The city charter specifies the first Monday in December; therefore it differs from that by governing State elections, which take place on the first Tuesday after the first Monday of the month.

—The case of Timothy J. McCarthy vs. the New Jersey Central Railroad company, to recover $200 damages caused by the burning of the plaintiff's barn some months ago, was to be tried before Justice Noah Thornely, but was adjourned to Nov. 19.

—William M. Smith's latest work of artistic designing is a volley in orders for the Merrill-Gilbert life insurance company of New York. The resolutions he engrossed for the First National bank, upon the death of Cashier Parse, were also greatly admired by the directors.

—The young ladies composing the Presbyterian mission band of Dr. Ketchum's and Mr Richards's churches, held a social in the church Wednesday evening, in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue chapel. The profit after all the bills were paid today, amounted to $125.

—Mr. Hand received a surprise on one. His success was never perceived for a moment. He acted it disinterested part in running at all, and showed himself to be a worthy son of the Hand family that bore his namesake and cousin, now the Governor of New York State.—Standard-Herald.

—The case of Hand against Miller which was to have been tried before Justice Nodyne and a jury on Friday, is postponed. Hand sold some of the Greenwich-place property to Miller on a mortgage loan. The latter refuses to pay the full bill, claiming as a set-off the cost of some repairs he made on the Elkwood building while Hand was absent.

—The fourth of the Saturday evening dances at The Albion was highly enjoyed by the guests and a number of young couples from adjoining Dunellen society of the city, last Saturday. The music was fine and the selection of dances was to the taste of all. These entertainments will be continued by the proprietor on every alternate Saturday evening, during the winter.

—Every seat in Music Hall was sold before 8 o'clock Monday night. After that standing room only was obtainable, and some turned away at the door when they found the house so packed. The play was "Blue Jeans," and Plainfield wants it again. The company was a good one throughout, while Laura Burt as Jane was not in sight of criticism. She is even superior to Yeamans the original.

A FORTUNATE ESCAPE.

Thrush Caught Between Two Trains, He Suffered Only Slight Injuries.

William Cegley, a stranger, is a patient at the Muhlenberg Hospital as the result of an accident which occurred at Grant avenue station yesterday. He was standing between the tracks watching a coal train pass in front of him, when a Blue Line express whizzed by at his back. He was struck by one of the cars, but fortunately did not fall under the wheels. The worst injury is a bad cut on the shoulder.

The Blue Line express was going at such a speed that Flagman Thrush could not stop. The engineer thought he had struck and killed the man, and was surprised that he could not find the body. Cegley was taken to the hospital as soon as he had fortunately did really been taken to the hospital.

The Railroad Must Pay for the Burning.

Timothy A. McCarthy has come out victor in his suit against the Central New Jersey railway. He sued them for the burning of his barn, at Rivoria, Union, claiming that the fire was caused by locomotive sparks. The jury, in Justice Nash's court, gave him a verdict for the full amount, Tuesday.

Somerville and Westfield Reserves Their Old Teams.

One of the rules of the recently formed Central New Jersey league of semi-professional base-ball teams, was that each club should name its reserve list of players before the season of 1892 opened. Somerville, Elizabeth and Plainfield have not yet done so, but the other clubs of the league have sent their list to Secretary Mack, as follows:

Somerville—Harkins, pitcher; Kennedy, catcher; Roberts, first base; Farrell, second base; Heiser, third base; Moorehead, short stop; Bentley, left field; Caldwell, center field; Sutter, right field.

Westfield—O'Rourke, catcher; O Neil, pitcher; Irwin, first base; McCabe, second base; Connell, third base; Howe, short stop; McLaughlin, left field; Lever, center field; McManus, right field.

Bruner Takes the Vanderbilt Prize.

There were three competitors in Madison Square Garden, Thursday, for the Vanderbilt cup of $1,000. Cornelius Vanderbilt for the best dinner decoration of chrysanthemums in which autumn or other foliage and fruit may be used. To last for twelve covers. Each of the three prizes who competed strove to fix the most to produce a fine and artistic effect, regardless of cost. Mr. Bruner won the first prize, but also the professional prestige involved in winning it.

The pink table, the work of William H. Bruner of 61, 63 and 65 Park place, won the prize. There were on it two cut-glass candelabras, and the cut glass shown was valued at $1,000. The whole table was worth $500. In this table the flowers were outnervient to the glass and silver, but in the two other tables the flowers formed the strongly-prevailing effect.

THE CAMERA CLUB EXHIBIT.

Twill Be a Fine Array of Pictures by Plainfield Artists.

The annual exhibition of the Plainfield Camera club is to take place this month, beginning Saturday, Nov. 21, and closing Saturday, Nov. 28. All pictures are to be those not heretofore exhibited, and all exhibits must be ready and hung on the club room rooms by Friday, Nov. 20. As an inducement to the members to exhibit, and to show their best work, it has been decided to give awards of merit in the following classes: Landscapes, portraits, marines, interiors, animals, composition and grouping, instantaneous work, and hand-colored work. Any member may compete in any one or number of these classes.

There will be first and second awards in these classes to members who do all their own work; and honorable mention in said classes to members who make their negatives but do not do their printing.

Members exhibiting for competition must number or letter their exhibits with some arbitrary mark, and number each picture consecutively, and furnish duplicate lists to the committee for the use of the committee and judges, both lists containing the pictures and number in classes in which they compete, and stating if all the work was done by the exhibitor, or not, as per above provisions, and without the exhibitor's name. One of the composing said lists shall be a sealed envelope containing the exhibitor's name and his arbitrary mark.

No competing exhibitor's cards are to be put on the exhibits until after the decision of the judges on Saturday the 21st. A board will be put up in the room illustrating and describing the disposition of the awards, and cards will be furnished at the exhibition setting forth the same matter.

The awards will be as follows:

Landscape—first award, gold star and two white ribbons; second award, silver star and one white ribbon.

Portraits—1st, gold star and two blue ribbons; 2d, silver star and one blue ribbon.

Marines—1st, gold star and two red ribbons; 2d, silver star and one red ribbon.

Interiors—1st, gold star and two yellow ribbons; 2d, silver star and one yellow ribbon.

Animals—1st, gold star and two pink ribbons; 2d silver star and one pink ribbon.

Composition and Grouping—1st, gold star, white and blue ribbons; 2d, silver star and one white and blue ribbon.

Instantaneous Work—1st, gold star, white and red ribbons; 2d, silver star, white and red ribbons.

Hand-Colored Work—1st, gold star, white and yellow ribbons; 2d, silver star, white and yellow ribbon.

The awards will be attached on the exhibited frame adjacent to the winning pictures.

Honorable mention will consist of engraved cards also attached to the exhibitor's frame.

THE POOL TOURNAMENT WINNERS.

In Spite of a Big Handicap Penalty, Lynde Lets Third Prize.

The Crescent League handicap pool tournament has closed. O ly 96 of the 128 balled for at the start of the game have been played, but as interest lagged because of the large number of entries, the committee decided to close the contest and let the members give their undivided attention to the final.

All those who had played six games and over were counted in, and the following is the complete score:

NOTHING TO BE PROUD OF.

Elizabeth's Rowers of the I. S. A. A. Were Last Place in the Crescent Leagues.

Although the team of brokers that represented the Elizabeth Athletic club, rowed in Eatonetch Thursday, bowled nothing-to-brag of, yet they defeated the Catholic Young Men's Literary Association club's team with ease. Plainfield was led from the start, and—as they told a Press reporter—held themselves in readiness to at any moment run the score up. But there was no necessity. The totals were:

Plainfield Rowers Take Third Prize.

The crew of the Plainfield Athletic club, which has been appealed from justice Hetfield's court in this city, to the court of common pleas of Union county, was tried last week at Elizabeth, before Judge Lowenstein and a jury. The case was decided in favor of the plaintiff, and the jury found for the plaintiff.

The nature of the case is as follows: Henry C. Drake, a resident of Plainfield, left a flat in the apartment building at 20 North avenue. He vacated it, however, after a short stay, and was sued for the balance of the year's rent with the result above stated.

Charley Haad Says "If You Tax Me, Tax 'em All."

As soon as the attention of Mayor Gilbert was directed by Tax Payne to the fact that a merry-go-round was being erected in the rink which is owned by Charles Haad, the owner of the building, was required to pay $5 a month and warned that the business must be conducted in a manner that will meet with the Mayor's approval.

Haad has given notice that he will make a complaint against every other public hall in the city that has an entertainment of any nature to which an admission price is charged. He says he'll make them pay a license, too. The ordinance, however, excepts entertainments "Given by any society or association located in and paying taxes to the City of Plainfield"; and Haad wants to see Mayor Gilbert authority to decide "Whether a license is required."

Funeral of Walter T. Adams.

Funeral services over the remains of little Walter T. Adams were held at the residence of the lad's parents on Madison avenue this afternoon of Nov. 6. The body was encased in a little white casket, covered with bunches, bouquets, and baskets of flowers. At the head of the casket was a beautiful pillow bearing the words "Our Darling". At the side of the casket was a large anchor from the primary department of the Trinity Reformed church Sunday-school. The class of which Walter was a member were present, accompanied by their teacher, Miss Runyon, and each class member in solemn file went by the casket and placed a rose beside their little friend and classmate. The scene was very affecting. The Rev. Mr. Schenck conducted all the services, the reading being he spoke tenderly and lovingly to the class, who were near the casket. Hymns were sung by Mrs. R. H. Bird, Mrs. J. C. Campbell, Mrs. M. Runyon, Mrs. Ed. Runyon, and H. J. Shaw. The remains were taken to Mt. Pleasant Cemetery, Newark, for interment, on the 6 o'clock train, accompanied by the family, a few friends and the Rev. Mr. Schenck.

THE COUNTY CONVENTION.

Interesting Proceedings of Sunday-school Workers in Plainfield.

The twelfth annual convention of the Union county Sunday-school association was held Tuesday in the First Presbyterian church in this city, beginning at 10 a. m. The delegates present were as follows: Rahway, 19; Elizabeth, 30; Westfield, 12; superintendents, 11; parents, 7; State officers, 3; total, 180.

The session was opened with a devotional meeting led by W. D. Murray, superintendent of the Crescent avenue Sunday-school. His remarks emphasized the fact that the teacher must pray for her scholars more and oftener, and live for them. The remaining minutes of the half-hour were spent in prayer and singing.

At 10:30 the regular call of the convention was given. On account of the serious illness of M. M. Dunham, the president, and the absence of W. D. Porter, of Rahway, Vice-president, H. P. Opdyke, of Plainfield, occupied the chair, and presided over the gathering.

The Rev. Dr. K. P. Ketchum, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, welcomed the delegates on behalf of his people, in a most cordial manner. He spoke of the possibility of entertaining angels unaware, in such a gathering, and hoped that all would receive a fresh inspiration for service. The Rev. R. W. Gallagher, responded by saying that this was a time of consecration, when people of all classes met together for so many different objects. He said he was beginning to learn a great lesson from the Roman Catholics, in looking after the children and giving them proper instruction. The Christians in these days of the speaker said—must be well drilled in the use of the "Word", and know how to use it to the best advantage, if they be the honor of God, whose servants we are.

W. D. Porter came in at this time and was called to the chair, and officiated in the capacity as first vice-president.

The next business in order was the reading of the minutes of the last meeting, which were received and approved. The Rev. R. S. Laidlaw then delivered a very instructive address on "The Word." He likened it unto a sword, and drew parallel illustrations after the manner of the wonderful sword of the theory which he had advanced.

The report of the township committees was then read. Rahway, Elizabeth and Plainfield reported a most promising and successful year among the different schools. With this the morning session closed, and all were invited to partake of the dinner which the ladies had provided.

The afternoon session was opened by a service of prayer and song led by the Rev. Mr. Laidlaw, after which the roll was called, which all participated in, and which was very helpful. A conference on "Work for Boys," "Primary Work," "Normal Work and How Done?" was conducted by John Y. Foster of Newark. All who have ever heard Mr. Foster need not be told that his words were instructive and helpful, and which would help the hearer very much. He suggested correspondence and visitation among the scholars.

The next address was by Weller M. Patton, of Camden, on "The Superintendent and His Work". The superintendent was to be loving, sympathetic and Christ-like. He must not be cranky, selfish, or conceited; and should be prompt in his engagements at all times.

State secretary S. W. Clark answered a number of questions about Sunday-school work, which were asked by those present. One question was: "What would you do with a superintendent or teacher who was not spiritual?"—the answer being—"Every would better give him a seat" to a other part of town.

The address of the Rev. Mr. Loomis on "The Home Department of the Sunday-school" was very helpful to those engaged in that work.

The closed the afternoon session, and again the delegates accepted the hospitality of their friends, and returned to surround their bounteous supper was served.

A 7:30 the evening session was resumed with a song and praise service, which lasted for fifty minutes, after which took place the election of officers, which resulted as follows:

OFFICERS FOR 1892-93.

President—Rev. R. W. Gallagwell, Westfield.
First Vice-president—W. D. Porter, Summit.
Second Vice-president—W. D. Murray, Plainfield.
Corresponding Secretary and Treasurer—Geo. C. B. Converse, Dunellen.
Recording Secretary—J. M. Whitson, Plainfield.
Number of State Executive Committee—M. M. Dunham.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

R. M. Woodruff, Elizabeth; Rev. J. L. Hurlbut, Plainfield; Rev. E. B. Cobb, Elizabeth; Isaac Pardee, Elizabeth; J. L. Clayton, Westfield; Rev. R. F. Hendry, Rev. J. H. Nourse, Elizabeth.

TOWNSHIP SECRETARIES.

F. P. Bullman, Clark; N. R. Foster, Cranford; W. W. Boncheile, Elizabeth; first district; L. D. Mundy, Elizabeth, second district; Executive Committee, Fanwood; G. Vaughn, Linden; Executive Committee, New Providence; S. F. Hall, Rahway; Executive Committee, Scotch Plains; E. Reeve, Springfield; E. D. North, Summit; G. Mundy, Union.

The "Enchanted as an Evangelist" was the subject reviewed by the Rev. D. H. Martin of Newark. His remarks were practical and pertinent. He said, among many other things, "Don't tell your own experience too often; be consistent and tell always the truth; study the word, and live it out."

With the singing of a hymn and the pronouncing of the benediction, the convention closed. A resolution was passed unanimously thanking the Plainfield people for their generous entertainment.

The Rod Alone Was To Blame.

While turning from West Second street into Park avenue, on the way to the fire, last night, the hind wheels of the hook and ladder truck was partially upset by the sliding of the wheels over the road. Several of the firemen, however, managed to get injured. The truck was somewhat damaged, as was the farm wagon of George Stewart, of Washington Valley, with which the truck collided. Chief Foreman exonerates the truckmen from all blame in the matter. The horses were being driven only as proper speed around the corner. Mr. Stewart received $6 in full settlement of the damage to him.

Little Fire, but Much Excitement.

A gas stove in the bath room of the house of Hon. D. G. Thompson, 166 *East Front street, set fire to the wood-*work, at 6:30 a. m. Friday, and $100 damage was caused.

Mr. Thompson sent in an alarm from box 16; but before the department arrived, Wesleton & Buckie's fire brigade, who had been working near by, put out the flames. Thompson's children were cared for by L. B. Wooden, Brenell Marsh, Henry Waldron, Mr. Voorhees, Warren Squires and Levi Bates. Manager Charles Rosenau of the telephone exchange also rendered an useful and rendered valued assistance. When one of the men spilled a can of kerosene on the water over him he did n't utter a word of complaint but merely said: "Don't wrote it."

The fire caused considerable excitement. A large crowd turned out.

The market is flooded with dispatches of the name of Bond Bros., Why? Because they are the largest dealers in Ready Roofing in the world. Their Ready Roofing is the best. Their prices are the lowest. Their Ready Roofing is sold in every State in the Union. Their Ready Roofing is sold in every State, either plain or with a coated.

A New Departure.

Most Entirely the Mortgagee.

Because Christopher Gray of South Plainfield had borrowed money by duplicate chattel mortgages on one span mare, he was a defendant before justice Nash and a jury all day Thursday. The men who held the mortgages were Andrew S. Hoffman and Charles Vail. The former has the goods, but Gray still owns Vail the amount borrowed. So Vail brought suit. Jackson & Codington appeared for Vail and secured a verdict of $120. W. E. Codington appeared for Gray, the jury were out three minutes.

Organizing the Class of '94.

The class of '94 of the High School held its first class meeting recently and elected the following officers for the present school year:

President—Wm. Ellery C. Leonard.
Vice President—Phebe D. Lovell.
Secretary—Frederick K. Fuller.
Treasurer—John Elkhour.
Poet—William A. Dingee.
Orator—Florence C. Smith.
Historian—Catherine C. Batter.
Prophet—Percival V. Hubbard.
Artist—Howard F. Turrill.

At its next meeting the class will adopt a motto and complete other details of the organization.

—The women of the M. E. church will hold a Christmas bazar, Dec 1, 2 and 3, afternoon and evening. They are working very hard to raise money for the new chapel in North Plainfield.

—At the annual convention of the Young Men's Christian association of the North New Jersey district, to be held in Rahway, Nov. 20-22, the following prominent men have promised to be present: Austin Scott, LL. D., president of Rutgers college; James Dickson, of Plainfield, and the Hon. Elkanah Drake of Newark. Interesting topics will be presented for discussion. Information may be obtained from E. L. Suffern of the executive committee, or at the association rooms in this city.

"THE BEST OF CHILDREN'S MAGAZINES."

The publishers of St. Nicholas, that famous young folk's magazine, are offering to send a sample copy, free of charge, to any father or mother who would like to consider the question of taking a children's magazine during the year to come.

Certainly if that question is up for discussion in any household St Nicholas will be the best one. From its first number, in 1873, the pens of the greatest writers of the English speaking world, and the most famous illustrators, have been at its service. Tennyson, Longfellow, Bryant, Thomas Hughes, Whittier, Bret Harte, Bayard Taylor, Mrs. Barnett, Miss Alcott, Dr. Holland, Frank R. POET AND EDITOR.

A Visit to Sir Edwin Arnold in the London "Telegraph" Office.

Charms of Success in England and America—Anxious to See America—Strike Out a Literature of Their Own—The Newspapers of America.

[COPYRIGHT, 1891.]

High noon in Fleet street, London. It is a crisp day. The sun comes down brightly on the thoroughfare where great Sam Johnson; foolish and lovable Goldsmith; that prince among creative reporters, Boswell; inimitable Lamb; mighty Burke, and a host of others toiled their way in times long past.

Fleet street can never be made anything but interesting to Americans, just as it is dear to all Englishmen.

Those of us who have read of its inns and coffee houses, where struggling literary men met in the long ago, or of the Fleet prisoner, or the Fleet marriages that Walter Besant has written so well about, or of a hundred and one things that have made the old thoroughfare what can but feel that he is jostling musty but interesting ghosts of the days that may as well be laid aside. It makes his way along. But when I turned into Peterborough court, it was no ghosts that I hunted, but a very substantial affair of the present in the shape of a sign that told me that I was now the offices of the London Daily Telegraph.

I had received a kind note from Sir Edwin Arnold inviting me to call upon him for a chat. The note was brief:

"You are much too busy to devote to interviewers, but I have a few days to spare for a few minutes, although I am a very busy man."

Sir Edwin Arnold, poet, scholar, diplomat and journalist, is the powerful chief of the Daily Telegraph, the most widely circulated newspaper in Great Britain.

A young man in the business offices of the great paper on the ground floor received me blandly and looked upon me somewhat pityingly when I told him who I was and what I had come to see Arnold about. He took my card and disappeared. When he returned he respectfully requested me to ascend to the fifth floor, and I felt that I had grown several inches in his estimation. He showed me at once to the great editor's sanctum and left me to a part of it.

"Sir Edwin was temporarily engaged," my guide explained. "Would I wait for a short time?"

Of course I would and did and meanwhile examined my surroundings. A cheerful fire burned in the grate. There was a comfortable looking leather covered sofa on one side of the room and three or four chairs. Near one of the windows stood a table and it is at this that the editor works.

It was rather disappointing, this simplicity, for report had it that Sir Edwin has long been enamored of the glories of Indian palaces and the luxuries of far lands. There was nothing here to suggest this. If these signs went for anything, this office was the work room of a plain practical business man.

Most men if they had written such poetry as this man has, if they were the head of one of the most powerful newspapers in the world, a favorite in the inner circles of the court of Great Britain, a friend of more kings and emperors than one has time to calculate, be idea being a fellow of the Royal Geographical society of London, of the Royal Asiatic society and of the Royal Geographical society of Marseilles, a knight commander of the Indian empire, not to speak of three or four decorations of the sultan, the order of the White Elephant from the king of Siam, the order of the Lion from the Shah of Persia and the recipient of countless other honors — most men, I repeat, would be inclined to think of the great deal of themselves and to show it very plainly.

Sir Edwin Arnold probably knows his own worth as well as any man, but there is nothing in his manner to show this. I had not been in his company ten seconds before I was firm in the belief that I had never met a more pleasant yet more unaffected man. He slipped briskly forward and greeted me simply and cordially. He waved me to a chair up near the table at which he works, he waved me into it, making a humorous reference to the obligatory "interviewer" of the American newspaper, as he did so. Then he seated himself. First I referred to a statement made by Mr. Bret Harte, to the effect that he could get nearly three times as much money for his work in London as in the United States, and to another by an ex-minister of New Zealand, a Colonel Hall, to which he said he could live in London for less than two-thirds what it cost him in New York, and then I asked him if in his opinion London offered a good field for American newspaper or literary men.

"How can I answer that?" said he, at length, reflectively. "No one knows London better than I do. It is pretty full, but I think it is always room for is for energetic, apt and capable people. I have the highest opinion of the American people. I don't know what part of the world they would fail in if they put their backs to it. Look at this last invention of Edison's for instance. What place would not open to such a genius as that?"

"Well," I replied, "but leaving men like Edison out of it, how about the ordinary man who is endowed with industry and pluck?"

"Well," said Sir Edwin, slowly and thoughtfully, "I should say that the average American would not have as much chance as an Englishman, just the same as the latter would be somewhat at a disadvantage in America. Energy and genius will succeed everywhere. Still, London is pretty full, as I have said before."

I wanted to draw the famous poet out on some of our younger writers and their works, but I fought shy of this and I was forced to be content. Besides time was precious. There was another question I had to ask him and that was his opinion of American newspapers. Englishmen are prone to express very odd impressions concerning American journalism and it may be said some very erroneous ones. I am desirous of this talented man, who for thirty years had been the head of England's great newspapers in point of circulation — why that was another thing. So I put the question directly.

"On the whole, I must say that your newspapers make me shake my head. There are many good ones, but the generality are distressing. Once I picked up a paper in Washington, while I was waiting in the president's room. I glanced down the columns, and the following heading caught my eye: 'Grover Cox is dying.' It shocked me. Just fancy speaking of a statesman, whose name should be sacred to the

A WATER CLOCK.

It Is a Beautiful Piece of Work and Interesting Mechanism.

One of the attractions of the beautiful Monte Pincio gardens, at Rome, is a really unique clock, which is usually an object of interest to groups of passers-by. A general view and description of this curious and artistic piece of mechanism is given to this Record by the following:

The case is composed of three branches in rustic work. It stands upon a square stone block, surrounded on the top by a beautiful leaf plants, dry and grassed. The stone foot stands within a water basin. The upper part of the case contains a dial, covered with glass on each of its four sides. Upon the cupola stands a staff, which carries the vane for the fall hour and the quarters. At its upper end is a small vase in the shape of a battledore.

The frame for the wheel and the levers of the striking work, in which a small centrifugal pendulum takes the place of the fly, is close underneath the dial. At the back of the clock frame which contains the second pendulum, and before this is located a mass of rustic work, similar to a large coral growth, from which issue small jets of water at regular intervals. Two of the upper-most coral branches are water conduit pipes, from which flows alternately, at each swing of the pendulum, a small quantity of water into two leaf-like receptacles underneath, imparting to them an up and down motion.

The peculiar motive power furnished by the water to the clock is motion by a very remarkable escapement, so that it never requires winding. The connection of the clock is due to a monk, as is the case with so many old pieces of art work.

THE WATER CLOCK.

A WOMAN'S PATENT.

Simple Means of Elevating a Saint Whenever Necessary.

Of all the patents taken out in this country yearly, but a very small percentage are taken by women. Why this is we do not pretend to know. That women have inventive genius, and that the world would be benefited were she to exercise it more, there is no gainsaying. Women, says the Mechanical News, have a better sense of shape than they are usually given credit for, and many things are evolved in the parlance of the practical woman, that "would cause her to be a leader, among her immediate friends at least, were she to receive the credit due her." Annie Logan, of Leicester, England, invented, and, moreover, has actually patented, both in that and this country, a simple means of elevating the skirt whenever it may become necessary. Our illustration herewith gives the idea even better than we can describe it—not being of the feminine gender. In the skirt are attached two or more transverse bands substantially parallel with the waistband, each provided with suitable fastening devices for connecting the bands together, the fastenings on each band being constructed to interlock with the fastenings of the adjacent bands. Inclined upwardly-extending arms, D, that end within convenient reaching distance of the skirt-wearer are introduced, and a simple tug or pull upon them elevates the skirt neatly and evenly all round.

Not so Pretty Now.

Flobbs—That cocktail you sold me long to must be just lovely.

Hodge—It used to be before the new ruffs struck Saratoga. Now it only makes us eat what we cook.—Jury.

Not out of Sight.

De Winkle—I'm afraid Tompkins, I am afraid you won't see much of me, because, you see, I am up to my ears in debt.

Miss Tompkins—Oh, I am sure we can still see a great deal of you then, Mr. De Winkle.

The Shape to Attract Men.

"His young wife, and a prohibitionist who was once a soldier, died the other day in a bank," "as so tremendously fat his widow had to have his coffin made to order. Besides, it required the combined efforts of the bank president and a policeman to get the body out of the building."—Judge.

SUSAN GALE COOKE.

Death and Burial of the Pioneer Coon Hunter's Wife.

MRS. SUSAN GALE COOKE.

Mrs. Susan Gale Cooke, the new secretary of the board of lady managers of the World's Columbian exposition, lives at Knoxville, Tenn., and is a very rapid worker, clear-headed and expeditious. In addition to these valuable qualities she is exceedingly patient and sweet-tempered. Mrs. Cooke was born in Sevier county, Tenn., her father being Spaulding Gale, one of the most prominent surgeons of Vermont, and her grandfather, also a native of Vermont, was one of the heroes of 1812. Mrs. Cooke was educated in New York city, and shortly after graduation married Sidney E. Cooke, a member of the stock exchange. They moved to Knoxville, Tenn., and Mr. Cooke died there in 1883. Mrs. Cooke had for years taken an active interest in charitable work. She was one of the managers of the Brooklyn orphan asylum. Her friends who knew her well summed up a number of her strong points thus: "She is a woman of wide culture and with a winning gentleness. She has a quick sense of humor and is an interesting conversationalist. She has also the faculty of adjusting difficulties without resorting to heroic methods and promoting the ends of peace and harmony."

EVEN SO IN DEATH.

The Skeleton of a Cat Discovered, Over That of a Rat.

While extending and remaking the old buildings of the late Royal naval school at New Cross, London, which is shortly to be opened by the Goldsmiths company as their technical and administrative institute, it became necessary to remove the floor of the old gymnasium. In doing so the rat, which is the basis of the skeleton of a cat in close juxtaposition to that of a rat, exactly as shown in the picture, was found at the bottom. The rats were not quite two inches apart in a sort of wedge-shaped out-de-sac, which was evidently formed at the bottom, and so preventing the cat from quite reaching the rat. When found the entrance to the hole or chamber was filled up with dust and rubbish, and there was nothing to prevent egress of the animals at the way they had entered except the diminution of the cat to leave its prey. The skeletons when found were more than half covered with dust from the floor above them, and have probably been many years in the position they were found, in which position Mr. Redmayne, secretary of the Goldsmiths' institute, had them carefully mounted and photographed. A curious coincidence is that exactly the same discovery of the skeletons of a cat and a rat together under a floor occurred while pulling down some old buildings to construct the People's palace, which is the immediate predecessor of the Goldsmiths' institute.

COLUMBUS MONUMENT.

The Work of Art to Be Presented to New York by the Italian Residents.

It is said that "all things come to those who wait." That saying, if true, by every country-house in the land, is well long enough, we shall see New York a model city in all respects, with steam streets, perfect facilities, lovely public gardens, and a statue or fountain in every public square. We have a number of these now which are more or less monumentality in their way. Then there are some fine ones, exactly the name of Fayette in Union square, which was presented to our city by the countrymen of the great warrior and patriot whose name it represents. We will soon be indebted to the Italians living in this city, says New York Truth, for the finest monument yet erected here. This will be a statue of Columbus. The monument is a monument to Christopher Columbus in New York was started by Carmelo Barbaro, editor and chief proprietor of Il Progresso Italo-Americo, of this city, and through his efforts about $10,000 has been raised to defray the necessary fund. So great has been the interest taken in the movement, not only in this city, but throughout Italy, that the list of subscribers contains the names of many of the leading men of Italy, among them the prime minister, state, diplomats, professors and journalists, ex-Premier Crispi taking a subscription book himself. The monument is to be the work of Gaetano Russo, of Messina (Sicily), he being selected by a royal commission appointed for that express purpose, consisting of the leading artists and sculptors of Italy.

The complete height of the monument will be seventy-five feet. The statue of Columbus, which will surmount the shaft, will be twelve and one-half feet high, and will front the Grand Canara marble. The pedestal will be very ornate; on one side there is to be a figure nine and a half feet in height of Canara marble, representing the "genius of geography" in the act of tracing on a globe the position of America. On the reverse side will be a group representing an eagle, bearing in its claws the flags of America and Genoa. This will also be of the same fine marble.

On account of the sentiments surrounding it, if for no other reason, this statue is sure to awaken unobjectionable and attract a great deal of attention. New York should not forget that to the generosity and patriotism of her Italian citizens she owes the finest and first statue of Christopher Columbus, and, from the descriptions and pictures of it, one of which she may be justly proud.

A Story to Last.

"Hello, old chappy! Been makin' money lately?"

"I should smile; got so pockets full."

"Lend me a V, then?"

"Oh, I can't yet know; it's all in one dollar bills."—Texas Siftings.

A Tasty Remark.

"Isn't this paint pungent?" broke Miss Cleverly.

"Why, you speak of it as though it were a flower," said Mr. Hunker.

"Am I? I took it up to spotted at the conservatory."—Life.

CURIOUS PHENOMENON.

First Lightning Stretched a Body Upon a Granite Shaft.

During one of the recent storms that ravaged through the country a remarkable freak was played by lightning. The Lightning struck a tall monument of granite and, following the shaft to the round base or plinth, decolorized a portion of the stone in the shape of a stripe about three-quarters of an inch in width.

The monument stands upon a mound in the Woodward Hill cemetery, Lancaster, Pa., and is one of the most striking features of that beautiful spot. Formed of fine granite, it rose to the majestic height of forty-five feet. The shaft, a single stone of granite, is thirty feet in length, and is probably the largest single-stone shaft in the state. The total weight of the monument is sixty tons, and the shaft alone weighs forty tons.

It was erected upon a plot of ground belonging to the Grubb family and on the polished die is the inscription. The cap is ornamented with a graceful monogram of the family. The lightning struck the arms, or angle, within a foot of the pyramidal top and then passed down the monument in a zigzag line, bleaching the stone as it went, till it reached the plinth, or second base, where it stopped and all vestige of it ceased. The decolorized stripe is about three-quarters of an inch in width and is extremely regular from end to end. The bleaching through the stone is quite distinct from its course and passed through the monument in a zigzag line, bleaching the stone as it went, till it reached the plinth, or second base, where it stopped and all vestige of it ceased. The decolorized stripe is about three-quarters of an inch in width and is extremely regular from end to end. The bleaching through the stone is quite distinct from its course and passed through the monument in a zigzag line, bleaching the stone as it went, till it reached the plinth, or second base, where it stopped and all vestige of it ceased. The decolorized stripe is about three-quarters of an inch in width and is extremely regular from end to end.

Why She Left.

Mistress—What! going to leave already? Why, you have not been here's week!

Maid—I know it, mum; but I can't stand it here. Things run too smooth-like, mum.

Mistress—Why, what can you mean?

Maid—You see, mum, I has always been in places where they kept three servants.

Mistress—Oh, you are lonesome, then?

Maid—No, mum, not lonesome; but, you see, I misses the confusion.—Democrat's Magazine.

An Inadvertence.

"I say, doctor," remarked the coroner to one of his best customers, "I thought you certified that the last patient you sent me died of pneumonia."

"Well, he did—didn't he?"

"Why, no; I sold the cadaver to a dissecting class, and the students report that the subject was poisoned."

"Dear, dear me! you don't say so! I see it all now. I must have given him by mistake some of that cough medicine I prepared for Jones' mother-in-law. I thought it was a little queer myself."—Texas Siftings.

A Rare Experience.

Young Parent—Did you ever reject one of your own articles, Mr. Shears?

Editor—Yes. I rejected one of my own terms—for a subscription.

Y. P.—On what grounds?

Editor—I didn't feel that I had enough money back of me to live on what it was worth, so I rejected it and sent it somewhere else.—Life.

A Practical Question.

Jawkins—I hear that Mrs. Loftines has been so reduced since her husband's failure that she has had to take in boarders.

Gazzleton (who likes something more than napkins and silver for his dinner)—Poor fellow! How much do you suppose does she take them in for?—Harper's Bazar.

Generosity.

He—Yes, darling, and it shall be the purpose of my life to surround you with every comfort and to anticipate and gratify your every wish.

She—How good of you, Harry! And all on twelve dollars a week, too!—Chicago News.

Invited to Try It.

J. Boreton Gubbey—I am quite an enthusiast on the subject of evolution, don't you know. It's a grand idea—I think every one ought to be evolutated.

Heavensent—Indeed? But why don't you practice what you preach?—Jury.

Like Other Great Men.

"How did you ever happen to become so leary?" inquired the visitor at the dime museum.

"I was born so, sir," replied the living skeleton proudly. "I began life a poor boy."—Chicago Tribune.

Another Sister.

"What a lovely girl Maud is!"

"Yes—I always take her picture constantly in my heart."

"How so?"

"Oh, I put her negative the other night."—Philadelphia Press.

REFORM.

Mr. McKinley, of Ohio, is adverse to any further agitation of the tariff question and declares that all efforts of the kind will be useless, because a Republican President and Senate stand resolutely in the way of amendment or repeal.

A very natural position for Mr. McKinley to take.

He evidently fears the result of having his favorite class-fringed tariff measure overhauled and publicly discussed, and would have fair-spoken American sense swallow the enormity without a word of protest or single contortion of face.

They won't do it, Mr. McKinley!

The people of this country by a large majority are educating themselves to know the difference between right and wrong, between practical business facts and hollow political shams, and they cannot be either enjoined or forced into the willing acceptance of a defective and unjust law.

The present tariff is an enactment of that character. It was fashioned by avowed men for selfish purposes. There is not a particle of patriotic statesmanship about it. It is alien to the general public weal.

Bad laws ought to be fought against without cessation.

True, a Republican President and Republican Senate may be properly claimed as enemies to enlightened and needed reform.

But remember that the Presidential term expired March 4, 1889, and that the Republicans hold the Senate by a slim and, as regards revenue measures, doubtful majority.

Suppose the Democratic House passes a judicious tariff reform bill and the Republican Senate refuses to concur. In reporting, the Republican President interposes his veto.

What will then surely follow?

An intensified popular demand for reform, not by that measure, but SWEEPING REFORM.

You cannot dodge the national issue, Mr. McKinley!

AN OBJECT LESSON.

The recent Iowa election unfolds to view a political object lesson.

Governor Boies, an undisguised Democrat and resolute Tariff Reformer, was re-elected by a triumphant majority in a State heretofore so overwhelmingly Republican.

What did it?

Not the tariff-al-humes.

Because the official returns show a very full vote cast, even larger by several thousands than at the last Presidential election.

Not the issue question.

Because the official count discloses the fact that in the principal cities where anti-prohibitionists most do congregate, the Republican candidate actually gained over the vote of 1889.

Then who and what elected a Democratic Governor?

IT WAS THE WORK OF THE FARMERS OF IOWA. Aroused and determined, they assaulted the structure Monopoly planned, William Tariff and Benjamin Harrison.

Throughout the rural counties the Republican vote vastly decreased and the Democratic increased.

The farmers did it.

And why, an Iowa journal, the Clinton Age, thus distinctly states

"Not because they favored the re*peal of prohibition, because the peo*ple living on farms, as a rule, prefer prohibition to license. The fact is, it doesn't matter much to them what kind of a fourflushing law is put upon the sale of intoxicating liquors. The saloon does not thrive on the farm. Hence it will not do to attribute the farm vote which was cast for the Democratic ticket to prohibition or license. It is useless for a person to shut his eyes to the fact that the gain to the Democratic ticket in the rural districts is due almost entirely to tariff reform and opposition to protection. For this reason we think Iowa is permanently a Democratic State. The farmers who this year voted the Democratic ticket because they have opened their eyes on the workings of the tariff, will not only vote the same ticket on the same issue the next time they have a chance, but heretofore Republicans will do the same thing."

Tariff Reform is a sturdy giant in the land, growing stronger and stronger as time rolls on.

Everything points to Grover Cleveland as the strongest candidate for President on the Democratic ticket in 1892.

Hon. James Borgen, of Somerset, made an able Speaker of the House last night. He should be re-elected to that honorable position.

A large majority of the Democratic press of the State of New Jersey say the same as we do that the next Governor's name will be Geo. T. Werts.

Taking legislative majorities throughout the State show a total of 25,447 Democratic majority, and 13,000 Republican majority; net Democratic majority, 12,447.

The Republicans are talking of Blaine and McKinley as their candidates next year for President and Vice-President. Cleveland beat Blaine in 1884 and can do it again in 1892

Mr. Fassett declares that Cleveland's speech at Cooper Union, during the recent Gubernatorial contest in New York, changed 40,000 votes in the State. He says Cleveland did more to defeat him than any one other man.

The enemies of Gov. Abbett are building false hopes when they think that something may occur to defeat his nomination for United States Senator. Gov. Abbett is entitled to that honor and will get there just as sure as New Jersey is Democratic for years to come.

The Union County Board of Canvassers announce the following plurality ties: That for Morris Heafield, Dem., Overseer in the Assessorship of John Carroll, Dem., 1st district, 559; Thos. F. Laine, Dem., 2d district, 530; George Kyte, Rep., 3d district, 504; Democratic plurality in county on Assembly man, 578.

Plainfield is Republican by a large majority, and it is highly probable for a Council composed of Democrats to be elected to govern the city's affairs. There is a chance, however, in the Citizens' Ticket to elect men who have the interests of Plainfield's best interests at heart, and who are not in favor of spending the city.

Now that all bands are comfortably seated and happy over the late fall election, it is time for our Plainfield citizen to turn their thoughts toward the approaching city election, which will be one of the most important elections since Plainfield became a city. The Citizens' Ticket is made up of intelligent and honest citizens, who, if elected, will administer the affairs of the city in a fearless and faithful manner. Their election means low taxes, and no bonded debt.

They Are Bound to Raise the City.

The Fourteen Rath Men were stopped at supplying the water supply rates by throwing the Plainfield Aqueduct company's franchise into the Supreme Court. They based their application for an injunction to the building of sewers except by bonding the city, by throwing the Plainfield Sewerage company's franchise into the same court. Judge Vanfleet granted the writ some days ago.

Settling the VanZandt Estate.

The widow of the late Theodore Avery VanZandt has applied for her right of control of her deceased husband's estate. When a man dies and leaves a bequest to his widow in lieu of dower the widow has the right to decide whether she will take the bequest or dower. Mrs. VanZandt claims the right of dower, and will receive that instead of the bequest in the will.

To Workmen.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—We are told that the success of the Citizens' Ticket is against our interests, but how much have the Plainfield Water shipped company and their champions, the nonresidents on the Republican ticket, considered or aided the interests of Plainfield workmen? They brought in a gang of Italians, because they could be hired at starvate wages, and thereby crowded out our home laborers? Is this the principle to follow? Is it right? Reasonable, mes, the cities of Elizabeth and Rahway were bonded respectively for five and three millions of dollars; the blighting effects are still visible. It has been my boast that we were free from bonds. This freedom has been the cause of our prosperity. Citizens, if you want to keep your home free, vote the citizens' ticket, as every nominee therein is pledged against city bonds.

A CITIZEN WHO HAS EARNED HIS OWN HOME.

Pioneer Carries the City.

The paper that calls itself the "News", prints the following table which it says is the "official figures of the county board of canvassers":

	Kyte, R.	Heafield, D.
Plainfield—
1st ward	157	307
2d ward	130	305
3d ward, 1st dist.	61	214
3d ward, 2d dist.	134	124
4th ward	146	197

The above shows that Mr. Flower carried every ward in the city by a fair-some majority, excepting the fourth. Even the third ward that has always been good for a Republican majority of about 100, gives a majority for the other ticket, according to the "News" official table. The ward, however, is divided into five districts in two assembly districts. The State Board of Health, and, Mr. Runyon, you surely know that no system of sewerage can be put in to the city of Plainfield, or any other city in this state, without the approval of the State Board of Health. The laws require this, and you know it. I do not think that the Big 6 or Mr Low's company can influence the honorable gentlemen composing the *State Board of Health to sanction a sys*tem of sewerage for the city of Plainfield that does not protect the health of the citizens.

The Little Joker.

His honor, the mayor, stated in his first veto message on the sewer question, that he thought surely it was necessary for a committee of Plainfield, but that the city should build it. Streets now the Little Joker. *Tax the owners for the bene*fit of the few. In granting the franchise to the Big 6 they will see fit (if you will take the trouble to read it,) that the Big 6 had this Little Joker in view, and had the covenant so drawn that the tax payers would be compelled to pay one and five sided they did not apply.

No 6. SALOONS.

Mr. Runyon, can you cite one instance

SOME FALSEHOODS ANSWERED.

A PAPER THAT WILL NOT FIGHT FAIR, EXPOSED.

Evidence From His own Mouth That the Big 6 Has Reduced the Tax Rate—No System of Sewerage Can be Put in Plainfield Except It be Approved by the State Board of Health, According to the State Law—The Little Joker of It all is on the Mayor and Others are Already on Record the City should Bond Itself to Build Its Sewers.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—May I crave space in your columns to answer the misrepresentations of a correspondent in the Courier who hides himself behind a false name and strikes at his betters behind their backs like a coward. As he is not man enough—or else ashamed—to sign his true name, he is not worthy of a honest man's attention, so I shall address my answers to the editor who permits the false statements a place in his columns:

Falsehood No 1—Taxation.

The Courier says: "The Big 6 have increased the burden of taxation." That this is not true, is proven by the files of Mr. Runyon's own paper. It was the Big 6 that established roads and made the total rate for 1890 higher than that of 1889. The rate for the city was lower as the following from the CENTRAL TIMES shows:

	1889.	1890.
Library	3	3
City	46	44
Road	10	10
Fire	18	18
School	40	40
	117	115

There's a decrease shown by your own paper, Mr. Runyon, during the first year of the Big 6; and as to this, the second, Year of the Big 6. I take the following head lines from the Central Times of August 17, 1891, to show how untruthful you are:

LOWERING THE TAX RATE.

THE COMMON COUNCIL FILES IT AT $2.25—LAST YEAR IT WAS $2.35.

No 2—Hydrants.

The proposition submitted by Mr. Pope's company was $15 per hydrant, which after once erected cost company nothing till it maintain. The Franchise gives to the Big 6 calls for 140,000 gallons of water to be used every twenty-four hours for fire hydrants. Mr. Pope's company previous to the granting of the franchise me at $25 per hydrant, positively declined to enter into a contract with the city for less than $60 per hydrant to furnish what Mr. Low binds his company to do in his franchise.

No 3—Cash.

The records of our city court will explain how expensive our city is to the tax payer, and they also will explain how the good morals and safety of our citizens have been protected under the excellent administration of Chief Grant and the police force. Your charge that the efficiency of our police force is destroyed, is an unjustifiable insult to officers Grant, Lynch, McGue, Kiely, Cooney, and all the rest.

No 4—Public Works.

I would like to ask you, Mr. Runyon, if it was not Mr. Pope who formed the city into the ward system? Also, if it was not Israel Lewis suit to break a franchise granted by the council of 1889, and not granted by the Big 6, as has been stated. This suit has been dentified Mr. Lewis, Pope. You also charge that money has been recklessly spent upon the streets. This, you must know, is positively false, as the records will show where every dollar has been spent, and the work will speak for itself. The only reason I can see for your making this statement, unless you intentionally intend to deceive the public, is, that you belong to that circle that seem to think, that if the street commissioner is not all opened within a radius from a ½ a mile from the station, that it is the wrong away.

On my assuming the office of chairman of the street committee of 1890, I made a general survey of all the streets in the city. I found them in a horrible, and in some places, absolutely impassable, at *Being aware that people living in the out*lying districts were tax payers, and that they were justly entitled to have their streets put in a respectable condition, the committee so ordered them done. Time and again while such work was going on, gentlemen who belonged to the aristocratic portion of the city, would come to me and say: "Smith, why are you spending our money in this manner? The streets are not working on, do not need any improvements." My answer to them was: "Their money has been spent for your comforts in passed years, and they should have some benefit's now."

I here state, and the records will bear me out, that there has been twice as much accomplished for the money spent in the years 1890 and 1891, as in the last ten years.

You also speak of the "ups and downs" in the grades. I would like to have you point out in any of the work that has been done in the past two years, a single foot that has not been laid according to the established grades. The "ups and downs" that do occur are caused by the utter disregard of established grades by the street committees previous to Jan. 1, 1890, and it will require the expenditure of thousands of dollars to undo the work done by them. I will cite as cases in point—Eighth street to the south west corner of Central avenue; Madison avenue from Fifth street to Ninth, and Central avenue from Seventh street to Randolph road. After above mentioned work was done, I seen all along these lines. I would like to state in this connection that there has not been one dollar spent above Jan. 1, 1890, for sand. If records had been kept by former street committees, I think the tax-payers of Plainfield would see that the sand bills were heavily assessed, all of which was taken from the lot corner of Plainfield and Sherman avenues, at 61 per load, and charged to the city.

No. 5—Sewerage.

This is the all important question to this city. The water committee are accused of indecent haste. I know that there has been worked over this subject for months and months; plans were studied closely and submitted to experts at their own expense, and were submitted to all of the council time and again, a special meeting was called and the public invited to inspect the plans and specifications, all of which are still on file at the city clerk's office. Surveys have also been submitted to the State Board of Health, and, Mr. Runyon, you surely know that no system of sewerage can be put in to the city of Plainfield, or any other city in this state, without the approval of the State Board of Health. The laws require this, and you know it. I do not think that the Big 6 or Mr Low's company can influence the honorable gentlemen composing the *State Board of Health to sanction a sys*tem of sewerage for the city of Plainfield that does not protect the health of the citizens.

The Little Joker.

His honor, the mayor, stated in his first veto message on the sewer question, that he thought surely it was necessary for a committee of Plainfield, but that the city should build it. Streets now the Little Joker. *Tax the owners for the bene*fit of the few. In granting the franchise to the Big 6 they will see fit (if you will take the trouble to read it,) that the Big 6 had this Little Joker in view, and had the covenant so drawn that the tax payers would be compelled to pay one and five sided they did not apply.

No 6. SALOONS.

Mr. Runyon, can you cite one instance where a license has been granted to a person that had not fully complied with the law? When we as councilmen took the oath of office, we swore to look after the city's interest, to abide by the laws, and to this end they were framed. The saloon keepers, as long as they comply with the law, are justly entitled to protection, for they contribute a large proportion towards defraying the expenses of the city, and under our oaths we are not allowed to discriminate against them in favor of other citizens. You speak of the one-hour extension. Will you be kind enough to explain through your paper the arbitrary manner in which that hour was taken away from them in the year 1889, and the license fee raised to $700, yet nothing was given them for it.

I say, justice to all!

Now, Mr. Runyon, a word of advice from a layman is well to heed sometimes. You are young at the business and I would say to you that in the long run established that a newspaper intentionally publishing articles from day to day with the sole purpose of deceiving the people can never succeeded. The people are not fools.

SETHOUR G. SMITH.

A RIGHTEOUS INDICTMENT.

Mayor Pierce Sharply Scores Barefaced Recklessness in Disbursing Wretched Sidewalks.

The following communication from Mayor Pierce was presented to the North Plainfield borough council Monday and referred to the committee on streets for action:

To the Borough Council:—For several months past, and more especially during the last few months of the borough, in certain localities, are allowing their board sidewalks to remain in a dangerous condition. It is only a few weeks ago that one of our residents, Mrs. Gen. Gibbs, died of an injury received from walking upon a dismantled board walk. As a matter of law, the borough is responsible for a dangerous sidewalk is liable in damages for all personal injuries sustained. It would be well if a test case at some time could be brought, by some one injured, to show residents who with impunity will allow seemingly dangerous walks that they must take the consequences and suffer the penalty therefor. Every resident can keep his sidewalk in good condition. If he fails to do so, he should be made to comply therewith with the ordinance.

I am aware that there is no money available, in the hands of the council, to repair those existing, neglected walks. The owners of the property, or the occupants where those cannot be found, should be notified to repair. In many instances, to the request of the street committee to repair them. Such being the case, I would suggest that the council believe the committee will agree with me to notify all parties of some other board of money necessary for such purpose, if it can be done, and cause those out dilapidated walks to be put in a passable condition. It is equally important to have our sidewalks in good condition as it is to have the roads in good condition, for where more use the roads sometimes use the sidewalks. It is an injury to the business men of the city, and it devolves upon the borough authorities to keep their board walks in repair so long as they have the money. Besides positive intolerable nuisance, and the borough authorities are blamed for their condition. In addition to the above, I would call the council's attention to some important duty that to enforce the provisions of ordinance No. 5, 1885, reads in part: "In default of such owners doing [illegible] work after 30 days' notice, the same shall be done by the mayor and council, or surveyor, at the cost and expense of such owners. Now, if residents fail, to do their duty in this matter, let the council see to the ordinance—which it has the power to do under the borough act—prohibiting, if they deem it, districts the laying of board walks, and compel property-owners to lay flagging instead. If this be the case now under the present act of the borough are ready to demand that such actions be taken by the mayor and council in passing over the streets of the borough. If this condition of things be allowed to continue, the borough authorities are not entitled to the confidence and support of the people. I trust this matter will receive your careful consideration, and that such action be taken by his council as the case demands. CHAS. PIERCE, Mayor.

THE MALE CASE ENDED.

It Now Remains Only for the Vice-Chancellor to Give His Decision.

The opposing counsel occupied six hours of the vice-chancellor's time, Friday afternoon, over the Ramona Job Male will contest.

The case now is closed, and it only remains for the vice-chancellor to render his decision. This may not be rendered in many weeks. The point raised by counsel that counsel March 2 a new one in this State, and a most difficult act to construe to settle. The court will therefore be very deliberate in reaching a conclusion.

Water-Works Injunction.

A writ has been served on the Plainfield Water-supply company announcing that an injunction has been applied for by Attorney-General Stockton, to restrain the company from doing business, because of the failure to pay the license tax of $250 for 1890. The writ is returnable at Trenton, Nov. 24.

Good Conviction.

The Democrats of Elizabeth have made the following nominations: For mayor, Frederick L. Hederitter; for councilmen-at-large, Patrick Lally, Jr., and Ship builders, John J. Donohue, Charles H. Moore, John S. Sauer, Wm. H. Trahan. These are excellent nominations, and as the Democrats polled over 2,000 majority in the city, the candidates should be elected by handsome majorities.

Sure Hour for the Borough.

The borough council of North Plainfield decided Friday to buy 800 feet more of land on the north side of Front street, at a frontage of 200 feet, at $2 per foot, available 2,000. Councilman Regan protested that the funds were too low to warrant the purchase. Councilman Fehrling advocated building to deed for it. Mr Hegeman was opposed to jeopardizing the credit of the borough. Also would like to see the property purchased. Councilman Powell voted with Mr Schring. Mayor Place was the only other member of the council present. The matter of settling the question the council went into executive session.

Illustrated Lectures by a Plainfield Scholar.

Prof. Edwin H. Lewis, son of the Rev. Dr. Lewis of this city, has prepared a course of nine lectures on "The Private Life of the Romans", which he will deliver at Memorial hall, Alfred Centre, N. Y., the present winter. The object is to give a systematic treatment of the daily life of the Romans of the Republic and the Empire, and to show the influence of Roman institutions upon modern life. The lectures will be illustrated, with views of ancient Rome, Pompeii and Herculaneum, prepared by Prof. G. Hale of Cornell University especially for this course. The schedule of topics is as follows:

Nov. 11. Marriage, dissolution, Divorce.
Nov. 12. The House, its Construction.
Nov. 18. The House, its Decoration.
Nov. 19. The Table and Dinner.
Dec. 2. Meals, and Daily Occupations.
Dec. 3. Amusements and Sports.
Dec. 16. Burial, Funeral, Tombs.
Jan. 6. Public Assemblies.
Jan. 20. Trade and Business.

"Another matter I desire to bring out", continued the councilman, "is the appointment of Mr. Coward as city clerk. That appointment was made at the instigation of Elias H. Pope, who is trying to lead the Republican against us. He landed it afterwards, but was unfriended in his office by whomsoever and he had to admit it."

CRESCENTS FOUGHT HARD.

And Had Scott Bowled as Well as Van Emburgh, Plainfield Would Have Won.

The crack bowlers who style themselves the Ivanhoes scored another victory over the Plainfield Crescents last Friday. In a previous game they won by 91 points. Friday the margin was cut down to 62.

The game was quite exciting, as a study of the score by frames will show. The teams ran very close together, the Crescents leading half of the time. The second ran last, in the sixth frame, and almost tied again in the eighth. Van Emburgh was high man of the evening, even running ahead of king bowler Seilken of the visitors. The score:

ANOTHER WILL CONTEST.

A Plainfield Woman Asks the Law to Give Her a Share of Her Father's Estate.

Mrs. Thomas Radin, one of the heirs of the Radin family who formerly owned Liberty Island, has begun proceedings to contest her father's will

Mrs. Radin, whose husband lives at Scotch Plains, but who here-if is a resident of this city, is well known in Plainfield people. Her home has long been in this city.

When her father, Thomas Dufarrier, died, less than a year ago, he bequeathed the bulk of his property to his wife. Her executrix, a district of the Oneida community, New York State. Mrs. Radin charges that undue influence was used by the executrix over the deceased in his dying hours, and that the nephew induced Mr. Dufarrier to disown her, and she alleges that the will does her a gross injustice in giving her only $1 to a distant relative deserving relative property that is hers by every natural right. She invokes the aid of the law in endeavoring to do that which the will seeks to keep from her, and has engaged as counsel Jacob Halstead of New York, who is taking the preparatory steps in the Orphans' court looking to the will. The estate in dispute is understood to be quite a valuable one.

CITY DEPARTMENT.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE, THE COUNTY AND THE CITY, AND HAS THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY PAPER PUBLISHED IN THE COUNTY OF UNION.

J. A. DEMAREST - - City Editor.

—Janitor Hope has started the fires in the new addition to the Bryant school.

—Important changes appear in the Central railroad time-table published today.

—The express messenger and railroad employes have appeared in their new uniforms.

—A boy who threw stones at the Irving school was fined $5 by Judge Codington on Saturday. Other offenses of the kind will be punished more heavily in the future.

—The Jr. O. U. A. M. fair just closed was very successful. The profits were over $300. Franklin council is enterprising and progressive, and makes a success of all it undertakes.

—S. Thorn, of 76 West Front street, was Monday afternoon compelled to make an assignment for the benefit of his creditors. He selected Jackson & Codington's office.

—The Bucklestown Gazette asserts that its town can turn out as good a team of oxen as it can any town in the county. "Come in the State." There's a chance for a challenge from the Crescents.

—The electric-lamp will soon be the headlight used by a locomotive. This lamp will be connected with a storage battery beneath the axle of the front wheel, and will give light for ten hours.

—The Sunday-school of Holy Cross church and their friends once in their new-enlarged building Sunday morning. The new rooms are the finest of the kind in the diocese of New Jersey.

—Tickets for the benefit of the Grace church building fund will be held at the seminary, Friday evening, Nov. 27, at 8:30. In the afternoon at 3 a children's entertainment will be given.

—A conference of Christian boys connected with the boys department of the Young Men's Christian association of New Jersey will be held in this city Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 28 and 29.

—A contract has just been filed by Daniel F. Dugan and Monroe R. Brewster, of this city, with Herman Hansen, builder. The contractor agrees to erect a building on the east side of Ken-lington avenue, for $3,000.

—The Young Daughters of the King, of North Plainfield, will hold a charity and cake sale, at the residence of Mrs. D. L. Thompson, 18 Rockview terrace, Saturday afternoon, November 21, at 3. All are cordially invited to come.

—Between the hours of six and seven, the ultra sneaking before the night watchman began his rounds, thieves entered the back grounds of the residence of Charles C. Leslie and stripped the clothes lines of a valuable assortment of imagery.

—The Elizabeth Journal has the hearty congratulations of The Union. It has come to the enlargement of eight columns. The Journal is a glowing and affixing success, and deserves every bit of its prosperity. In New Jersey journalism it is a shining light.

—Charles Willis and Frank Moncton went hunting back of Tom McGann's farm on second mountain Saturday, and brought back a five-pound rabbit that seems to have been born without ears. Willis says that it is the greatest curiosity he ever saw in his 25 years' hunting experiences.

—The valuable property on which Packler's big furniture store stands is advertised to be sold at the court-house in this city, at the court-house at Elizabeth, Wednesday, Dec. 23, at 2 p. m., to satisfy the claim of the First National Bank on the estate of the late Charles Billy Moore, against Mrs. Moore the latter.

—The Y. M. C. A. district convention will be held in this city on Nov. 20 and 21. The following Plainfielders, who have already signified their intention to be present, will give information to all interested: W. L. Sage, A. C. Langstaff, Frederick Stone, J. A. Rollinson, George S. Babb, C. H. Lee, and Frank Richland.

—Last week's issue of The Wheel, the leading bicycle organ, does the unselfish thing to the Hon. George Kyle by acknowledging that it was in error in printing the statement that Mr. Kyle the latter was "solely for political purposes." The retraction is made on information furnished by a member of the Plainfield Bicycle Club.—Elizabeth Journal.

Aaron M. Powell, of East Sixth street, editor of The Philanthropist, was the only representative from Plainfield at the recent triennial congress of the British, Continental and General Federation for the Abolition of State Regulation of Vice, in Brussels, Belgium. Mrs. Powell was one of the chief speakers at the congress, and was chairman at several of its sessions. He was elected American representative for executive committee of the federation. In the current issue of The Philanthropist Mr. Powell gives an exhaustive and interesting review of the proceedings.

A BIG WIND IN TOWN.

It Plays Shocking Havoc With Trees and Buildings and Strips a Remunerable Gale Here.

The tornado that did so much damage in various parts of New York and New Jersey, Tuesday afternoon, as told in the general telegraphic dispatches elsewhere, paid quite a lively visit to North Plainfield borough.

In Plainfield itself the damage done was slight. The most serious was the overturning of U. B. Dunham's snowcone and the chimney at S Park avenue. The escape was very narrow, of passers-by, being injured by the showers of bricks. The swinging signboard in front of the shoe shop on Park avenue at the foot of North avenue was a remarkable from the proceedings, smashed a window, and blew out into the street and inflicted quite a cut on a horse which it struck. A number of shade trees had large branches torn away. The loss of Trinity church spire swayed violently in the high wind, and it looked as though the huge vane and ball would be carried away across the borough.

In various parts of the town frame dwelling-houses trembled and shook violently, to the great alarm of the inmates. Luckily, however, the worst fury of the storm confined itself to the thinly-settled outskirts.

One of the Bradley brothers who own the stone-crusher on the mountain-side back of Sevring's mills was at the stone-crushing works when the sky overhead became overcast with a dense blackness. There was a tremendous rushing sound in the distance, and suddenly there loomed over the mountain-top a vast, whirling, shrieking cloud. It stopped half-way down the mountain, and then came bounding towards him like a huge rubber ball. In shape it was like the conical hay-stack, with a twisting, gyrating sensation-pipe at its base, very like an elephant's trunk. The cloud kept slipping frightfully near the mountain-side, and when it went whizzing past Mr. Smalley it was just far enough below him for him to feel the current. The path of the cloud that followed the tornado's track tore a few boards from the sheds at the crusher, but did no serious damage.

The path of the storm struck at the rear of 200 Somerset street, watering his horses, when he saw the tornado come rushing along the mountain-side. His horses broke up in the air and dive down again, pawing up branches of trees, logs and fences, and hurling them to earth with great violence. The trees in its path uprooted and rocked as though a giant power had them by the roots and was determined to wrench them from the soil. Dust and sand of appreciable size filled the air, thick with masses of leaves and tree branches.

"The tornado struck the new house which I was just completing on the hill-top opposed street back of Howard street, near my barn, and caused an utter wreck. The loss I estimate at $500.

"Just a I thought my fortune about to be lifted from its foundation the tornado swerved aside in its course and bounded up into the air. It swept over the house of Israel Leslie in such a way as to take the chimneys off just as though they had been cut through with the blade of a huge broad-axe. Had the storm-cloud stooped it bit lower it must have unroofed the dwelling altogether.

"The affair was all over in a twinkling. If it been in the path of the cyclone it must have whirled me off my feet and carried me through the air, as trees, houses was its power; but I was just outside its reach, although felt the strong after-draught. Dashed in the path of the tornado the wind is blowing just hard enough to make a man tend over as it clung to his hat."

Mr. Fritz added that the aspect of the storm-cloud was most terrible, and that the noise it did were so strange and astounding that he had his doubts upon seeing it as to whether it was not Satan himself in person went over the path of the fiery cards and without the wreck of Mr. Fritz's house, just one log. The house was erected only a most thorough manner. It had been lifted bodily from its foundations, carried through the air, and thrown with a tremendous crash beside the residence of Mr. Wyckoff, who occupies another house owned by Mr. Fritz. The beams and tough timbers were twisted, warped and twisted into splinters, and the building was a mass of jagged fragments. The foundations from which it was taken looked as though they had just been finished and no house had ever stood on them.

The fury of the storm did not reach the thickly-settled portion of the borough, but swept on out across the farm-lands, carrying away fences and chimneys, and uprooting sheds and barns. The tornado-cloud ploughed in a most erratic way, and visited Newark, South Orange, Red Bank, Point Pleasant, and other places farther down the coast. It formed a huge waterspout on Raritan bay, and a Jersey central train had a most exciting race with it across the big bridge.

Two singular phenomena were connected with the wrecking of the Fritz house. A basket filled with glass preserve jars, which Mr. Wyckoff had left out at the back door, was carried away, and never seen over, and finally set down right-side-up, directly underneath a mass of debris from the Fritz house, yet not a jar was broken. The second was that the flying pieces of the Fritz building swept the shutters and their hinges neatly off the entire side of Mr. Wyckoff house, and carried away not a single piece of glass. Mr. Wyckoff says that for three minutes the air was black with shattered timbers, which showered down as though there was not a business supply overhead. He adds that the noise was deafening.

One of the sheds at Israel Leslie's stable-yard was carried away, and the slaughter-house itself was damaged. Mr. Lewis was struck on the nose and badly injured by a big timber, and a lad named Mahon, who was working for him had his head cut.

The cyclone-cloud seemed to be charged with stones and bullets of some kind, as several lost in the windows at the barns of Fritz and Lewis.

The violence of the storm was of course greater over the other side of the mountain-top than this. The tornado satisfied itself on this side with sweeping up leaves and branches along a straight through the woodland. In the valley beyond it took trees up roots and all, and left a barren path in its wake two hundred feet wide, piling up the trees in ragged heaps along the side of its trail.

The worst damage seems to have been off to the north west. Details are meagre, but many barns are reported wrecked and farm-stock injured.

The new hotel building in process of construction by Ascnet Allaud, adjoining the silk mills at Stirling, was levied in its foundations. The total loss is $1,000.

The big bill-board adjoining the Crescent rink on Broadway was blown down by Tuesday's high wind. The grandstand on the Crescent League athletic grounds in the borough were also somewhat damaged.

On West Front's farm back of the mountains the wind picked up a section of corn-stalks and threw it through the side of a barn, and killed a cow in the stall.

It was Tuesday night's storm of darkness that the tall Methodist church spire of Mr. Fritz's place would be wrecked, as it swayed to and fro through about to topple over, but it escaped. The storm seemed to split around it, and a smaller whirlwind went whirling up Stony brook, forming a veritable water-spout, which finally broke over a bridge with a sound like a clap of thunder.

On John F. Wilson's farm a number of fine shade trees were damaged.

The storm was welcome in one respect in that it was the forerunner of a very seasonable cold wave.

DASTARDLY WORK.

Five-barn Set Ready for a Big Blaze, but Discovery Thwarts Their Plans.

The discovery was made at dusk Sunday evening that an attempt was about to be made to start a fire in a thickly settled portion of the town.

The wood-work of an out-house in the rear of Andrew Lutkins's store on Park avenue was found to be saturated with coal-oil, and the match-safe was shoved inside. It stopped half-way down the mountain, and then came bounding towards him like a huge rubber ball. In shape it was like the conical hay-stack, with a twisting, gyrating sensation-pipe at its base, very like an elephant's trunk. The cloud kept slipping frightfully near the mountain-side, and when it went whizzing past Mr. Smalley it was just far enough below him for him to feel the current. CLOSE CALL FOR DR. ALLIS.

A Friend Who Happened in Opportunely Saves Him from Death by Coal Gas.

Dr. J. A. Allis, of 67 Park avenue, had a narrow escape from death Monday, when he was overcome by coal gas. He had been out calling, and was chilled through when he reached his office. He stirred up the fire and heaped on coal, but neglected to arrange the stove-drafts properly and left open the damper. The result was that coal-gas was rapidly generated and it great volume, and before the doctor was aware of its insidious and deadly presence in the atmosphere it had rendered him unconscious.

A friend happened in just in the nick of time, and before he knew it was lying prostrate and senseless on the floor. He opened the windows to let the fresh air drive out the noxious fumes, and summoned Dr. J. T. Fryer, who with much difficulty revived his fellow-physician. Dr. Allis was weak and exhausted all the afternoon, and did not fully recover the evening.

HONORING THE DEAD.

Glowing Tributes to Gen. Fay and Mr. Wilson, by Fellow-Members of the Bar.

The committee on resolutions in memory of J. Augustus Fay and William P. Wilson, deceased members of the Union county bar, reported in the circuit court, Judge Vanblyck presiding, Saturday.

The committee were William R. Wilson, E. S. Atwater and Joseph Alward.

The report was submitted by Mr. Wilson, who read the resolutions, which were ordered inscribed on the minutes of the courts. Judge Vanblyck remarking that he concurred in the expressions.

The memorial is as follows:

GEN. J. AUGUSTUS FAY.

J. Augustus Fay, a member of the Union county bar, died suddenly at his residence in this city on the 4th inst.

For more than twenty-five years he had been a member of the bar of New Jersey, and a resident of this city nearly all as life. During all that period he was an honor to his profession and respected by his many friends.

As a public man he was well known. He was a member of the House of Union county, for two terms, from 1851 to 1861, having been first appointed by Gov. Randolph. He also served on the Randolph's staff as judge advocate general.

He was a soldier in the late war and served with distinction. We, his associates, are now assembled to show our respect for the memory of our deceased brother. When he was with us we esteemed him as a genial companion, a sincere friend, and an earnest and able advocate. Now that he has left us we think of his many excellent qualities and mourn his loss.

Resolved, That it be recorded on the minutes of the court, that we respected J. Augustus Fay while living; that the bar of Union county lost an able lawyer and earnest advocate. In the death of our brother we have lost a friend before God, who has in his all-wise Providence called him to early from his useful life on earth.

WILLIAM P. WILSON.

William Penn Wilson, a member of the Union county bar, died July 26, 1891.

He was a native of New Jersey and graduated from Princeton college in 1846. He was admitted as attorney in 1850 and as counselor in 1853.

For a number of years he was associated with the Hon. Robert S. Green in the practice of law, in the city of Elizabeth. Afterwards he was in partnership with the late George F. Snyder, of Plainfield. For several years past he had his office in the city of New York, and was engaged in business there as well as in New Jersey. He was a member also of the New York bar.

Mr. Wilson was a man of good attainments and a lawyer of ability. He was a man of cases with great research and thoroughness. His manners were kind, courteous, affable and obliging. They mourn the loss of one who was yet in his prime, and they desire that this memorial of his worth and his memory be entered on the records of the court.

A Sweet Singer Again in Plainfield.

Mrs. Evelyn Everett Spicer, who, will be the soloist at the Park Avenue Baptist church at the service of song next Sunday evening, is a lady of charming personality, a bride within the year, a soprano singer of rare gifts, and a pupil of Professor Jacobsohn, of the Methodist church in New York, and since for the love of singing. Her fine natural voice has been cultivated a high degree of excellence, and there is no doubt that her rendering of "Calvary" by Rodney will be superb. Besides "Calvary" she will sing an entirely new arrangement of "Rock of Ages," which has never yet been heard by a Plainfield audience.

The Frazee Lee Will Again.

Herbert W. Knight, master in chancery at Newark, Monday continued the examination of witnesses in the case of the late Frazee Lee, the wealthy Plainfield hermit. At his death Lee willed most of his fortune to the Second Baptist church. This was contested by the heirs, and a compromise was effected whereby the property was divided between the heirs and the church. Then the trustees of the church took exceptions to the accounting by the trustees appointed by the will, and the chancellor referred the matter to master Knight. The only witness examined above day was John H. Jackson, one of the executors, whose testimony was of a nonessential character.

The Rev. Mr. Bowers to Plainfield.

The Rev. Arthur C. Dill and the Rev. George Bowers, of Stirling, addressed the largest congregation that has yet filled the Memorial chapel at Washingtonville last Sunday morning. The subjects were much pleased with the manly delivery and pleasing address of Mr. Dill, and hope to hear him again.

The Rev. Mr. Bowers, who is an old favorite, and many old friends among the audience.

Rev. Mr. Dill will soon take up his residence in Plainfield, where he has secured chairmanship of Yale, among whom is W. D. Murray, president of the Y. M. C. A., who is a warm friend of his and who speaks in the highest terms of him. Mr. Dill's home will be on Broadway.

MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE.

Young Walter Voorhees Has Been Missing from Home Two Weeks.

Walter D. Voorhees, the sixteen-year-old son of E. K. Voorhees of 41 Dunn street, has been missing from home since Sunday, Nov. 1, when he left the house to go to Sunday-school. He had a happy home, and there was no reason for his parents to suppose that he was unhappy or worried, and anxious to get news of his whereabouts. When last seen, he wore a neat black shirred suit, with a cadet cap, and a Crescent League button. He can be identified by two severe scars on his right hand.

THE PEACE STREET PROJECT.

The City Council Awaits the Action of Senate President Terpenin.

There was presented to the Plainfield common council Monday night a petition signed by the requisite number of taxpayers requesting the necessary ordinances be passed for the improvement along the line of the proposed Peace street extension, asking that the extension be made.

When the petition had been read, Mr. Rushmore introduced a resolution that anyone present desiring to be heard in the matter be given a chance to speak. The resolution was adopted. As there was no one present, outside of the members of the council and clerk Coward, save the newspaper reporters and a few others who has no more interest in Peace street than in Kamschatka, a dense silence prevailed.

Then Mr. Rushmore introduced another resolution, which was likewise passed, that action in the matter be deferred till North Plainfield township had opportunity to hear the petition, and further is to be brought before the township committee tonight, and then the township and city will take joint action.

No other business of importance came up before the council, whichadiaed meeting to order till 8:30, and which adjourned some minutes later. The warmth of President Smith relented back to corporation counsel for explanation the paragraph in his recent report stating that the public that the borough was adjusted. He wanted to know what the compromise was, and said that the street committee had n't heard of it.

Why the Boodlers Are.

We hear much talk from the bond advocates about the "combine", but they do not tell the public that the Republican city of Plainfield for the past thirty years previous to the present common council had took ruled by a combine—but with the difference that they organized and controlled.

Agreement for the Sale of Property.

An agreement has been entered into by Alfred D. Cook and wife and De Ells W. Hedges, of this city, whereby Mr. Cook agrees to convey to Dr. Hedges, by deed of warranty, land situated on the easterly corner of Broadway and LaGrande avenue. The consideration mentioned is $3,183, and the consideration $19,250.

Found the Dead Man's Hat.

The hat of the dead man who was found in Spring Lake, on John I. Holly's farm, some weeks ago, has just been recovered. For the past few days the water in the lake has been lowered for the purpose of making repairs to the dam. The hat was found in the mud at the bottom of the lake, forty feet from the bridge where the corpse was hidden.

The Press Street Extension.

At a meeting of the North Plainfield township committee Tuesday night, objections against the opening of Peace street through the borough were called for, but none was presented. The committee decided upon calling a meeting for next Monday night, when commissioners will be appointed to assess the values of land through which the thoroughfare will pass.

No Contest Whist Tournament This Year.

It is very probable that the contest New Jersey whist tournament, which has been for two years held in this city by Fraternity, will this year be abandoned. The Elizabeth athletic club have attempted to get the clubs, including the Plainfield Crescent League, together for the purpose of organizing, but the other clubs have not responded. A tournament between the Elizabeth athletic club and the New Jersey athletic club will be begun in a few days.

Great Farming at Scherwood.

1754 bushels of corn, or 109 7-16 bushels of shelled corn, to the acre, is the yield in D. Hand's 2 1-2 at Netherwood. The rows are just 4 feet apart each way, and there are 4 stalks in each shock. This makes 78 shocks in one acre, each of which produced 2½ bushels of corn. An average of 16 ears to the stalk is claimed. It yielded 42 quarts of good seed corn, and the total was the enormous yield stated above, besides an immense lot of pumpkins raised on the same ground.

A Women's Bicycle Club.

The many young women bicycle riders of this city have organized a club among themselves which is probably the first of its kind in the world. They will adopt a distinguishing badge but not a full uniform.

Miss Julia E. Bulkley is president; Miss Lillian Fritts, captain; Miss May Kirkner, first lieutenant; and Miss Belle Bulkley, secretary and treasurer. Miss Yates has been requested to prepare a constitution and by-laws.

Mr. Roman Declines.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—I wish to thank the delegates to the citizens convention held Tuesday evening, for the nomination on their ticket in the third ward for the office of councilman.

Appreciating fully the honor so bestowed, I must take the early opportunity of declining all such offices, feeling and knowing that my own business occupies my time fully.

I hereby decline all such offices.

Fanwood Pen.

A very enjoyable entertainment was given last Wednesday evening at Fanwood's pretty club-house. Mrs. Gibbs and Mrs. Warren were patronesses; with these ladies at the head, any social gathering is an unqualified success.

After the entertainment, dancing was indulged in by all who were not obliged to take early trains to out of town places. Arthur T. Pendleton, referred to as the "handsome bachelor of Elmora," again showed himself not pressed, was ably represented. Many Plainfield people remained to enjoy the informal dance until the "cowl train" arrived to take them home.

THE STORY OF MAN.

A Profound and Thrilling Work, Giving a Succinct History of the Human Race.

The renowned author and historian, J. W. Buel, has just completed, and the well-known publishing house of Philadelphia has produced in the finest style of the printer's and engraver's art, a marvelous book, "The Story of Man," a work of thrilling fact and romantic history, which follows the footprints of the human race from the earliest ages, and brings up to the present date, containing the wondrous tales of man's achievements.

It is a most fascinating book, and an exhaustless mine of information. The most profound research and intelligence has contributed to its pages, and the experiences of travelers among the wild races of the world have added to its wealth of facts and incidents.

The book carries the reader back to the most primitive peoples, and reveals the every-day life of man before he had taken the first step toward civilization, when imbruted nature dominated and made of him a companion of the savage beasts that shared with him the dominion of the earth. From this primitive condition he finds man to have developed slowly, the earliest evidences of his improvement being manifested in a rude knowledge in the manufacture of stone implements with which he contended with wild animals first, and soon afterward used them as weapons against his fellow-men.

"The Story of Man", therefore, describes not only the slow stages of development but also dwells particularly upon man's more sensational conditions of degradation, bowling packs of fierce animal-, terrible beasts of giant stature and unsated voracity, the mighty creatures of monstrous shape and hideous aspect, the habitants of land and water, whose appalling aspects fortunately no longer affright the world.

Besides the pictures thus drawn to illustrate man as hunter and warrior, one is made familiar with primitive man in home-life, his habits of thrift and industry, the unwritten laws for mutual protection and advantage, his marriage and burial ceremonies, feasts, festivals and athletic contests, and the warlike life is exhibited by descriptions of the gathering of clans, tests of strength and val-r, how chieftainships were bestowed and honors were attained.

In short, "The Story of Man" is a grand book of marvels, and in its pages one finds such a mass of the most wonderful events described, and into its thrilling pages is gathered so vast an array of facts about those ancient and mysterious matters, that the reader's great admiration is excited, and he acquires grander and nobler conceptions of the history and vicissitudes of his race.

"The Story of Man" is a book that every family ought to have.

JENNIE WILEY AND HER PARAMOUR.

Bank Gets Two Years for the Ruining of Little Pearl Beekman.

Jennie Wiley, the downfallen white woman, and Samuel Beekman, her negro paramour, were sentenced, Saturday, in the Union county court at Elizabeth, to ten years apiece in State prison, for beating the negro's six-year-old daughter Pearl to death.

Jennie Wiley was greatly affected by the sentence, and the officers were obliged to support her to keep her from falling.

Beekman showed anger, and threatened vengeance to the counsel when they were removing him from the court room.

Jimmy Had a Party, and They All Were There.

The Crescent League nine not had a party on Quality Hill, Fanwood, Saturday afternoon. The invitations read from 2 till 6 p. m., and were signed "James McGee." The host, however, was Col. Col James Moore of Elizabeth. Among those present were Masters Hatfield and Blanchard Forsyth, jr., of Plainfield; Master Jean De Forest Voorhees, of Scherwood; Miss Annie Willis O'Borne, Chesmore Willis, and Robert Willis, of Elizabeth.

Of the Fanwood guests it is a question as to who was the belle of the party. Honors seemed to be easy between the Misses Harriet Dwyer, Madeline Bacon, Gracie McKee, Mary Woolcott Ethel Kyte, Mary Briggs, Isabelle Hamlin, Muriel Robinson, and Little Lillie Fargher, F

"They're a bright lot of fellows," said the salesman. "We get our best ideas from them."

Now what do you suppose he meant? You could never guess. I'll give you a little pointer as the riddle is so hard; the salesman presides over the necktie department of our most fashionable haberdashery. But even with that tip you won't be able to solve the problem. I'll tell you: he referred to the dudes. Fancy getting an idea from a dude! It is like asking alms from Astarte, one would say. But the salesman thought differently.

"These fellows are not the brainless idiots they're supposed to be," he continued. "Perhaps it's the kind of people who scrub the brain wrongly; and yet I'll bet that if you'd seen the young fellow who was in here a minute ago you'd have unhesitatingly pronounced him a dude of the first water.

"I did size him up that way, and I've been willing to lay odds that if an idea struck him it would fracture his skull; that is if it hit him anywhere in that region."

"That's where you're mistaken," rejoined the salesman. "That young man has been all over the world, and though I don't suppose he knows much about the future of Europe or the social and political conditions existing in various parts of Europe, he has a vast fund of information on the subject of dress that interested him. He can tell you down to the smallest detail how the fashions a la mode de Paris differ from the capital dress. When he or any other man of the class talks to me, I listen with both ears, and the ideas embodied in the goods you see in the window have come from such a conversation. Such a man knows not only what is correct in dress, but he knows the reason which underlies the style, and when he says it is reason if one can get down to it. We don't cherish the idea that your true man of fashion is an idiot, he's as a rule pretty much the reverse.

"But the fellow who just went out of the store was over-dressed. How did you account for it then?"

"He wasn't. I will pardon the contradiction, for I had a certain idea of elegance and efficiency which made you think so. It gave his clothes an air of finish which does not always come to pass. It is easy to avoid. But that's his misfortune, not his fault. It's due to the fact that he either was given over to frivolous and his father to the unwise, extravagance or that he had a great deal more money than taste or a certain grand occasion. So successful was the first attempt that Miss Bates has since found all that she could do in the line of trimming houses for grand entertainments.

IN FASHION'S WORLD.

Dark Grays and Steel in the Place of Light Down Tints.

A Model Street Gown—Hats That Are to Be Fashionable—Some Fine Trimmings—A New Version of the Latter Hat Now to Be Trimming.

[COPYRIGHT, 1891.]

If any light gray was the fashion last spring, dark gray is the fashion now.

If the gray is as dark and as blue in tint that it seems almost like steel color, so much the more fashionable does it become.

Dress yourself dressed in a gown like this: A long, plain habit skirt of dark gray, bronze or steel color, set on closely about your figure that you are walking as if a parties were drawn about you. The basis of the skirt is very full and is trained just sufficiently to sweep slightly upon the ground. The skirt is lined with silk and rustles as you walk. For a waist, you have a long-tailed, coat-like bodice of the same, bound with a jaket set on upon the lapels. The vest is dark gray velvet of the color of the groundwork of the coat, and there is a tall standing collar with a steel clasp upon it. Steel buttons are used upon the front of the vest.

Your hat is very dark gray felt, with a puffing of black velvet around it and black velvet strings. Gray bows and gray dove wings are used for trimmings. Gray gloves, stitched with black, are right.

Is not that a pretty gown and is it not becoming to you, no matter what your style may be?

Perhaps you may not care for the brown. Many ladies do not, especially if they are inclined to stoutness. In that case, you will get plain, gray cloth, and trim the cuffs, collar and yoke with steel passementerie, allowing a band or two of the same around the foot of the skirt.

Such garments as these are complete in themselves, and do not require the long fashionable feather boa, and, indeed, such a dress looks better without one. The boa is worn only for ornament, and is fluffy and full of graceless way, which, though pretty, becoming and graceful, is not serviceable when wealth is down in a pocket-book. one should consider the completeness of one's toilet before adding the feather ornament and should decide whether or not the gown is more fashionable in effect without it.

The plain, tailor-made gowns, tightfitting at the waist, without ruffles or flounces upon the bodice, and untrimmed save by passementerie, galoon or braiding, are the ones which call for the boa, which has then a remarkably pretty effect down about the neck, and hanging down the front, giving the appearance of a feather trimmed gown.

Hats are the same as are being worn this fall. They are nearly all very small and flat, so that a woman can be quite falls in love with them. It is a treat to stand in front of the millinery windows and look upon the different shapes, and, so pretty do they all seem, that the question of deciding which one to buy is a most perplexing one.

There are seasons when one exclaims "How ugly!" when one first sees the fashions, but this year one exclaims: "How pretty, how lovely! How graceful!" And one straightway falls to wondering which of the exceedingly pretty varieties are to be chosen for one's own individual wear.

The black felt hat seems to be in our midst. It has reappeared for the season in felt. It is exactly the same shape as the straw hat of black and is reproduced in felt of all colors.

A sailor hat is a sailor hat still—no matter what the material may be. The crown may be higher or it may be lower than that of the sailor hat which is displayed next to it. Or the brim may be broad or it may be a mere rim. But it is a sailor still and is bound to hold its own.

The most fashionable sailor shape for autumn wear is a large flat brim and a narrow in the brim. It comes in so many colors that you can get one exactly to suit your own peculiar dress, and can thus, at small expense, have a very pretty hat to match one's fall suit.

Supposing you have selected a fall gown of brown cloth and brown velvet. Get them in brown and put around the brim several broad folds of the velvet. Do not turn the brim up quite flat, but rather wrap it around, as if it were a piece of tolle that you were twisting around the brim, and have the ends fall flat at the back, a little to the left, and then in that very same spot put a cluster of pompons. Are the clasps of fall hats with six or eight pompons in it, and have them stand well up over the top of the crown.

Many women do not care for the common shaped hats, for the reason that they are common, and, they prefer to select a style which can be made more individual by trimming and which is not so easily duplicated.

The scoop bonnet is a favorite, because it is generally becoming and is so shaped that it does not look a bonnet is has the youthful appearance of a round hat.

The distinctive feature of the scoop bonnet is that it has no brim at all, and that it lies perfectly flat upon the front of the head, and is scooped from behind. This gives a very nice chance for a becoming face trimming.

Women who have regular features find the scoop bonnet very becoming, if worn perfectly with a standing bow, which is placed on the front of the bonnet in the most upright, aggressive manner possible. Around the edge of the bonnet there must be a heavy raching of some kind of velvet, and at the back there is an upright bow. This makes a very pretty hat, and one which will probably be fashionable all winter.

gown, as if she had tried to outdress her guests.

Thename gown in two shades of blue is quite as pretty, and by some it is by color is not as dressy in effect and makes an admirable luncheon gown.

Have you seen Agnes Huntington's Russian cloak? It is white crepe de chine, lined with blue, and it has a hood. It is so voluminous that when Miss Huntington throws one end of it in great folds over her left shoulder, the cloak hardly falls below the waist. Miss Huntington must rather it up as she wants to, however, for she could have ordered cloaks of the same description for the ball room when the dance is over.

Brief Sketch of the Career of the Recent-ly Deceased Statesman.

THE BEST OF CHILDREN'S MAGAZINES.

The Publishers of St. Nicholas announce the most attractive programme for 1892 ever presented to the children, on offering to send a sample copy, free of charge, to "Chimmie Fadden" and any friends who may not be familiar with the merits of the famous young people's magazine.

Certainly if that question is up for discussion, the publishers of St. Nicholas are in the right case. From its first number, which was the initial publication in America of the English world, and the peculiar of the most famous illustrators, have received a hearty welcome. Longfellow, Bryant, Thomas Bailey Aldrich, Whittier, Bret Harte, Howard Taylor, Mrs. Hodgson Burnett, Donald G. Mitchell, George MacDonald, Mrs. Oliphant, Frances Hodgson Burnett, Susan Coolidge, Lucretia P. Hale, and the late Rose Terry Cooke, have been among the well-known writers who have contributed to its pages. From its first number, in November, 1873, to the present time, Mary Mapes Dodge has been its editor. Everything in it is illustrated.

In 1892

there are to be serial stories by Brander Matthews, Lieutenant Robert E. Peary (the author of that charming book, "Mar-ie-ta and Her Papa"), Laura E. Richards, Edward Bellamy, Elizabeth R. Gabyl, (the author of "Davy and the Goblin"), Joel Chandler Harris, Thomas Nelson Page, Mary E. Wilkins, Margaret Sidney, Cousin Tommy, General O. O. Howard, and many others, with stories of travel and adventure by J. T. Trowbridge and Elizabeth Robbins. Short stories and articles by Edward Everett Hale, Rossiter Johnson, Frank R. Stockton, Noah Brooks, Sarah Orne Jewett, Donald G. Mitchell, George MacDonald, Mrs. Oliphant, Frances Hodgson Burnett, Susan Coolidge, Lucretia P. Hale, Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge, and the late Rose Terry Cooke. Mrs. Dodge will be short stories by Thomas Nelson Page, Mary E. Wilkins, Margaret Sidney, Cousin Tommy, General O. O. Howard, SMOKE IS ITS VICTIM.

A Device to Consume Smoke and Save Fuel on Engines.

It Is the Invention of an Old Locomotive Engineer and Is Said to Be Successful—How the Results Are Attained.

A noteworthy invention is the smoke consumer patented by A. B. Carper and placed in practical operation by a Chicago railway, says the Tribune of that city.

The prime objects secured by the Carper device are greater economy in the consumption of fuel, the entire abolition of the smoke nuisance, the reduction of the back pressure on pistons to the lowest minimum, reducing the vibration on flues, and making the locomotive available for an incandescent electric lighting system.

That portion of the locomotive known as the extension front, extending from the flue sheet to the cast front door, is divided into two compartments by a light vertical partition crossing entirely at right angles. Just forward of the exhaust pipe, thus confining all the heated gases, exhaust steam, etc., in the compartment next to the flue sheet, and having direct communication to the fire

box. No change is made in this compartment except that the ips on the inside of the exhaust pipe are taken out. The exhaust opening is left full open to the area of opening in the saddle casting, the stack and saddle are taken off, and the stack opening increased to twenty inches in diameter. There is placed over the exhaust and lifting pipe, twelve inches at the bottom and end, tapering to fifteen at the top and forty inches high, a sheet iron pipe. This pipe, twenty inches in diameter, sets over that resting on top of the extension front. Over it is set the ordinary dome casting. This casting is perforated with 3,000 one-sixteenth inch holes extending half around the front side of the casting. On the inside of the casting, directly in front of the fifty-two feet of two-inch brass pipe.

The pump or injector forces the water through the pipes, of which there are two down through the center and out at the side of the exterior front through the check into the boiler. The water coming from the injector to the through brass pipes surrounded with the exhaust steam and hot gases, takes up the units of heat that would be otherwise wasted and the water goes into the boiler above boiling point, or about 210 degrees of heat.

The forward compartment of the extension front is used as a receptacle for the mechanism by which the draught is secured and power furnished to run the dynamo. In this compartment is located a pressure blower of such position as to admit of free access to the fire of the blast. The pressure blower is connected by direct friction to a small six-horse-and-power electric engine, and is also connected direct by an air pipe extending from the front end of the body resting in the ash pan. The ash pan and dumpers having asbestos joints and shutting firmly make the ash pan air tight. The fire box back and sides are made of the usual thickness, but having down through the perforations, is heated to a high temperature by exhaust steam and heated gases. The result is by this method a fire is fanned by a constant blast of pure heat oxygen of seven-tenths pressure into the air is made hot by the heat that would be otherwise wasted. A portion of this hot air is conducted through the open door, the air pipe through the ash pan, up through the fuel and is forced into the flame from the back of the fire box through the fine sheet. Circling the fire-box door are innumerable small holes or air jets. This hot oxygen rushing with such force forms a gas, completes the combustion, and prevents all smoke whether the engine is working or shut off, whether there is a light or heavy fire, and prevents gases from passing out the fire-box door. By means of the pipe the fire-box is converted into a gas retort, consuming those elements of fuel and carbonic oxide that would otherwise pass off in smoke.

Danger of Indiscriminate Dragging.

A contributor to the Medical Journal, New York, relates the following case of antipyrine poisoning, as it seems to him quite unique and indicates the recklessness of many of our people in prescribing drugstuffs: The patient, a woman of about thirty years of age, went to a drug store in search of relief for a bad headache, asked the clerk for something to cure what he pronounced the grip. He sold her a box of pills, told her to take half of it on her return home and, after waiting a half hour, to take the remainder. In about three hours, awaking after taking the first dose she became weak and fell on the sofa in a comatose condition. Her friends found her pulse were eyanotic, her pulse small, not to be felt under the left clavicle, and she ceased breathing; in fact for a short time she appeared dead. When she did come to her pulse and respiration were of the character of severe shock—her respirations were comparatively slow and deep, during which time she suffered much.

A Diminutive Island.

There is a baby in Chester Pa., whose dimensions size may be inferred from the fact that its scrotum is about the thickness of an ordinary lead pencil. Nevertheless, it is thriving and might in time become president of the United States were it not of the wrong sex.

Field of the Forty Footsteps.

Just back of the British museum, London, King's college has recently adapted little patch of ground known in tradition as the Field of the Forty Footsteps. It is the only open space in the place says that two brothers, in the time of the duke of Monmouth's rebellion, had a desperate duel there and engaged each other in deadly combat. Both were killed, and forty impressions of their feet remained on the field for many years, not a blade of grass growing in any of the indentations.

CHOOSING A FIELD DOG.

Valuable Tips from Forest and Stream's Kennel Edition.

Characteristics of the Irish, English and Gordon Setters—Comparing the Pointer to the Setter—Certain Points That Should Be Considered.

[COPYRIGHT, 1891.]

During the past ten years a great change is apparent in the habits of our business men. The daily grind for the almighty dollar still goes on, but there are becoming wiser in their generation and know now than to live out their allotted span of life they must needs indulge in some form of relaxation, and good books be may feel prone, and a well-bred dog of handsome form costs no more to keep than a scrub. The dogs in the field that the sportsman treasures as the pleasantest and most successful are those to which a good dog's education has largely contributed. Therefore I advise the sportsman who is contemplating a trip to the fields to purchase one from a reputed kennel and a dog possessing blood within it of generations that has been prominent in field trials and the field. Choose a healthy dog, bright in eye and free from skin diseases, and one by his actions showing no disposition to lazyness. A lazy dog, like a lazy man, will never do work, and a seven-dollar mixed dog is the most serviceable type, and either in a pointer or English setter a dog weighing between forty-five and fifty-five pounds will be found the best. They are capable of more prolonged exertion than the larger or smaller. Good dogs like good horses come in all shapes. There are, however, certain points to be remembered in choosing your dog. Avoid a big chest with heavy shoulders; the chest should be moderately narrow and deep with well-sprung ribs. A long, strong body, a good strong loin and well-turned stifles. From the foregoing the reader will gather that either a pointer or an English setter will suit nearly every requirement, and as a guide to intending purchasers it may not be out of place to name a few of the more important kennels whose owners have done so much by judicious selections, competent training and a great outlay of money to bring pointers and setters to the front. The principal pointer breeders are Westminster Kennel club, Babylon, L. I.; Rempstead Farm kennels, Hempstead, L. I.; Charlottesville kennels, Charlottesville, Va.; Graphic kennels, Netherwood, N. J.; Charles Heath, Newark, N. J., and Brynmawr kennels, Philadelphia, Pa. The principal breeders of English setters are Blue Ridge kennels, Sperryville, Va.; J. M. Avent, Hickory Valley, Tenn.; Rockingham kennel, New York city; J. Sheily Hudson, Covington, Ky.; Mount Washington kennels, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Elm's kennels, St. Paul, Minn., and many other smaller breeders whose names would fill columns. The price for a well broken pup from these kennels ranges from $20 to $100, though there are certain strains from field trial winners, whose products cost as high as $500, but for ordinary field purposes the smaller priced is just as good.

IRISH SETTER MOLLIE RAYE.

In America at least, have not received that care in breeding and training that will entitle them to the consideration of first-class sportsmen. But perhaps a brief description of the Irish and Gordon setter would not be out of place. For distinctive type Graphic rightly considers the Irish setter is not surpassed by any other breed, and the well-bred specimens possess a degree of elegance and symmetry of form that cannot be surpassed. The breed has not been well represented in the field, but the Irishman, true to his name, is a dashing performer in the field, for he (Hickory Valley, Tenn., Rockingham) has a strong disposition the cause of his being left by trainers. This fifld is a most tractable English setter the easier animal to handle. However, the Irish setter has failed of popularity for the right order, and there are many very practical sportsmen who keep them for this purpose. In the English field trials for the spring, we find that Rev. O'Callaghan's young Irish setter, Coleraine, won several events against other breeds, and sportsmen generally in England hold them in high esteem. The Irish setter is after cloth of American in reputation formed with the object of bringing this handsome breed into prominence. In the English field trials for this breed exclusively will be held at High Point, N. C., which is expected will serve to bring the Irish setter, that with his rich red mahogany color is one of the handsomest breeds of dogs living, more prominently to the consideration of American sportsmen. The Gordon, or black and tan setter, is also a handsome animal, but built on heavier lines than either of the other breeds of setters.

Having touched two breeds belongs as now to a consideration of the most important breeds of sporting dogs the pointer. The pointer has been improved during the past two years by careful breeding with a view to good field form, and their leading being in the hands of energetic sportsmen, they are fast becoming almost as popular as the English setter. For a year at the field trials they demonstrated their ability in several casts to outrange and outpoint their close coated cousins. Sportsmen have generally complained that the pointer is reserved and lacks "style." Apart from a stylish, snappy field worker, begins to lag and potter round in his work, requiring a lengthened rest before he can recuperate and regain his ardor.

Taking the two breeds as a whole, the setter is claimed to be more dashing, quicker and freer ranger in his work, and in the end will endure more fatigue and keep his nose longer than the pointer. Pointers, on the other hand, claim that he is more easily trained and remembers what he is taught, and after the hand is to be more reserved, and after the hand is to be more reserved, and after the hand is to be more reserved

LOOK AT YOUR TICKET.

At the head of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST will be found the two respective tickets entitled to the suffrages of the citizens of Plainfield at the approaching city election, Dec. 1. Those on the "Citizens' Ticket" are the names of Democrats with two exceptions, Messrs. S. G. Smith and D. S. Roberts. Vote the "Citizens' Ticket."

DON'T BOND THE CITY.

It will be well for the voters of Plainfield to remember the misfortunes of the cities of Elizabeth and Rahway in the matter of bonded debt. The two cities have had a trial of bonding, which proved a curse to them. Plainfield has the proud record of having no bonded debt, and it is out of the question, unless the people, by their suffrages, shall place the ruinous policy of affairs in the hands of a body of men who would not hesitate to add one cent to the present city debt. Should the —Let disbelievers in spontaneous combustion scoff no longer. Fire broke out in Plainfield's engine house at 3 o'clock Sunday morning to find his house filled with smoke, and in danger of burning up. Flame had ignited a bed, and the oily rags thrown into a corner of the cellar Saturday afternoon. A few buckets of water put out the fire.

—The firm of Hoffman & Duckworth, who were burned out by the late fire at Clinton, has been dissolved. Mr. Hoffman retiring. The new firm will consist of R. Duckworth, E. T. Mohr and Joseph Duckworth, Jr., of Plainfield, and will be known as R. Duckworth & Co. They have opened temporary quarters in the Clinton house block.

—The bowling field, once so plentiful in this State, seems to have disappeared entirely. In seeking for a cause the ornithologists claim that forest fires destroy the seeds and other useful nesting places. As the birds are the best friends of man, and as they must have nesting places, it would seem only common sense to stop the ruthless destruction of trees.

—The monthly meeting of the Woman's Branch Alliance of the Unitarian church was held yesterday. Interesting papers were presented by Mrs. Dr. Hall and Mrs. J. O. Osgood, the subject of each being the Sunday-school. An animated conversation on the questions suggested by the subject followed. It for the papers to be read at the next meeting is, the "Ethics of Living."

—The removal of all the fences on the west side of Grove avenue between Prospect place up to Mercer avenue has greatly beautified the, neighborhood. Now that the days are past when cows and horses defiled whither they listed in the streets, there is no reason why the ugly fences should not be generally abolished—excepting, of course, places where the manure doesn't cost a cent.

—An innocent turkey was a disturber of slumbers along East Fifth street last night. A colored man who had been sent to deliver a turkey left it in the wrong house, and at a late hour aroused people all along the block seeking to get the jaunty bird and hunting for the owner. He had forgotten what house he left it at, and would not be satisfied except with a personal inspection of all the women, to decide which one it was he had given it to. He finally left it at the wrong house, promised the owner of the bird to buy a fowl to replace the missing one.

A. H. Lewis, J. F. Hubbard and G. H. Babcock have been appointed a committee to secure publication headquarters for the Seventh-Day Baptist denomination.

Fred H. Martin has rented his house on East Fifth street to A. G. Hosier for the winter, and will leave town, with his family, Dec. 1, for a season at Hotel Eggington, Long Beach.

Prominent guests at the annual banquet of the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York, at Delmonico's, Tuesday evening, were W. Wallace Howland, John W. Murray, and Augustus D Shepard.

The Rev. J. B. Cleaver has found, there is no place like Plainfield. It is said that he is only waiting for a respectable offer for his place near Bound Brook when he will sell out and return to this city.

The Catholic Young Men's Lyceum will open the new club-house Dec. 16, when a fine entertainment will be provided. Gov. Abbett will attend. The speaker of the occasion will be Hon. E. Gourley, prosecutor of Passaic county.

Robert P. Wilder, the well-known missionary worker, brother of William Wilder of this city, is lying seriously ill of neuralgia of the stomach at Bombay, India. He has work there among the college students soliciting reerdita to go with him to India.

Louis Cook, cousin of Messrs. A. D. and H. Cook, of this city, has taken up his home in Bound Brook, Monday. He was the owner of extensive lumber interests in that town, and the possessor of much property, real and personal.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. E Austin of Warrenville, Somerset county, will celebrate their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary on Christmas day, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Vermeule, 70 Dunellen street. Mrs. Austin is a sister of Mr. Vermeule.

Mr. and Mrs William Rogers Chapman, of Fordham Heights, will give a large musicale on Saturday evening. Among those who will appear are Miss Hattie Cary, Miss Dora Miss Ines Carusi and Miss Olive Fremstad. Mr. Chapman is the leader of the Metropola of this city.

A social gathering of the members of Mrs. M. C. Dodding's Sunday-school class took place Friday afternoon at her home, 7 Elmwood place. A pleasant afternoon was spent, with refreshments, etc., after which refreshments were served. Miss Laura J. Runyon and Miss May E. Howlett assisted in the entertainment.

A very enjoyable evening sociable was held at the residence of A. B. Carpenter, East Front street, Friday night. About fifty guests were present, among the number of Mercury Wheelmen who were guests of George H. Rockafellow. The evening passed most charmingly, with music, dancing and refreshments. A feature of the event was the piano playing of Miss Carrie Ellis.

The artiste, twenty in number, having studios in the Spaulding building, corner of Fifteenth street and Fifth avenue, gave a well-attended studio reception Saturday afternoon and evening. Among the visitors are those of George Hendrik Smithers, of this city, William Bradford, Thomas B. Craig, J. Wells Champney, Granville Perkins, Agnes D. Abbott, and H. Douglas Hamilton and L. Faber.

The Rev. Robert Lowry's latest service of scripture and song, has just been issued. It is a christmas service called "The Lord's Anointed," and contains a solo and quartette "Murmuring Winds," and seven choruses the music of all of which will rank high among even the sweetest and most original creations of the author of "Shall We Gather at the River." The choruses are entitled "Welcome," "Behold how Full," "Unto Us," "Behold the Dayspring," and "Hosts for the Lord's Anointed."

A delightful "song dinner was served at the Crescent avenue church on Saturday night. It was the first musical dinner yet held, and was a complete success. Covers were laid for 75 and 150 or 200 persons began. Dinner was served at a large horseshoe-shaped table, and was a striking example of what the ship steward can do. In the absence of proprietor Sparks, who was kept away by a death in the family, first vice-president Rowland Cox presided. Speeches were made by Rev. George Gilbert, H. Douglas Mr Peckham of Westfield, S. St. J. Mc-Cutchen, and Mr. Ritchie of Trenton, father-in-law of Mr. Fisk.

The Next Play at Music Hall

"A Fair Rebel", Harry P. Mawson's picturesque drama of the war for the Union, plays at Music Hall next Saturday evening, with its own scenery and the original New York company.

A glance of promise renders the play interesting to all classes. Mr. Mawson having happily struck the keynote of his drama with that touch of nature which makes the whole world kin. Highly acceptable is the acting. Miss Fannie Gillette does wonders for the character of Claudette Mondelh, the pretty Rebel. Edward B. Emery is most meritorious as the loyal soldier in the part of Col. Ezra Mason, who loses his young heart while battling for the old flag. Miss Belle Bucklin plays in lighter vein, singing and acting delightfully with banjo solos and fetching songs, which she knows how to sing. Well filled in is the cast by W. E. Kelt as Captain Rodney Dare, Dan Lyons as a crippled soldierly surgeon, and Maurice Fyke in the double part of a confederate major and trooper.

A Christmas Help.

L. S. Plant & Co's new announcement on page two, is devoted to Holiday specialties, and in it express a hope that it may prove a help in making up your lists for Christmas presentations. From the many items enumerated, we think every reader of THE CONSTITUTION DAILY will be able to find just the things with which to make all their friends happy on the festive morn of Christmas.

Mass Meeting.

A meeting of the citizens of Plainfield will be held at Music Hall on Friday evening, the 27th inst.

Prominent speakers will make addresses upon the issues which, irrespective of party, divide the people of Plainfield.

Every one wishing to hear a discussion of matters vital to the interests of the city, are respectfully invited to attend.

Children Cry for Fitcher's Castoria.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

FALSE ACCUSATIONS REFUTED.

And Mr. Spangenberg Presents the Good Issues of the Coming Election, With Much Force.

The interview with Councilman Spangenberg, published in THE PRESS of Thursday—in which he stated that E. R. Pope was responsible for the deal of last year when a Democrat was chosen as President of the Council for the sake of making J. B. Coward clerk, and told of other very interesting matters of public interest—created so much general excitement and was so greatly in demand that hundreds of extra copies of the paper were sold, therefore a Press reporter was assigned yesterday to secure another bit of history from him.

At first Mr. Spangenberg refused, as before, to say anything for publication. But when his attention was called to the falsehoods and misrepresentations of the charges made by his enemies, which he had not seen, he said:

"That article regarding the sewer contract, is a lie of whole cloth. It reads as if three arbitrators are to be chosen, one of which is to represent the city and the other two the Low company. I spoke in the senate and in the Low contract the people may know the whole truth:

In case the said City of Plainfield shall become desirous of purchasing said sewer system and sewers, it may do so at the expiration of ten years from the time said sewer or sewers works are completed by giving notice to such intention in writing six months before the expiration of said ten years, and in like manner at the expiration of any subsequent period of ten years. In case the parties cannot agree upon prices and terms of payment for a purchase and sale, the same shall be fixed by arbitration—two arbitrators to be chosen as aforesaid, and in case of their inability to agree they to name a fifth arbitrator, the decision of a majority of the five arbitrators to be binding on both parties and the sale to be consummated in ninety days after such decision and award.

I don't propose to pay any further attention to these lying articles that appear from time to time, as they are not worthy of notice. I could refute them all, but shall leave the public to judge from the lying article in the paper, and the character of the author of them is.

The "Big Six" has been accused of "star-chamber" proceedings in regard to the water and sewer contracts. The accusation is false!

The water committee invited all the council to discuss the water and sewer contracts, and the majority refused, and the minority fought the majority—the "Big Six"—like cats and dogs, opposing these contracts. I make up my mind then and there that day, to fight single-handed in the interest of the Plainfield Water Supply company and did not want another company to come in. Now all these persons in the minority say they don't want to bond the city, but I ask them, how are they going to get the sewer without bonding the city? We cannot get a sewer company to put in a sewer without water, as the former would be at the mercy of the latter as to the price to be charged for feeding the sewer.

The two great issues for the people to decide in the next election are: Do you want the interests of Plainfield and Elizabeth to rule the city, the State, and run their monopolies for their pecuniary benefit? Or will you support the six gentlemen that have fought for the majority of the people in the city's interest? If you wish to support the former, then vote the Republican ticket. If not, then vote the Citizens' ticket, which is supported by the people irrespective of party politics.

I mention a few things for the people to think about. Who stopped the criminal waste of the taxpayer's money on the street? Who put in the Gamewell fire alarm? Who bought the hose carriage? Who made the low price for the electric light contract? Who obtained the lights for the council chamber free of charge? Who stopped buying sand to cart on the streets at $1. per load, and four dollars to cart it?

The 'Big Six".

The sewer committee can show just where every dollar has been expended. Whereas, in 1889 the street pay-roll book shows no name entered on it for nine month

MRS. PARTRIDGE WINS HER SUIT.

He Was a Gay Deceiver and Aroused the Ire of Mrs. Partridge Who Was Another's Wife.

The City Court jury of Brooklyn, in the suit of Mrs. Matilda Partridge for $10,000 damages for breach of promise of marriage against Andrew J. Partridge, today, brought in a verdict of $800 damages in favor of the plaintiff. The first witness Friday was the defendant.

He was asked to explain his leaving his family for four months and coming to this city to live when his son was a baby, and was asked if one of the reasons was the fact that he ship did not leave her husband and come here to live. He said "No." He never heard that the woman afterward spoke to her husband and a child was given and that she went back to live with him, or that the woman wrote to his wife offering to return the silver that he took with him when he left home. He said he was asked if he was ever a Baptist minister. He said "No."

Mrs. Partridge took the stand and said the story of the affair since it it to New Jersey was told to her by his daughter, and she repeated the charges in detail. She said that Jersey City was the first place she stayed there, though he swore on the stand the day before that he was only forty-nine. Mrs. Joyce denied the truth of Mrs. Partridge's testimony and said she knew nothing of her father's visits to Plainfield. The jury retired at 12:15 p. m. and brought in a verdict in about two hours.

TO OPEN PEACE STREET.

At Least Decisive Action in Terms to Consummate the Project.

The project to open Peace street to the brook and extend it into the borough is at last going to be pushed to completion. The Plainfield common council and North Plainfield township committee both met Monday and considered the matter. The Plainfield council unanimously adopted a resolution to grant the petition to open the new thoroughfare, and appointed William C. Ayres, William M. Bradford and Edward Hetfield commissioners to assess benefits and damages.

At the North Plainfield meeting, Messrs. Runyon and Smith of the township committee were present. Messrs. Doty, Horton, Fairchild, Silvers, Bird, Utzinger, Goodwin, Long and Gaskill all spoke in favor of the project. Further consideration and the appointment of commissioners were postponed for one week.

Rubbish-Heap Bad Things in Cellars.

Fire started in a heap of rubbish in a wood-bin in the cellar of Mr. Middledith's house at Park avenue and Ninth street, at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon, and the fire department turned out in response to an alarm rung in from box 13. The flames were confined to the cellar and one room overhead, and were soon extinguished by the firemen with about $200. The gas meter, which was directly above the wood-bin, was burned away, and the house was filled with suffocating gas and smoke, and Mrs. Middledith was greatly hampered in their work. There was considerable needless delay in sending in an alarm. Two minutes after one could be had in the house across the street from a Water Supply company's hydrant. The hydrant stream was quickly procured, and was the most serviceable and more easily hampered of the two.

THE WAGON TURNED A SOMERSAULT.

But Luckily None of Its Three Occupants Were Injured.

J. F. MacDonald, William H. Shotwell and Nelson Runyon had an unpleasant accident, at 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon. They were out driving, looking after some property belonging to the Latimer estate, on South avenue, near the Netherwood station. They had just reached the top of the hill leading to Westfield when the neck-yoke broke, letting the wagon-pole fall to the ground. The gentle but spirited team of Hambletonians were crowded down hill by the weight, at rapid speed; and Mr. MacDonald, who was driving, to avoid a runaway ran the team into a tan-acre field alongside the road. The pole struck an obstruction on the ground, and the wagon and its occupants were thrown in a complete somersault through the air. The team broke loose from the wreck, ran all the field, and started out of it for the road way. Mr. MacDonald made a grab for the trailing reins, but missed them. The horses ran against a telephone pole and were captured unhurt. Mr. Shotwell was the only one of the party injured, and he only slightly. He was indignant to find in the New York World on the next morning the statement that he was fatally hurt. The only one who supposed so was the imaginative scribe who sent the exaggerated despatch. The wagon was almost unsightly wreck.

ROSEVILLE LED ALL THE WAY.

The Crescents Drop Their First Game in the Championship Series.

Plainfield played its first game in the American Bowling union Friday night at Roseville, and lost by a margin of 90 pins. The Rosevilles started with a big lead, and the Crescents never got near them except in the third frame, when they were six pins behind. VanBenthuysen distinguished himself by making never a strike. With his six spares, his score was only 179, the lowest of the evening. It must not be lo accustomed to put up. The score:

CAMERA PRIZE WINNERS.

Interesting Exhibition a Views by Local Amateur Photographers.

The fourth annual exhibition of the Plainfield Camera club opened Saturday night, at the club rooms, and will continue through Dec. 5. A charming collection of views has been artistically arranged by the various exhibitors, and a delightful evening may be spent in examining them.

The committee on prizes—Messrs. Guillermo Thorn, William Montfort and Franklin Smith—have made the following awards:

Landscapes—First prize, Harold Serrell ("The Bridge"). Second, Curtis Gotthelf ("The Old Mill").

Portraits—First prize, J. Harvey Doane (Mother and child). Second, Harold Serrell (Portrait).

Marines—First prize, Harold Serrell, Second, C. Evans ("Sunset on the Coast").

Interiors—First and second prizes, George H. Babcock.

Animals—First and second prizes, C. S. Gotthelf ("Is the Spoils" and "Cheering the Rag"). Composition and groups—First prize, J. Harvey Doane ("Boys Digging in Cedar Brook"). Second, Harold Serrell ("Luncheon on the Mountain").

Instantaneous work—First prize, C. S. Gotthelf ("The Consequences"). Second, Harold Serrell ("The Dazzle").

Hand camera work—First prize, Harold Serrell. Second, Chandler Evans.

G. Harry Squires received first honorable mention for his photo-engravings.

Harry Coward, John E. Stewart and T. E. Hazell deserve great credit for their displays, which would probably have won prizes had they been entered in time.

F. Hatfield has a fine sample of "all night work". The negative was a flash-light, and the picture was printed by lamp-light.

There are excellent examples of all styles of work.

The Produce Company Incorporated.

The Plainfield Produce company filed articles of incorporation Friday at Elizabeth, with the clerk of Union county. The business will be carried on at Plainfield, with a capital of $25,000. The incorporators and stockholders are William B. Potter, Somerville; Aaron D. Thompson and Robert E. Elder of Plainfield.

The New Sanitarium.

Ground is broken and work has already commenced on the Brookside Sanitarium building, that J. H. Coudry, M. D., T. B. Hazell, M. D., and T. S. Burr are erecting on somerset street, nearly opposite the entrance to Johnston's Drive. The building is to be devoted to the most modern treatment with the best of nursing and medical attendance for those suffering from brain or other troubles. The owners have formed a company and filed articles of incorporation.

The architect of the building is A. L. C. Marsh who is striving rapidly to push the work and the excellence of the most employed and most satisfactory of architects whose works grace Plainfield. The building is to cost about $30,000 and will be completed early in April 1892.

At Rest.

The funeral services held over the remains of the late Anna E. Thaworth, Wednesday last week, were very beautiful and impressive. Friends and relatives of the deceased thronged the residence on East Seventh street to overflowing. The body reposed in a handsome white velvet casket, about which were heaped roses, lilies of the valley, and other rare flowers, entwined with the green of the smilax, in great profusion. The casket rested on a bank of chrysanthemums, and the mantel, table and walls were in abundance of magnificent flowers all about the room. A host of Loyal fellow, Miss Thaworth's favorite pastor, had a wreath of roses near the casket. The service was opened by the singing of that beautiful hymn, "Lead, Kindly Light," by a special choir consisting of Mrs. T. K. Myers, Miss Holmes, E. E. Runyon, and Robert Gorton, who also sang "Life Has Many Trials", and that sweetly soothing hymn, "Gathering Home". The Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis read pastoral selections and passages of Scripture which had been favorites of the departed, and spoke feelingly of her lovely qualities and Christian womanliness of character. The Rev. Dr. D. J. Tertes led in prayer.

Interment was made in Hillside cemetery, where the Rev. Mr. Deland, of Westerly, R. I., read the burial service. The pall-bearers were Joseph H. Thaworth, T. Titsworth and George B. Titsworth, brothers of the deceased, and David E. Titsworth, John D. Titsworth, and the Rev. Brooks Titsworth of Hillside.

Runaway Horses Created Excitement.

John have you seen that woman lately? Why, she's married again." "Married again! Why, I thought she was married before." That woman plaiting grapes for Rowe's Wine. "Just see how it's improved in flavor since I used it; the wine was good before to be sure, but now it is the very best I ever tasted in the World." Rowe's Wine of Health in large bottles and bottled. Rowe's Wine is pure and unadulterated. Sold by druggists.

"ESMERALDA."

Admirable Performances of Mrs. Burnett's Play, by Clever Plainfield Amateurs.

(From THE PRESS of November 21.)

SUPREME SUCCESS was the verdict given by the audience in a most evening concerning the production of "Esmeralda" by the Union County Country Club. The play was filled to overflowing with representative people, who greatly enjoyed the amateur theatrical performance.

Mrs. Burnett's four-act play was the most ambitious that Plainfield talent had ever yet attempted, but the participants made a fine showing of their capabilities, and the production throughout was complete.

The story of "Esmeralda" is not an intricate one. Old Man Rogers, his wife Dame Rogers, and their daughter Esmeralda, are found living on a North Carolina farm, which Mrs. Rogers, wealthy of her life of drudgery, sells in partnership to George Dane, a scheming speculator in mining lands, who sees promise of much wealth from a vein of ore on the place. With the proceeds of the sale, Mrs. Rogers takes the family to Paris, and runs them through a season of fashionable gaiety. She is about to wed the unhappy Esmeralda to the fraudulent Marquis de Montbarrey, when it transpires that the vein of ore on the farm is valueless, but that one of great wealth has developed on the farm of Dane Hardy, Esmeralda's true lover, adjoining that of Rogers farm. Then Dane comes forward and takes the willing girl back to the little home he had found for Esmeralda, the former happy sweetheart days, and shares his plenty with the old man and the tanned virago, his mother-in-law. But if the plot is simple, the text is of a most blending of pathos and comedy, and dramatic incidents and opp-ounities for clever acting abound.

As had been predicted in these columns, Mrs. William L. Saunders proved herself a star in the title role. Her interpretation of the part was a most charming, unaffected and faithful piece of acting—a genuine revelation. She made a lovely and winsome "Mountain Flower", and adapted herself most naturally to the part in every daintily and artistically. There was a depth and sincerity of feeling in her acting that wrought her admiring audience to the most enthusiastic pitch.

The part of Lydia Ann Rogers, or "Mother", as the Old Man defer-eially called her, afforded Miss Maude Agnes Reeves unbounded opportunity for clever acting, and as usual Miss Bowers was received with marked favor. Her display of ability was always plaudible, but in her character of both she and Mrs. Saunders received many beautiful floral tributes.

William Pelletier did well in the character of Dare Hardy, the sturdy young mountaineer who all along loved Esmeralda, and who finally won her after many patient forbearance, self-denial, and noble devotion. In the stirring emotional scenes in which he was prominent he ably demonstrated his powers.

Paul Estabrook, the wily and ever-plotting, philosophical man of the world, was skillfully impersonated by William T. Kaufman. He acted his part excellently, and his love making with Miss Esmeralda was one of the most natural and enjoyable of the side-issues of the play.

Without W. R. Cox, a play by Plainfield amateurs would be incomplete; and in the character of Old Man Rogers, the old-fashioned farmer, he was exquisitely funny and ordinal. His bodily simplicity and quaint manneri-ms were greatly relished. His make-up was very clever, and he was in every way the star of the comedy element.

Mrs. J. Parker Mason, as Nora Desmond the "flirtatious" and charming young peiter girl, made a most delightful favor into the play; and Miss Maude Van Boskerck as Kate Desmond, the no less fascinating young painter of a type, had many lovers in the audience. The credit of designing and preparing the stage settings is due to J. Parker Mason, and Charles J. Fisk furnished the properties. The consecutory scene in the third act, when the stage was filled with a profusion of potted plants and palms, was especially beautiful. It was a treat to a Plainfield audience to hear good orchestral music. The guiding hand of William Pfeiffer was evident in the music, which added to a goodly extent to the stage arrangements. The most realistic bit of acting of the evening was when Hardy hurled Dane aside with such violence as to cause him to fall into a heap.

The general effect of the performance on the audience was one of great enjoyment and satisfaction. The merit of the play and the excellence of the acting took firm hold of the people, and at times wrought materially upon their affections. In the most real and pathetic passages some of the gentler sex were moved to tears.

Hospital Home Baptists.

Standing in a bay window that was solidly banked with chrysanthemums from floor to ceiling, Miss Mary Rogers had Edward Cooley, of this city, were married Thursday night by the Rev. Corbelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, New York, in the presence of John Brooks, head of the extensive works of the Potter printing machine company. The groom is connected with the large wholesale house of Burton, Price & Co., of New York. The ceremony took place at Mr. Brooks's home, 97 Broadway.

The entire house was profusely decorated with chrysanthemums in all colors and of all varieties. The guests included the members of both families and a number of friends from Plainfield, New York, Brooklyn and elsewhere. H. Clifford VanEmburgh, a cousin of the groom, acted as best man and was entering and most successful in his efforts to provide for the comfort and gratification of all.

After the ceremony supper was served, and the happy couple started on their wedding tour which will include a trip through some of the Southern States. The presents were many and costly. Upon their return, Mr. and Mrs. Cooley will reside in this city.

Sunday Night's Council Meeting.

President Smith was unable to attend the common council meeting Monday, and in his absence councilman Ginna presided. Mr. Hetfield was absent, causing a tie vote on all motions. The meeting was adjourned at 9:15. This included a recess of 10 minutes. An ordinance was adopted on second reading and ordered engrossed providing for the appointment of a janitor for the non-commission of Westervelt avenue, formerly Bay street.

—The Rockiton mission band of the Crescent Avenue church is planning for a fair.

MR. SPANGENBERG SPEAKS.

His Side of the Controversy About Alleged Corruption, and Shows How His "Big Six" Have Always Worked Solely for the Public Good and Plainfield's Growth.

So much has been published in misrepresentation of the so-called "Big Six" of the Plainfield common council, and so many have asked THE PRESS for a synopsis for the public an authentative history of that body's workings in the interests of public improvements and Plainfield's advancement, that a reporter obtained an interview with Leonard Spangenberg, the people's candidate for re-election in the Second ward, and received from him an interesting statement of the doings of the "Big Six" during their official career.

"In the fall of 1890," said Mr. Spangenberg, in response to the reporter's inquiries—"while myself and several gentlemen were at the Netherwood station, discussing the political situation in the Second, Edward H. Bowen asked me if I knew of a good Democrat in Netherwood, who would run for councilman in the second ward. I replied that he was looking at one, meaning myself. He said 'You get the Democrats to nominate you, and we will elect you.' I told him that I was not over-anxious to run as it would take up a great deal of time from by business. A day or so after that I met Mr. Mc-Mott on the train, and told him what Mr. Bowen had said. I added that if the Democrats would nominate a good man they no doubt could elect their man. The result of these and other conversations was that I was nominated as their candidate. After due consideration, I agreed to accept the nomination, with the understanding that I pledged myself only to High License, and stood to be a free agent, and would not be hampered by anything else.

"As soon as I received the nomination, the Republicans of the Fatuous seventh district sent a delegate to me, desiring an interview, which I gave them. The people of that district, and of Plainfield generally, never believed me able to get anything done for them, but I told them that I would look after their interests, and pledged myself to secure water, sewers, and a street railway.

"About 6 in the evening, in January, 1890, when we met to organize the council, Mr. Hetfield called up to me and said he wanted me to meet the three other Democrats of the council at half-past 7, in the parlor of the Park hotel. I was then suffering from a severe attack of the grippe, and had been ordered by Dr. Hodgen to remain at home, but I promised Mr. Hetfield that I would be there. When I arrived I found that a deal was proposed to put Mr. Mcfett in the chair and appoint J. B. Coward as clerk. I said 'This means that the Democrats are going to be on top, and you are at liberty to make up your committees as you see fit?' Mr. Mcfett said 'Yes.' As I did not like the idea of the clerkship, provided he was a capable man, I at once agreed to make the deal. I learned only a short time ago, through Mr. Smith, that E. R. Pope was at the bottom of this deal, and wanted Mr. Coward for clerk, even if Mr. Mcfett had to be made president of the council. I also learned through 'Uncle Dan' Roberts that councilman Johnston had also agreed to do the same thing, but that he backed out at the last moment.

"When the water and sewer franchises came up for consideration, I saw Messrs. Pope and Runkle, not in an official way, but as a prospective purchaser. I told these gentlemen 'Put in the water and sewers together, and you can get a franchise for both, which would be a benefit to yourselves as well as to the city.' They agreed to have a committee meet the water committee of the council, which committees met, and the result was that Mr. Runkle and Mr. Pope would know anything about sewers. But our council committee said 'Furnish the money, and you can get a sanitary engineer to do the work.'

"Did these gentlemen take our advice No; but they were bent on putting in the water alone, with a franchise obtai-ed twenty years ago, in the days of special legislation, which could not be obtained to-day. This charter is as broad as the Atlantic ocean. In other words, it means 'Go as you please, and do likewise'. Well, what did they do? Why! put in the water, and left the streets in a most outrageous condition. The granting of the J. M. Low fra chise has brought the Plainfield Water Supply company down from 800 to 200 gallons hydrant per minute, both for fire purposes and flushing the sewers. The former price Frank Berges said in my presence and Mr. Low's, would be 10 cents when they flushed the sewers. This is quite a fall in prices is it not? But if the city should see fit to grant them this price of $15, where could the profit come from? Why, they would make it up with the consumers of water, and bond the city for sewers, and perhaps for water as well. I also learned that Mr. Pope was at the Brunswick, financier that he is, and can readily understand why councilman Rashmore is so deeply interested in the Plainfield Water Supply company's interests. He has taken a great deal of stock in both directors in this company. I have no personal spite against any of the gentlemen connected with the Plainfield Water Supply company, but I do object to their interests of the city of Plainfield from start to finish, and I defy anyone to make a statement in public that anyone of the Big Six has ever cast one dollar in their vote for any of the franchises that have come up in the council, notwithstanding the gross misrepresentations of these gentlemen by the Plainfield Evening News and Central Times. The 'Big Six' have spent their time and money in the city's service. We have made desire is to see the city progress like other cities in the United States. I venture to say that with water, sewers, and a street railway, we would double our population in the next five years."

A Communication.

Citizens of Plainfield, how do you appreciate the name used by the Kean funnel? Is there in the language of the day a word you attempt to dictate your own vote according to the Kean funnel idea. Well, he may be right; but have you ever thought how a funnel is made? It is wide at the top, and runs down to a point, forming a kind of a concentration. Now, just see how it is worked. You put your vote in at your own will, go to the funnel, No. 6 East Front street. When you want to pay your electric light bill, go to the funnel, No. 6 East Front street. When you want to pay your water bill, go to the funnel, No. 6 East Front street. When you want to deposit your weekly earnings, go to the funnel, No. 6 East Front street. Now just keep on dancing to the tune of the Kean funnel, and in a short time you will have to go to the funnel to pay your sewerage bill and your street railway fare. It won't be long before you will have to go to the Kean funnel to know whether you will have bathtubs for winter or soft-coal stoves for summer. How do you like the picie so? If you like it, swallow it, and don't kick after it's too late.

ANDERSON OF PISCOE.

Mr. Rowe's Emphatic Denial.

To the Editor of The Press:—I hereby demand an absolutely false story charges and statements made by Mr. Smith in the official communication in your issue of Nov. 24, under the heading: "Mr. Smith Talks," and signed "Superintendent Smith, President of Council of 1891, Plainfield."

Somebody Took It When He Wasn't Looking.

M. Higgins the liveryman was arrested Tuesday charged with concealing a valuable horse and not bonding to him. He gave bail in the sum of $500, and now threatens suit against the complainant. Higgins says he does n't know where the animal is. Somebody, he says, must have come into his stable when he was absent, and taken the property away.

To Help the Hospital Out.

The very clever and almost perfect amateur performance of "Esmeralda" that was given at Dr. Cadmus' Thursday evening, of last week, is to be repeated for the benefit of Muhlenberg hospital which is just now under a debt of about $1,000. The receipts, principally by the recent expense of putting electric lights throughout the hospital and new roots on the wards. It will not have to be lessened much.

Escape the Shylocks, While 1st There is Time.

In a conversation with a resident of Plainfield, a prominent official in the city of Elizabeth said: "Do not allow your city to place a debt on your shoulders. Here we have our water-works, gas-works, and street railway, all owned and controlled by one party. Why sir, this John Kean syndicate have got the people by the throat, and we are utterly helpless. The way to pay Plainfielders, do not bond the city for the improvements at the mercy of a band of selfish Shylocks."

The F. A. K. Finals "Sat Guilty."

Lawyer A. G. Richey, of the Philadelphia and Reading railroad company, appeared before Judge Woodruff Tuesday morning, in the Mercer county court at Trenton, to plead to the indictment found against the company for maintaining a nuisance at the crossing of the tracks on the road to Ewing, where a few months ago James B. Green, an aged and wealthy farmer, was killed by the Lines of Pike of this city, was killed by a fast train.

The plea entered was "not guilty", and the company's counsel announced that it was prepared to compare the plea in the future.

Harp and Saxophone Solos.

H. C. Mecklem and his daughter, Miss Bessie, will render harp and saxophone solos and duets at the men's meeting to be held next Sunday afternoon at the Y. M. C. A., in the First Baptist church next Sunday at 4:15 p. m., and at the boys meeting to be held in the M. E. church at 4 p. m.

The men's meeting will be conducted by E. L. Sulfern and the boys meeting by Frank W. Hall of Orange. Mr. Mecklem is the best harp and flute player in the only young lady saxophonist before the public to-day. The harp and saxophone together have a brilliant effect.

Some of the Most Interesting of Autumn's Eccentricities.

The People Who Revive Trash Have Must Have a Sense of Humor—Fancy Jackets and Cloaks—The Smooth Shirt and Skirt with Crinoline.

[COPYRIGHT, 1891.]

A friend of mine was telling me the other day a little experience with her father when he was a boy. He went for getting dresses to suit her in the future. She had the hardihood to object to one of his dresses one day, drawing it on just with dignity, the dapper little autocrat delivered himself:

"There was a man from Cleveland in here yesterday, he used to know you when you lived in Cleveland. He saw you in Dr. John Hall's church last Sunday in that Louis Quinze brocade coat I made for you. He said he looked across the aisle at you, and you were just like a fashion plate, for all the world."

Mr. friend was not brave enough to tell the tailor that she objected to looking like a fashion plate, and so he inflated himself like a turkey cock in bright weather and proceeded to make her brown and blue checked Orkney tweed in that manner that seemed good to him and not at all in the manner that he had good to her.

The success of the tailor bodes even more ill than common this winter; for there is hardly a fashion or a fancy on the other side of the water that does not already manifest a wild impatience to kick up its heels and run off into realms unknown. For example, I saw a very pretty pale-checked girl yesterday in a frock of plum color and apricot yellow. Over the apricot yellow was a plum colored velvet with a yellow crown overset with jet and trimmed with plum colored plushings. The plushings were a sort of yellow hat — and this was the touch of extravagance in the entire affair — to day. The girl's sleeves were finished with yellow was pinned up just to show velvet puffs with yellow lining, and the skirt was short enough in front to show the ankle and the yellow boot to the best advantage. The large plum colored velvet hat with yellow ribbon, the broad and loose and fully extensive of the whole affair, as I have said, was at the early season to which the incident occurred the oddest and most extravagant departure I ever retired at least half a dozen times while admiring from the carriage and going up half a dozen steps to the front door.

I don't know that the eccentricities of fashion are of large interest, and yet in a way it gratifies one's sense of humor to see what is being worn. Take as an instance the travelling cloak I have figured. It was my fortune to sit beside this cloak in a run from Boston to New York—please do not think I spend my autumn vibrating between the two cities—after the last of the reprieves. It was worn by a tall and extremely handsome red-headed girl. You can imagine how the beauty of this cloak of it seemed to sweep down and away from her. Its fabric was tan-colored camel's hair, and was finished about by a deep box plait running down the middle. Its fronts were loose, bound with dark mixed red, tan and black and buttoned. Over the sleeves were caps forming double capes which reached to the bottom of the waist line. It was not a bad sort of garment, and it's to-fringe achieved. Now, I have a notion of the twelfth century, but it cannot be denied that it is extravagant.

Consider, too, the jacket that is set down in the second illustration. It, too, may be a sort of jacket that will not commend itself to everyone. I made a study of that jacket at another time than the present, and perhaps, imagining plans for the benefit of invited guests, chosen from the "elite of Israel," I may be able to say whether it commends itself to the details. I wandered with the sheep because of it to see how it looked from the back, which yellow cloth including to drown my yellowish misery left no modified impression. The cloth was of a rich cashmere cloth, edged with a band of fur in contrast to that, and the sleeves were gathered into the cuffs of fur. The fronts were finished with white ruffles, the ruffles of the which is one of the most extravagant and unnecessary of the fashions of the season. The sleeves were gathered into the cuffs of fur, and the fronts were finished with white ruffles, the ruffles of the which is one of the most extravagant and unnecessary of the fashions of the season. THE JACKET A LA MODE.

ever an unattainable luxury to be classed with the things to be looked for only in the millennium. It is absolute in its expression of its side of the skirt question, but on the other hand the bell skirt is now made with three flounces reaching from waist to ground, and quite on friendly terms with the crinoline. We shall see what we shall see.

Barrelled Up the Son.

An eccentric man named George Hungs, living in Bridgeport, Conn., the other afternoon attempted to put a keg in a cider barrel, but could not make the head stay while he tightened the hoops. So he put his five-year-old son, who is deaf and dumb, in the barrel to hold the head, and soon the baby began to hold up. Bump went to work in the field and forgot his son, until his wife asked him where the boy was. Hungs ran to the barrel, knocked out the head, and found the boy breathing through the bunghole, but so frightened that he went into spasms. Bump was arrested, but was afterward released. The child has been known for his absent-mindedness.

Colored Pride.

Some people don't stand prosperity. Amold Texas darky who by industry and economy had accumulated a fortune of fifty-nine cents, strolled up to a fish market in the public square. He had one catfish on the head of an empty barrel. A customer picked up the fish, smelt it and asked the price.

NOVELTIES IN GEWGAWS.

What Fashionable People Will Wear in Jewelry This Winter.

New Knots Quite the Go—Scarf-Pin Fraps —A New Ring—Engagement Rings—Six Stones That Are Being Set in Jewelry.—Many Combinations.

[COPYRIGHT, 1891.]

The prevailing styles this season are marked by beauty, simplicity and elegance, especially in rings, scarf pins and bracelets. New wonderfulness of the myriads of different designs of articles of jewelry since the goldsmith's art has been in existence that Invention and imagination were exhausted—nevertheless novelty comes and ingenuity is exhibited every season with unremitting regularity. The great jewelry houses never fail to have something on hand different from last year. Tiffany & Co. literally ransack the world for new gems, and art libraries and picture galleries for novel forms that may be used for trinkets for personal adornment. Clever workmen in jewelry are always on the brain for something new. This is true of all the houses who make a specialty of these goods, besides a glittering collection of bangles and bracelets, brooches and pendants, earrings and necklaces, all set more or less with precious stones from diamonds to tourmalines, all in the aggregate equal to the ransom of a score of kings, the list is now on what are apparently narrow bands of gold twisted into fantastic shapes.

On closer examination they are found to be bow knots of colored crinoses gold, highly chased and engraved and finished. These are with clusters of one pearl, one diamond, one sapphire and one emerald. The knots are made of large size for ladies for brooches and smaller as scarf pins for gentlemen. The bow knot is carried through all articles of jewelry this season. An exquisite effect of watered silk ribbon is given to some of these brooches or breastpins. They are of various colors, all delicate and on many the enamelling is different on both sides. Most of this particular design are set with diamonds. They are too comparatively moderate in price, ranging from twenty-six to seventy-five dollars. One of these is especially striking—the enamel of a deep rich navy blue, and the bows large and full. The knots are of the shimmer of a watered silk ribbon.

Among the numerous styles of scarf pins for men are crescents and clubs. They are in the shape of flags emanelled richly on fine gold, with the colors of the different colleges and athletic clubs.

Another pattern of pin that attracts attention is just a bow-knot with a combination of diamonds and pearls.

A very decided novelty are scarf pins made to look like drops. The green effect of the amphibian is obtained by enamel, and the eyes are of Cuban emeralds, better known as green pearls or demantoid. These frogs are also set with diamonds. The diamond reflects light as the diamond does, and it shows a play of color which no other stone does except opal.

There are pins set with precious stones cut in quaint and curious shapes. Some are small hilts, others are elongated hearts. They are in topas, sapphire, hyacinth, ruby and emerald. The hilts of dirk-like pins are very dainty in the market in the public square. He had one catfish on the head of an empty barrel. A customer picked up the fish, smelt it and asked the price.

that has been drilled with a chain running through it with a pendant showers of pearls. Another is of fancy squares of bracelets constructed on the same principle. A choice and superb article and a novelty of this season is a bracelet with a pink conch pearl, while there are others with chain and pendants glittering with rubies, sapphires—a most valuable stone — and spinel. The value of one of these takes up at random is also beautiful and costly.

Going back to rings again—the ring that is particularly fashionable this season is the sapphire ring, with diamonds. Other stones and combinations that are favorites for rings of both sexes are opals or diamonds, opals and pearls, diamonds, almadine or purple garnets and diamonds. All of these are of the most costly description.

Many kinds of specious stones are now being used for jewel settings to a much greater extent than ever before. Some of the names of the stones are strangely unfamiliar to the wearer of jewelry and to the public generally. The stone rings mounted in various designs single chalcedony and in combination comprise an infinite variety of stones, including the following unusual ones:

Alexandrite, Aetetis, Beryl, Bloodstone, Cat's Eye, Chrysochrol, Chrysolite, Conchshell, Demantoid, Golden Beryl, Jargon, Jasper, Lapis Lazuli, Lapis Lazuli, Moonstone, Moss Agate, Olivine, Peridot, Rubellite, Ruby Cat's Eye, Ruby Spinel, Sardonyx

NEW DESIGNS IN SCARF PINS.

Spinel, Star Sapphire, Tiger Eye and Zircon. Diamonds are found in Brazil, are Chlorastrolite from Lake Superior, Jade from New Zealand, Moss Agate from Montana, Opal from Australia, Siberia and Colorado, Rutile from Rudy Carolina and White Chrysoberyl. Of course all these stones need not be used for jewelry settings. The Spinel, which is Cochineal-red, is found in a particularly beautiful stone. It is found in Ceylon, Siam and Burmah. It has more colors than the rainbow, an endless variety of tints, from rosy madder-red, red, pink, purple and green. Not less exquisite is the Peridot, which is that of pale green and yellow green, and Chrysoberyl, cinnamon-colored. Australia and Ceylon are noted for these gems. Emerald is another precious stone, the finest of Ceylon. It forms a setting for many scarf pins.

Rich and simple studs for gentlemen will be exceedingly fashionable, as the vests will be cut lower for evening dress. Studs and rings are shown for gold key chains are much in vogue, and all the jewelry houses are supplying them. Earrings have become fine ever—especially the more beautiful and expensive ones. Diamonds as usual are the most popular. Ladies and foreign women often make the remark that it rather borders on vulgarity to wear earrings at all times. English women are loudest in their denunciation of the practice. The reason for this is not generally known. It is because the foreign jewelry is so vastly inferior to the American. Almost any second rate establishment in England ladies will not bear the light of day. The stones are chiefly-testy and are frequently not of good quality. Diamonds for the American market must be up to a certain standard or they will not sell. If English women had as fine diamonds as American women they would be above ing themselves on every possible opportunity. American women do not wear their jewelry at all times and seldom on fete occasions, because they know it will bear inspection, being of the highest workmanship and finish.

Bracelets will also be much in favor They will run chiefly to the form of a chain with pendants of pearls and precious stones as described. Pearls are more than this season than ever before. They are proving to some respects formidable rivals to diamonds, although the pearl and the diamond are often in combination.

BELL AND HIS "PHONE."

The Man Who Controls the Telephone of America.

What He Looks Like and How He Passed His Way to Success—Some Interesting Results of Thoughtful Experiments.

There are many persons of adult age and holding responsible positions in life, to whom the telephone is a thing of the future, so to speak, a matter of course. It came into use before they were old enough to take special note of such matters, and it has always been at their command since they first had occasion for its services. Birthly people of longer memories it is still new—a thing almost of yesterday. Twelve years, or even years of familiarity with its powers has not, with them, wholly destroyed the sense of wonder at the marvel, and I wonder which it first aroused. It is one of the commonplace miracles of the time in the never ceasing intercourse the reflecting observer, especially if he can look back to the days when such an achievement would scarcely have entered of by the most daring inventor.

The litigations that have attended the introduction of commercial telephony would, I' stated, form a library of such extraordinary magnitude that it would seem that the courts must have been probed to its very bottom in the vast researches that have been required the study of the case. The public for the last dozen years and that not little chance to become familiar with questions. Everybody has heard of the Bell telephone controversies, and in view of this vast publicity of the invention of Mr. Bell, realized in the practical everyday use of his "phone" by so many millions, a few facts of interest in the inventor must naturally be felt, and no doubt a correspondent desires to see his portrait.

Our picture, taken from the Mechanical News, shows Mr. Bell in the full vigor of manhood, he being forty-four years of age at the present time. Bell, the father of the subject of this sketch, who is still living, long enjoyed a reputation in the field of philology and linguistics, being the author of various systems of "word speech" and "visible speech." The intention of the latter is that it should follow his profession and he early taught him the anatomy of the vocal organs, their functions and the different branches belonging to the science of vocal physiology. It is due to this early training that we to enjoy the practical results of Mr. Bell's inventive genius. While he was still a child his father told him of the invention of an automaton speaking machine and in theory at least the present it is comprehensible to the child. In this incident. In August, 1870, the Bell family emigrated to Canada, from whence, in April, of the following year, Mr. Bell proceeded to Boston to carry on a series of experiments with his father's system of "visible speech" with which he met no doubt more or less successful. Mr. Bell had, however, long cherished the idea of speech transmission and when, in 1868, he removed to the south, locating in Washington, he practically abandoned everything else that his chosen field of investigation might not be interfered with. It was during the ensuing year that the first real results that promised ultimate success were realized, and it was during and at the centennial exposition, of 1876 that the public first had an opportunity of witnessing the marvelous speech machine. From this point the public has divided its time between watching the ultimate successful career of the famous inventor and the many arising litigations that at most only temporarily delayed the superior telephone system of to-day.

Certainly it is a question to go for discussion in a family. Should St. Nicholas still be the best? Or has Harper's Young People, started in 1879, the plan of the greatest writers of the juvenile world, and including the most famous illustrators, risen now at its service. Tennyson, Longfellow, Whittier, Thomas Hughes, Bret Harte, Bayard Taylor, Mrs. Burnett, Miss Alcott, Dodge, Mrs. Mitchell, George Macdonald, Mrs. Oliphant, Professor Proctor, to name a few of the many great names which have written upon its field of publication, are, Mary Mapes Dodge is the editor. Everything is illustrated.

there are to be serial stories by Brander Matthews, Lieutenant Robert E. Fletcher (the author of that charming book, "Rolf House" and "Rolf's Luck"), Joaquin Miller, Winston O. Stoddard, Charles E. Carryl, the author of "Davy and the Goblin"), and Frances Courtenay Baylor. There will be short stories by Thomas Nelson Page, Mary E. Wilkins, Mrs. Hallock Foote, Richard Malcolm Johnston, Edward Everett Hale, General Gates, and many others, with papers of adventure by J. T. Trowbridge and Lieutenant Schwatka, and useful articles on "How Clothes are Reckoned," "William the Conqueror," "Volcanoes and Earthquakes," "Straight Lines and Circles," "The Old Spanish Corners of Our Country," the Great American Desert, the Old Dwellings of Africa" and other interesting places, will be described, and in "Hodges to the Fig." and "Boys and the National Guard." The publication of the young readers will be aroused and familiar with Nathan Hale's declaration: "The Man life of a Camera Newspaper," and the art and instantaneous electric lights are to be clearly explained.

A GREAT MAGAZINE.

THE CENTURY'S PROGRAMME IN 1892—A NEW "LIFE OF COLUMBUS"—ARTICLES ON THE PEACE FAILURE, ETC.

That great American periodical, The Century, is going to outdo its own unrivaled record for 1892. Besides the Life and as many of its new features begin with the November number, new readers should commence with that issue.

In this number are the opening chapters of a novel by Rudyard Kipling, the famous author of "Plain Tales from the Hills," written in collaboration with an American writer, Wolcott Balestier. The story is of a young man and a young woman from a "booming" Colorado town, who go to India, he in search of a lost and jewelled necklace, called the "Naulahka" of the title, she to take charge of a hospital. Both join the "Followers of the Prince," while in November the first of a series of articles on "The Food-Supply of the Future," which every farmer should read, to be followed by others on the treating especially of the relations of the Government to the farmer, what it is doing, and what it can and do. This series will include articles from the heads of the Department of Agriculture, and from well-known men, will discuss the "Farmer's Discontent," "Cooperation," etc., etc.

"The Naulahka,"

Great Practical Value to Farmers,

Another splendid Spanish writer is to furnish a "Life of Columbus," which will be illustrated richly. Articles from the pages of The Century have arranged with the Spanish Academy of History, point articles on the buildings, etc.

One of the novels to appear in 1892 is by the author of "The Anglomaniacs," which will contain a great deal about society in Washington during the present year,—among other things a series of illustrated articles on "The Best Society in New York." In November will appear an illustrated description of "The Players' Club, founded by Edwin Booth, and one of the features of the agreeably illustrated Christmas Century building in an article on "The Bowery."

To get The Century send the yearly subscription price ($4.00) to The Century Co., Union square, New York. N. Y.

Harper's Young People.

AN ILLUSTRATED WEEKLY.

The Thirteenth Volume of HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE begins on November 3, 1891. For the coming year and after much consideration, it has been decided to publish HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE weekly in the world for youthful readers—three times as large as the present issue. The price will be $2.00 a year, which remains unchanged. This is a very low price for a publication of the size and high character of HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE, and the publishers feel that they are entitled to the support of every family in the United States. Each number will contain a serial story by a well-known author, and stories by three and four other writers. Also, articles on the House, Amusing Text, Ella Rodman Church, short stories by favorite writers, articles on out-door sports by well-known writers, and all other matter to be found in a first-class family paper. Special attention will be given to the home of the young, to which end articles on home matters, with articles on how to make HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE a welcome guest in every household, will appear from time to time. It will be a pleasure and information for boys and girls.

Subscription Terms.

Single Numbers, Five Cents each. Specimen Copy sent on receipt of two-cent stamp.

Remittances should be made by Postoffice Money Order or Draft, to avoid chance of loss.

Subscriptions will be discontinued at expiration without the express order of the subscriber.

He Had a Plank.

Mother—What in the world has become of the other half of that cake I set for supper?

Little Dick—You gave it to me.

Mother—I gave you a piece. You could have a piece of cake and I said you."

"Yes'm. I meant the piece that was left over."—Detroit Free Press.

The Wrong Man.

Clubberly—My tailor came around yesterday and I couldn't pay him. Sad, isn't it?

Puppette—I know how that is, and I can sympathize with you, old man.

Clubberly—Can you sympathize with me. Sympathize with the tailor. Clothier and Furnisher.

Dangerous Fun.

Casey—Play a game of billiards, sir? Brannigan—Sir, yes, but I must tell you I don't know anything about the game.

Casey—Excuse me, then, if you please! It was no fine dollars to play with a man this morning who didn't know anything about it!—Boston News.

GRAPE WINES,
ALSO
UNFERMENTED GRAPE JUICE.
Used in the principal churches for communion, by invalids, for families, weakly persons and the aged.

Speer's Port Grape Wine,
FOUR YEARS OLD.
THIS Celebrated Wine is the pure juice of the Concord grape Specific Grape, raised in Speer's vineyards, and left to ripen until they shrink and become partly raisined before gathering. The invaluable

Tonic and Strengthening Properties are unsurpassed by any other Pure Wine produced. Being entirely free from acid, it is especially adapted to dyspeptics, and is highly recommended by the principal Hospitals and Boards of Health who have examined it. To consumptive, child and the weakest invalids one fl. is sufficient. It is particularly beneficial to the aged and debilitated and suited to the various ailments that affect the weaker sex.

It is in every respect a WINE TO BE RELIED ON.

Speer's Unfermented Grape Juice
Is the Juice of the Specific Grape, preserved in its natural state, sweet as when first taken from the press by fumigation and electricity, thereby destroying the active principle of fermentation. It is perfectly pure, free from spirits, and will keep in any climate.

Speer's (Socialist) Claret
Is held in high estimation for the richness as a dry Table Wine, especially suited for dinner use.

Speer's P. J. Sherry
Is a Wine of superior character, and possesses the rich qualities of the best grapes from which it is made.

LEADERS OF FARMERS.

The Coming Convention of the Alliance in Indianapolis.

Vital Questions Relating to the Third Party Movement Will Be Discussed—Is a Review of the Leaders Will the Omaha Platform Be Endorsed?

(COPYRIGHTED, 1891.)

Every politician in the national capital has pealed the corner of his weather eye which is nearest to Indianapolis. He may disagree, but don't you forget him. Whatever he may think of the political future of the Farmers' Alliance, he can't help being interested in its great convention which will assemble on November 18.

A year ago the supreme council met at Ocala, Fla., and constructed the platform which has since become famous. Its great work will be done at the coming meeting. A president may be chosen in place of Col. L. L. Polk of North Carolina, a fine specimen in person of Ben. Clover of Kansas, a secretary in place of J. H. Turner of Georgia, and a treasurer to succeed J. F. Tillman of Tennessee. Col. Polk will retire. He has held the office for two years, and is not expected to seek a third term. His place is almost sure to be filled by L. F. Livingston, president of the Georgia Alliance and member of congress from that state. Mr. Livingston is undoubtedly one of the most brilliant and cultivated men in the order. His personal record is excellent. There have been scandals in the alliance, as there must always be in any great organization with the millennium shall come, but they have never touched Livingston.

Vice President Clover will very likely be reelected. Kansas is a stronghold of the alliance and will demand recognition. Regarding Tillman and Turner it is safer not to predict. The four officers named with C. W. Macune constitute the executive committee. Tillman, Turner and Macune will remain, but the committee may appoint but Polk and Clover will not unless reelected.

The delegates to the convention have already been chosen by the state boards. Probably there will be not less than fifteen hundred at Indianapolis. All the states will be represented. New Jersey was the last to organize as alliance, but within a few weeks it has done so.

The most important work and the hardest fight in the convention will be over the adoption of a platform. That which was made at Ocala is only a year old, but there are many who think it already needs repairs. Political opinions and affiliations will have much to do in the discussion. The delegates will be divided into three classes.

First, those who expect something from one or the other of the political parties. They will come their fight for a conservative platform, which will permit a democrat or republican or democrats as the case may be.

Second, those who are looking to get away from the old parties. They will urge a radical platform, and present a strong alliance ticket which was made a year ago.

Third, those who have been trying to hold the alliance back from definite political action. They will be still deeper in the case of the former classes, but some will try to have a platform put through which shall make the alliance non-partisan.

At present the alliance does not call itself a political party, but many of the alliance members are also members of the people's party. The Sunday before the convention assembles will witness a great deal of hard work by third party leaders. There will be a rest at caucus at the Bates house. H. F. Taubeneck, chairman of the national committee of the people's party and member of the Illinois legislature, will be there. So will Col. Sim Terrell, the labor leader. So will partisan gentlemen who will not in the interests of the democratic party, and others who will look out for the republican party.

The third party leaders now have up

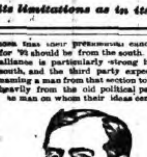
some time their preliminary canvassing for "it should be from the south. The alliance is particularly strong in the south, and the third party expects by naming a man from that section to draw heavily from the old political parties. The man on whom their ideas center is



Livingston. His disposition up to this time has been to keep the alliance out of politics, and he has not given any encouragement to the third party politicians who have seen an advantage in him. It is more than probable that he would decline a presidential nomination. However, every question relating to a third party renomination will be immensely influenced by the action of the Indianapolis convention.

Of the men who will shape the course of the action a good deal might be said if there was space to say it. Kansas will be represented by Jerry Simpson, of course, and John Davis, also a member of congress. Then there will be Ben Clover and L. McLellan and J. P. Limerhouse. So Kansas will have some good hard fighters on the floor. Georgia will have Livingston and Gov. Northen among the strong men. From Texas will come W. R. Sledge and Harry Tracy. The sentiment in Texas is strongly against a third party movement. In Georgia the rank and file are rampant for a third party fight and it takes the most strenuous efforts on the part of the leaders to keep their followers in check. Gov. Northen has fought against everything which assembled the alliance to any political party during the past year in Georgia.

Gov. Buchanan, of Tennessee, and J. H. McDowell, president of that state's alliance, will be at Indianapolis. So will Treasurer Tillman, and he will be a strong factor. He has charge of the national lecturing bureau, which wields a great influence. Mann Page, president of the Virginia alliance, M. D. Davis, of West Virginia, W. H. Adams, of Louisiana, and J. P. Lapsley, of Arkansas, will be among the leading spirits. From far away to the west will come Marion Cannon, president of the California alliance; President Wardall, of South Dakota, and H. L. Loniks, of South Dakota. George Gallup, of Wisconsin, is another third party boy. So is H. C. Deeming, of Pennsylvania. Frank McGrath is for the president Harvey Ingold, of New York, will probably voice the views of the empire state as loudly as any body.

H. E. TAUBENECK. GOV. SIM TERRELL.

This is a conventional report, but merely with a view to presenting the news it may be safe to say that some of the most interesting debates of the session will be stirred up by U. S. Hall, of Missouri. He will renew his war upon C. W. Macune. It was he who had the special committee appointed to investigate the charges against Macune at Ocala. The investigation was secret, but Hall has since given its inner workings some publicity. There is no doubt that he will make it while he considers to be an expose. The committee referred to above made two reports, the majority favoring Macune, and the minority, signed by Hall and Morbath, against him. They charged Macune with dubious transactions in relation to the Louisville & Nashville railroad. The charge may be aired again. Hall, by the way, is a very prominent man in his state. He is an able lawyer, a fluent man, and is likely to be the next democratic nominee for governor of Missouri.

TAKING CARE OF BABY.

Great Invention of a Young Philadelphia Father.

He Designs a Couch Which is Cradle, Swing and Carriage Combined and Does Away with Nocturnal Prerogative.

In West Philadelphia lives a young lady who has passed the greater part of her life in a basket. She is Miss Madelina Ellinger and is a daughter of Dr. Z. J. Ellinger. To be sure, Miss Ellinger has only resided on this mundane sphere less than twelve months, having been installed upon the 25th inst. by having lived in a basket, says the Philadelphia Record, is probably not so remarkable as the basket itself, which is a combined cradle, swing and carriage, the invention of the genial doctor's fertile brain.

But now that the weather is too cold to remain out of doors the swing has been withdrawn from the office. What proves Dr. Ellinger to be a man who realizes the blessing of labor-saving machinery is a device which he has rigged out in his bedroom. Like all other babies Miss Madelina is not averse to indulging in a nocturnal concert, and more than one occasion has her paternal relative walked the floor in the dead watches of the night, amid an atmosphere of mingled prayers, anathemas and lullabies. But now he is relieved of this, thanks to the basket.

Should he be aroused from a dream, perchance of some fair lass, by that shrill voice which he knows so well, instead of walking the floor for an hour or two all he is obliged to do is to lazily reach out his arm, give the basket a gentle swing, and the machinery is set in motion. Baby goes to sleep immediately and the doctor returns to his dream.

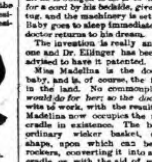
The invention is really an ingenious one and Dr. Ellinger has been strongly advised to have it patented.

Miss Madelina is the doctor's first baby, and is, of course, the finest baby in the land. On commonplace cradle would do for her; so the doctor set his wits to work, with the result that Miss Madelina now occupies the most novel cradle in existence. The body is an ordinary wicker basket, oblong in shape, upon which can be attached rockers, converting it into an ordinary cradle, or, with the aid of wheels, into a carriage. But it has rendered its greatest service as a swing, suspended by a spring from the ceiling of Dr. Ellinger's parents, where Bittle Miss Ellinger has passed the greater part of the winter.



OPT IN THE STILLY NIGHT.

The spring, which is an ordinary spiral arrangement, with quite a strong tension, is attached by a cord to the handles of the basket and suspended from a hook in the ceiling. Baby is then placed in the basket, which has previously been made comfortable by the aid of pillows. The basket is pulled down and allowed to fly back, thereby setting the spring in motion, and away we go. It requires but one pull and the novel spring vibrates for hours, much to the delight and satisfaction of Miss Baby.

How to Select a Turkey.

In this country only is the turkey found in a wild state. It is very fitting, therefore, that in the Thanksgiving dinner it should be the principal dish, writes Maria Parloa in her department in the Ladies' Home Journal. The turkey must be wisely chosen, well cooked and properly served. It should be short and plump, the meat white, with some fat, the legs black and smooth, and if there be spurs they should be short. At the end of the breastbone should be a flexible, more like gristle than bone. A turkey that is long in proportion to its size, and has dark or flabby flesh, may be tender, but certainly will not be finely flavored and juicy. A dry-picked turkey will be found to have a much better flavor than a scalded one. All poultry that is dry-picked roasts a few cents a pound more than that scalded, but is well worth the extra price.

MARY DUN THURMAN.

A Touching Tribute to the "Old Roman's" Devoted Helpmate.

Mrs. Thurman was born in Chillicothe in 1811. Her maiden name was Mary Dun. Her father, Walter Dun, was a wealthy landowner and merchant at that place. While Mary was still a young woman her father moved to Lexington, Ky. Here she married Mr. Tompkins, but he died after a few years, leaving one daughter, Nancy. She was married to Judge Thurman in November, 1845, and has been his always constant companion and helpmate since during his long professional and public career.

The history of the life that has just come out is sung in the following tribute, by a correspondent:

"The wife of Judge Thurman is a woman of eighty years, but to her husband she seems no older than she was when he married her, nearly half a century ago. They have grown old together in a most affectionate and beautiful way. Their union has served to vindicate the law of affinities and to present a choice example of domestic harmony, confidence and devotion. They have always been 'Mary and Allen' to each other with unswerving and simple fondness. The 'Old Roman,' as he is familiarly known in our politics, has not won his honors by forgetting for a moment the partner with whom he began the battle of life. It is said that no man can live up to his lovemaking, but this case must be rated as a sweet and wholesome exception. The love of old days which led to Mary he a bride has been repeated in his conduct as a husband. He has believed in her to such a degree that

THE RESULT.

Tuesday's city election shows that the Democracy of our city will have nothing to do with a mixed ticket. Past times have evidenced this fact, and the result of the recent city election gives more evidence. What the Democracy of Plainfield needs is organization. That they now do not have. While we know the Republicans have a large majority in the city, it is useless to talk about a fusion ticket. It never has (with only one exception) nor never will, succeed. Oil will not mix with water. Who is responsible for the Waterloo in Plainfield on Tuesday? Ask the Democratic conscience, and that, to, very shortly, and have an their watchword—1892.

FALSE PROPHETS.

When the McKinley Republicans passed their high taxation tariff measure, the promise was made by them that it would vastly increase the demand for and price of labor.

Has it done so?

Go ask the wage-earners!

The farmers of the West were also assured that the placing of a heavy duty on wool would certainly advance the selling rate of the American clip.

Instead of going up the price of domestic wool has gone down.

Go ask the farmers what they think of such promises now.

Then again, by enormously increasing the duty on tin plate, aids for the production of that indispensable article were at once to spring up like magic all over the land, giving employment to countless thousands of American workmen, and taxing railroad facilities to the uttermost in transporting the fabulous wealth of tin mines.

Where are the tin mines?

Where their finished products?

Where the host of employees?

Where the rich deposits of ore?

Echo answers—Soaring on the wings of imagination.

REFORM IS THE ISSUE.

Senator Carlisle is reported as saying —"The first duty of the Democratic party is to change the law under which the earnings of the people are taken away from them by unjust taxation for private purposes."

That clothes in proper language an important obligation, and its discharge by the incoming Congress would be a just response to the popular will.

To abstract from the hard earnings of the industrial masses of this country, under the guise of protection, or any other cunningly devised political scheme, for the enrichment of a special class, and the creation of arrogant combines, is to assault, not defend, the best industry, to extort from, not protect the pockets of the people.

The system is vicious from base to dome.

The tariff is a tax upon home wool-growers, and like all other kinds of taxation, to be endurable, strict equity must constitute its foundation.

Otherwise it will be built on sinking sand.

We believe in protection, practical tariff protection, levied for the general public good, and which, while producing ample revenue to meet the requirements of a judiciously administered government, will impartially encourage every species of American labor, industry and trade, and that subject may in division or interest to private or corporate rapacity.

That outlines a living issue for 1892.

TARIFF REFORM!

THE OUTLOOK.

The outlook for the success of the Democratic ticket in the coming Presidential campaign is most promising. The result throughout the country is foreshadowed, unless something most unforseen occurs. The Democratic party is in better trim in every State than for years past, and the contest will not depend on a few, but the opposition will have to meet the Democracy in many States where heretofore they have been compelled to do but little. The Republican party can no longer concentrate their money and other potent influences in certain localities, but will have to fight as well in Massachusetts as in New York, equally as hard in New Hampshire as in Connecticut, and as hard in Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan as they will in Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Colorado and Nevada. It will be a glorious fight all along the line, and the Democracy will be in it, and the fight is winning one for them. It will be fought in national, a very Democrat, wherever he may be, will have his duty to perform. Selfishness can have no place and should have no place where party fealty, party duty and party aim are at stake, and where every nerve and muscle should be dedicated to continued and unfaltering service for assured success. No Democrat should and no quarter will neglect his duty in 1892.

The Prosperity of Westfield.

THE PRESS is credibly informed that one citizen of Westfield has sold, since the middle of February last, lots and plots to the value of $29,552. That person is Chauncey B. Hosier. Last February was given in these columns a list of Dr. Ripley's sales with dates and amounts, effected by his surveyor, John M. C. Marsh. These sales extending over a not very long period amounted to $29,-500. Now, some discounts and considerations. If there is added now the proceeds of sales made subsequently to February 14, as given above, the total is nearly twice the amount.

Westfield is not Plainfield, but both are parts of Union county, located in central New Jersey, and on the line of the Central railroad. The sum resulted from the sales referred to above is $58,138 50. They're all by one citizen of this county. They are within five miles of Plainfield. They are sales of lots and plots to be built upon at once. The meaning is, in five years the lots and plots sold, with improvements, will be put by the tax list, not at $58,000 but at $3,000,000. In one year from now the land sold, with houses built and other improvements, will be assessed at $500,000. In five years at $1,000,000. In four years at $2,000,000. In five years at $3,000,000.

Let Westfield grow. Let some one in each of the other townships of Union do as much as the one in Westfield has done. City people are tired of flats and sea side and are coming to central New Jersey to stay.

The Plainfield charter election Tuesday brought to an end the most aggressive political campaign the city has known. The result of the contest is the complete overthrow of the "Big Six", in spite of the most stubborn fight they made. The causes that led to their defeat need no enumeration. CAN'T MAKE THIS MAN WHITE.

F. X. Schoenmaker Confesses It Would be too Big a Contract for His "Citizen Ticket".

In his speech at Music Hall, Monday evening, F. X. Schoenmaker drew the following sketch of a citizen, one conspicuous person about this city. The subject of the sketch pronounces the artist's work worth at least $50 a sitting.

"I had hoped to keep this discussion on a high plane and to have its result depend on principles. The issues are—Shall Plainfield be headed by a ring of political speculators, or shall the city of Plainfield use its franchises for the benefit of all its tax-payers by granting them for competition to bring down prices?

"But the other party has attempted, with all its power, to raise a row about irrelevant matters—to raise a dense cloud of dust for the purpose of distracting the attention of the voters and preventing them from seeing the real issue.

"One of the ring's methods has been the introduction of a new candidate. They boast that they control the three newspapers of the town, and that they have two of these papers doing the fair thing—one under cover while we don't know, but judging from the financial standing of the paper I should think it is going to require where they get the money. An investigation by the council we intend to elect may reveal the name of the party who is the tax-payers' friend.

"Now, as, with few exceptions, all my speeches are made in political campaigns during July, August and September, the audiences at the time are arranging the mental patty to make a pie puts me on the stage in summer with an object so, so that I may find an excuse to take it off and get re-engaged with the suspenders in the gallery. When Artemus Ward drew his great picture of Shenpheiss, having the New in mind, he inscribed beneath the steed 'This is a horse.' Asked why, he replied: 'For fear some folks might think it was a jackass.' This—he added—by way of parenthesis, for, you see, it brings out the ha-haw.

"The editor of the News says the Republican National committee pay me $50 a night for speaking. Ha-ha's be the prize too low? His statement shows that it is not safe to entrust confidences to him. If he were in the confidence of the committee and thus learned I got $50 or $100 a night for speeches, for making black Republican things white, the fact that he now divulges this confidential information—that he 'gives away' the secret that his party hired talent to whiten its black affairs—shows he was an unsafe man to entrust with party secrets. Upon this evidence, which he himself furnishes, we may safely hope that if he be let alone he will, sooner or later, let the Plainfield ring's cat out of the bag.

"Now, observe how the Big Six acted with the people's money as soon as they got control of it. They broke in on popular rights, in low taxes and in Plainfield! They found that the News was getting $3,000, a year out of the tax-payers of Plainfield for public printing. They saw that the proprietor of the News did not live in Plainfield, but that he took this money out of Plainfield tax-payers' pockets and spent it in Somerset county, where he votes and resides. So the Big Six took away the job of public printing from the News and gave it to the paper of the money at home in Plainfield, making the place $3,000 a year better off by this one stroke of patriotic economy.

"Some must rank only be induced to take active interest in public affairs by motives of personal gain! Such men usually suppose that all men are like themselves, and attribute to persons seeking good government the same motives that bend themselves to corruption. My only object in opposing this case, for I am opposing this citizens' movement, is that I am a citizen and a tax-payer, I desire low taxes, cheap water, cheap gas, cheap rents, cheap transportation—not for one night at $50, nor for two nights, at $100, but for all the time I hope to be a citizen of Plainfield. Not for self alone, but for the thousands of dollars' so that the reason for my political action in this campaign is plain is apparent, is palpable, is easily seen. But the reason for the attitude of the editor of the News in this contest is not so plain, is not so apparent, is not so easily seen. He does not reside here in this town; he does not reside here; and, therefore, it makes no material difference to him whether the gas, the water, the transportation, and the other issues of Plainfield, be high or be low. He will not as a citizen ever have to pay them. He is in Plainfield for what he can get out of Plainfield to spend in Somerset county. Now then, as he charges those opposed to him with having a business reason for their action, he will permit me to say and declare that he is, to say the least, no better than we are; and will allow that we have a right to question the reason for his attitude. As he is opposing those who took away from him the $3,000 a year he formerly got from the tax-payers of Plainfield, for public printing, and who are not enough, it may be that he is simply after revenge. While that may be a bad motive, it is not a corrupt motive. But motive, it is not a corrupt motive. But

FUN AT BARNET FAIR.

An Interesting Phase of County Life in England.

Horse Jockeys Now Things of the Past—Bicycle Polities and the Fair After the Conglomerated Cross-Country Steeplechase.

At Barnet the green slopes on either side the course, and the hill behind, would the town, presented the usual indescribable medley that reigns during the three days of the September fair. To the right of the road, says the Pall Mall Budget, the pastures were inexpressibly by the tents, and here the built of the shuffering crowd gathered. A more curious conglomeration of odd characters probably never came together in this vicinity. All the gipsy horsemen in this end of the kingdom, and an assortment of rustics and London sports such as one seldom sees outside of books, costumes that you would think no longer existed save in the prints in the windows of antiquary book dealers the originals of every variation of John Bull that ever was drawn and half of one's favorites of Dickens' creation there appeared as much alive as one could wish.

However, there is not much opportunity to study and stare, for it required the best of one's attention to escape being ridden down by the sellers in their wild and reckless endeavors to get the utmost possible action out of their animals for the admiring eyes of possible purchasers. The rough-and-ready jockeys, riding bare-backed and with halters by way of bridles, seemed to possess charmed lives, being thrown and banged about in the most amazing fashion without seeming to be affected in the slightest degree by it, particularly in regard to their lungs, which for strength and effectiveness were some degree beyond the unearthly steam whistle contrivance which crowns the merry-go-round across the slope. What with the effort to keep from under the hoofs of the rearing, plunging, frightened horses, and dodging the novel and ferocious expletives indiscriminately thrown about, affairs were anything but dull.

For uniqueness, variety and vigor Billingsgate is not in it at all as regards "English" as she is spoken at Barnet fair. For all the scant courtesy that passed between buyer and seller in their struggle for possession seemed to be in the best of good humor and took tumbles and hard knocks and getting off no harder than the wasting of some breath in adjectives. There was one much in request and insisted in the skirt of cattle, it being comparatively small and inferior in quality.

and announce that they are there for the amiable purpose of giving away gratis handfuls of coin and numbers of tickets, and of getting rid of anything that is certain to surround them. Not a few of London's artful dodgers were on the ground, as their fingers soon demonstrated. Both ways in the train so interesting little game of three-card monte was kept going, though no one seemed to bite save the evident pals of the sleek customers who dealt the pasteboard.

A few ladies ventured over to have a look at the Welsh ponies, but the nasty habit of one, who had been attracted from the town and country side, seemingly ingrained in the neighborhood of the gingerbread side of the grounds. While this part of the circus was not an overcrowded one, the neighborhood of the shanks and the swings and merry-go-rounds, and while they rode not so many people, they did more than their share of patronage. The weather was of the best, and hoarse seemed plentiful, and as far as could be seen there was no illness. Nye wrote to America of London Tower, "a success."

Money in the Combined Hand.

The St. Louis Republic tells of Officer Musgrove of the capitol police at Jefferson City, lately accepted to the charge of the capitol grounds. He set out to collect the swarm of bees which had settled in the cornices of the statue of the goddess of liberty. The figure is seventeen feet high and surmounts the dome of the capitol. Locomotives and Cheap.

There are about 30,000 locomotives in the United States, of which about 4,000 are used in hauling freight trains. It is estimated that these cost $450,000,000. There are 1,100,000 cars used for freight, of which 26,400 are passenger cars and the remainder freight or service cars. The former cars cost $60,000,000 and the latter $600,000,000 or an approximated cost of rolling stock of $1,060,000,000. To every mile of railroad in the United States there is a locomotive, to every mile of road there are six freight cars, to every five and one-half miles there is a passenger car. Each year a freight car loads 16,000 tons of load; each year a passenger engine pulls 50,000 passengers. The railways of the United States employ 750,000 persons. It is estimated that the railway interest provides a living for 3,000,000 people, or nearly one-twentieth of the population.

And a good lamp must be simple; when it is not simple it is always in trouble. Get the words mean much, but see the Rochester. The Rochester will impress the truth more forcibly. All metal, tough and seamless, and made in three pieces only. It is absolutely safe and wonderfully simple. Like Abdallah of old, it is indeed a "wonderful lamp," for its marvelous light is purer and brighter than gas light; softer than electric light and more cheerful than either.

Look for this stamp—"The Rochester"—on the burner. Genuine Rochester, and the style you want, sent to us for our new illustrated book, we will send you a Rochester Lamp, the equivalent of over $4,000 worth from the Largest Lamp Store in the World.

National Horse Show at Madison Square Garden, N. Y.

A Fashionable Fad with a Big Outlay—Who the Patrons Are—Prizes and Classes—Cultivation of the Hackney—Bright Prospects.

COPYRIGHT, 1891.

The chrysanthemum show will hardly have come to a close when the Madison square garden will be given up to another fashionable cult—this time to one in which the element of utility has a fair share. The horse show will begin there on Monday, November 16, and will last the entire week. It will be the seventh exhibition given by the National Horse Show association (limited), and the managers expect and are preparing for the biggest kind of success, both from a social and equine standpoint.

New York's four hundred are very horsey these times. The fad has been growing for a number of years, and, by-the-bye, ye knew, but also good in itself. It not only catches the fancy of people, but it is the most solid and sensible element of the social world. There is money in the cultivation of fine horses, and no humbug, too. Besides, there is no fad that admits of so much fashionable display. Then, again, when an owner can afford to keep them in regard of her high stepping carriage horses. If Mrs. Hamtree finds that her beauties raise their knees an inch higher than those of Mrs. Bean Monde, she is happy. If, on the contrary, if her daughter rides better and looks trimmer and simplier in her habit than her rival's girl, then she is in the seventh heaven. The fad has a thousand ramifications, from four-in-hand coaching down to the donkey cart by the seaside, and everybody who is anybody is either devoted to it or pretends to be.

So the horse show has been steadily increasing in favor year after year. The Jacobs Horse Repository is only patronized it as boosters and exhibitors, but have also gone there in swarms to see the horses and each other. It is said that over a hundred thousand persons visited the garden last year, and this year the number is expected to be passed. Of course, thousands who don't care a button for horses will visit the throng. They go because they love horses, just on the same principle that the dealers and breeders who love at the very smallness of the four hundred are among the most prominent exhibitors. Pretty nearly all classes help to swell the success of the show, and people hope that is one of the best features of it.

In the day time the show is not especially exciting. The judging goes on in the ring. The horsey element predominates in the afternoon, which is not very large. Such experts as Ned D. Brose, of the spirit of the Times; David Bonner, James R. Keene, J. H. Bradford, of Boston; A. J. Cassatt, the Pennsylvania railroad president; Col. E. H. Ayer, of Newport; Dean Sage, of Albany, and Col. W. Edwards, of Cleveland, are in charge of the stalls. They divide the work by classes, according to their special qualifications, and they keep at work in a systematic fashion, which is only interesting from a business point of view.

But when the ball is lit the scene changes. Fillmore floods the place with music; the gay crowd flocks in. The garden is one mass of color and odor. Then are given all the fancy exhibitions. The parade of the mounted police, the trials of the fire engine horses, and the national guard exhibitions. All these are picturesque and beautiful displays. Then there are hunter riding and high jumping, and this latter was pushed to such a limit last year that there has been much talk of setting a limit of Leo's marvelous record of seven feet. The record still has only once been beaten. In any show, not more than one of the horses would be found to equal that, and if there were two, it is proposed to make the award on the basis of style and steadiness in taking the jump. The stream of this exercise on the spectators is almost irresistible. Women fainted last year and they will do it again this. Several times there have been ugly accidents to the leaping riders.

Among the jumpers—features of next year's show and probable winners in this—are Mr. H. L. Herbert's fine hunter, Thanksgiving. Miss Jones's hunter Merry Boy, the handsome mare Spindle owned by Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs, and Leo, the record high jumper of seven feet. Mr. Thomas Hitchcock, Jr.'s hunter Good Times, S. R. Hoag's Lucy, and Mr. Herbert Bleecker's chestnut mare Consequence.

Mr. Prescott Lawrence's hackney stallion Faudon is after another prize, and will meet his old competitor, Dr. Webb's Sapphire, and the Alabaster of the Highland farm and C. J. Hamlin's Mambrino king will be among the leading trotters to show. They attempate in first prize winning and the contest is always sharp. The handsome saddle horse Lady, a first prize winner, belonging to Mrs. Charles L. Hyde, will again be a candidate for honors.

This year there is to be added a new fancy attraction in the shape of Haute Ecole, or high school riding. This is the training of horses in fancy accomplishments, such as dancing steps, kneeling to pick up his master's whip and a dozen other tricks. Some persons do not favor this class of exhibition, regarding it as savoring too much of the circus ring; but others consider it the highest development of training, as showing the greatest development of intelligence in the horse, and of sympathy between him and his trainer.

Some great suffer were also recruited made by about 100 horses. This year there are about 700 stalls and the total number of entries is nearly 1,000. The animals are divided into 111 classes, including 31 open to all comers. The prizes offered by the association aggregate over $20,000 in value. They range from $500 to $100 for first prizes and from $200 to $25 for seconds and thirds. The entrance fees range from $25 to $5. The special prizes amount to about $5,000 more. They are offered by the Coaching club, the Tandem club, the New York Riding club, a few dealers, and by a few rich individuals such as Mr. R. Fulton Cutting, Mr. John A. Logan, Jr., Mr. J. Rodman Roosevelt, Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Mr. Prescott Lawrence and Mr. Reginald W. Rives. They are generally designed for the indulgence of some personal fad such as high-stepping, long-tailed horses or those with dramtic horses. Sometimes they are made to include whole runs, such as "coach and four in hand teams," "brougham and pair," or "best pair of roadsters and road rig." Mr. Theodore W. Havemeyer offers one for the best professional coachman.

The eighty-one regular classes are grouped under the following heads: Thoroughbreds, Arabs, trotters, roadsters, Cleveslales, Normans, hackneys, coaching stallions, horses in harness, carriage horses, tandems, four-in-hand teams, cobs and ponies in harness, saddle horses, galloways, cobs and ponies under saddle, pony stallions and brood mares, hunters (including jumping classes), polies horses and mules. Since that time his works have followed rapidly one after another. The Century and Harper's have been the only newspapers that have published a line of his work.

In 1890-91 Mr. Howells was again in Europe with his family, and since his return has been in Boston. 1892 he becomes a salaried contributor to Harper's.

The Lost Rio.

A puzzle for geologists is the Lost river of Idaho. It first appears in two forks of stream north of the Yellowstone park. These streams, after their forty miles above Idaho Falls City, and, forming a rapid river, flow along for about 15 miles when the entire volume of the water disappears suddenly in a subterranean passage. A theory very generally entertained is that the Lost river comes to the surface again as part of the Snake river, which supplies Idaho Falls City with its wonderful water power. The Snake river has its origin in a little lake in Yellowstone park that does not hold enough water to be the source of a great river. Nevertheless the Snake is 1,000 feet wide, a short distance below the city, and in its limits pours a vast volume of water through a deeply-cut gorge. How the river is so deep that a minimum of nearly 600 feet has not touched bottom As the Snake river is originally an immense lakelet stream the theory that the waters of the Lost river unite with it seems to be feasible, although geologists have been unable to demonstrate the fact.

tional grand horsers. Of course the sub-division is various. There are classes for horses, mares and foals, and separate opportunities for gentlemen's and ladies' horses and professionals. Professional horsemen will be on hand to show all ladies' horses.

This year the size horses only figure in one special class. The hackneys promise to be the feature of the exhibition from a strictly horsey point of view. The entries are very numerous, and there has been a rush of applications for them, aggregating $4,500. They were introduced last year at the instance of Mr. Jacobs, and this year's display has greatly increased the interest in them. All entries must have pedigrees recorded in the hackney stud book, of England. The horses are all imported and vary in value from $500 to $5,000. It is said that the aggregate value of this year's entries in the hackney class exceeds that of the garden itself.

In past years, the horses entered have come chiefly from scattered states. This year, the management caters to the west. Arrangements have been made with the trunk line railroads by which full carloads of horses entered to the west unload within thirty days of the close of the show will be returned free to the point from whence they came, their transportation thus costing their owners only the full fare one way.

Among the horses exhibited will be a set of Irish hunters, recently imported by ex-Mayor William R. Grace, of New York. Mr. Grace's celebrated Tenny will also be on exhibition. All the big stables and stud farms, as well as gentlemen and breeders, will be represented, and it is believed the collection of horse flesh will be the finest ever seen in this country.

The Literary Career of William Dean Howells.

His Early Life a Bold Struggle for Independence—Fame and Honors Won Under Adverse Conditions—His Later Triumphs.

William Dean Howells came of sturdy stock. His ancestors on the paternal side were Welsh Quakers. His grandfather was a born believer in free republican government, and came to America with those principles firmly implanted in him. He became a pronounced Methodist, but his son, the father of the novelist, was a believer in the doctrines of Swedenborg, in which also William Dean was educated. His father was a man of more than ordinary culture, possessed an excellent library, and by his and generation, and the boy was brought up in an atmosphere of books and culture. He also had a taste for literature, and almost as soon as he could read William Dean made verses and put them in type in the office of his father.

William was born at Martin's Ferry, O., March 1, 1837. The family left his father removed to Hamilton, O., where he bought the Intelligencer, a weekly newspaper. It was there the novelist learned to "stick type" when he was only 11 years old. In 1849 the father sold his paper because he could not consentiously support a president who believed in slavery, and he removed to Dayton, where he bought the Transcript, a semi-weekly, and made a daily of it. This failed, however, and the boy of about twelve left. Of the elder Howells was a clerk of the house at the state capitol, and William was a man of more than ordinary culture, possessed an excellent library for his nal was transferred to Jefferson, where they issued it.

At the age of 19 William Dean Howells became Columbus correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette; and at the age of 20 he was literary editor of the State Journal at Columbus. It was during this period that he began to contribute to the Atlantic Monthly, his first poem being entitled "By the Dead." He contributed one or five or six poems during that time to the Atlantic. In 1860, when Lincoln was assassinated, he wrote his life, and his share of the profits, one hundred and sixty dollars, paid his expenses on a trip made to Montreal and Boston. While at "The Hub" he formed the acquaintance of James Russell Lowell, then the editor of the Atlantic, and by him the young poet was introduced to Oliver Wendell Holmes. He was appointed by President Lincoln United States consul to Venice, where he remained from 1861 to 1865. It was during this period that he published his Italian travel, language, read Italian literature, and devoted himself to thorough cultivation of polite letters. He published a series of letters on "Venetian Life," published in book form in 1866, and which gave him a prominent position in literary circles. It is said that Venice was never so faithfully described.

His first real story was that called "Their Wedding Journey," which was from the Atlantic. This story terminated the career as a writer of fiction. Howells proceeded to the North American Review of Oct. 1, 1871, and from that time his career has been steadily ready market at the easiest class of pay for his graphic work, and he has been for if he doesn't want to heal his wounds.

The first year the yield of wheat in the two Dakotas and Minnesota is put far from one hundred and fifty million bushels. Consider the enormous wheat area in this country, and the world's supply is not all profit, of course; but a large part of it might be called profit. Consider the enormous yield of labor, and it will be an enormous benefit to the population of the United States that the yield of corn of the country will shade it in.

Such an influx of money, the distribution is rapidly being made throughout the country, where a few men acquired vast fortunes by land speculations, we could by this and equitable measures divide up the enormous riches of the Astors, Vanderbilts, Goulds and Rockefellers, and make them happy. It would be among the best things that could happen. A hundred thousand dollars is enough for any one man to have, and half a million is a superfluity. Then if a great plan needed to be carried out, it could be done by bank or corporation capital. How to bring about changes to this nation is threatened in the concentration of wealth in a few hands. An enormous individual capital working by methods of secrecy which are at the command of a crafty millionaire does not buy almost anything or anybody. Some judges even can be bought, at least much cheaper than people think. Therefore may happen again. Certain measures of the legislature, sometimes amounting to majorities, are always purchasable. Given on one side a rich, crafty, silent man who desires to get judges and lawmakers under the other side judges and lawmakers who are ready to be bought, and you have a combination and a perpetual menace to free institutions.

And never a word about the world's fair. People on the Atlantic seaboard make a mistake if they think the world's fair at Chicago is going to be a Chicago affair, or an Illinois cattle show, as some sneerers have named it. Chicago is not handling the world's fair. The United States have the job in hand, and the location of the enterprise is a mere incident. The fair ought to be somewhere; New York, Washington, St. Louis, Cincinnati and Chicago wanted it. One could only be selected, and therefore four had to be disappointed. But at the proper time all of them, and the communities which they represented, will put their shoulders to the wheel and the great movement will go on.

Chicago got the prize of the location because she worked for it. There is a certain spirit in that town. It is aggressive and proud, and full of insistance. It exists and it shows itself in one's regard. It is a spirit that people didn't thoroughly comprehend this; they took it for granted that the accessibility of that town would agree with them that New York city would. There is in this country to hold a world's fair; and while they reposed quietly in this belief the Chicago men went to work and used all the arts of persuasion known to mankind, kowaling as well to prejudice as to their patriotism, and in short they "got there."

Perhaps after all, Washington would have been the best place. It is certainly the capital of our great nation, and the nation's glory and strength are embodied there in the legislature, which next to the invisible institutions of freedom are the most impressive lessons of power in the universe. Then in Washington the United States own the land; the district of Columbia belongs to no state in particular; it is just as much a part of Illinois or the Dakotas, or California, as of New York or Massachusetts. The United States, through its congress, could have voted and erected public buildings that would have been permanent, and other nations could have deposited their fabrics and works of service, and we could have had a sort of perpetual world's fair there; and the state pride of every state would have been encouraged, and no one's feelings would have suffered. This was a favorite dream of mine, but it is too late.

There will, however, be a great display in Chicago. Chicago has the finest location in the country; the city itself in spite of all sizes upon the small river that sweeps through it, is a noble one. Its citizens think there is not such energy elsewhere in the whole world, and they will strive to impress the same belief upon the minds of all the world at the proper time.

KING OF THE CANYON.

A Hunting Episode in the Mountains of Colorado.

How a Bold Sportsman Dispatched a Giant Member of the Bear Family—A Record of Expectation and Intense Excitement.

Presently a low hiss from our guide called our attention to him, writes Edward Roberts in a graphic account of an article on hunting in Colorado a few years ago. His face was ablaze with excitement, and he pointed silently he came creeping to us and whispered: "I seen him!"

"Where?"

"Creep 'round yer and look down—right below yer. Ain't he an ole bear. Then the guide crept forward and took another look and whispered: "He's a big 'un, all right. I seen him. He walked 'roun' that rock and looked bigger'n a steer. We'll jest lay low for a bit, for we don't 'calkle' on seein' as ever yer seen, an' I reckon he's a den down under there."

We waited for half an hour, watching intently. It was not more than seventy-five yards to where the guide had seen the bear, but we could not make it quite feasible for a man to descend to his level. Finally, "Sam" suggested that caution was going to extremes.

"Yer want ter be mighty keerful," said the guide; "if he gets his eyes on yer he'll go for yer sure."

"Sam," said: "All right, you follow please yourselves to cover and I'll go down. I'm going to see that bear if it takes a leg." Forthwith he began a circuitous descent, carefully and slowly lowering himself from point to point and from ledge to ledge until he was barely forty yards from the supposed den. We walked and watched with rifles ready and nerves strung to the breaking point. "Sam" had halted in a crouching position and was peering keenly down when the crisis suddenly arrived. A big piece of shaly rock, loosened by his movements, started to roll down and bounded from ledge to ledge in small avalanche of pebbles and grit, ill with a crash upon the shelf-like level where the bear had been.

THE KING OF THE CANYON.

A moment later an immense rusty-brown head seemed to protrude from out of the solid rock. Then a huge body, from both to see who dared invade his stronghold. He was immediately below "Sam" and within easy rifle range, but the crisis suddenly and locked to be so close that he might have been almost touched with the rifle, though in reality the distance between them was about thirty yards. Therefore the bear, who had his face before even realized that the avalanche of stones was caught the butt of his rifle, and the next instant struck him fair and true in the back of his massive head and laid him dead in his very doorway. "Sam" started to spring to another ledge, but he was too late. He paused very little and he proceeded directly toward the fallen monarch to gaze on his prostrate form. Then he turned to us and beckoned to us to come down. We descended and approached as fast as possible, for we were impatient to see the result of "Sam's" shot. He carefully rolled, however, the head to us to know. Next we saw that the bear had been wounded by a rifle ball, with twenty-four of our prize, with the guide drew a long breath and remarked: "Gentlemen, dead polathhank into it. But "Splendid" was a thoroughly good bear, though the guide said he was a big 'un. Yes, he was, and I believe rightly enough.

"Sam" proved to be a big old bear, much the largest our guide had seen. His enormous bulk—he was fat and sleek—his long, sharp claws and terrible curved claws were almost terrifying, even in death, and he certainly would have proved a dangerous customer had fate ordained he should have had half a fair chance. As it was, he was a magnificent and magnificent trophy fairly enough, and took it all coolly and as a matter of course.

Hatchback—Yes, I have just perched up there when his head showed; were you seated?"

Mr. Asker—"Then what the deuce made you climb so when you slipped?"

A knowing wink was the sole answer.

Types on the Income.

Of late years steps have been taken to prevent the destruction of forests by fire in certain districts in India. This care has had one curious result. Cover and water, which vanished with the forests, have again become common, and there has consequently been a large increase in the number of tigers. For the same reason there has also been an enormous increase in the number of wild deer. In one sense it is fortunate that the deer have grown in numbers with the tigers, for the latter have preyed upon them instead of upon cattle and human beings. When, however, they shall have scared away the deer, or have become tired of venison, they will probably prowl around villages and play havoc with cattle, besides killing their man or two.

To the Public.

The virtues of the Bass Ales and Guinness Stout are known the world over; and all physicians recognize their efficiency as aids to the convalescence of patients in their tonic effect upon the system. These ales are the purest brewed and cannot be approached in excellence by any other malt drink in existence.

A combination of the Bass Ale and Guinness Stout in equally fixed proportions makes a drink that combines the lightness and bouquet of one with the body and sustenance of the other.

It is found that this half and half makes a splendid tonic that not only invigorates the system but feeds it and builds it up. The market is filled with fancy compounds of whiskey and drugs under the name of tonics. Most of these so-called tonics are absolutely dangerous; and none of them do more than stimulate the bodily faculties.

The half and half gently stimulates; it gives strength; it gives sustenance; it solidly builds up; and it is absolutely pure and innocuous. It is adapted for all whose systems need toning up, for convalescents, nursing mothers, etc.

I am agent for the Bull's Head bottling of this incomparable tonic and for the Bull's Head brand of Bass Ale. Give the half and half a trial; you will not regret it.

SPEER'S PORT GRAPE WINE IS BOTTLED AS THE BEST FOR EXPLAINS.

Speer's Port Grape Wine,
FOUR YEARS OLD.
THIS Celebrated Wine is the pure juice of the Grape, carefully expressed from the choicest vineyards, and left long until very strong and delicious. Entirely unfermented. Guaranteed to be invaluable.

Tonic and Strengthening Properties are guaranteed by any other Wine. Being pure, it is the best for Communion purposes. Unfermented to the pure sweetness. We guarantee it to keep in any climate. The principal object in placing this Wine before the public is to introduce it as a Tonic. It is particularly beneficial to the aged and debilitated and skilled to the various ailments that afflict the weaker sex.

It is in every respect a WINE TO BE RELIED ON.

Speer's Unfermented Grape Juice
Is the juice of the Concord Grape, preserved in its natural state, and is made from the Grapes by fumigation and electricity, thereby destroying the carbon of fermentation. It is perfectly pure, free from spirits, and will keep in any climate.

Speer's Sacramental Claret
Is held in high estimation for its richness as a dry Table Wine, especially suited for Communion.

Speer's P. J. Sherry
Is a Wine of superior character, and partakes of the rich qualities of the grape from which it is produced.

Speer's P. J. Brandy
IS A PURE distillation of the grape, not manufactured in this country for medical purposes. It has a perfect flavor, and is free from fusel oil.

LADY WATERLOW.

An American Lady Thoroughly at Home in England.

She Is Quite Handsome—Has a Passion for Amateur Theatricals—Her Acquaintance and Trust the Admiration of Her Friends.

A recent issue of the Lady's Pictorial, of London, contains a portrait and sketch of Lady Waterlow, from which the information is gleaned that she has been married and living in England nine years. She is the daughter of the late William Hamilton, Esq., of Napa, California. Mr. Hamilton was a man of unusual intellectual ability and attainments, and his family were surrounded from their earliest childhood by an atmosphere of refinement and culture. Her mother was a woman of generous kindness, keen discrimination, and a decided sense of humor. Neither parent was a native of America. The father being Scotch, and the mother Irish, by descent, and the blending of these two nationalities is strongly marked in Lady Waterlow, added to which are the nervous energy, quick insight, and keen appreciation peculiar to the American temperament, attributes which in her case round and complete a charming character into a delightful whole.

LADY WATERLOW.

Her eyes are large and full, changing in color with the blending of her emotions, always expressive and often beautiful; the brows above them are delicately but decidedly marked, the forehead is broad and noble, betokening a mind thoughtful, sincere, and just, as well as generous. Her hands are characteristically American, slim, small, nervous, white, and blue-veined, with tapering finger tips, ending in exquisitely dainty nails, beneath the shell-like roundness of which the pink flesh deepens to a more rosy hue. In manner she is very agreeable, full of vivacity and life, talking often quite brilliantly, and always to the point. She is liberal minded and large ideased, according to every one a faithful as well as she claims for herself. She has traveled extensively and well, and has brought back from her many wanderings a varied experience of men and morals, which she often puts to practical use with happy results.

SHOOTS WATER BULLETS.

An Oriental Fish That Goes Hunting with His Own Little Gun.

The archer fish is a unique product of the Indian ocean. There is some talk of getting him for the Gamma next year. Says the New York Journal: They think he could develop great speed with a ball, for he can shoot water with precision and force. When he sees a fly he wants he doesn't lie around waiting till he can jump for him; he just swallows a pint of water and then discharges it at the fly, which generally falls at the first shot. The archer fish can make a bully eye on a dragon fly at 5 feet and not perspire, either. The bullets of water leave the mouth without any noise, so that the victim receives no warning. It is said that the Central park authorities are trying to get a specimen for the aquarium. Jersey folks want him planted in their rivers and sea gaps, believing he would soon diminish the mosquito crop.

Some Gigantic Horses.

Among curiosities recently unearthed by the excavations of the Royal Society, London, none are better calculated to excite the astonishment than the enormous jaw bone of a large horse, lately dug up in a peat bog near Caddoe Moor in August of the present year. Dr. William Sykes Gilpin gives the following table of measurement of these horses in feet and inches:

	Ft.	In.
From the uppermost tips of each horn of	2	9
From the tip of the right horn to its root &	1	0
From the tip of the same horn to the tip of the opposite horn &	2	7½
From the tip of the longest, within the brackets	2	6

These are the largest fossil horns yet found in the British Isles.

erally, if one might judge from the conversations on the subject wherever the fair sex congregate. The new style of dresses was evidently never designed for the high equinoctial gales that come down Market street, dispersing torn handbills, paper boxes, oyster cans, desiccated rats and, the other superfluous lumber of our magnificent and beautifully-paved Boulevards. It was a sight for any modest man to witness last week when the cyclonic disturbance and the pull-back drove were wrestling on the Market street crossings.

A couple of intrepid school-teachers ventured out in the height of the gale on Wednesday to the ocean beach to see Old Neptune shake his hoary locks at Boreas. It was a fine day—that is, the ocean, not the teachers. The latter presented such a sensational spectacle when the frisky gale took them, so to speak, in its arms and tossed them around the beach like a couple of corks, that a relief expedition was sent out from the life-saving station to rescue them. It was deemed advisable that the head of the station, a married man of forty years' experience, should approach the distressed ladies under cover of a large family umbrella. The other life-savers hid behind a small hill the circus had ended and the pair of terror-stricken maidens had been secured from further violence of the gale by having their skirts wound round their limbs with several fathoms of hay rope.

AN HISTORICAL CHURCH.

One of England's Landmarks to Be Rebuilt and Remodeled.

Last year a movement was set on foot to restore the parish church of Burnham Thorpe, in Norfolk, of which place Lord Nelson's father was for a long time rector, and where the great admiral himself was born in 1758. It was proposed to rebuild the church as much as possible on the lines of the old building as Nelson knew it. The Duke of Edinburgh is the chairman of the committee appointed for the purpose. The scheme also includes the erection of a public hall by way of memorial, the foundation stone of which has just been laid, and will cost in all $10,000.

Life on the American Frontier.

Kootenai as a frontier town of Idaho of the type that Bret Harte has made familiar to the world, and it is as wicked a place as fiction could paint it. Two months ago Kootenai was a lonely flag station; to-day it houses in theories and keeps four thousand laborers who are building an extension of the Great Northern railroad, and, of course, the gamblers and dive keepers who live from them. In one day there were seven robberies and two murders in Kootenai. At the coroner's inquest the stereotyped verdict was found. "Came to his death at the hands of persons unknown." Although everybody goes armed, the kicksawman is abroad at noon. An attempt was made to lynch the sheriff. Affairs resulted disastrously and the reformers became married men. A secret society has been formed to suppress the desperadoes.

She Returned the Compliment.

There is a curious marriage custom in Brittany. At the close of the wedding ceremony, the bridegroom gives the bride a box on the ear saying:

"I know I have it coming, but you make me vexed," after which he kisses her, adding: "And thus when you treat me well."

A Breton once married a German lass from Swabia, and gave her the usual salute on leaving the altar. But the resolute damsel, ignorant of the prevailing custom, without waiting for the kiss dealt her swain a box on the ear clout on the side of the face and said:

"Look here; I'll have none of that!"

The young fellow rubbed his cheek, and knew now, at least, that his better half would not stand any nonsense.—London Tit Bits.

"NEXT TO NOTHING."

Life.

Railroad Remarks.

"Can you tell me," he asked, as he entered an office on Broad street the other day, "why the railroad should discriminate so heavily against dressed meat over live animals?"

"Certainly, sir. Dressed meat is dead, isn't it?"

"Of course."

"Well, anything that can't kick is always bullied by a railroad company."—Texas Siftings.

Anxiety Caused It.

Philanthropist—What's the matter? Tramp—Nervous prostration.

Philanthropist—Impossible! That disease is caused by overwork or mental anxiety.

THE GRADY MONUMENT.

One of the Finest Works of Art in the South.

It Crowns One of the Finest Spots at Atlanta, Ga.—A Tribute of Young Men to the Memory of the Noble Southerner.

The monument is of granite and stands on a terrace with molded edges, 16 feet square and 4 feet high. The terrace is surrounded by a brass railing. The pedestal proper stands on the terrace and is about 11 feet high. It consists of three bases, the top one of which is molded and supports a polished die with a molded cornice, on which stands the bronze statue of Mr. Grady. The statue is nearly 10 feet in height. It represents Mr. Grady in the act of addressing a public meeting, his frock coat thrown open, the right arm, with a bunch of manuscript in his hand, lying across the breast. It is a speaking likeness. On the eastern side of the monument is a bronze statue of "Memory," while on the west is one representing "History." On the front of the bases is a large palm branch and wreaths in bronze. On the various sides of the pedestal are the following inscriptions:

THE GRADY MONUMENT.

HENRY W. GRADY.
JOURNALIST, ORATOR, PATRIOT
Born in Athens, Ga., May 24, 1850.
Died in Atlanta, Dec. 23, 1889.
Graduated at the State University at Athens in the year 1868. Was Editor of The Atlanta Constitution for Nearly Half of Short Period of Its Life.

WHEN HE DIED HE WAS LOVED. ALL LOVING A NATION INTO TEARS.

THIS BOY LITTLE KNOWS THE LEGACY HE LEFT. Let him who loves his country best, strive to do the most for it. Let him who loves it most, be most willing to sacrifice himself for it. Let him who would serve it, serve it in the humblest way. Let him who would honor it, honor it by making his own life pure and noble. Let him who would save it, save it by teaching its children that they are the children of God, and that they are brothers one of another. Let him who would love it, love it as the mother of us all, every State in our Union.

[From Mr. Grady's speech at the annual banquet of the Boston Merchants' association in December, 1889.]

THE CITIZEN STANDING IN THE DOORWAY OF HIS HUMBLE HOME, WITH HIS FAMILY GATHERED ABOUT HIM AT THE HEARTHSTONE, WHILE THE EVENING OF A WELL-SPENT DAY SINKS UPON HIM, AND THE NIGHT OF DEATH DESCENDS UPON HIS FAMILY, SHALL WRITE THE EPITAPH OF HIS OWN SLAVE.

GRAND OFFICERS AT JERUSALEM.

Worshipful Brother Ford Highly Commended for His Work, by the Most Prominent Masons of the State.

The closing days of worshipful brother Ford's first year's administration as master of Jerusalem lodge, F. and A. M., of this city, are being crowned with success, and good attendances at his lodge communications.

Tuesday evening, the 17th ult., was set apart for the grand lodge affairs when a goodly number were present, among them being M. W. Grand Master, Thomas W. Tilden; R. W. Bro., James H. Durand, Deputy Grand Master; R. W. Bro., Charles Belcher, Senior Grand Warden; R. W. Bro., F. Randolph, Junior Grand Warden; R. W. Brothers, Moore and Schoder, District Deputy Grand Masters; Past Grand Master, Robert M. Moore; and Past District Deputy Grand Master, F. Herring, of this city. Lodges in the vicinity of Plainfield were also represented, particularly Atlas lodge, of Westfield, headed by Worshipful Bro. Colby, and Solomon's lodge, of Somerville, under the guidance of Worshipful Bro., Dilts. The lodge having been duly opened the grand lodge officers were received in due form and duly received with "grand honors."

Worshipful brother Ford assisted by his officers exemplified the first section of master mason degree in a highly commendable manner, which called forth very flattering remarks from the lips of the grand lodge officers present. The second degree had been conferred the pleasant part of the programme was indulged in which consisted of speech making by the grand lodge officers. Right worshipful brother the grand master, who was intently listened to. Most worshipful brother Tilden remarked that it was the first time he had been at Jerusalem, and while perhaps during there he found the place and brethren very cheerful indeed. He expressed his gratification at the prosperity of the lodge and the intelligent appearances of the members. After giving the brethren some wholesome advice he closed his remarks. Right worshipful brother Durand was in an exceedingly happy vein, and captivated his hearers with his eloquent words. He congratulated the worshipful master and his associates on the condition of the work, and congratulated the members in belonging to a lodge whose history reaches back to the twenties.

He urged the brethren not only to work the ritual in a becoming manner, but to practice the tenets and principles of the order in their lives and actions. Right worshipful brother Belcher, whose genial countenance always brightened up the assemblages he seemed to be present, was next called upon and endeavored to be relieved from making an address because he had not anticipated such a great failure, but the brethren got a taste of the distinguished brother's eloquence and thoughts. Right worshipful brother Randolph, whose experience as an officer is worth much, commended the lodge in having such efficient workers and expressed his appreciation of having been present to see and hear it. Past grand master, Robert M. Moore, then gave one of his characteristic talks, which was much enjoyed by his hearers. He said that the visitation to the Plainfield lodges were always pleasing to him and that Jerusalem and Another lodges always had a tender spot in his heart.

He recalled the days when he and R. W. brother Freeman of Plainfield occupied the East in their respective lodges at the same time, and after office he had fought but liked and pleasant thoughts of Jerusalem lodge. He often thought of the seasons as the city of peace, and sought to apply the meaning to Jerusalem lodge. His personal references and pleasantries of past masters Sebring, Cortell and Hedfield brought laughter upon the heads of many. In closing he advised all to live in the present as to fit a destiny for the future. Right worshipful brother Randolph, of Solomon's lodge, complimented the brethren of Jerusalem lodge in having such a beautiful home and expressed to the brethren of his district to model after it. District deputy grand master Schoder was the last but not the least of the speakers. His extreme modesty made him appear to be very timid and to shine brilliantly in the presence of the galaxy of lights, beauty, etc., which surrounded him. His remarks were, however, very acceptably received.

After the addresses were made the grand master officially declared the lodge closed in "due form," and the brethren repaired to the tempting room where a repast, prepared by brothers Blackford, Wooden, Buskie and Yanbicke, was partaken of. The brothers who prepared the tables are amateurs but it was voted by all present that they might well rank with professionals at the service.

Many letters of regret and telegrams of distinguished brethren were received like that of the Governor, worshipful brother Jesse Alcott, would have been present if he could have possibly possessed another engagement. Grand instructor Haines telegraphed his best wishes, and would have been present if his business would have permitted. Past grand master Congden wrote his sincere regrets for being able to be present. Past grand master Mann also wrote that business engagements prevented his being present. Letters were also received from Past Grand Secretary Beckhel, grand secretary Holway, deputy grand secretary Robb, R. W. brother Fortmeyer, grand junior steward Gelpke, district deputy grand masters Beach, Wilkins and several others. The evening's work was pronounced by all present, and it was proven that "Merry Hearts Blessed with Peace"—Royal Preceptress.

CAREY OFFERS A COMPROMISE.

He Still Demands Pay from the City for Work He Never Did.

A communication that is in some respects a remarkable one was received by the common council last night from Tunis J. Carey, the deposed police constable. Though the letter was signed by Carey, its spelling was singularly correct, and it is evident that Carey has evidently got a lawyer to prepare it for him. Here it is:

To the honorable the common Council of the city of Plainfield:

Gentlemen—On April 1, 1890, an effort was made to remove me from the office of Chief of Police of this city, and I have been prevented from exercising the duties of said office from that time, although I have tendered myself ready and willing to do so, and the courts have decided that the said removal was illegal.

I was elected on February 1, 1890, for the term of one year, and served and was paid for the two months following that time, and for the month following I have a legal claim against the city for the remaining ten months of the year for which I was elected, at $60 per month, making $600 in all.

I understand that your honorable body are willing to pay me for the months of April, May and June, but not for action has been taken in any form for the other seven months of the year.

In view of the grievous action taken by you as above stated, and the unable to remove me from office, I do not feel disposed to accept any less compensation for the full amount due me, and am willing to allow a reduction on receipt of my salary for April, May and June, 1890, and consider the salary due me for the remaining seven months of my term. Respectfully,

TUNIS J. CAREY.

On motion of councilman Hetfield, and by unanimous vote, the communication was tabled.

A SPLIT IN THE RANKS.

Councilmen Hetfield Resents the "Big Six," and the Street Light Installation Falls Flat.

All was not smooth sailing in the local hall of legislation Monday. The "Big Six" split three times, and the matter of investigating the charges against the present lighting service was badly muddled.

To begin with, councilman Spangenberg as chairman of the committee on lights declined to approve the bill for street lighting, and action on that bill was therefore deferred. Then Mr. Spangenberg for the committee presented a petition from the Edison Electric Light company of North Plainfield, and recommended that the company be granted the privilege of extending its line into this city, provided it would put its wires underground.

Councilman Ackerman objected to rushing the proposed franchise through so hurriedly, and moved to table the petition. Those voting with him were councilman Hetfield of the "Big Six" and councilmen Glenn, Johnston, Rossmore and Gee. This was a majority of one.

Then councilman Hetfield introduced a resolution that a special committee of three be appointed to investigate the charges against the lighting system. Mr. Ackerman alone opposed this.

Mr. Hetfield followed up his victory with a resolution to appropriate $50 for the committee's use from the "secret service" fund—bearing the memo that the committee on police had long held for special detective service.

This brought Mr. Ackerman to his feet with an indignant protest. He argued that the complaints against the light ought to have been looked into before the new contract for 1892 was signed. The chairman of the committee on lights was continued—admits that the present charges were in his possession before the signing of the contract, yet at the time of granting the contract had reported that it was a most favorable one.

Mr. Ackerman added that he was anxious for an investigation if the information now in possession of the committee really warranted it, but he protested against paying for a "pig in a poke."

Mr. Glenn urged that the evidence already secured be submitted to the council, and Mr. Ackerman added that if it was submitted and it was found that it really amounted to anything then it was time enough to reimburse necessary expenditures that had been incurred.

Mr. Hetfield said that the committee had employed an expert and had found that instead of being 35-candle-power the street lamps were only from 19 to 17.

Mr. See held that the electric light company ought to be made a party to any investigation. The present procedure he thought was too one-sided.

Mr. Glenn argued that the lighting circuit had been illegally tampered with, and that lamps had been appropriated. He held that even city officials had no right to take away the company's property.

President Smith made an angry reminder, saying that he assumed the right to take lamps for examination, in the interests of the city.

Mr. Ackerman's motion to table the resolution for an appropriation was carried by the vote of 6 to 5, councilman Moffett again voting with the "Little Five".

Mr. Hetfield promptly declined to serve on the committee. Mr. Spangenberg followed suit, saying that he was not going to spend any more money out of his own pocket, and that he had done enough of that this year. Mr. Smith also declined, and the committee was a nonentity. The lobby laughed heartily.

This ended the effort to conduct an investigation.

ABUSE OF FIREMEN'S PRIVILEGES.

Councilmen Complained a Ball Assistant Engineer, of Tips and Jury Duty.

The city of Plainfield loses each year a considerable amount of taxes on account of the firemen's exemption law, by which each fireman is allowed exemption on the worth of property. The principle on which this exemption is all right, but the abuse of the privilege has been great, and the tax-payers will be glad to learn that a halt is to be called.

Monday the usual monthly application for fire department membership was presented to the common council.

Councilman Hetfield protested that the department was already large enough, and chief Doane corroborated him that it was ample to do all service. Mr Hetfield said that too many joined merely to get rid of taxes and jury duty. He therefore moved that the petition be not received and that no more firemen be elected this year. All voted aye but Mr. Ackerman.

A WOMAN'S PLAINT.

Mrs. Higbee Says Her Husband's Creditors Have Persecuted Her, and She Invokes the Aid of the Law.

Mrs. Mildred Higbee, wife of the bank defaulter, complained of alleged ill-treatment at the hands of her husband's creditors, and says that as a result of their persecution she is about to bring legal proceedings against them.

"Neither my husband nor myself"—she asserts—"has ever attempted to evade just claims against us. When they have attached our property lawfully we have not resented. But they have been unjust in seizing goods to which they had no right, and I am determined to stand by what my husband is about to himself from home so that they could annoy me personally, which they have done. They cruelly have they behaved that my children have grown to be in absolute terror at sight of them. Yet I have had no redress. Now, however, I am determined to have them punished for exceeding their authority. The other day they took a wagon which was my private property and on which I had no claim, to the shop to which I had sent it for repairs, and sold it. This was one of many gross outrages. I have put the matter in the hands of counsel, and I hope to be able to bring them to justice. The world little knows how I have been hounded and persecuted, how my life has been made a burden to me by these unjust creditors. But at last they are to be taught a lesson."

What subscribers the News has obtained have been secured by paying its bills and borrowing money. Before Jan. 1, all financial difficulties will be settled, but just now the demand for money exceeds the supply in the treasury. Mr. Hetfield tried to get the council to use the old water-works money that had been lying idle in the bank ever since the Elizabeth began, and considerable wrangling ensued. Messrs. Ackerman and See insisted that the money could not be touched except by vote of the people, and the Hetfield motion was finally adjusted, and all about the water-works fund at next year's meeting.

A GREAT NINE FORMING.

Stars to be a Set of New and Star-Studded Players to Start Each Crescent League Game.

The latest to be signed by manager Keller for the Crescent League's ball team of 1892, is the celebrated Norwich player, "Gentle Wilder" Murphy. He settled in Plainfield Saturday evening, and will stay here. This Press has had so much to say upon the success of great games between the Plainfield and the Norwich teams, about Murphy's brilliant playing and sure batting, the base-ball public of this city know what a good one he is, and will be overjoyed that Mr. Keller has secured him.

Other information about next season's Plainfield team that will play in the Central New Jersey league—besides what has already been published in these columns—it is not yet good policy to make public. A few rumors, however, as to this effect: Harkins has been released by the league-rule managers and may be signed by Plainfield for his batting. He could play in the field or manager Keller has his eye on three phenomenal pitchers, the best of which he'll have in the box when the season next year. Lofberg has been released and a new and greater man has been offered the position of captain.

In fact, the only players who have been regularly signed are probably Hamm, Bonner, Jones and Murphy. Lively would like to play here among his friends, but there are yet two reasons why he may not. He has been reserved by Somerville, and—his price is far above his value.

Will Not Pay the Bills.

The Union county Freeholders complain that the bills of the city of Elizabeth for the recent election are too exorbitant, and they have refused to pay them until a committee as passed upon their legality. The amount of the election expenses this year is $1,968.02, a much larger figure than they ever reached before.

Manager Runyon Expresses Gratitude.

The Name Should Have Been Printed.

Supreme Court Justice VanDyckes has given an important decision in connection with the ballot-reform law. There was an election at Island Heights. W. F. Lodge and Joel G. Stanwood both received the same number of votes for mayor. The Board of Canvassers rejected lot No. 19 for Lodge because his name is written and not printed on the paster, as required by Section 40 of the election law of 1890." Stanwood is, therefore, elected.

Bad Scoring by Plainfield.

Bill Nye and Burbank.

Bill Nye is a walking encyclopedia of fun, and in his new lecture makes one forget all the ills and troubles of life for two solid hours. The pathetic selections of Burbank blend admirably with the droll humor of Nye, and between these two Kings of entertainment the spectator is kept in laughter or tears throughout the entire evening. It was a happy idea, joining these two famous monologists together, and whoever misses seeing and hearing them at Music Hall, Dec. 18, will throw away the opportunity of a lifetime.

Nobody "Suspected" Anything of the Sort.

[From Friday's "News."]

The railroad accident reported on our second page was probably due to the confusion caused by the fire, as with that damage added, the fire will be the most destructive that has ever visited this city.

[From Saturday's "News."]

The accident to the Royal Blue line reported yesterday, occurring an hour before the Boice fire, and of course can not be considered in any manner due to the stoppage of trains by the fire as was supposed before the particulars were known.

Melopols and Choral Compared Abroad.

[From The New York Herald.]

The Union County Country club's pretty casino was comfortably filled last Tuesday evening, despite the local charter festivities, when the Melopols, Plainfield's orchestra musical society, sang its first concert of the season, and the subscribing members present seemed to think that the evening had been most profitably invested. The Melopols was organized something over a year ago in opposition to the Plainfield Choral society, which holds its concerts in the common opera house, and which admits to active membership almost any one possessing a sufficiently tuneful voice and the necessary initiation fee. But the Melopols is exclusive in the extreme, costs its members just twice as much as the plebeian Choral and holds forth in a history class all its own.

Last year the effectiveness of the Melopols's good work was considerably marred by the lack of proper auditorium for the concerts. The dates of the concerts were uncertain a week ahead; changes and fixings and rearrangements were too frequent, and the result was that the whole affair was largely handicapped from the start. This season, however, things are to be d on in better shape, and Tuesday's concert was looked upon by the members as a rare supply of good material at his command, and it is to be hoped he will continue his appropriations. The programme, while merely an echo, was well rendered throughout and it is obvious that the Choral society must keep right up to the mark or be prepared to find that the Melopols has got to sing heavier music and more of it before this will be accomplished.

REMEMBERS HIS EARLY DAYS.

Bishop Vincent Tells How to Raise Boys.

In one of his latest lectures, Bishop J. H. Vincent, formerly of this city, told some interesting things about boys. The boy whom he especially described was one who failed to recognize the proprieties of life, who always spoke when it was not time for him to keep quiet, the boy generous, mischief-loving, whistling, everyday boy. Not the bad boy who always hanged at twenty years of age, nor the good boy who always died at the age of ten.

Making the boy baby the principal text, the Bishop drew a picture of him as a pet, a plaything for his mother, and as a proportion of his life. After babyhood came his second stage, the period when, if any trait in his character was noticeable, it was the fact that he was not a girl when he blossomed out in trousers, into the pockets of which he thrust his stubby fist, and sworn loved, and always wanted to be out-doors. At this period the boy is extremely honest. He always tells what he thinks, and worst than all, what his mother and sister think. The boy forgets nothing, and his memory at this date is simply wonderful.

Then there was a hiatus of some four years, and the boy was introduced at the age of twelve years. Life to him was one long April fool day. This boy could run farther, eat more and sleep longer than any living creature. He was chock full of fewer friends and sympathizers than at any time in his life. In fact, the only friend he had now was his mother, and no boy should ever forget this. The Bishop contrasted the life of a girl of eleven years with that of a boy, and thought the girl had much the better of him. She was dressed neatly and was the pride of the family, while the boy was always dirty and incorrigible. At this period of the boy's life he was but a fair better estimate of his father than his father did of him.

The last period of the boy's life was when he was sixteen. This glimpse of the boy is very brief for he believes himself a saint. Now he washes in perfumed soap, oils his hair, takes great pride in his dress, especially his cravats, shaves and shaves with a fixed purpose—to raise a beard.

At this time he has opinions, and the questions of theology which have bothered theologians for centuries are decided by him off hand. He knows everything worth knowing; calls his father "the old man" and makes great pretenses of authority. But confidence in himself is unlimited. But at this period his love for his mother dies out in its first manly light, and it is the most pleasing trait of his character.

In closing the Bishop urges three things in the boy's behalf. He would have the boy attend public service in church on every Sunday; he believed that all boys should be sent to public schools and occupied.

Whether 81 years of age. He leaves a wife and several children. He has been a resident of New Market, twenty years.

Another Good Citizen Gone.

Joseph C. Garretson, a prominent citizen of Round Brook, died Sunday, at his home, of paralysis of the heart. His death was unexpected, and created not a little gloom over the town. The deceased was popular and highly respected. He had been married but a few months. In 1889 he ran as the Republican candidate against the Hon. Jacob Klotz for assembly and was defeated. He was a lawyer by profession.

What Trade Street Name Changed.

William E. Hillman, Alonzo Aldrich and Frank E. Kinnard have petitioned to have the name of Somerset avenue changed to West Tenth street, and to have the thoroughfare properly graded and flagged. The petition is necessary, as present water will not run off, but stands in misty pools. The entire matter was referred to the committee on streets, who will report at the next meeting of the council.

Theo. Boice Queries and Played Boston.

A very pleasant birthday party was given to Miss Ada Westphal, Monday evening, at her home, corner of Central avenue and Fourth street, on the occasion of Miss Ada's fifth birthday anniversary. Twenty-two of her little friends had a very pleasant time, from 4 to 7. They played nursery rhymes, sang in the well, and played Boston; and the most amusing game was menagerie. They all left well pleased with their evening's sport, wishing Miss Ada many returns of her natal day. Friends were present from Brooklyn and Poughkeepsie. Numerous and handsome gifts were bestowed on the young hostess.

Subject to be Raised, by Anybody.

As already stated in THE PRESS, J. D Runyon intends to rebuild for the Boice estate lumber and coal yards on the site of the recent fire. So it seems as though the suggestion that the yards should be removed to that location, is as impossible as it is absurd.

Certainly the railroad company would not pay the Boice estate thousands of dollars for a plot of ground too small for their uses, when they already own acres of larger and better size all along their line from Netherwood to Grant avenue. And what would the company gain by moving across Park avenue, while Mr. Runyon would undoubtedly lose much money by a change to any other location.

Mr. Simonson Never Gave His Wife a Cent.

Albert Simonson says Harry Margetson described his wife. The cause, if there was day, has never been known. He bookkeeps in his residence, after the desertion of Mrs. Simonson. The couple soon learned of his whereabouts and set out to search for him. After finding him she left Margetson to persuade her back to home, but the effort proved useless. Therefore Mrs. Margetson retained the services of lawyer Wm. A. Coddington, of Elizabeth, and began suit for divorce.

The chancellor has referred the case to special master John D. Bastine, and in a few days Mr. Coddington will take testimony in the case. Margetson is also set forth in the petition. Mrs. Margetson says her husband never gave one cent for her support, during the whole of his married life.

Memorial Tablets to Adorn Churches.

The Sabbath-school of the Plainfield Seventh-day Baptist church has adopted the following tribute to the memory of a beloved and departed scholar:

Our hearts are heavily burdened with grief, because the heavenly Father in His infinite wisdom has seen fit to remove from our midst our dear friend and fellow-scholar, Miss Anna E. Titsworth to her final home and rest.

Her pure life and noble character was sustained by the Spirit of Christ. She daily manifested the Christian graces, "Peace, joy, power, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance." Living such a life, death is overcome and she has gained the victory.

Thoughts of her unselfishness, her tender thoughtfulness, her loving tones in prayer and song,

Many of us have just felt how very sympathize, has just been quieted and helped by her gentle words and cheerful words!

May the memory of her sweet life be an inspiration to us always. May we strive to reflect the image of Christ as she did.

Resolved, That a copy of this record she shall be printed." Surely it shall be said of her:

"She hath done what she could."

Resolved, That we will strenuously, but with excellent them all."

Resolved, That the Sabbath-school, on the ensuing Sabbath, and ninety days hence, wear badges of sympathy with the bereaving ones in her home circle.

CITY. DEPARTMENT.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE, THE COUNTY AND THE CITY, AND HAS THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY PAPER PUBLISHED IN THE COUNTY OF UNION.

J. A. DEMAREST ..... City Editor.

—It seems strange, but John D. Runyon says it is a fact that lumber yards are always burned by fires started somewhere else.

—Nine persons, four on confession of faith, and five by letter, united with the Trinity Reformed church at Sunday morning's communion service.

—A coincidence of election day was the fact that two men of exactly the same name registered from the same number of different streets. They were not related.

—The regular monthly business meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held Thursday afternoon at 3:30, in the rooms on Front street. A large attendance is desired.

—A number of Plainfield deacons were badly fooled Thursday. They went to Elizabeth to hear evangelist Mills, and found that the meetings would not begin till Dec. 30.

—The London and Lancashire Insurance company have paid to E. C. Mulford $680.00, for the damage to his barn which he owned and which T. O. Doane occupied,in Thursday night's fire.

—John V. E. Vanderhoef desires to erect a fine dwelling in the rear of 12 West Fifth street. The condemnation committee on fire and buildings have had the matter referred to them.

—No city official has been paid than the other of the fire department. The public has no idea of the enormous amount of work he does for them, and the great value of many his personal exertions save every year.

—William Blaikie, a member of the New York bar, and author of "How to Get Strong" and other works, will speak to men on the subject "Muscular Christianity," the First Baptist church, next Sunday afternoon at 4:15.

—The city is at last likely to have the new block of electric lights it has long had needed. Monday the common council appointed councilman Hetfield, chief Doane, and Freman J. Hilmm, a committee to look for a location.

—The Elizabeth Journal remarks: "The Plainfield that that stole the Rev. Dr. Ketcham's bicycle last week was guilty of a highly-bred larceny. He is all the more deserving of theclosest oral denunciation and physiological restriction."

—At unanimous vote the common council Monday extended sincere thanks to the Plainfield Water Supply company for the free use of water from its hydrants at the recent fire. Prompt service undoubted what might have been a much more serious disaster".

—The selection of seats for the concerts of the Plainfield choral society will be made at Shaw's pharmacy on and after Thursday of this week, at 7 a. m. An order for seats may be furnished upon receipt of the amount of subscription by H. O. Newman, treasurer.

—Elias R. Pope told one of the Press staff last Thursday that he had given orders that the liver steamboat should not sail until next year, as there were two more men whom he wanted to put safely aboard. He did not divulge who the intended victims were. ?

—Supper will be ready at 5:30, at 74 West Front street, Dec 10, 11 and 12. Besides the excellent supper, which may be had until 7:30, there will be home made candies for sale, a Christmas tree in charge of Santa Claus, for the little ones, and an art gallery and grocery store.

—George Demarest, of Jackson & Cottington's office, fried his sudden case, on Friday, and won it. He was counsel for Theodore Pyatt, who sued Richard Higgins for painting a sign. A verdict of $5.75 and costs was rendered against Higgins. The opposing counsel was Francis E. Martin.

—Senator John R. McPherson, the soldiers widows friend, has secured a pension for Magdalena Mayer of this city. The senator is always glad to help deserving pensioner, and all who apply to him direct are saved the commissions that claim agents and pension sharks force out of the pockets of the needy.

—At Vincent chapel, Thursday evening, at 8, Ralph Wells, of New York city, will enlarge on "The Rien Christ", the Redeemed Man," based on Romans 7:17, and will also give instruction in the principles of teaching. All Sabbath-school teachers and Christian workers are invited to bring Bibles, pencils, and paper.

—At the meeting of the Union county board of freeholders, yesterday, freeholder Trahon offered a resolution that the county treasurer be authorized to pay over to the Muhlenberg hospital at Plainfield $375, and to the Elizabeth general hospital $625, that being the amount appropriated by the board. The resolution was unanimously adopted.

—Mrs. Willett Marsh is still a great sufferer from the terrible burns inflicted on her by a roaring stove more than a week ago. It transpires that the pill-it is manufactured by the dealer who sold it to Mrs. Marsh, and that a component part of the liquid is benzine. The presence of that explosive makes every bottle brought to a hot stove an infernal machine.

—A dispute arose among the council men Monday evening as to the matter of adopting clerk Coward's minutes of the informal meeting of Nov 28. Councilmen See and Ackerson contended that they ought to be no minutes of that date on the journal at all, as the Saturday half-holiday law made the meeting illegal. By the rule of law it is the minutes were ordered to stand.

—At the recent annual meeting of the Seventh-day Baptist churches of New York and New Jersey, at which were present Dr. A. H. Lewis of this city was a prominent figure, it was voted that the next yearly meeting be held with the church at Plainfield, that the pastor be the first president and the church clerk secretary, and that it be left with the pastor and officers of the Plainfield church to set the time.

—Last evening the amateurs of the "Scandins" of Alert hose company. To see them jump from the early evening trains, clad in fine garments and glossy with haste, and rush into the thick of the fight against the fire of Thursday night, was a noble sight. They were among the bravest and best of the patient firemen, and they looked out the rain to their clothing nor the blisters and cuts to their flesh. The city and the fire department can never have too many men of that kelfole stamp.

Sewer Tests to Stay.

From the Press of Dec 5 comes the startling information that at its second concert this season, the Choral society intends to sing "Annie Laurie", and of course the beast will play the accompaniment.

This feet, it is said, was to have been kept dark till all the subscribers had paid up, but knowing this truth, THE PRESS deemed it only right that the public should know its worst. It is to be anticipated that for their third programme the society will delve still further into the realm of novelty and flavor Mendelssohn's "St. Paul" with "Cleopatra", "Maggie Murphy", "Down on the Farm", or even "The Farmer Boy Is Turned Toward the Wall". At any rate the Choral evidently intends to let the people have everything they want in the music line.

Funeral services will be held at 22 West Third street Thursday afternoon at 2:30.

EXIT REFORM CLUB.

The Society to be Renamed "The Wanderers' Home Mission" and Reorganized for Effective Evangelistic Work.

The Reform club as the Reform club is known at its best, is dead. The old title is to be abolished and the society is to blossom forth, rejuvenated, as an evangelistic association, under the banner of "The Wanderers' Home Mission."

During the six years of its existence the club has experienced many vicissitudes, and though its work in the cause of temperance has never waned it has at times drifted away from the spirit of unity that at first bound it firmly to the churches. With the idea of renewing its old-time religious fervor, its leaders have decided on the change announced in these columns today. The new movement is well, and should be crowned with the success it deserves. The headquarters of the Wanderers' Home Mission will continue to be Reform Hall, and all Christian people in Plainfield are expected to give their hearty support.

One of the mission's best workers will be H. Newton Spencer, in whose conversion, which took place at the evangelistic meeting in Reform Hall Tuesday night, his friends are gratefully rejoicing. Mr. Spencer will make an earnest and effective Christian worker, a valuable accession to the army of the Lord. He and his mission will do much good in the interests of religion in Plainfield, and he will be of material aid in developing the newer and brighter era of life which the mission is to bring to the benighted ones of Plainfield's dark corners.

Extending the Water Mains to other Towns

The other day THE PRESS inquired what was the Union Water company. It is to-day able to answer the question. The company is an organization under the law of 1870, and John Kean, jr., is president. Among the other stockholders are Frank Bergen and Foster M. Voorhees. It is estimated that the company has come to control the Plainfield water-works. Having bought out the Fanwood water-works, it has decided to turn water from the Plainfield stand-pipe into the Fanwood mains. Next year it will extend its line of supply pipes to Cranford and Roselle. It has charter rights all over Union county.

Stole the Pastor's Wheel.

After the session had carefully looked up at 10:45 o'clock Friday night, burglars entered the study of Dr. Ketcham, which is connected with the First Presbyterian church on East Front street. They broke a back window, shoved back the catch and raised the sash. Every drawer was pulled open and its contents strewed about the floor. The thieves were after money, as every envelope which had printed on it, "Church Contributions", or "Sunday-school collections", was torn open.

Not a cent was found, however, and they depa ted with only Dr. Ketcham's English cycle, considerably the worse for wear, made of 1890. The cloth piano cover was carried from the Sunday-school room into the church and left there. It is supposed the thieves intended to carry away the instrument as a memorial service or anything else of value they might find.

DISASTROUS FIRE.

ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS VANISHES IN FLAME AND SMOKE.

A SEETHING FURNACE IN THE HEART OF THE CITY.

BOICE'S LUMBER YARD DESTROYED, AND ADJOINING BUILDINGS RUINED.

COOK'S WAS THREATENED, AND IT LOOKED AS THOUGH THE WHOLE CENTRE OF TOWN WOULD BE WIPED AWAY.

BOOMS WORK BY THE FIREMEN.

The Glare of the Fire Was in the Sky All Night, and the Burnt Still Are Burning.

(From THE PRESS of December 5.)

A repetition of the historic Cook fire, hitherto the hottest and most destructive in the history of Plainfield, occurred in this city last night, when Boice's lumber yard was wiped out of existance, and adjoining buildings were destroyed. The fire fully demonstrates the danger and folly of permitting such huge combustible heaps to remain in the centre of town. The city has outgrown the days when lumber yards are needed or wanted in such prominent business location. When Plainfield was a little village things might be permitted which now ought not to be tolerated. The existence of enormous lumber yards in such proximity to important business blocks is not a desirable thing. The rebuilding of the Cook property after its destruction six years ago, on its old site, was in this respect unfortunate; and while the community naturally regrets the property-loss on the Boice estate, it is hoped that the lumber will not be replaced, but that the land be settled locally. The land would make a good site for a fire-proof freight-house. It is the railroad company's opportunity to remove the present unsightly sheds.

The Boice lumber yard, which was the property of the D. J. Boice estate, and which was managed by John D. Runyon, fronted on Sycamore avenue, from 53 to 90, and extended clear through to Madison avenue, occupying both the Boice land and land owned by Levi Hetfield. Adjoining the big sheds was a group of several brick stables, and snug up against these was a small shed in the rear of Frank P. Huff's yard. Huff's house and barber shop stood on 64 Park avenue. His building is a frame one. Between his residence and the Boice yard is a three-story brick building, which was occupied on the first floor by A. M. Runyon & Son's undertaking establishment. The stables and other outbuildings in the rear were used by the tenants of the houses along Park avenue and West Fourth street.

From a little wooden shed in the rear of Huff's frame burst forth, at 5:45 last evening. Several saw the blaze and ran to give an alarm. Policeman Patrick McCue was standing at the corner of Park and North avenues. He saw a volume of fire-illuminated smoke gush up above the buildings on the Boice estate and rang in a call from signal box 13. The entire Plainfield department turned out immediately.

Fire never spread more rapidly. When the first spectators arrived, nothing was ablaze but the shed and contents in Huff's yard. In five minutes the flames were licking up the huge lumber sheds all along their entire length, and were creeping from high up in the piles into the interior of the brick stables. By the time a stream of water was turned on through the firemen worked never so quickly—the great furnace was in a roaring sea of flame. There was little wind, but the great tongues of fire leaped high into the air, the heat was such that the telegraph poles along the railroad tracks. The heat was fearful, and the people who thronged Park avenue and the railroad tracks could not long endure the buildings on the Boice estate and rang in a call from signal box 13. The entire Plainfield department turned out immediately.

Fire never spread more rapidly. When the first spectators arrived, nothing was ablaze but the shed and contents in Huff's yard. In five minutes the flames were licking up the huge lumber sheds all along their entire length, and were creeping from high up in the piles into the interior of the brick stables. By the time a stream of water was turned on through the firemen worked never so quickly—the great furnace was in a roaring sea of flame. There was little wind, but the great tongues of fire leaped high into the air, the heat was such that the telegraph poles along the railroad tracks. The heat was fearful, and the people who thronged Park avenue and the railroad tracks could not long endure the glare and were glad to be three hundred feet away.

The firemen were almost wholly overcome by the intense and scorching glare from which there was no shelter; but they stood the test heroically, and battled nobly against the fiercest fire in the city. Buildings at a distance all around were smoking, but the worst was feared from the mammoth lumber store-house of A. D. Cook & Bro. Although a high brick wall and the earthen embankment supporting the railroad tracks intervened, the fierce heat scorched the iron roofing, and the timbers underneath smoked and snapped, and every minute it looked as though the whole side and roof of the building would burst into flame. But it once started, and nothing could save the business centre of the city from utter destruction.

Bits of flame the size of a man's hand broke out here and there along the eaves. They grew bigger and bigger. All eyes were turned thither, and in suspense and excitement the crowds stood by, watching with every nerve strained, with breath bated. A number of firemen, led by assistant chief John W. Dorey, jr., ran a length of hose along the track. The railroad ties were smoking and smouldering, the steel rails crackled, blued and steamed as the water fell upon them. The fierce heat of the huge roaring furnace at their left scorched the flesh of the firemen and singed their hair and whiskers. They bended to meet their comfort or safety, when their city was in peril.

The heat was so great that railroad trains were held at bay, and the incoming trues stood panting and throbbing with their pent-up energy, a safe distance away. But the firemen doggedly held their ground and kept deluging the Cook property with water until 7 o'clock, when all danger of the fire spreading was over. The Boice lumber yard had been collapsed, and the fire was burning away much lower down.

Twelve powerful streams were playing away—four from the engines, and eight from the hydrants of the Water Supply company. At every line of hose the firemen had the hottest kind of work. Chief Thatcher and assistant chief Dorey stood at the line at the Park avenue front of the blazing lumber building and their clothing scorched from the fearful heat. It was the same all around the furnace-pile.

Suddenly the front of the Boice building on the Park avenue front fell in a heap. Firemen working there had a close call. They barely escaped being buried under the mass of burning timbers. As it was, their line of hose was cut in two, and had to be repaired.

All along the railroad track the great telegraph poles of the Western Union line flashed into flame, blazed an instant, and toppled over. Burning, they rolled down the masses of wires, and shutting off vast wast communication. Brick walls in the midst of the flames crumbled like chalk, and fron melted like wax. The steel rails on the coal trestle were curled and twisted into fantastic shapes, and vast and lumber cars fell from the trestle into the fiery mass. Nothing is left of them but the iron wheels and trucks.

The Boice property was almost wholly destroyed. Besides that the fire swept through the two-story brick stable owned and occupied by N. W. French, in the rear of 6 West Fourth street, and through a similar building in the rear of 8 West Fourth, owned by Edward C. Mulford, and occupied jointly by Samuel Snyder the grocer as a store-house, and by Theodore O. Doane as a carpentry shop. These buildings were ruined, and all their contents destroyed. Chief Doane lost a large assortment of tools. Solomon Cook's barn was consumed, and the fire was all burned off the dwellings facing on Arlington avenue, at the rear of the lumber yard, but by great effort these and the dwellings on Fourth street were saved. The barn of Alexander Reybert had its interior ruined with water. A frame barn owned by Edward C. Mulford and occupied by Samuel Snyder was destroyed.

The total loss is estimated at $100,000, and the insurance at $60,000, although it is absolutely impossible to arrange a schedule of individual figures. Manager Runyon of the Boice estate estimates his loss to be $75,000, on which there is $40,000 insurance of about $35,000, though even that is not a positive sum. It will be several days before the matter of loss and insurance will be absolutely known.

The rear of the Huff dwelling was burned away, and the house was flooded with water. The household goods were saved. A. M. Runyon & Son lost considerable stock stored in one of the outbuildings, but their property in their main building was removed to 65 Park avenue, where their headquarters will remain for a considerably. The first fat over Runyon & Son's was occupied by the family of William Hetfield, a brother of Mr. He saved some of his property. Robert Wood, driver of Gazelle engine, lived on the third story, and lost nearly all that was needed. The old Gazelle handengine was among the apparatus they brought. Westfield sent a chemical engine, but the fire was all under full and firmen. Elizabeth sent a delegation from Rollo engine company, No. 2. The men would have brought their engine, had it been needed.

Warren Engine company from North Plainfield turned out in force, in response to the "special 8" alarm that was early split in, and like all the others, worked nobly. Bound Brook sent as many men as she could spare, but most of her department was needed at a fire that occurred at the bone and outbuildings of farmer Kirg, on the "Shunpike" road near Middlebrook. Altogether between 40 and 50 men and horses were in service, and there was not a bit to spare. The capacity and effectiveness of the Water Supply company's service was demonstrated. Had it not been for the hydrants the water supply would have been inadequate.

At 8 o'clock last night, when the heat had died down, and the flames subsided, and the great heaps of lumber settled down into a steadily-glowing mass of red-hot coals, a great multitude of people thronged the railroad tracks and the streets, and from a distance the fire-lit scene of havoc was very picturesque.

Above the heights of the bright, even the wooden cornices of the Chautauqua building smoked, and buckets of water had to be applied. At that time the scene from the roof of the Union office building was very fascinating. Stretching out in front of the observer was the great, roaring, fiery, varied-tinged sea of flame, divers-colored, and fierce and awe-inspiring as a furnace for melting iron. Overhead rolled great, dense clouds of smoke, which stretched out over the city, and hung like a cloud of fire above the house-tops. Firebrands of wood were borne upward by the current, and soared higher and higher, burning out upon the air, like ignes fatui or ignis ardens flying with following them. In the streets was the murmur of voices, and the clattering of hoofs, and the clanging of fire bells, and the crash of falling walls, and the roar of flames and the hissing of water.

As the smoke lifted, now and then, one could see through the great, leaping, quivering waves of heat the powerful streams playing their way through flame, blazing like serpents, and vanishing in the gloom of smoke, or suddenly gleamed the headlights of locomotives, now dazzling with whiteness, now like huge blood-red suns, veiled by the smoke. The puffing engines sent columns of smoke and steam skyward, and occasional rings of smoke from the smoke-stacks rolled gracefully upward in the perfect contour till lost in the mass of fog. The colors of smoke and flame blended in beautiful and unique fashion, and the airy elements contorted and twisted and wreath'd themselves most entertainingly. Before was a glare of light. Behind was intense darkness, and in the far distance blue sky star-studded. The mountains loomed up a mass of blackness, save for a circle of light that steadily glowed outward, spreading along hill-side and hill-crest, where the leaves of the forest were burning. It was a picture to fascinate one, and a picture to appall with its awful sanity.

At midnight the crowd had lessened, but the glare of the fire was still in the sky, and the huge furnace that but a few hours before had in its midst such vast and valuable property still glowed with terrible heat. The firemen kept deluging the burning ruins with tons of water, but with no apparent effect. Many hours more as had been the case all the evening, good women moved about with cans of coffee and baskets of sandwiches, refreshing the weary firemen. Groups of boys secured sandwiches and fought for their possession. Contemptuous individuals struggled for possession of the porters moved about among the firemen and insurance agents, getting together material to supplement the stories they had already secured for their papers. Telegraph linemen clambered up the burned stumps of telegraph poles and hammered away at cross-bars and pulled away at wires, constructing a temporary shift line to restore telegraphic communication with the east. There were gnomes, and mephistopheles, and jests and songs, and fragments of earnest conversation, in the air. Locomotives hooted warningly to people on the tracks, and freight-trains rumbled by, with wondering eyes on the trains rolled past. The wreck and ruin spread about, and that fearful furnace of fire, had a strange sort of fascination for many.

All night long the firemen toiled away Toward a dawn a light rain fell that refreshed them. The daylight cleared away the fringes of the blaze and long and late all night, Bells' came to the workers, whose places were filled by others. The fire is still burning sullenly away, and will be for days, and probably for weeks to midnight. But gradually the firemen are expected it to be a common were leaving great charred edges. The engines have all taken to rest, and only the hydrant streams are playing.

Notes.

Manager Runyon says that fortunately he had in only a small stock of coal. His stock of lumber is almost a total loss, very large and included millions of feet of boards and timbers and thousands of bundles of laths and shingles. His stock of tiles was fully destroyed.

Justice Nash and constable Mellor, in the building opposite A. M. Runyon's, came near being blinded last. Occasional showers of water from the hose saved the building.

The two families living in the brick building over Runyon's undertaking establishment got out their valuables and clothing. Their clothing and furniture was part of it thrown out and broken. They are poor people, and have suffered quite a loss.

D. Cook & Bro. state that they wish to thank the firemen, and many friends, for their untiring efforts in preserving their property.

The engine-house was prepared for burial as was well with difficulty from Runyon & Son's proves to be unfounded.

The origin of the fire is a mystery. Some think an incendiary started the blaze. Last night the theory of incendiarism was freely discussed. Outspoken people said that the best thing to do with such a fire-bug was to coat him alive into the fiery furnace he had started.

Arthur J. Easton of 53 East Third street was thrown from a wagon and was severely wounded about the head in front of Runyon's undertaking store. Later he recovered sufficiently to walk home, with assistance. Dr. Fritts attended him.

Mrs. E. H. Darwin fell over a length of hose on Park avenue and fractured her knee pan. Dr. Lowrie attended her in Reynolds's pharmacy.

Frank Dunn, McGuire of North Plainfield fainted from excitement, on the street, and was revived in the City hotel.

A. M. Runyon & Son wish to extend their thanks, not only to the firemen, but also to the citizens who aided in removing their stock and equipment from their office at 60 Park avenue.

Sixth of Robert Wood's property as the family of William Hetfield occupied by Wood.

Mr Knight of Arlington avenue had an overcoat stolen, and an Englishman had a good watch and chain and $40 in cash stolen.

The Revs G. B. Mitchell and W. R. Richards actively assisted the firemen.

Mr. Runyon, manager of the Boice estate, was in his office when the alarm came from box 13. He also aided in removing horses in the stable, which was near the then burning barn. Book-keeper Albert Bigelow placed all valuables in the safe, and then assisted in saving the office furniture until the office building burned.

Manager Runyon said that the only unfortunate thing for him was the fact that he had not yet laid in his stock of coal. He had, however, the largest and most complete stock of seasoned lumber in the history of the yard.

Manager Anthony Boice's yard escaped being burned. Collector H. Newton Spencer was in Spicer & Hubbard's mill and saw a great fire just building hold of a high pile-a fence close up to the yard on Short Third street, near Arlington avenue. He put it out.

Station agent Haines was a busy man, holding up and dispatching trains.

Numbers of electric light, fire-alarm and telephones wires fell on Park avenue, and were tangled up in dangerous confusion on the sidewalk. Fortunately no one got a severe shock.

M. W. French wishes THE PRESS to express his sincere thanks to the firemen for their efforts in saving his house.

For a time fire was supposed to have got into Cook's building. A stream was taken in, but it was found to be only the reflection through the glass sky-light on top of the building.

At 3:30 this afternoon the line of hose from the North avenue hydrant was thrown up, after 21 hours of continuous service.

Every insurance agent in town carried home a great deal of work that day, and strained, but just how much they have not computed.

Members of the Plainfield Camera club photographed the scene of the fire, from the rooms of the Boys' club.

The old Cook fire occurred Nov. 22, 1885. It broke out at 5:30 p. m.

To Furnish the Chapel.

The sale and supper at the Monroe Avenue chapel, Tuesday night, was a success, financially, and it satisfactory. Ladies are say indication of inward enjoyment, it may be truly said that those present had no difficulty in gaining food for the spiritual nature, and the ladies are to repay them for their outlay of time and money. The ladies in charge deserve much credit for their persevering efforts to present to their patrons things tempting to the eye and appetite, and while we elaborate display may not have been made, the fundamental articles offered at the fancy table, showed good judgment in their selection and arrangement. The rooms were prettily decorated, and presented a neat interior finish of the chapel being an important aid to any plan for artistic effect.

The young ladies in charge of the flower booth, and candy table, should not be overlooked in this notice, for the tasty trimming of their tables must have added much to the value of the articles they wished to sell. The supper was an excellent one—no chance being given for criticism by the most fastidious. Proceeds are to be used in furnishing the chapel.

What They Are Good For.

BEARDSLEE'S PILLS are the best medicine known.

Beardslee's are purely vegetable, in fact a medicated food.

Result—The same does always produces a natural and healthy perspiration, requires increased doses and finally ceases to act.

Third—They purify the blood.

Fourth—They regulate digestion and promote the secretions and bowels.

Fifth—They stimulate the liver and excite the gall bile and other depraved secretions.

The first two or three doses tell the story. The skin becomes clear, the eye bright, and a healthy glow suffuses the cheek, and the system receives a new impetus to health. Sold by druggists. Dr. J. A "NEWS" CARRIER IN HEN COOP.

The Fire As Viewed by One Who Saves at Somerville, "I Am a Journalist."

The following are but a few extracts from a journalist's account of Thursday evening's fire, published in the Somerville Journal as possibly the very worst appreciation of fire writing that even the News has published:

We were told how the fire was first discovered by a News' carrier in a hen coop.

An investigation since made indicates that the last coop escaped the fire from some fault in the roof that had been thrown into a heap next the coop by a slight fall from one of the families near by, who had probably been ordered by its mother compositing the designer.

A stream from a hose was near by, when the fire was at its height, flew in every answering direction over the burning flames. It was saved from being roasted by a stick hurled by a boy, which narrowly missed it, in its indefective effort to escape. The animal also escaped the attraction of the fire and landed safely on a nearby roof.

In the rear of the yard the firemen, ankle deep in the water thrown by the hose they were holding, were kept from any sight with great regularity by the oddying volumnes of smoke. During one of these intervals a spectator, standing on the bank of the canal, saw a plank he was balancing on and sat down in the dirty water, staggering therefrom from the yard when he arose.

The side of the stable opposite to that occupied by Staff was occupied by N. W. French's two horses and wagons, which he or his men had taken from time enough to escape.

One young woman there bewailed her loss with these words, "Isn't this awful, and we only recently moved here."

Half an hour after the fire started two passenger trains were run past it. The pilot curled off every car by the intense heat, and further attempt was made until the flames had somewhat subsided, when only coal trains were run.

The Plainfield women—led by Mr. Elsie Pope—also got to work supplying sandwiches.

MRS. FLORENCE E. MAYBRICK.

Interest in the United States and England has been keenly awakened by the news about equally balanced. The charge of poisoning by arsenic was but poorly sustained, and in Wednesday's spite of the fact that a post-mortem examination of the internal organs of the deceased revealed traces of inflammation such as would naturally result from chronical poisoning. Mr. Maybrick was a victim of acute dyspepsia, and was in the habit of taking arsenic and other poisonous drugs. The motive was found sufficiently strong in character for the commission of the deed, and it was proven that Mrs. Maybrick bought arsenic, but it is claimed by Mrs. Maybrick's friends that the evidence adduced at the trial was circumstantial conviction, and that Judge Stephens, who presided, was not only of unsound mind but has been unfriendly to the accused. hatred of Americans. Mrs. Maybrick is an American, and her mother, who has been in ill health for years, left for her daughter's behalf, is circulating petitions for the purpose of obtaining a pardon. The matter is being interested the masonic fraternity and it is to be hoped that her efforts will be crowned with success.

Substitute for Leather.

A German inventor has created a material which he calls "Xylolith" as a substitute for leather in many of its uses. This material consists of panels of wood with fibre netting between, the whole being glued together under heavy pressure. The sheets thus made are said to be very tough and pliable and suited for making trunks and other uses that require strength.

TESTING A MORTAR.

Steel Shells of Tremendous Size and Power.

New Guns Which Will Be the Chief Coast Defense—The Shell Driven and After Firing—Surprising Cost of a Single Shot.

A most interesting test of the new mortars and steel shells manufactured at Bethlehem, Pa., was made recently at Sandy Hook. The mortar has a twelve-inch bore, is breech-loading made of cantiron and hooped with steel. It weighs 124 tons and is 19 feet 9 inches long. The shell was made of the best of steel and was 2 feet 9 inches long. It weighed 820½ pounds.

The target consisted of a steel armor plate ten feet long, five feet wide and four and a half inches thick, or one inch heavier than the average armor plates on the deck of any man-of-war afloat. The armament department had required this additional thickness of one extra inch to give the shell a reasonable test. The distance between the target and the muzzle of the gun was 150 feet. Fifty-two pounds of powder were used. When the gun was fired a dense smoke hid it from view for several minutes. The report was short and deafening. The moment the shell struck the armor plate heavy pieces of steel and iron were whirled through the air in almost every direction. The missile had gone through the upper part of it and broken completely in two pieces, while the other part was badly cracked. There was no other trace of the shell, but that. Heath, under whose supervision the test took place, had followed its flight and saw it strike. Gunsight sketched the exact 300 yards beyond the target. It had not lost its shape, but a quarter of it was nearly broken off. The rest was considerably flattened and was also cracked lengthwise and crosswise.

The cost of this single shot almost amounts to $2,000. The price of the shell alone plate was $1,500, the price of the shell $500 and the charge of powder about $13.

The recent tests of heavy guns and the complete smashing of armor-plate targets lend especial interest to the following paragraphs from Engineering, which also presents the accompanying illustration. The cut is intended to show the trunnion of a gun developed by a 110-ton 16-inch breech-loading gun. It will be observed that the projectile has passed through twenty inches of compound armor, eight inches of iron, twenty feet of oak, five feet of granite, eleven feet of concrete and has entered eleven feet into the backing, thereby making a total penetration of forty-one feet four inches. It is useless to conjecture as to the fate of the remainder of a gun of this size in actual warfare.

Origin of "Robson's Choice."

The famous old saying about "Robson's choice" comes from Mr. Tobias Robson of Newcastle, England, who amassed a fortune in what we would call the livery business, as a "carrier" he called it. Always kept forty steeds ready for mounting. It was an unbreakable rule, however, that no one should choose the one nearest the stable door and so all fared evenly, fortune favoring the best animals. There is an old print of Mr. Robson showing him with a bag of a hundred sovereigns in his hand and the legend, "The fruitful mother of a hundred more." Taken the origin of so familiar a saying is always interesting.

Sunday Postage Stamps.

The Homiletic Review tells of a novel method adopted in Belgium to determine whether Sunday shall be a day of rest for letter carriers. Sunday postage stamps are to be provided. All letters sent with such stamps on Sunday are to be delivered Monday. After trying the experiment for awhile it is to be decided, according to the relative number of letters with these stamps, whether the majority of the letter-writing public want the Sunday rest or a Sunday rest. If they do, then the carriers are to be freed from Sunday work.

The New Alps Tunnel.

The Simplon tunnel, according to the latest plans, would cost $16,000,000. It would pierce Mont Dolible alps, in the canton of Valais, at a height of 11,154 feet above the sea. Its length would be 12 miles 1,760 yards. The cost of the tunnel is estimated at $14,450,000, and the approaches and interest on capital for laying the amount needed up to that first stated.

WISCONSIN'S HOME.

World's Fair Building to Be Erected by the Badger State.

William Waters, of Oshkosh, gets the first prize offered by the Wisconsin board for the best design of a state building for the fair. Architect Wagers' strong point was the great amount of floor space provided in his building. This is 14,000 square feet. The building is to be made entirely of Wisconsin material and will cost about $30,000, unless large quantities of lumber are donated by the lumber men of the state. It is to be erected in the center of the triangular area set apart for Wisconsin, Indiana, Michigan and Ohio. The interior arrangement may be seen. Ladies' parlors, cloak-rooms, intelligence and post offices and apartments for the state board and other organizations of that state are grouped about a lobby 45 by 80 feet. A wide staircase leads from the lobby to the second floor, which is to be occupied by the state historical society. The third floor is for refreshments and employes who will sleep on the premises.

Purifying Water.

The method of purifying water invented by Dr. William Anderson, and now employed at Antwerp with success, consists in passing the water through an atomizer, a closely revolving cylinder containing metallic iron in the form of scraps or of fillings. The estimated cost of purifying 1,000,000 gallons in this way is about $1.50.

ALL WILL BE CHANGED.

Trade Dollar Bullion to Be Coined Into Gold Eagles.

Not many persons are the world's fair poorer by the trade dollar, says the Chicago Herald. The hundreds of acres are in the condition of overnight disingenuousness, but the trade dollar thing is at sizes and seems, with the help of a sometime improvement, to have had one more chance to go around. That stood on the south side of Sixty-third street long before this was Jackson park. It has grown gray and weatherbeaten. It is not large enough to accommodate all the visitors and men that are required for the work of preparation. These horses and men have to live. They need basis of shelter. So tents have been provided for them. A merciful providence has sent a dry season. Otherwise the floors of these transient habitations would be one great mass of mud. The tent in this picture is a stable. Down the center, under the ridge pole, run two long mangers, a passage way between them, and great boxes set every four feet. Every morning a bale of marsh hay is rolled to the door of the stable. A boy cuts the wires with a hatchet, and two men shake out the dry grass and carry it to the mangers. The horses eat it readily. On hot days and nights the sides of the tent are chewed up, the better to admit a passage of air. But the tent is capable of keeping its inmates very comfortable even in cold weather. And as for rain, it never could penetrate the thick roof and close walls of the canvas habitation. In a few months this ground will groan with magnificent buildings. Water channels will curve here and there, and beautiful flowers will blossom under the shade of imposing statues. It is a fortunate man who can see the world's fair ground today and see it again in 1893. By the way, it is a fortunate man who sees 1893 anyway.

ryland at the eleventh ballot, says Harper's Weekly. Dr. Nicholson, who is named to succeed Right Rev. Frederick Frederick Knight, who died a short time since, was born in Baltimore, Md., 1819. He received his early education at St. Timothy's hall, Catonsville, Maryland, where he graduated and was obliged to defer his college course on account of ill health. Entering his father's bank in Baltimore, he remained for several years, becoming a member of the firm. By this time he had regained his health and being desirous of receiving a college education, he entered into Dartmouth, and graduated there in 1846. While a college student he was brought under certain influences that turned his mind toward the ministry, and he thereupon entered the Alexandria seminary, where he took a theological course under Bishop Whittingham, from whom he received deacon's orders in 1871. A year later he was ordained priest by Bishop Doane, and entered into the assistant rectorship of St. Paul's church, Baltimore. After four years he was called to the Church of the Epiphany, Westminster, Maryland, from whence he went, in 1870, to St. Mark's church, Philadelphia, of which he is still rector. Dr. Nicholson has been an ardent worker, and his influence in the church, and in 1885 he was elected bishop of Indiana, but declined the elevation, as he felt a strong desire to remain with his old parish. He is deeply interested in the prosperity of Nashotah, from whence he received degrees in 1846 and 1871. Being the center of a large congregation, Dr. Nicholson's loss will be widely felt, for he is deeply beloved by his parishioners.

Color of Eyes in Men and Women.

M. de Candolle, a French investigator, has come to the conclusion, after careful searches that women have a larger proportion of brown eyes than men. He also finds that where both parents have eyes of a like color the chances are eighty-eight to twelve that their children, when they arrive at the age of ten, when the color of the eyes is fixed, will have eyes of the same color. When the parents have eyes of different colors the chances are fifty-five to forty-five in favor of brown as against blue eyes in the children. He is also of the opinion that the health of the brunette type is, as a rule, superior to that of the blonde.

GOV. RUSSELL.

Reelected by the Democratic Forces of Massachusetts.

Gov. William E. Russell, who has just been reelected by the democrats of Massachusetts, is accredited by his admirers, "the biggest apple in the democratic barrel" of his state. He is a young man of 40, graduated at Harvard, has had his legal training at the Boston bar, and his administration of the executive office has reflected credit upon the state. He is a bachelor, is said to be a ready debater and a progressive, young politician.

admirers, was Hon. Charles H. Allen, the republican candidate. He is forty-two years of age, a resident of Lowell, and a graduate of Amherst college. Upon completion of his student life he in 1870, Mr. Allen engaged in business pursuits, and after displaying an active interest in political affairs was honored with several offices. His active political career commenced with his election to the state legislature, to which he was twice elected as a representative, one session resulting in his election to the Thirty-ninth and Fiftieth congresses from the Eighth district. During his congressional career he was recognized as an effective debater, and is considered one of the ablest "stump speakers" in Massachusetts.

Lowest Pressure on Record.

The lowest barometric pressure on record is 27.325 inches, which was observed in 1885 during a storm over the bay of Bengal. The storm was also remarkable for the rainfall. It began—in its diameter being about 100 miles—by its forenoon and for the following fourteen hours

EGYPTIAN STATUES.

Fashioned About the Time of the Exodus of Israel.

Figures of Two Goddesses Betraying Considerable Artistic Skill—Have Two Arms for Supporting Objects Held Overhead or Carried.

In the cable dispatches recently appeared some accounts of the antiquarian researches at Deir-el Bahari, on the side of Thebes, recently conducted by M. Grebaut, director of the museums and antiquities in Egypt. The drawings reproduced below are from Edgar Watkin from two of the curious figures removed by M. Grebaut. Mr. Watkin writes as follows to the New York Telegram:

"The figures of Isis and Nephthis are two wooden statuettes found in one of the galleries of the hiding place of the temple, packed away with twelve mummy cases and a multitude of small images and other funeral accompaniments. It was in the latter case which these mummies were hidden—probably in some period of national panic—there was no other place of safety appreciated, and it is therefore impossible to say to which of the mummied priests or noblemen the figures properly belonged. We know, however, from their characteristic headdresses that they represent Isis, the sister of Osiris, and Nephthis, the wife of Set, who, respectively, executed the soul from its mortal tenement and presented it over its introduction into the shades. They were probably placed on either side of the mummy case, guarding it in the long sleep of the dead.

"It is difficult to realize that these figures were fashioned at the end of the nineteenth or beginning of the twentieth dynasty of Egyptian history, and are roughly, therefore, contemporaneous with the exodus of the children of Israel, about twelve hundred and fifty years before Christ. From a purely artistic point of view they are as beautiful as they are unique; they are thirty-eight and a half inches high, and, except in facial feature, differ nothing from one another in appearance or dimensions, they are carved with an anatomical appreciation and artistic feeling quite delightful, and metrical in proportion, expressive in attitude.

"The wood is covered with a coating of color, the flesh being painted a light yellow ochre; the head covering and robe white, with dark red fillet and ribbon ornamentation; the armlets and bracelets two different greens, and the robe border, near the feet, red and blue, the predominating color of the dress, the eyeballs black. The outlines of nostrils, lips and ears are most delicately executed. The fact that one of the arms no longer fits tightly on its peg, and that there are some deep scratches on the surface of the wood of the two statuettes are perfect.

"M. Grebaut is still in upper Egypt, where he is superintending the extraordinary revelations shown by excavating further the temples of Luxor, and has lighted upon a part of the sphinx avenue and paved road, which stretches, in confidently believes, continuously from Luxor to Karnak, a distance of over a mile and a half. On his return to Cairo the new discoveries above will be turned over to the Ghizeh museum."

An Immense Iron Chain That Has Disappeared.

A curious story is told of the manner in which the Rothschilds aided Cavafa, the composer. The latter was far from rich. His principal capital consisted of from a small box. And this was the way of it. The small box was given to the author of "La Prise de Corinthe" about thirty years ago by Baron Jones de Rothschild as a token of esteem. Cavafa said it was a present. Later for seventy-five napoleons to the same banker from whom it had been bought. This transaction is to Rothschild, who gave it a rain to the musician for the following year. The last draft returned to the jeweler's. This traffic continued till the death of the banker and longer still, for the jeweler kept up the tradition to the great satisfaction of Cavafa.

Antiquity of Paper.

After a microscopical examination of the paper from El-Fayoum, presented by Prince Roland Bonaparte at Vienna, in the collection known as "Papyrus Erzherzog Rainer," Dr. Julius Meisener comes to the conclusion that wood or fur back as the twelfth and ninth centuries, B. C. The fiber is chiefly linen, but there are also traces of cotton, hemp and animal fibers present. The manufacture of the paper is of the age of Ramses, he contends, an eastern and not a German or Italian invention, as has hitherto been supposed. Out of the oriental and eastern specimens not a single one was a raw cotton paper. All these that he examined had likewise been glazed like modern papers.

Velocity of Meteorites.

The singular fact has been demonstrated that, while the most rapid velocity of cannon balls scarcely ever attains a speed of one metres a second—that is, a little under three—meteorites are known to penetrate the air with a velocity of 60,000 or even 80,000 metres per second. At the latter speed they would instantly raises the temperature of the air to 4,000 or 6,000 degrees centigrade.

Most-Eating Plants.

Notwithstanding the admitted fact that bits of meat, insects and other animal substances are more quickly digested when put in the stomach with the juice of the pitcher plant, Venus fly-trap, sundew and various others, yet only about a dozen insectivorous plants" than they are in open air there is a body of scientists who deny that this plant is to be credited with digesting the matter. These same scientists, who have frequently given their views to the world on the subject, are supposing that the plants of the insect-eating kind even exercise vital power in capturing the prey which falls into their traps. The learned Dr. Mcrozath is one of these advocates. He says that the fluid produced upon insects by these plants is a chemical change similar to that produced upon the skin of "animal" one who has come in contact with any poisonous plant or vine.

Where Is Your Mouth?

It has been discovered that the human mouth is surely and steadily moving toward the left of the face, which will be, in time, long in common in the neighborhood of the left ear. All the five great races of man have an unmistakable tendency to eat only with the teeth which grow from the left jaws. This wears out the left teeth the more rapidly, and supports on the right side of the mouth, and this in turn gives the upper and lower jaws an inclination toward the left. It is the expressed opinion of many scientists who have commenced in the world's roll of professional honor that in the course of time the mouth, from causes above mentioned, will have completely changed its position, and that it will then be situated rather nearer the left ear than to the nose.

A Fellow's Fetish.

In Gray's Harbor, Wash., the pelican is a common sight. Capt. Simpson, of the steamer Typhoon, shot two of the birds the other day, and, in order to find out how much water the pouch of this bird would hold, he cut off the head of one of them and tied a string tightly about the neck. Then from a funnel was allowed to flow in, and when the pouch was filled it contained six gallons.

the Grenadier guards. In 1864 he was elected member for Ayrshire, and in 1866 was appointed under secretary for India. In 1867 he was transferred to the home office, but in the following year he abandoned parliamentary work and went out as governor to South Australia, where he remained till 1873. He was afterward transferred to New Zealand, but resigned his governorship within two years. After serving for a short time as governor of Bombay, Sir James Fergusson returned to England and politics. In 1887 Lord Salisbury appointed him under secretary for foreign affairs, which office he has held up to the present. By his transference to the post office he vacates his seat at North East Manchester, for which he was elected in 1886 by a majority of 327 over his opponent, Mr. G. P. Scott, the figures being: Sir James Fergusson, 5,690; Mr. Scott, 5,363.

IN A DIVING BELL.

An Adventure Calculated to Make One's Hair Stand on End.

Thomas Rand, Richard Hallett and Thomas Bell were divers of the old school who went down in bells and did their work between breathing spells. When two or more of the fraternity are together, says the New York Recorder, they always tell stories about the adventures of their profession, and these tales most often referred to is Richard Hallett's fight with a shark. These old divers say the adventure has never been chronicled in printer's ink, although known to them all. Hallett at the time of the wreck was a deep-water wreck and carried a very sharp saw below with him. While being gently lowered in his bell one day he saw a black object beneath him that grew rapidly in size and in a second rose to his side. It was a shark and it had been caught in the bell. Frightened at the cool-nosed the marble monster struggled to escape, and a blow of its tail threw Hallett from his standing place. Man and fish were then struggling in the water, both held fast in a narrow compartment and one rubbing against the other.

Hallett, so the story goes, seized the shark by a fin and held on, although the animal plunged around and around. As long as he could maintain his grip the shark could not get at him, and holding like grim death with his left, the diver plunged his five-foot saw into the fish right into and up and down the animal's belly until the water was dyed crimson. How long the terrible struggle lasted Hallett could never tell; he remembered signaling to "pull up," and the next he knew was lying at home in bed with his badly-lacerated hand bandaged. Those who tell the story say that Hallett's hand was still tightly clasped about the fin.

The knife was then sent to the London office, and the agent of the company there knew by the letters on the blades how many knives had been bought, and how many were to follow. Each C was worth a penny to the company. The knife was then returned to Sheffield, where the letters were removed, and the knife was ready for another journey. The Cutler's Company is London. The London Times has shown that they were equal to their Sheffield brothers, made a knife with a single well-tempered blade, which, when closed, is only three inches in length, wholly surrounded by the steel, yet, notwithstanding the fact that the blade was well-tempered, the straw was not harped, and the result is that Hallett's hand was still tightly clasped about the fin.

MRS MARSHALL ROBERTS.

The Lady Who Is to Wed Col. Victor of Monmouth.

Mrs. Marshall Roberts, for the first time in several seasons, will open her big New York house this autumn and will set the pace of hostess as delightfully as she has in times gone by.

Mrs. Roberts is the leader among women, and is notably handsome. She looks not unlike pictures of Mary Queen of Scots. Her hair is of a very light brown and has a yellow gleam upon it. Her eyes are large and blue. She is above medium height and has a splendid figure, graceful and majestic.

Mrs. Roberts is probably the richest young widow in America, her wealth being estimated at considerably over ten millions, while her husband left her seven millions dollars. Her son, Marshall Orlando Roberts, of probably the youngest of his age in the country, and when he arrives at twenty-one will be worth at least twenty-five million dollars. He is extremely steady,

Mrs. Roberts was Miss Suzanne Endicott before her marriage, and is related to the Endicotts of Salem, Mass. Her two sisters, the Misses Endicott, live with her, the elder has one brother who is a member of the Endicott family.

Mrs. Marshall Roberts has a magnificent home on Fifth avenue, and is now entertaining royalty, and this winter will be the most brilliant season of her career. Mrs. Roberts is a devout churchwoman and delightful conversationalist. In fact Mrs. Roberts is a most charming woman and one always admires the manner in which she presides at the head of the

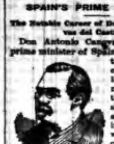
SPAIN'S PRIME MINISTER.

The Notable Career of Don Antonio Cuevas del Castillo.

Don Antonio Cuevas del Castillo, prime minister of Spain, has had a notable career. He entered public life as a young soldier, assuming the chief editorship of the Conservative Patria in 1857, when he was but twenty-one years of age. In 1858, on the charge d'affairs at Rome, he drew up the historical and diplomatic relations between Spain and the Italy see that was adopted as the basis for the concordat. He was thrown into the troubles inter vyers of Isabella's reign a consistent and fearless advocate of constitutional monarchy, which he defended in the cortes to the day the provisional government was established in 1868. He was the first to raise in the constituent assembly the standard of constitutional monarchy, and when Alfonso was proclaimed king on the Canovas was made president of the council and chief of the new cabinet. He has been several times recalled to the chief post, and always has administered the office with discretion and ability. One of his proudest acts was the drawing up of the law for the abolition of the slave trade in the Spanish colonies.



CANOVAS DEL CASTILLO.

Nonsense in Print.

An interesting story is told about the favorite wife of the sultan. She was once a poor girl working in the coal mines of France. Her beauty attracted the attention of some visitors, who rescued her from her laborious occupation and secured a place for her in a fine dressmaking establishment in France, where she speedily became the first assistant. Orders for the sultan's mother ordered some dresses of the establishment, and the girl, Flora Collin by name was sent to Constantinople to fit the gowns. The sultan saw her by chance one day, and when he reached Colonia in France she had become his wife. She is exceedingly popular with the adversity, and stands behind and reverently says remained a large legacy in the city.

Size of the United States Soldier.

Statistics gathered by the United States government from the year 1861 to 1890 show that the enlisted soldiers of the United States army vary in height from a minimum of 4 feet 7 inches to a maximum of 6 feet 4½ inches. The giant of the army is serving in the department of Arizona and the dwarf in the department of the Missouri. In weight the range is even greater than it is in height, the minimum being 97 pounds and the maximum 280, the average throughout the army being 150½, and the average height 5 feet 7 inches. The youngest soldier enlisted is 16 years of age, the oldest 69, the average being 32 years. Thirty-one men are now with Mexican Teeth. Taylor's command boasted a soldier of 7 feet 3 inches in height, and one of 74 years of age.

THE MESSAGE.

Annual Communication of the President to Congress.

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

The reports of the heads of the several Executive Departments, the reports of officers of the Secretary of the Treasury and the Attorney-General, furnish a comprehensive review of the administration of the affairs of the last fiscal year relating to internal duties.

The work of the State Department during the last year has been characterized by an unusual number of important negotiations and by diplomatic results of a notable and beneficial character. Among these are the reciprocal trade arrangements, which have been concluded with several countries.

In view of the reports which had been received as to the diminution of the seal herds in the Behring Sea I deemed it wise to propose to Her Majesty's Government in February last that an agreement for a close season should be made, pending the negotiation for arbitration which then seemed to be impending. Immediate conciliation was effected. After much correspondence, and delays for which this Government was not responsible, an agreement was reached and signed on the 15th of June.

In my last annual message I stated that the basis of arbitration proposed by Her Majesty's Government for the adjustment of the long-pending controversy as to the seal fisheries was not acceptable. I am glad now to be able to announce that a basis more satisfactory to this Government have been agreed upon.

Provision should be made for a joint demarcation of the frontier line between Canada and Alaska, which will be soon required by the increasing border settlements, and especially by the exact location of the water boundary in the straits and rivers.

It is gratifying to be able to state that Germany, Denmark, Italy, Austria and France, in this order named, have opened their ports to inspected American pork products. The removal of these restrictions in every instance asked for and given solely upon the ground that the law now provided a most inspection that should be adequate to the prevention of the approval of the dangers, real or fancied, which had been previously urged.

The Treaty of New Orleans in March last of eleven men of Italian nativity by a mob in that city was a most deplorable and discreditable incident. It did not, however, have its origin in any general animosity to the Italian people, nor in any disrespect to the Government of Italy, with which the relations were of the most friendly character. It was at once recognized by the Italian minister that several of those whose lives had been taken by the mob were Italian subjects, and a demand was made for the punishment of the participants and for an indemnity for the families of those who were killed. Due heed to respect and to the manner in which these claims were presented was not such as to promote a calm discussion of the questions involved, but this may well be attributed to the excitement and indignation which the crime naturally evoked. The temporary absence of the Minister Plenipotentiary of Italy at this Capital has retarded the further correspondence, but it is not doubted that a full satisfaction is attainable.

Some suggestions growing out of this unhappy incident are worthy the attention of Congress. It would, I believe, be entirely competent for Congress to make offenses against the treaty rights of foreigners domiciled in the United States cognizable in the Federal courts.

The civil war in Chile, which began in January last, was concluded, but fortunately with infrequent and not important collisions between the forces. It was satisfactorily established that from the first to the last of this struggle the insurgents were observed and that our representatives were always careful to time their influence impartially in the interest of neither party, and, on more than one occasion, did so. We could not forget, however, that this Government was in diplomatic relations with the then recognized Government of Chile, as it is now in such relations with the successful one of that Government. I am quite sure that President Montt, who by unique circumstances of promise for the peace of Chile, been installed as President of that Republic, will not forget that, in the unfortunate event of any recrudescence of the late struggle, the policy of this Government should be other than that which we have recently observed. No official complaint of the conduct of our minister or of our naval officers during the struggle has been presented to this Government, and it is a matter of regret that the charges which have been made should have given ear to unofficial charges and complaints that manifestly and that could not in fact improperly and in a wish to pervert the relations of the United States with Chile.

The collapse of the government of Balmaceda brought about a condition which is unfortunately not unusual in the history of the central and South American States. With the overthrow of the Balmaceda government he and many of his principal adherents became fugitives for their lives and appealed to the commanding officers of the foreign naval vessels in the harbor of Valparaiso and to the resident foreign minister as hospitality for, or rather the use of, was freely given, according to my information, by the naval officers of the several foreign powers and by several of the legations at Santiago. The American minister, I feel sure, has not failed, acting upon the influence of humanity, extended to political refugees for whose lives were in peril. I have not been willing to direct the surrender of such of these refugees are said in the American legation without suitable conditions.

It is believed that the Government of Chile is not in a position, in view of the precedents with which it has been connected, to heedfully deny the right of asylum, and the correspondence has not thus far progressed any such denial. The treatment of our minister for a time was such as to call for a demand for his recall. It was very gratifying to observe that unfriendly measures, which were undoubtedly the result of the then existing excitement, were at once rescinded or suitably relented.

On the 10th of October an event occurred in Valparaiso which fell heavily in its circumstances and results as to very justly excite the indignation of our people and to call for prompt and decided action on the part of this Government. A considerable number of the sailors of the United States steamship Baltimore, then in the harbor of Valparaiso, being on shore leave and unarmed, were assaulted by armed men nearly simultaneously in different localities in the city. The petty officer was killed outright and a number of seamen were seriously wounded, one of whom has since died. No barrage and brutal was the assault that several of our sailors received more than 100, and one as many as eighteen stab wounds. An investigation of the affair was promptly made by a board of officers of the fleet, and the report shows that these assaults were unprovoked, that our men were conducting themselves in a peaceable and orderly manner, and that some of the police of the city took part in the assault and used their weapons with fatal effect, with a few others, with arms of a less deadly character, sought to protect our men. Thirty-six of our sailors were arrested, and mounted them, while being taken to prison, were brutally beaten by the populace. The fact that they were all discharged, no criminal charge being lodged against any one of them, shows very clearly that they were innocent of any breach of the peace.

So far as I have yet been able to learn no other explanation of this bloody work has been suggested than that it had its origin in hostility to these men as sailors of the United States, wearing the uniform of our country, and not as men in any individual act or personal animosity. The attention of the United States Government was at once called to this affair, and a statement of the facts ascertained by the investigation of the board conducted was submitted, accompanied by a request to be informed of any other or qualifying facts in the possession of the Government of Chile which might lead me to refrain this affair of the appearance of an insult to this Government. The United States Government was of the opinion that if such qualifying facts did not exist this Government would confidently expect full and prompt reparation.

It is to be regretted that the reply of the Secretary of Foreign Affairs of the Provisional Government was couched in an offensive terms. This no response has been made. This Government is now awaiting the result of an investigation which has been conducted by the criminal court of Valparaiso, which reported specifically that the investigation is almost completed, and it is expected will as a result of which the Government will make complete and satisfactory response to the note by which the attention of Chile was called to this incident. If these just expectations should be disappointed or further needless delay interpose, it will be my painful duty to bring this matter again to the attention of Congress for such action as may be necessary.

A question has arisen with the Government of Spain touching the rights of American citizens in the Caroline Islands. It has been there, hoped that by the confirmation of Spain's claim to the islands, had secured by settlement and permanent occupation, the regulation and maintenance of, which the exercise of sovereign rights, the chief reason with the past year very strong it to protect against the facts to carry out this pledge on the part of his Majesty's ministers.

The death of King Kalakaua in the United States afforded occasion to testify our friendship for Hawaii by causing the King's body to be known land in naval escort to all the usual honors. Government of his successor, Queen Lilinokalani, is seeking to promote closer commercial relations with the United States. Surveys for the inauguration of a cable from the Pacific Coast to Honolulu are in progress, and the enterprise should have the cordial promotion of the two Governments. I strongly recommend that provision be made for carrying the mails of the United States and steamships on a naval station.

The love of peace, which is a national trait, but with much earnestness, to the Government of the United States, is one of the leading motives which has induced me to withhold from Congress full information in regard to the recent massacre of citizens of the United States at Wounded Knee, in the State of South Dakota, by troops of the United States. Full information in regard to the affair has been communicated to the Senate, and I am quite willing to recommend that provision be made for the payment of a gratuity to the families of those who were killed, and to those who were wounded in the course of the action, if Congress shall be of the opinion that such payments will be within the scope of its duty and power.

The annual report of the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua shows that much energy and considerable progress have been made in the work during the year, and that the work of canal construction is being prosecuted with vigor.

I deem it to be a matter of the highest concern to the United States that its canal, connecting the waters of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans and giving to it a shorter route for its vessels between our ports upon those two great seas, should be speedily constructed and should be the property of the United States.

If this work is to be promoted by the canal Company of Nicaragua without the aid of this Government, the expenditures in its construction will be largely of stocks, will be within the actual cost. I am quite willing to recommend that provision be made for the guaranty by the United States of a work which, if no other means of speed for securing its completion is of such transcendent interest that this Government should, in my opinion, secure it by direct subscription to the stock.

International copyright has been secured, in accordance with the act of March 3, 1891, with Belgium, France, Great Britain and the British possessions, and Switzerland, the laws of those countries permitting to our citizens the benefit of copyright on substantially the same basis as to their own citizens or subjects.

The general interest in the operation of the Treasury Department has been greatly augmented during the last year by reason of the conflicting predictions which accompanied and followed the tariff and other legislation of the last Congress touching the effect of that on the results of that legislation upon the treasury and upon the country.

It is not my purpose to enter at any length into a discussion of the effects of the legislation to which I have referred, but a brief examination of the statistical of the foreign and domestic trade and the state of business throughout the country will, I think, satisfy any impartial inquirer that its results have disappointed the evil prophecies of its opponents and have fully justified the hopeful predictions of its friends. Surely, if the test is the history of the country has there been a time when the products of the labor or the product of one farmed acre would purchase so large an amount of those things that enter into the comfort of the masses of the people. I believe that a full trial will develop the fact that the tariff act of the Fifty-first Congress is very favorable in its average effect upon the prosperity of the people of the common use.

During the twelve months from October 1, 1890, to September 30, 1891, the total value of our foreign commerce (imports and exports combined) was $1,742,894,466, which was the largest of any year in the history of the country. This is interesting, and to some will be surprising, to know that during the year ending September 30, 1891, our imports of merchandise amounted to $844,713,276, which was an increase of more than eleven millions dollars over the value of the imports of the corresponding months of the preceding year, when the imports of merchandise were unusually large in anticipation of the tariff legislation then pending.

The value of free imports during the twelve months ending September 30, 1891, was $118,902,267 more than the value of free imports during the corresponding twelve months of the preceding year, and that was during the same period a decrease of $106,946,500 in the value of dutiable imports was the chiefest.

If we turn to exports of merchandise the statistics are full of gratification. The value of such exports of merchandise for the twelve months ending September 30, 1891, was $923,091,136, while for the corresponding previous twelve months it was $880,177,516, an increase of $42,914,021, which is nearly three times the average annual increase of exports of merchandise for the preceding twenty years; but the value of imports and value the exports of merchandise during any year in the history of the Government.

It may be argued that our condition has been benefited by legislation based upon a free-trade basis; but it can not be denied that the general diffusion of prosperity and of general contentment are present in a larger degree than ever before in our history, and that, too, at a time when it was prophesied they would be at the zenith of misery.

I think there are conclusive evidences that the new tariff has created several great industries which will, within a few years, give employment to several hundred thousand additional wage-earners and women.

The report of the Secretary of the Treasury shows that the total receipts of the Government, from all sources, for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1891, were $458,444,551.68, while the expenditures for the same period were $421,024,470.46, leaving a surplus of $37,420,081.22.

Under the law of July 14, 1890, the Secretary of the Treasury has purchased since August 13, during the fiscal year 66,368,142 ounces of silver bullion at an average cost of $1.040 per ounce. The highest price paid during the year was $1.2025, and the lowest, $0.9236. In exchange for this silver bullion there have been issued $50,377,499 of the Treasury notes authorized by the act. The lowest price realized for silver bullion during the year was $0.9236 on April 23, 1891, but on the 30th day of June, 1891, it was only $0.96, which would give to the silver dollar a bullion value of 74.16 cents.

The Government is now buying and paying nearly 54,000,000 ounces, which, allowing for 7,140,000 ounces of bullion used in the arts, is 47,000,000 more than our domestic product available for coinage.

Since the depression in the price of silver is temporary and that a further fall in the price of silver is not probable, I am decidedly of the opinion that the free coinage of silver under existing conditions would disastrously affect our business interests, and for that reason I believe it is the earnest desire of a great majority of people, as it is of myself, that a full coin use shall be made of silver just as soon as the co-operation of other nations can be secured and such a ratio fixed that will give circulation equally to gold and silver.

The cash surplus in the Treasury on March 1, 1891, by a special act of that policy of applying this surplus to the redemption of the interest-bearing securities of the country, which I then thought to be preferable to that of depositing it with the national banks. There have been redeemed since the date last mentioned of bonds to the amount of $45,000,000, resulting in a reduction of the annual interest charge of $2,454,975.

The result of the policy, of the silver legislation, and of the refunding into 4 1-2 per cent. bonds has been a large increase of the money in circulation.

The report of the Secretary of War exhibits the results of an intelligent, progressive and economical administration of a department which has been long regarded as one of more than ordinary importance. The appointment from the Department by reason of his appointment as Senator from the State of Vermont, is a source of great regret to me and to the members of the Cabinet.

In the administration of army affairs some especially good work has been accomplished.

We should be greatly embarrassed in the proper distribution and use of naval vessels if our coasts were not defended by a line of fortifications and harbor defenses are provided for our harbors.

The adoption of a smokeless powder for use in all sizes rifle and heavy ordnance and rapidity of fire to the best advantage is one of the leading features of the new Bill of less than four millions of dollars, while the estimate for the year 1893 will be required for expenditures. Eight thousand dollars has been established upon railroads. I concur in the recommendation that the free-delivery system be at once extended to towns of 5,000 population.

In pursuance of the ocean-mail law of March 3, 1891, advertisements were issued for 20 lines of steamships. It was not, of course, expected that bids for all these lines would be received. It was hoped that a line to England, and perhaps one to the Continent would be established. It would be required to equip such lines wholly with new ships of the first class and the difficulty of establishing such lines, in competition with those already established deterred bidders. It is hoped that a way may not be found of overcoming these difficulties. I do not think there is any reason for discouragement or for any turning back from the policy of this legislation.

The report of the Secretary of the Navy shows a gratifying progress in naval vessels in commission. Some of these vessels are under construction, it believed, will be triumphs of naval engineering. I commend to your favorable consideration the recommendations of the Secretary. There should be no hesitation in promptly completing a navy of the best modern type, large enough to enable this country to display its flag in all seas for the protection of the property of the Indians and a representation in Congress.

Since March 4, 1889, about 23,000,000 acres have been separated from Indian reservations and added to the public domain for the use of those who desired to settle upon the homes under our existing laws.

The administration of the Pension Bureau has been characterized during the year by great diligence. The number on the roll on the 30th day of June, 1891, was 676,160. There were added during the fiscal year ending at that time 250,565 cases. Of this number 204,267 were allowed under the law of June 27, 1890. The issuing of certificates has been proceeding at the rate of about 90,000 per month, about 75 per cent of these being cases under the act of 1890. The Commissioner expresses the opinion that he will be able to carefully adjudicate and allow 350,000 claims during the present fiscal year. The appropriation for the payment of pensions for the fiscal year 1891 was $117,983,793.89 and the amount expended was $118,520,025.25, leaving an unexpended surplus of $3,153,144.64.

The Commissioner is quite confident that there will be no call this year for a deficiency appropriation, notwithstanding the rapidity with which the work is being pushed.

The question of Congress for the repression of polygamy has, after years of resistance on the part of the Mormons, at last brought them to the conclusion that resistance is unprofitable and unavailing. The power of Congress over this subject should not be surrendered until we have satisfactory proofs of the entire good faith of those to be created would exercise the existing power in the same spirit in the same way.

The estimates of the Department of Agriculture was regarded by anyone as a mere concession to the unenlightened demand of a certain class of people, that impression has been entirely dissipated by the results already attained. Its home influence has been very great. The inspection of the Department of beef and pork products intended for shipment abroad has been a work of great magnitude which has attended our efforts to secure the removal of the unjust restrictions maintained by the European governments. It is a source of general congratulation that this service has so far been free from scandal. The Secretary of Agriculture estimates that the necessary appropriations for the continuation of our pork products into Europe last us a market for $30,000,000 worth of these products annually.

The grain crop was the largest in our history, 30 per cent greater than the average, and the per new markets and the larger demand for our breadstuffs in Europe to an extent that the enormous surplus will be maintained at good prices.

I recommend that the appropriation for the Civil Service Commission be made adequate to the increased work of the next fiscal year.

I have twice before suggested to the consideration of Congress to the necessity of legislation for the protection of the lives of railroad employees, but hitherto

OLD FORT MARION.

How Florida Will Be Represented at the World's Fair.

St. Augustine's Historical Structure to Be Reproduced in Chicago—The Most Interesting of Spanish Relics in the United States.

At a recent meeting of the Florida world's fair directors in Jacksonville the plan submitted by Mr. Bright, the chief of the legislative division, was unanimously accepted, and $100,000 was being raised for the erection of the building and maintenance of the state exhibit.

In many ways the Florida state building will be the most unique feature. Mr. Jackson describes it as a reproduction of the oldest and most historic building in the United States, the most important and interesting relic of the Spanish rulers—old Fort Marion. Before the days of the pilgrims there were landing at Plymouth Rock, this four-hundred fortress was old. Its foundation stone was laid over sixty years before the shores of Lake Michigan. It was almost admirably adapted for a grand display of Florida's many and varied resources and attractions, and the walls and ramparts affording opportunity for a most interesting display of Florida's many and valuable products. Some of the most stirring episodes in the early history of America, in fact, are connected with this old fort.

The model will be made to form a series of sunken gardens and subject lessons of incalculable interest and value to the visitor. There will be displayed therein miniature cotton, sugar cane and tobacco fields, a pineapple grove, a banana walk, a hammock, the most valuable garnitures of the greatest variety, while northern people are familiarized with peculiar and interesting facts regarding their appearance during cultivation. They eat rice and study how it is grown, not in a field, but in a box growing in a field. They eat pineapple as a great delicacy, but not one person in a hundred knows whether they grow on trees or in the ground.

The interior of this reproduction of the old fort will be used for a hall of general, a series of rooms for exhibits, headquarters, reception rooms and executive offices. The roof will afford an unbeatable Florida's native woods, showing the great lumber interests of the state. The walls of the fort will be utilized to support exhibits, and not the least important will be the display of fine horticultural specimens which the location might be adopted, a very much larger space proportionately would be required, but it is hoped that a way may be found of overcoming these difficulties. I do not think there is any reason for discouragement or for any turning back from the policy of this legislation.

STATUE OF BRIGHT.

It Will Be Erected in Front of the Town Hall.

It seems to me to be fortunate that Mr. Hamo Thornycroft's statue of the late John Bright was successfully cast in bronze the other day by Moore, of Thames Ditton. Mr. Bright, says the Pall Mall Budget, is represented in the act of making a speech, the right hand being slightly raised, and the other, which grasps his notes, hanging at the side. The face is characteristic and full of his. It was part of Mr. Thornycroft's original scheme to place a sword between the left leg and the chair, but the observe and not particularly cogent reason, Rochdale objected. It is a pity the sword was allowed to be cast in this way, since the sword would not only have had a symbolical interest and value, but would also have improved the appearance of the statue as a work of art.

Thornycroft's Bronze figure of Mr. Bright measures nine feet six inches from top to bottom, and will stand upon a granite pedestal not less than

A Remarkable River.

On the African shore near the mouth of the Congo is a river called the Ansah with the main ocean, and is found one of the most wonderful rivers in the world. Its waters are of a dark blue flow out from the ocean current. The surface of the river is almost as smooth as glass. Nobody knows the mean tide and it is fed by a paradoxical river, which is both a river and a lake. It is supposed probable that the whole basin of the lake on party fills was once a river, but that the river has been dammed therefrom by the coming of lava. The inflowing river has a rapid current, is fathomless, and is bordered by high tide, and has filled the lake to such an extent that evaporation no longer supply exactly balance each other.

PERILS OF THE REPUBLIC.

The authorship of the following extract has been credited to President Lincoln. It sounds like him, but whether really his or not, whoever did express or indite,the published sentiments gave currency to momentous facts:

"Yes, we may all congratulate ourselves that the cruel war is nearly to a close. The best blood of the flower of American youth has been freely offered upon our country's altar that the Nation might live. It has been indeed a crying tour for the Republic, but I see in the fear future a crisis arising that unnerves me and causes me to tremble for the safety of my country. As a result of the war, corporations have been entrenched in the strength of corruption till their powers will follow. The money power of the country will endeavor to plant itself firmly by working upon the prejudices of the people, until all the wealth is aggregated in a few hands and the Republic destroyed. I feel at this moment more anxiety for the safety of my country than ever before, even in the midst of war. God grant that my suspicions may prove groundless."

The enthronement of mercenary corporations and the growth of political corruption are indeed among the greatest perils free government has to encounter.

Slavery was a gigantic evil, but sectional, and pure in contrast with these arrogant money-gothic task-masters who now seek to extort tribute from the people everywhere, and to crush out individual rights and opportunities in order that money may reign supreme in the hands of the comparatively few.

Slavery made chattels of a class of human beings. Monopoly, if not suppressed by public hostility, will eventually rivet the chains of general servitude and avariciously absorb the just reward of personal labor and industry.

The argument in favor of respect to the spirit of the American Republic, whose untarnished honor and unfettered perpetuation should be the earnest purpose of all patriotic citizens.

Slavery no doubt sought after consolidated political power, but never for the elevation of corruptionists into office or the condonation of fraud. Its special defenders were as politicians energetic and active, yet honest and outspoken in their endeavors.

Unhappily at the present day a different state of affairs prevails throughout our boasted land of freedom. Politics, in a great measure, is now conducted on the fraudulent theory that all is fair that wins success, so practiced by the municipal Spoils, not the public welfare, is to an alarming the politicians aim.

Therein lurks another foe to the stability of the Republic.

It is time to hoist danger signals!

The Prohibitionists are steadily gaining in this county. In the county election of last year they polled only 230 votes, and in the last November election they polled some 370 votes. The bulk of this vote comes from Plainfield, Ridgway, township of Westfield, Cranford and Summit.

By a formal order issued from the War Department the field of union of the national flag is now in the army will, and after July 4th next, consist of 44 stars, in six rows, the upper and lower rows to have eight stars and the four middle rows seven stars each, in a blue field.

Congressman Geissenhainer is winning golden opinions among the Democracy by his unswerving fidelity to that party's principles in the House of Representatives. Those that know him not when he was selected as their standard bearer from the Third District are now found in his praise as a competent and faithful servant of the people.

Those Democrats who do not favor Grover Cleveland for the next Presidential candidate are shouting that the man Mills was defeated for Speakership of the House. There is no evidence to prove that Mr. Cleveland advocated the selection of Mr. Mills over any other candidate for the office of Speaker. And if this was the case, that the Speaker-elect, Mr. Crisp, is an ardent supporter of Mr. Cleveland, should explode all such nonsensical theories that Mr. Cleveland was beaten in his choice for the Speakership.

The spirit of Bareheard of "Hum, Hemaiden and Bedellow" memory, arrived in Col. Shepard, editor of the New York Mail and Express, who recently gave expression in his newspaper to the sentiment that "no Catholic can be a true patriotic citizen. Every Roman Catholic must be political as well as religious questions obey the decrees and instructions of the Church of Rome. No Roman Catholic is a free man, and Americans are free men." Commenting upon this intolerant utterance, the Philadelphia Record forcibly says:

When the civil war raged, and when the sounds of Catholics were shedding their blood and contributing their money to the country, such views as this never found into deliberate currency. But they now feel perfectly safe in voicing their pent up hatred. The spirit of New York are just now busily employed in running down dynamite-slingers and other dangerous cranks. They should keep a wary eye upon Colonel Shepard.

In his said report transmitted to Congress at the opening of the present session Secretary Foster, of the Treasury Department, furnished totals of the estimates for appropriations required for the fiscal year of 1893, as furnished by the heads of the several executive departments. Since then he has furnished to the Speaker of the House the details of those estimates, some of which are of general interest. The estimate for army and navy pensions is $147 064 550, which is a decrease of $5 748 983 from the amount appropriated and on account of pensions for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1892, which includes a deficiency appropriation of $29 350 598. The amount of the estimate under the general head of the establishment is $26,365,854, which is over $5,000,000 less than the present appropriation. Nearly all of this reduction is made in the estimates for increase of the navy, the estimate for this item being $12,280,855. For new machinery for the Washington Navy Yard $100,000 is asked, and for the purchase of steel plates $250,000. For the building for the library of Congress $1,035,000 is asked. This is about $400,000 in excess of the present appropriation.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., DECEMBER 17, 1891.

The election in Union County next Fall will be an important one. There is then to be elected a Congressman, Assemblymen, Freeholders and County Clerk, besides voting for President and Vice-President.

Last Fall the New York Herald offered a prize of $200 to the person who would guess the nearest to the majority that Flower would get for Governor. The prize has been awarded to Michael Mean, a carpenter in that city, who guessed the exact figures—47,937 votes—the correct vote as returned by the canvassing board. Mean should now retire from the guessing business, if he would save his reputation as a prophet.

FLAG DAYS.

What the Flying Stars and Stripes Will Commemorate in Plainfield.

The public schools value the flags that have been presented to them so highly that it was a matter of regret that they could not be used with greater utility. Such a use is not only possible, but is actually done. So the direction was given that they should be used only on special occasions.

The idea aid of the class in United States history, the following days have been selected on which to display the flag. The choice was approved by the Board of education at the meeting the 7th inst., and the adoption passed, though some of the members favored the daily use of the flags. The plan prevailed, however, that their limited use would be educational too, as, by announcement in each of the schools, the day would be heralded with an important event in history, the sketch of the person for whom the school was named, or some important holiday. There is also given in the list a representative statesman and soldier:

BEDLOW IN A DIFFERENT LIGHT.

His Luck a "Heel on Earth", but He Right Have Been Happy With Second.

Mrs. Lydia A. Stillwell, whose daughter is the principal beneficiary of the will of Alfred Bedlow, late of this city, was a witness in the contest by his widow and children which was begun in 1889, before the Surrogate. She put quite a new complexion on the case. According to her story, Mr. Bedlow, whom his widow and daughters seemed to regard as the family skeleton, was a sufferer from his wife's temper and his children's greed.

Mrs. Stillwell, who is a pleasant-looking lady with gray hair, said that Mr. Bedlow first boarded at her house in May, 1880. He soon became on very friendly terms with herself and her daughter, and confided to her that his family had made his life a hell upon earth. In speaking of his son Alfred he said that he had discovered the total depravity of his career. Mr. Bedlow seemed to admire her daughter Sarah. On one occasion he had remarked that if he could secure Sarah's affections he might have been a happy man. Sooner than let his family get his money, which, he said, was all they cared for, he would destroy everything he had. Two days before Mr. Bedlow's death, Mrs. Stillwell said, he declared that he was quite satisfied with his will. He never saw him after the Bedlow-st house.

Lawyer Charles C. Kesler, who is accused of exerting undue influence upon Mr. Bedlow, testified that the latter was very poor when he first met him. He was employed as a clerk at $1 a day. Mr. Kesler lent him $1,700, which belonged to Miss Stillwell. Bedlow could not repay it. Mr. Kesler said he had transacted legal business for Mr. Bedlow. The latter had offered to provide a home for his wife and pay her $400 annually, but the offer was rejected.

When Mrs. Bedlow sued her husband for divorce she was compelled by the Court to draw up the will, in which he gave her and the children $1 each.

PLAINFIELD WILL SEND THE PRESS.

The Printing of Arabic Bibles Generously Provided for by a Local Congregation.

Beyrout, Syria, is a great centre for the publication of Biblical literature in the Arabic tongue. There many Bibles are printed in the Arabic tongue and distributed over that section of the country. Dr. Jessup, a missionary, has been for years a leading missionary meeting in the Crescent Avenue church, last Wednesday evening, stated the necessity of his cause. The press had broken down, and the work must be stopped unless a new press was sent from this country. It occurred to Dr. Jessup, Mr. Sidney Dillon, that the centre of printing-press manufacture was an appropriate place to start such a movement. He said so at the meeting and the next day received checks for $150, before the end of the week the subscription had amounted to $375; and upon Sunday the pastor announced the church yesterday morning, the amount was raised to $613.

Both printing-press companies in this city made very good offers. The press will cost about $800. The duty and incidentals will amount to $150. The transportation will be about $50. Dr. Jessup has raised that amount through other channels.

Tribute to the Dear Departed

The Woman's Society of Christian Work of this city has adopted the following tribute to the memory of Anna E. Titsworth:

God spoke; a sister heard, and to-day a happier home than earth affords has received the sorrows of life, rejoicing in the joy of union with those called before, and in the presence of the Lord.

To us is left the memory of a true, faithful life, the sweet influence of which will be a brave, giving the sweetest love of life to others' strength. In can be truly said of her, "She hath done what she could."

These frequent calls from our midst admonish us that our work must be earnest, lest we should grow weary. We would have our hearts mellowed by sympathy with those that suffer and sorrow, that they may be led to be the abiding place of His spirit. To the sorrowing family we tender our love, and can only pray that they may find comfort by resting in the "Everlasting Arms," and realizing that the voice of the loved one who would say, "Come up to the light, remember me that where the wings of the soul are unfurled, and now, like a star beyond evening's cold dew;

Looks calmly down on the tears of the world."

JOB MALE'S, LAWSUIT.

$15,000 Saved to His Estate by a Suit Which He Brought Against Trustees Appointed by Himself—A Loss to the Estate, but Settles Points Desired.

Job Male's administrators last week closed the accounts of the James Anderson estate, of which Mr. Male had been the executor for almost half a century. The case has attracted much interest because it is well known that Mr. Male's perhaps fatal delay in making his own will was owing to the desire to have the Anderson case settled first. He told many of his friends that as soon as the chancellor decided the Anderson case he would make his will. There is no doubt that he felt great anxiety about the result of the case. If he could have lived to learn the decision of the chancellor, his heart would indeed have been glad indeed. From the published reports and the original papers, the following facts are given concerning this remarkable case.

James Anderson's will, which was proved in 1849, appointed Job Male executor. The will directed, among other things, that $1,000 should be paid to the children Mary J. Anderson should have on marriage, when the youngest of such children should become of the age of twenty-one; but if Miss Anderson should die leaving no children then the $1,000 and interest were to be paid to the New York Orphan Asylum. Miss Anderson was about twelve years old when the will was proved, so that it was evident that the executors would have a long time to wait before her to reach a proper age for marriage and to give time for all of her future children to grow to be of full age.

In due course Miss Anderson became Mrs. Williams and had six children, the youngest of whom became of age about a year before Mr. Male died. We back in 1849 Mr. Male loaned the $1,000 in a mortgage on his own property, and, strange to say, the mortgage remained on the same property until 1889, when it was paid off by Mr. Townsend to whom Mr. Male had sold the property. During the 40 years of Mr. Male's executorship he received the interest on the mortgage regularly, and mingled it with his own, keeping, however, a strict account and charging himself with every dollar of principal and interest. He adopted this course believing that the trust money was perhaps safer with him than if invested elsewhere.

Upon the youngest child becoming twenty-one, Mr. Male handed in his account and expressed desire to pay over the balance at once. What was his amazement to be informed that the beneficiaries declined accepting the money on the ground that he (Mr. Male) had made use of the money in his own business, and thereby gave those for whom he was trustee the right to take all profits that had resulted from such use of the money, or compound interest, at their option. They exhibited their calculation of compound interest showing that it amounted to over $27,000, and demanded immediate payment of the entire amount. Mr. Male was stopped by the decision. The actual interest which he had collected amounted to little more than $3,000. In addition to this, he was perfectly willing to pay simple interest on the instalments of interest from the times respectively on which they were received. The beneficiaries would not abate one dollar from their demand.

Mr. Male in this emergency consulted Craig A. Marsh and was advised not to submit to the demand. Litigation was threatening to be eased. Mr. Marsh immediately brought suit in chancery for Mr. Male against all of the beneficiaries. This he did in the confident belief that he would win several questions of unsettled law on other points which it was the executor's duty to submit to the courts for advice. Such for example as the following: No money was payable under the will until it was absolutely sure that all the children that Mary Anderson might have were at her death had become 21 years of age. Since Mary Anderson is still living, although a widow, would the court assume that she will not have more children? Suppose that she should outlive all of her children, would not the money then go to the New York orphan asylum? Six other legal questions of equal difficulty were presented for the Chancellor's decision and incidentally, Mr. Male asked the chancellor to say how much interest he should pay in case the money was now payable.

Hon. Washington H. Williams of Jersey City, represented the beneficiaries, and Nelson Runyon, Esq., represented Mrs. Stout who was also a party to the suit. The testimony was printed and the case was elaborately argued before the chancellor. The importance of the legal questions raised by Mr. Male as to the construction of the will demanded exhaustive research on the part of counsel and the court and in the crowded condition of the chancery calendar, a speedy decision was hardly to be expected. It was rendered shortly after Mr. Male's death and completely justified Mr. Male's course in resisting this demand made upon him and in bringing his suit for this construction of the will. The opinion covered the questions submitted to the court at the outset that Mr. Male was entitled to the aid of the court. After disposing of this clear, questions of law the court ordered the interest account made up by adding the several instalments of interest together beginning with the year 1849, until they aggregated $41,000. For that period, interest was ordered computed on a principal of $2,000 until the accumulations of interest should equal another $1,000. When a new principal of $2,000 would be taken and so on. The result was that the total amount to be paid by Mr. Male was run up to about $53,000, and Mr. Male was allowed commissions and counsel fee and costs out of the estate. The result of the suit was therefore a saving to Mr. Male's estate of about $15,000.

This will of course now inure to the benefit of the heirs. Mr. Male did not so much care about the $15,000. It may now be looked upon the demand as one attacking the integrity of his motives.

The Same Death Rate.

The State board of health has just completed the tabulating of vital statistics, and the figures show that while the deaths in the State have increased about three hundred the births and marriages have decreased. The number of marriages during the statistical year ending June 30, were 16,564, against 15,305 of the preceding year, while the births were 40,842, during the same time were 39,892, against 39,139. The deaths were 29,840, against 29,536 of the preceding year.

The Untrustworthy Kerosene Lamp.

A lighted lamp fell upon, from no apparent cause, in the back bedroom at the home of Herman H. Robinson, 34 Peace street, at 5:35 Saturday evening, and the blazing oil was scattered about the floor. The furniture and carpet was more or less damaged before the flames were smothered. An alarm from box 13 called out the fire department, but their services were not needed.

Mr. Robinson's sister-in-law, who was the only adult in the house at the time, says that she had just left the room, and gone down in another room the baby she was holding, and put out the fire sensation, while a man to whom she had called for help ran for the engines.

LOCAL TALENT ABROAD.

Plainfield Newspaper Men and Press Extracts to Fast Assignments.

Notable among the contributors to the "Holiday Special" of the New York Journalist, just issued by George Percy Taggart of North Plainfield and Walter Wilkins of this city, The Journalist is the recognized newspaper of the newspaper world, and its "Holiday Special" is a volume annual which every year grows brighter and better. Its pages contain the cream of contributions from the gifted pens of the foremost writers of the newspaper press, and the publication each winter is eagerly looked forward to by the entire fraternity.

The current number is handsomely printed, profusely illustrated and adorned with autographs, and bound in a neat cover, illuminated with an original and appropriate design. The pages are brimful of originality, and sparkle with brightness. The true Christmas flair or perfume most of the stories and verses.

Mr. Taggart's contribution is a real gem of a sketch. He has named it "My Friend's Story", and has imparted into his language a depth of pathos and originality of conception that would do credit to a much older writer. Mr. Taggart is a member of the staff of the United Press, and is a frequent contributor, through its "Literary Budget", to the literary departments of papers all over the country. He is one of The Press's most valued contributors.

"The Story that Was Killed" is the odd and striking title of Mr. Clarke's contribution. It is one of his characteristic tales of newspaper life. A man of many has varied and extended experi-ence, he has acquired such a valuable and interesting fund. The story was written under great pressure of other duties, and has therefore perhaps been finished than some of Mr. Clarke's former productions; but it is nevertheless entertaining, and is by no means devoid of beauty of sentiment, dramatic force, smoothness of style, or intensity of plot.

Two of the local contributors Plainfield cannot but feel a local pride. They are young men of literary ability which is rapidly winning recognition and a place in the world of letters. Plainfield has reason to be gratified at its meritorious representation in the "Holiday Special" pages. And not only is hers ability represented, but natural feature as well: for among the portraits of the publication, that of Mr. Taggart is prominent.

SPORTSMEN PUT UP THEIR GUNS.

No More May They Hunt for Jersey Game, Till the Season of '92 Begins.

The game season in New Jersey closed Tuesday night, and now all game is by law killed, except under heavy penalty, in any part of the State, until the season again opens in 1892.

The licensed or established dealer in game in New Jersey has ten days from the date of closing to dispose of game, and the possession of game will still with in the period allowed by law, or was killed and purchased outside the limits of the State. This law ought to be strictly enforced.

The slaughter of rabbits throughout the State this year has been immense, and must have been plentiful. Owing to natural barbers, these birds have defied the efforts of hunters and dogs to exterminate them. There is a plenty of them left for next season. If severe weather in the future does not kill them off. Ruffed grouse have not been so plentiful the past season as for some years. The causes are unknown; last winter was a prosperous one for the old ones, and the past summer a good one for the young. Of course we cannot discourse between now and spring, the prospect for the successful breeding of quail and ruffed grouse is encouraging. It is to be hoped that the Ash and Rice bill of the State, wherever quail have been found plentiful, that fact has been attributed to the efforts of the New Jersey Game and Fish Protective society, which a few years ago liberated a large number of quail in various sections on farms where they were protected until they had bred. In some places where these birds were liberated and protected thereabout not been a bird of the species known for years, they are known now. This evidences what stocking and protection will do. The above society, whose headquarters are at Plainfield, have done much in the past year, to stock and protect game birds and fish, and it is a pleasure to its members to know that their efforts have been crowned with success. It is to be hoped the enforcement of the laws will give the true sportsman abundant pleasure when the proper season arrives. In the connection the writer believes, as do all true sports-man, that the coming Legislature ought to repeal the existing law allowing Sunday-week-end shooting. Keep the existing evil up much longer, and that glorious bird will no longer arise from its lair to greet the sportsman's eye. It is the aim of an ardent and enthusiastic sportsman. It is earnestly hoped that summer woodcock shooting will be abolished.

One of the difficulties of the season—a tracking snow—has been denied to them this year. The absence of that has saved many a cotton-tail for propagation purposes.

PLANNING FOR A SYNAGOGUE.

Subscriptions Received, and Incorporation Definitive, by the Plainfield Hebrew Congregation.

The first appeal for subscriptions for the proposed new Hebrew synagogue in this city was made at the meeting of the congregation last week, and resulted in contributions of nearly $1,000.

The appeal was made at the close of a very interesting service by the Congregation Beth Tefillah Jaha Yendel, which included the dedication of a safer torah. The torah is the scroll on which the Law, or catechist specimen of Hebrew chirography, and was written at Jerusalem by order of Alfred A. Marcus, of Boston, Mass., presented it to an elderly gentleman bonded mantle, together with a Mezzillah, or book of Esther, written upon a roll of parchment.

A banquet, tendered by Felix Marx at his Chateau Yougne on East Front street, followed. J. P. Solomon, officiated as toastmaster, and addresses were made by Rev. Marcus Jastrow, on "The Perfection of the Law".

On behalf of the congregation Ernest Marx presented Mr. Marcus with an elegantly-framed set of resolutions.

Prominent Hebrews from other places were present at the day's ceremonies.

Fire in a Shoe-Winder.

The Christmas goods in the store of Julius J. Stahl, 108 Somerset street, were destroyed by fire at 11 o'clock on Monday. The proprietor was trying to burn a hole, with a lighted match, in a paraffine candle, when the match fell into the candle flag-staff. The match dropped down into some cotton, and in an instant the whole window was ablaze. Stahl put out the fire without assistance. The damage was $50.

Fire—Room Wants its Office.

There is quite a contest at Elizabeth over the location of the headquarters of the Union county court, made vacant by the death last week of justice B. M. Rodgers. The candidates are ex-Freeholder Charles Hatfield, Attorney Oliver Conlin, constables James J. Carey and John W. Fulton, and Ralph Neer, all from Elizabeth, and Justice Shute of Rahway, and detective Tuft, ex-policeman Tuttle of Plainfield. Judge Vanderpool makes the appointment at the opening of the January term of the court, and the struggle is a picturesque one, it being during the good behavior of the incumbent.

PLAINFIELD'S BONDED DEBT.

SCHOOL BUILDINGS THAT THE CITY HAS NOT PAID FOR.

Originally the Amount Was High in the Thousands, But This Has Been Paid Off Nearly One-Half—Only Small Amount in Bonds, the Rest in Mortgages—The Total Bonded Debt Now $61,000, or about $4,000 in Paid Back Year.

From the Plainfield Courier-News.

Accurate and complete information is to-day for the first time conveyed to the people, exclusively through these columns, concerning the city's public-school bonded debt, a matter of vital importance to the citizens, and one in which the entire population is greatly concerned.

During the recent political campaign, when the question of bonds was being agitated, the statement was freely made that Plainfield was already a bonded city, having become so on the sole account of school debt, but that no details as to the amount of bonds in existence could be obtained from those in authority, who alone possessed full knowledge in the matter. It was also broadly asserted that the people were oppressed by school tax more than by any other tax on the list, and that the burden of that tax was being made more heavy every year. Special stress was laid on the claim that the public money had been expended in a most wholesale manner, by the school trustees, without giving the public any idea of where the money was going; and the cry was—"Turn on the light and let us see the inwardness of the whole affair!"

If it be a fact that the people have long been starving without avail to find out the information so much desired by every public-school system, THE PRESS may be pardoned in feeling proud of its achievement of to-day, by which it lays bare all the facts for the world to read.

Against the claim of the political campaigners in set this positive assurances, by facts high in authority, that the tax-payers on the public has never before been made acquainted with the details herewith given, is because it was not known by the trustees that there was any popular demand or even desire for such information. The people made their choice of trustees, from year to year, and those elected fulfilled the duties of their office in what their judgment dictated was for the best interests of the city. Furthermore, the fact is that the trustees long ago gave public invitation, through the newspapers and otherwise, for the people to attend their meetings, and if any citizens are in ignorance of any of the transactions of the board it is clearly their own fault through not having attended the business sessions. The members of the board always have been and still are freely open to the public. There are no "star chamber" proceedings. The board has always been glad to give to the public any information asked for.

A bonded debt is a specific lien on all the property of the municipality bonded to the amount of the bonds issued with the bonded debt is only $4,000. This debt exists on the Washington building, and is being paid off at the rate of $1,000 a year. Originally it was $20,000.

But although this is the total indebtedness of the city so far as bonds are concerned, there is a further debt, and quite a heavy one, on the other school property. The city's growth has been a rapid one, and the ever increased demands for school accommodation have necessitated the erection of new buildings. With commendable wisdom, the first thing done was to pay off such of the trustees on the school buildings themselves—instead of in the shape of bonds on the city at large. The total of this debt when it was originally $42,000. Up to date $62,000 has been paid off, leaving a balance still due of $81,000 which is held by the building the present mortgage is $17,000. Originally it was $25,000, but the trustees have not only taken care of the interest each year but have paid off $8,000 of the principal as well.

On the Bryant school there is an existing mortgage of $15,000. Including $15,000 to cover the cost of the addition just completed. $5,000 has been paid on the original sum.

On the Irving school the mortgage is $32,000. It was at first $35,000.

The method of the trustees to reduce the debt is to pay off each year $1,000 of the bonds and $1,000 of the building mortgages. Thus a total reduction of $4,000 is made each year from the principal of the debt, and all interest on the balance is of course promptly paid. And the gradual reduction of the principal means a steady lessening of the amount of interest the annually. On the bonds the rate of interest is 6 per cent., on the mortgages, 5; so that each $4,000 paid off means $240 of interest kept to pay summer woodcock shooting.

The claim of the trustees is that every dollar of debt incurred has been of necessity for the public good, and they can well face with them for having, with the aid of a remarkably competent staff of instructors, built up the finest and best public-school system in the State, and one that may well serve as a model to the country at large.

Those, however, are all matters of individual opinion. THE PRESS has fulfilled its duty as a newspaper in thus making know the facts the public has evoked. Having the debt, now detailed and published for the first time, the city must rest satisfied in the knowledge that its school trustees are and always have been men of ability and integrity, eminently capable of taking care of the unwelcome but unavoidable incubus, and competent to safely attend to serve the public faithfully and well.

It may be added for the benefit of those who have an especial horror of bonds and who have never taken the trouble to understand the distinctions of debt, that in case of failure to pay bonds when they become due, the city is sued, while under a mortgage only the property specified may be sized. So that failure to meet the debt on the school buildings would not affect the title to the ownership of those buildings; private homes would not be imperiled. By the mortgage system the city is relieved of paying on any individual property-holder. Of course each pays his share of the tax, but the outlay is in a most deserving cause; for all the money is spent right here, is generally educated, and the city is gradually acquiring complete ownership of property that has been largely bonded.

Future developments of the city will possibly necessitate slight addition, from time to time, to the mortgaged debt, through the further expansion of public-school facilities to keep pace with the demand. For instance, the Washington school building will soon long have to be enlarged to a two-story structure, and with increased demand for school room there will be an accompanying larger growth, and there will be many cases of expenses to be laid of those who have the compulsory privilege of sharing in paying the taxes: so that the work of debt-reduction will either go on rapidly, and in time the debt will be wiped away altogether and the city will have a clear title to the finest schools in the land.

Borough Property Changes Hands.

Recent real estate transfers in North Plainfield include the following:

William M. Stillman, trustee, to Francis Berdan, $5,000.

Francis Berdan to William M. Stillman, four lots.

Samuel Moore to Stephen W. Van Horn, $1,000.

John Jones Gregory to Sarah D. Joseph, $2,000.

Annie R. Reeve to Mary Hunter Fleming, $2,000.

AN ECHO OF "DARKEST AFRICA."

[For The Press.]

Once, a long, long time ago,
In an African country,
Before the Day of Electricity,
Or even Money Pack,
There dwelt a tribe of monkeys,
Whose lungs were so immense,
They used to roost and sing and shout
In trees of the forest.
And the birds and beasts and cattle
Came and made a chattering part.
For they knew their vocal organs
Were not to it from the other;
And that monkeys were on the business.
And they had the racket right.
And they used their hoarse voices
In a manner out of sight.
But the birds and beasts and cattle,
Who were taxed to run the thing,
Just had to sit and listen,
Across their faces wear and bow to sing.
And the monks at length waxed snobbish,
And mere noise to their song prigs,
Said the birds and beasts and cattle
Must appear in some rigs.
Must have their heads shorn closely;
Wear a pantaloon-like smile;
Part their hair plumb on the middle,
And observe the latest style;
Bring their company manners with them
From their warm native land,
And sport these airs and hues and things,
While listening (?) to the monks.

And it seems that self-same spirit
That the monkeys showed in this,
Has lived, like Rider Haggard's "She",
And broking loose shouts
For what else, I pray you tell me,
Can our vocal folks possess,
When they secure their tickets,
With the legend "Evening Dress".

An Acceptable Substitute

James C. Adams, of Brooklyn, will speak to men in the First Baptist church next Sunday afternoon in the place of Wm. Blaikie, who telegraphs from Kentucky that he will be unable to keep his engagement, but that he will speak here in January. Mr. Adams spoke most interestingly to a large audience of men in the First Baptist church on the 29th ult., when the meeting was conducted by E. L. Sullivan.

Once the Wife of a Rich Man's Son—Now Starving.

Mrs. David Jones and family are in destitute circumstances at their home in Westervelt avenue. There are five children—the youngest a baby only a few days old. Mr. Jones, who is a son of the former owner of the Park House, asserted his wife some years ago and left Plainfield, it was said at the time, with the wife of another. She is living and has a home in a northern city. Mrs. Jones and the children are almost starving. A subscription paper has been started in their behalf and headed by Judd & Wood. W. Nash with an order for a quantity of flour and groceries.

In Memory of an Esteemed Fellow-Member

At a meeting of Local Union No. 155 United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, Tuesday night, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, It has pleased the Supreme Ruler of the Universe to remove from our midst our friend and brother, Henry Kronstadt, be offer this as our last tribute of respect to him.

Resolved, That in the death of brother Henry Kronstadt this Union has lost a true and faithful brother, and the Union an esteemed member.

Resolved, That we tender to the family and friends of the deceased brother our heartfelt sympathy in their bereavement.

Resolved, That these resolutions now adopted by this Organization be spread upon the minutes and transmitted to the family of our late brother and a copy be issued on the minutes of this Local Union. 155.

A Deserved Success.

Many of Plainfield's sportsmen returned last night from Cedar Bridge, the famous pigeon shot, who gave exhibition shoots on the Middlesex Gun club grounds, a number of years ago, and who was crowned with gold medal by the members of the club. The following deserved notice is taken from the Glassgow, Scotland, Evening News of Nov. 27:

Annie Oakley, otherwise Buffalo Bill's "Little Sure Shot", is really a wonderful little woman, and long, I fancy, not be-fore she is tour any one of her years. "Last night I spent a most delightful evening, and it was the greater part of that time to see her presents from notabilities and just ship over her native shores. What a collection it was! Gold medals and precious jewels she possesses from the Prince of Wales, Duke of Edinburgh, and Lords being among the donors. Among her autographs are those of Bismarck, Bishop, Some odd Royal Highnesses, while she treasures more than all a dainty little letter of congratulation and good wishes from the Princess of Wales. All her guns she has a four-barrelled one and her pistols are presents, and she knows how to use them. It was no wonder she got the name of "Little Sure Shot" from Sitting Bull, the Sioux Indian Chief. Her own little room at the Wild West establishment, all by herself with silk-and-satin curtains, is verily "the prettiest little parlour that ever you did see."

The First Printing Press in America.

W. Lewis Fraser, art manager of the Century Magazine, who is to deliver the lecture on "Printing" before the Children's Home, at the Casino, in January, on the subject of "Two Hundred Years of Printing," says that he has found finds that the first printing-press in America was set up in 1639, in the house of the Rev. Henry Dunster, president of Harvard college. The press was brought over from England, where it was purchased with money secured by one Glover, a clergyman, in England. Glover died at sea while bringing the precious machine to America, and his widow became later Mrs. Henry Dunster. The first book ever printed was the "Freemans Oath"; the second, an almanac, on a half-sheet of letter paper. A little later appeared the "Bay Psalm Book". There is a copy of this book in Stephen Dayse, who had been brought from England for the purpose—perhaps the first instance of imported contract labor.

John have you seen that woman lately? Is she an embezzlement? What woman's Wine. Just one her in another column, and read about it; the wines are found by connoisseurs to be of the finest and equal to the best in the World. The Boards of Health in large cities and leading Hospitals have adopted their use where wines are needed.

J. A. DEMAREST - - City Editor.

—The new Grace church looks very pretty by moonlight.

—The game season closed with Dec. 15. After this date it is illegal to kill any kind of game.

—Wm. B. Sharp, of Zephyr hook and ladder company, who ran a spike into his foot on the Scioto fire, is still very lame. The wound is an ugly one.

—The present Plainfield common council will hold its last meeting December 28, when all bills will be paid and the work of their term ended.

—John E. Beerhower appeared before Judge Codington at 6 o'clock on Tuesday and paid a fine of $100 for selling liquor on Sunday, and Theodore, Frank Wolfe, sentence was suspended.

—Sixteen converts were baptized by the Rev. J. R. Cleaver at the Park Avenue Baptist church on Sunday. Seven were three married couples among them. All will unite with the First Church of Christ.

—After five years of dispute, the ownership of the $700 bound by the Elizabeth in a bail of rags is to be decided by the court of chancery. Lawyer Hetfield of this city is one of the counsel in the case.

—Two fellows claiming to be collection agents for a Brooklyn furniture house called at a South Second street residence this morning and demanded money. The head of the family chased them away with a base-ball bat.

—Will Demarest the latter carrier was run into on Monday by Mr. Hamilton on avenue Tuesday, by another bicyclist, and was painfully injured. His left eye is terribly cut and swollen, and he is today confined to the house.

—There was the usual great rush for seats for the Choral concert, at the place of sale last Thursday. Five hundred and fifty seats were sold. Prof. Reuyon had the first choice. He had a man standing at the door from 9:30 last night till the door opened this morning.

—The State board of assessors has just completed the rates of taxation in the various municipalities throughout the State. It shows that in almost all the large cities, except those in Hudson county, the rate is low, while in many of the smaller towns and boroughs it is very high.

—If this should meet the eye of the gentleman known as Mr. Pleasant Jones, he will know that the reason he doesn't get the letter his sweetheart wrote is because she omitted to write on the outside age what place he lives in. The letter ornaments a glass case on the Plainfield post-office wall.

—George Martin, husband of Margaret N. Martin, whose body was found in Netherwood last Saturday, wishes THE PRESS to state that Mrs. Martin was not housekeeper or care-taker of the hotel, but occupied apartments there with Mr. Miller's invitation just the same as if it had been a private house.

—Michael Kelly and Frank Lally, traveling tinkers, were every day liquor. Thursday night and lay over on the Elizabeth track at Netherwood to-day. A train was stopped just in time to save their lives, and they were arrested and brought to this city. Next morning Judge Codington gave them each 10 days in jail.

—Alonzo Randolph went on the warpath at 12 o'clock Sun. 10, and took three glasses to hold him down on Park avenue. He was insane with liquor and had to be bound hand and foot. Sergeant Lyon was roused out of bed, and Randolph was locked up over night. Next morning Judge Codington sent him to jail for 60 days.

—The entire city fire department was calle tout last Thursday to quench an incipient conflagration in a heap of cornstalks in the rear of the lot 52 West Second street. The alarm was sounded by a locomotive whistle and from signal box 42. A hydrant stream put out the fire in three minutes. An adjoining fence was damaged $1.

—Charles Fiske of No.1 Short 3d street, jumped from a train, Thursday evening, near the Madison avenue crossing, and in the fall lay with a badly cut head and a bruised body. It was train No. 15 that arrives here from New York at 6 28. Fiske woke up as it left the Plainfield station, and thought he could get off the car got to Somerville. So he showed the conductor he could.

—James D. Inness, who besides being superintendent of the Plainfield water and New York is considered one of the best little illustrators in the United States, and who has been engaged in Christian work 27 years, being Mrs. Gen. H. G. Draper, better known as sister Charlotte, E. G. Draper, and W. H. Hoogie, who conducted the services at Reform Hall, Dec. 9, to-day at Reform Hall next Sunday evening.

—The match at continuous pool between Kreweon of this city and Todd of Newark, attracted a large attendance Friday night, to the pleasant and commodious billiard parlor of Wallace V. Miller adjoining Lange's Hotel. Todd led by almost 30 balls in the first game, but Krewson had the nerve and skill to win by 100 to 86. Considerable money was lost by Todd's Newark friends who were present to witness the game.

News Suits Against John Welchers.

Seven suits, amounting to $2,000, were begun in the 5th District court at Grand court against John F. Welchers, of Grand avenue, the late partner in the defunct firm of Field, Lindley, Welchers & Co., of New York. The suits are brought under the Mechanics' Lien law against the house in which the defendant lives and on which he had been making such extensive improvements when the crash of failure came.

Plainfield's Chance of a Lifetime.

The management of Monte Heil are making an effort to secure the famous Minnie Hauk opera company for Christmas. The company have just closed a wonderful season in Boston, and their appearance here can be secured only by liberal patronage. Seats will be put on sale Friday morning, and the sale will close Saturday noon. If the sale is large enough to warrant their coming, the company will close the contract. These are the only terms to which the company will agree. Their coming would be a great treat to the Plainfield public, but the people have got to show themselves at the sale or lose the chance of a lifetime. Let a large house be assured and Plainfield will witness such an entertainment as the theatre-goers will talk about for years to come. Engage your seats promptly.

The old man is busy; he saved his reputation with Salvation Oil. Price only 25 cents.

PERSONALIA.

Drs. Hurlbut and Vincent arrived in port from Europe, last week.

Mr. and Mrs. William Addis of Orange street will celebrate their silver wedding anniversary New Year's Day.

Councilman Simeon D. Moffett, deputy county clerk, has been confined to his home with the grip since Sunday. He is quite ill.

Martin M. Thorn writes from Santa Barbara, Cal., to THE PRESS: "We had a nice shower last night, the first in seven months."

Mrs. J. Walter of North avenue called from Liverpool Wednesday on steamship Majestic, White Star line. She has been abroad nearly three months.

Mr. and Mrs. William Longer of East Third street, will give a silver wedding reception to their friends, Christmas Day, that being the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage.

Mrs. J. P. Simpson, and Miss Simpson, of this city, were present at the brilliant wedding of Miss Alice G. Clark and Wyman Smith, in Christ church, Elizabeth, at noon Thursday.

Mrs. Jane N. VanAntwerp, mother of Mrs. Wm. Stout of "The Elms," East Front street, died at the late residence in Morrisville, Penna., Saturday morning, of pneumonia. She was 78 years of age.

Pastor Warnick of the Mt. Olive Baptist church on Tuesday united in marriage Miss Anna Cobb to Walter Bird, both of this city. After the marriage a pleasant reception was tendered the bride.

The wedding of William A. Ryder and Miss Minerva Kierhaner took place last evening. The bride's residence is the East Front street, New Market. Mr. Ryder is a son of ex-Councilman S. B. Ryder, formerly of this city.

The Rev. J. L. Hurlbut, D. D., will preach in the 10:30 song service to be held in the Trinity Reformed church next Sunday afternoon at 4:15. The meeting will close at 5:15. There will be vocal solos by the Rev. W. C. Kinsey of Dunellen.

Funeral services over the remains of the late Margaret N. Martin were held at the Reformed church at South Bound Brook Tuesday at 2 p. m. Rev. Hurlbut had the first choice. He had a man standing at the door from 9:30 last night till the door opened this morning.

—The State board of assessors has just completed the rates of taxation in the various municipalities throughout the State. It shows that in almost all the large cities, except those in Hudson county, the rate is low, while in many of the smaller towns and boroughs it is very high.

—If this should meet the eye of the gentleman known as Mr. Pleasant Jones, he will know that the reason he doesn't get the letter his sweetheart wrote is because she omitted to write on the outside age what place he lives in. The letter ornaments a glass case on the Plainfield post-office wall.

—George Martin, husband of Margaret N. Martin, whose body was found in Netherwood last Saturday, wishes THE PRESS to state that Mrs. Martin was not housekeeper or care-taker of the hotel, but occupied apartments there with Mr. Miller's invitation just the same as if it had been a private house.

—Michael Kelly and Frank Lally, traveling tinkers, were every day liquor. Thursday night and lay over on the Elizabeth track at Netherwood to-day. A train was stopped just in time to save their lives, and they were arrested and brought to this city. Next morning Judge Codington gave them each 10 days in jail.

—Alonzo Randolph went on the warpath at 12 o'clock Sun. 10, and took three glasses to hold him down on Park avenue. He was insane with liquor and had to be bound hand and foot. Sergeant Lyon was roused out of bed, and Randolph was locked up over night. Next morning Judge Codington sent him to jail for 60 days.

—The entire city fire department was calle tout last Thursday to quench an incipient conflagration in a heap of cornstalks in the rear of the lot 52 West Second street. The alarm was sounded by a locomotive whistle and from signal box 42. A hydrant stream put out the fire in three minutes. An adjoining fence was damaged $1.

—Charles Fiske of No.1 Short 3d street, jumped from a train, Thursday evening, near the Madison avenue crossing, and in the fall lay with a badly cut head and a bruised body. It was train No. 15 that arrives here from New York at 6 28. Fiske woke up as it left the Plainfield station, and thought he could get off the car got to Somerville. So he showed the conductor he could.

—James D. Inness, who besides being superintendent of the Plainfield water and New York is considered one of the best little illustrators in the United States, and who has been engaged in Christian work 27 years, being Mrs. Gen. H. G. Draper, better known as sister Charlotte, E. G. Draper, and W. H. Hoogie, who conducted the services at Reform Hall, Dec. 9, to-day at Reform Hall next Sunday evening.

—The match at continuous pool between Kreweon of this city and Todd of Newark, attracted a large attendance Friday night, to the pleasant and commodious billiard parlor of Wallace V. Miller adjoining Lange's Hotel. Todd led by almost 30 balls in the first game, but Krewson had the nerve and skill to win by 100 to 86. Considerable money was lost by Todd's Newark friends who were present to witness the game.

FIRE IN THE BOROUGH.

Robert Carnes Sustains a Loss of $800, Unlnsured.

The frame barn and hay barracks of Robert Carnes, on Belmont avenue, North Plainfield, were destroyed by fire Saturday afternoon.

Fire was discovered in a stack of hay just outside the barn, at 1.30. The men at work in the neighborhood tried to extinguish the flames, which soon spread to the barn. At 1:45 an alarm was sounded from box 16, at Richmond and Front streets, and the entire department turned out. Only one engine was put into service—Gazelle, No. 1—which threw a stream from Green brook, through Warren's line of hose, standing across lots. The barn was a mass of flames, and the firemen pulled down the building with grappling hooks, and played their stream upon the ruins.

Mr. Carson's loss is $500. There was no insurance. The barn was a new one, and was well filled with grain and hay.

The cause of the fire is unknown.

UNSATISFACTORY LIGHTING.

One Man Who Pays a Big Tax Gets No Benefit at All.

The old question of electric light service was discussed at some length at the North Plainfield borough council meeting Friday. A number of petitions for lamps in unlighted sections of the borough were received, and how to fill the applications was the problem. The number of lamps already in service will exhaust the appropriation for next year. The impression among some of the councilmen seemed to be that the lamps could be thinned out of the "overlighted" sections and distributed around to better advantage. Incidentally Mr. Belong remarked that one man who paid $100 a year for street light tax alone got no service at all in his neighborhood. The matter will be further investigated at the next meeting.

Society News in Few Paragraphs.

Under the headline Personal Chat: Brief News Notes About People in Society and Out of It" the New Brunswick Home News says: "Saturday afternoon Mrs. Kenneyer gave the Rev. Dr. Taylor and John Delaney four days for dinner. Those present were Mrs. Arreats by officers Fox, Needham and Stuart."

Funeral of Mrs. Winston.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Charles Winston, who died suddenly Thursday morning, was attended by a large number of friends and relatives at St. Mary's church, on Saturday. A requiem high mass was celebrated by Father Stafford was celebrant. A very large number of carriages was in line. The pall-bearers were six nephews of the deceased. A large floral pillow with the inscription "Aunt" was presented by the nieces of the deceased. Interment was made in St. Mary's cemetery.

Dispute Over Money Matters.

Peter Seader considers himself an unjustly treated man. Some time ago Weaver engine,was used to fill a big tank in Plainfield. The pumping service was rewarded with $25 in cash, which some of the firemen considered amounted among themselves. The borough council ordered the money given to the fireman's relief fund. All refunded but Mr. Seader, who kept $5 to offset a bill for use of his horses, he claimed against the borough. On Friday the council docked $5 from his monthly bill, and he is justly indignant.

Plainfield Cought Short Handed.

The Catholic Young Men's Lyceum team of Elizabeth came to Plainfield, last Friday, and caught the Crescent League short of its best bowlers. In fact it was nine o'clock before Plainfield, after searching the highways and byways, could get together a team at all.

The visitors came down the first frame in magnificent style. J. Sauer was the only man who broke. The total was 174, which has only been equalled in a game against the Crescent once this season. That was on the evening of Nov 9, at which time the Athletic club team of that city rolled in their first frame, 174.

But in the second frame of last evening's game the Crescents made a brave rally, passed their opponents, and held the lead until the fourth frame. After that the Elizabeths had no difficulty in winning although the Plainfielders came somewhat on the wind-up. Once before have the Crescents met the C. Y. M. L., and that was on Nov. 3, at Elizabeth. The score then was: Elizabeth, 1279; C. Y. M. L., 1350. The score last evening was:

Choice Reading for the Holidays.

Since the last issue of the paper performed the part of Mrs. Boomer's lodger by immediately giving notice that he would give bodies at once, six position on the Plainfield fire department, with a salary of $1,000 a dozen gentlemen of varied accomplishments. For example, Friday night the assistant editor of the Courier received a new fit in a clerical one; on Gen. Sewell, to which he record of piety yet made by that politician entitles him. He says:

"Dear Sir: I understand Queen of Jesus is about to have an additional branch of service added to the division, that of a Signal Corps. Rev. Mr. Lambert, of the Church of Jesus, has passed an order to Col. Benjamin A. Lee.

And the astronomical and chronological editor of the Courier gave the following important announcement:

"From now until the twenty-first of December the days will continue to grow shorter and the nights longer. We shall have our longest nights. After that there will be a gradual lengthening of the other end.

All of which is solid fact as the editor meant it, whatever may be said of him as an essayist.

Equally solid is the remark of the medical editor of the Courier in the following warning:

"This is the time of the year when a bad cold becomes a very easy thing to catch, but a saintly hard thing to get rid of.

If the editor ever had a good cold won't he please describe the sensation?

Then again, speaking of Mr. Murray's insurance association, the insurance editor tells us that:

The association was in a successful condition and was working without a hitch.

That probably was because the association were suspendere, and did not need to be taking "a hitch."

The society editor and the geographical editor appear to have got their heads together, in arranging the following announcement, which is important and significant if true:

Mayor Alexander Gilbert and Mrs. Gilbert entertained at dinner an imposing social presence, on Rabbi street, Wednesday evening. Sir Ambrose Shea, Governor of the Bohemian Club.

And then how is this for a prophecy on the part of the holiday editor of the number of Christmases to be enjoyed next year:

—Next year will be leap year. There will be fifty-three Sundays in 1892, and Christmas will come on Sunday.

—The Y. P. S. C. E. of the Trinity Reformed church had a tag-supper sociable Tuesday evening. Everyone had a tag on rags and sewed a ball for a carnal for charity. There was much mirth, and good refreshments were served.

THE SIGNORETTA JONES CONCERT.

A Success in Every Way for the Benefit of Immanuel Church.

The concert given in Reform Hall, last Thursday,under the management of the Rev. J. W. Mitchell and Edwin B. Maynard of the Immanuel Baptist church, was the greatest success of its kind that Plainfield has ever known. The hall was crowded, and the entire programme was thoroughly enjoyed by all, including the large number of white people who were present. The encores were frequent and enthusiastic.

Miss Signoretta Jones, the star of the evening, sang like a bird in spite of her being extremely ill. She has a full, rich voice that pleased all her listeners. The others, whose names are given on the programme below, were also well received and heartily applauded.

A reception followed in the meeting room of the church, 25 West Front street. Miss Jones was not able to be present on account of her illness; she was taken in a carriage direct from the hall at the close of the concert, to the house of the Rev. Mr. Mitchell, where she is to-day feeling much better. The other artists of the evening, however, were all present at the reception and were the observed by the all-observers. Mrs. Wilson, who was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin B. Maynard, was artfully congratulated upon her talents as a piano player.

The affair was also a financial success from which the church will reap much benefit. The programme was:

FOUND DEAD IN HER ROOM.

The Housekeeper at Hotel Netherwood Expired While Dressing.

Mrs. Margaret N. Martin was found dead in her room at Hotel Netherwood about 8 o'clock Saturday morning. She was 46 years of age, and yesterday was to all appearances in robust health. That morning she arose and partly dressed herself, and then, as the coroner's jury evidently to put on her shoes, as they were lying at her feet. Her son, who roomed in the adjoining room, became alarmed at her sudden and continued silence, and entered, after receiving no response to his tap at the door. Mrs. Martin's mother resides in the house, and had also called again.

Dr. T. S Davis, who was immediately summoned, said that she had died of heart disease.

COUNCILMAN HALLOCK.

The Borough Elects a New Official in Place of Mr. Buckle.

The reclamation of James F. Buckle from the office of councilman was received by the North Plainfield borough council Friday. Mr. Buckle said that his resign reason for resigning was because of his removal to Plainfield city. He expressed the best wishes for the borough's prosperity, and his appreciation of the kindness and appreciation he had always received at the hands of his fellow-councilmen.

The council accepted the resignation with regret. All joined with mayor Place in the expression of the feeling that the borough had lost a faithful, hard-working, and esteemed officer.

George D. Hallock of 29 Willow avenue was the council's unanimous choice to fill the vacancy.

Sudden Death of Mrs. Winston.

Mrs. Charles Winston died suddenly at her home, 45 West Third street, at 8 o'clock Thursday. Wednesday forenoon she was out in a sleigh. An attack of paralysis while at the washtub. A short time later a more severe stroke was received which rendered her absolutely motionless and senseless. She never rallied. Her age was about 56

Bedloe's Will Admitted to Probate.

Surrogate Ransom admitted to probate Thursday the will of Alfred Bedloe, late of this city. The surrogate said that he was satisfied that Mr. Bedloe was mentally capable of making a will. There would have been a presumption of undue influence had the testator not stated in the will that Mr. and Mrs. Ford had comforted his wife and children. M. Bedloe left almost all his estate to Miss Sarah A. Bedloe, daughter of Mrs. Lydia A. Stillwell, with whom he boarded.

Sudden Death of Young Mr. Fowler.

Charles B. Evarts, son of ex-Senator W. M. Evarts, and brother of Mrs. Edward C. Perkins, of this city, was found dead Thursday in bed at his father's country house in Windsor, Vermont. He was in his 47th year. He entered Yale College in the class of 66, but left before graduation and enlisted in the Union army during the late civil war. Afterward he entered the School of Mines of Columbia College. He returned to the family home in Windsor, Vt., about three years ago. He was never married and was an invalid.

A PLAINFIELD STUDENT ABROAD.

In Pursuit of Art. She Flits from Paris Through Holland and Belgium, and Writes Home a Pleasant Story of Her Trip.

It was with a superannuated stock of both hope and baggage that two American art students set out from their Paris quarters, just one morning during the first year of grace, for a tour through the fine old art galleries and among the unique countries and costumes of the Netherlands. The hope and baggage question can hardly, however, have too much in beginning such a journey—while of luggage even a little is sometimes found excessive.

Our railway tickets for Brussels having been secured, and our bags stowed in our compartment, we took our seats—after inquiring that the number of compartments with others would then, as always, be only a lottery. We soon discovered a man's portmanteau and overcoat, and carriage direct from the hall at the close of the concert, to the house of the Rev. Mr. Mitchell, where she is to-day feeling much better. The other artists of the evening, however, were all present at the reception and were the observed by the all-observers. Mrs. Wilson, who was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin B. STORY OF A LIGHTHOUSE.

A Structure Which Is the Ward of Ten Nations.

Cape Spartel Light, Located on the Extreme Northwest Corner of Africa — How the Structure Came to Be Built.

This is a picture of a lighthouse that has a noteworthy history. It stands on the extreme northwest corner of Africa, and its name is the Cape Spartel lighthouse. If it is fine and solid piece of workmanship the New York Herald says and its top is reached by a winding iron staircase.

The government of Morocco thought it was very hardly treated when it was compelled to build this lighthouse. The other governments negotiated Morocco to build the lighthouse as an aid to navigators, but Morocco bluntly refused. Then diplomatic pressure was brought to bear, and, with the united voice of the commercial nations demanding that he adorn Cape Spartel with a light house, the sultan consented after considerable grumbling. The contract was given to a French firm and a French engineer superintended the building entirely.

This lighthouse is noteworthy also for the remarkable manner in which it is supported. Ten governments contribute a fixed sum annually to keep its light burning. The agreement with Morocco was that if the sultan would build the lighthouse the other nations would attend to its maintenance. Ten of them therefore contribute annually $30 apiece, and this money pays for the services of the lighthouse keeper and his assistants and the oil and other mechanical needs. The foreign diplomatic agents at Tangier form the board of lighthouse supervision, and the Moorish can government has nothing to do with the management.

The lighthouse has a very beautiful situation. It fronts the Atlantic ocean, and the cliff upon which it stands falls for feet sheer perpendicularly to the water's edge. It is the favorite picnic ground of the European residents of Tangier. Almost every day there are excursions to Cape Spartel, which is about eight miles from the city. The view around is strikingly beautiful. From this elevation visitors look far out upon the ocean, while they can see many miles up the Spanish coast and the entire length of the strait of Gibraltar, whose beauty is probably not surpassed by any other similar body of water. Cape Trafalgar is plainly in sight to the north. It was near that historic naval battle was fought on October 22, 1805, when Nelson defeated the French admiral Villeneuve, destroying the strait of Gibraltar, visitors to the lighthouse obtain the white houses of Tarifa, with its great fortress projecting into the sea. This also is a historic spot, for it was here that, early in the eighth century, a large body of the Arabian conquerors of Spain first landed upon European soil.

Then Gibraltar itself, in all its glory, is to plain view, and the ships of all nations are seen passing to and fro through this strait. In its origin, in the method of its support, in the magnificent site which it occupies and in its importance to the world of commerce, Cape Spartel lighthouse is certainly one of the most notable works of the kind.

AN ANCIENT CANNON.

A Curiosity Recently Brought Down from Canada to Chicago.

There arrived recently at Jackson park, from San Domingo, a weather-beaten and time-scarred old cannon which dates back to the days of columbus. It is said that this gun was mounted by the people of San Domingo and directed against the castle of Diego Colon, son of the great discoverer, who had been appointed governor of the island. There had been rumors from time to time of the unpopularity of columbus with the Spanish sovereign, and his son came in for a share of the factional jealousy that manifested the last days of the great discoverer.

Compared with our modern guns this old cannon is a veritable curiosity. Not one wagons now with such cumbersome and clear antiquated are effective service could be accomplished.

The patient was under treatment at Guy's hospital, says the London Pall Mall Budget, inside a large black and white mongrel dog which, as the surgeon was soon to enter the hospital ground and hop on three legs in the direction of the surgery, some children drew the attention of a student to the dog, and he took it into the surgery, where an examination showed that it was suffering from a broken leg. Letter to St. Peter.

In an almanac printed in Revel the statement is made that in some parts of Russia it is customary for a clergyman officiating at a funeral to place in the hands of the deceased a letter with the following contents: "To St. Peter, keeper of God, minister of the church, write this to our master and friend St. Peter, that the gate keeper of the Lord Almighty We announce to you that the servant of the Lord, N. N. (name of the deceased), has finished his life on earth, and we order you to admit him into the kingdom of Heaven without delay, for we have confidence that he has gained his salvation. You will obey our order sight of this document which we put into his hands." The example presents that this is a libel on the orthodox (Greek) clergymen. But the publisher of the almanac affirms that he can substantiate his statement.

Natural Soda Water.

In some parts of the Colorado desert water is found so impregnated with soda surrounded by circular hillocks of carbonate of lime from four to eight feet in height. Some of these hillocks have been deposited from the flowing fluid, the latter is so full of soda that travelers get think it is difficult to keep corks in bottles filled with it.

SPEED OF PACERS.

Wheels Their Organization 20Men Own — Fast as Trotters.

The question is often asked: "Why is it that the pacer is uniformly faster than the trotter?" "Why is it that the pure-bred trotting horse has more speed than his equally bred trotting brother?" This question can only be answered, says Clark's Horse Review, by studying the nervous organization and physiological muscular action of the animal. The horse, as well as the human is a double being throughout. The right side of the brain, with the left side of the spinal cord, controls the left side of the body. The left side of the brain and the right balance half of the nord, the right side. It is a well-known fact in human muscular action that when action is required which calls in play various sets of muscles, that the work can be done better and with less exhaustion when these sets of muscles which are controlled by the same nerve trunk are called into requisition at the same moment, then the opposite sets act, in turn resting the former.

The pacer, by his way of going, calls into action simultaneously and in conjunction the entire half of the cerebro-spinal system, thereby gaining more force and resulting in less nerve exhaustion, as the action of both feet on the same side are in unison, and it is this concert of action in the sets of muscles controlled wholly by one-half of the nervous system that bears him forward more rapidly than his brother, the trotter. The trotter uses his opposite fore and hind feet as his motive power, which calls into action a cross nervous stimulation, thereby making the action more intricate and demanding at all times an expending of nerve force from the entire nervous system, leaving no time for rest and recuperation. If the above is the fact, is it strange that the pacer leads his brother in the race? A pure bred pacer to-day is a novelty, while the trotting bred are fast occupying the field. He shows the same endurance, courage and fighting qualities as the equally well bred trotter. He is equal in every respect except in speed, and there he excels; and the only difference is that it so happened that nature commenced using one-half of the spinal cord to stimulate all of its different sets simultaneously, instead of acting irregularly, as in the trot. The time is here that the common notion that a pacer must be first converted to be valuable will be put aside, and a horse be permitted to assume whatever gait nature adapted him to, and his value will not depend upon any way of going.

Before his death his title was left to both the direct houses of Waldeck-Pyrmont and Schaumburg-Lippe were before this allied with the royal house of Wurtemberg through marriage. The queen of Wurtemberg was born in 1864, and spent her youth at Rudlestadt and Rachod castles, in Bohemia, where her parents reside. She received, under the eyes of her mother, Princess Adelaide of Anhalt, a most careful education, eight tutors having been engaged to teach the seven children—four sons and three daughters—of the family. Princess Charlotte became well read in German and foreign history and literature, an accomplished linguist, musician and practical artist, but was also taught how to handle a horse and how to drive a pair of fiery Bohemian ponies not to mention her great fondness for outdoor attractions and the winning ways which endeared her to her future subjects, amongst which she is exceedingly

THE CHARLES DICKENS.

An English Locomotive That Has Quite a History.

A Short Time Ago It Completed Its Millionth Mile—The Amount of Coal It Consumed—Speed of Engine—Its Surroundings.

The London & Northwestern Railway Company's engine "Charles Dickens," built at the company's works, Crewe, in February, 1891, or rather nine years of age, completed her millionth mile a short time ago. During this period, says the London Pall Mall Budget, she has been running daily between Manchester and London. (Sundays excepted), covering the journey in four and a quarter hours, a distance of 183½ miles. Timed to leave Manchester at 9.30 a. m., she calls at Stockport, Stoke, Rugby, Illsworth and Willesden, finally arriving at Euston at 12.45. Having discharged her valuable cargo, she is conveyed to the shed at Camden, there to be cleaned, oiled, oiled and thoroughly overhauled ready for the return journey.

Leaving Euston at 5 o'clock p. m., she calls at the same stations, with the exception of Illsworth, a call at Litchfield being substituted for that at Manchester at 8.15, she completes a hard day's run of 307 miles, apparently as healthy and strong as on the day she left the manufactory, save for one-half of the nervous system that bears him forward more rapidly than his brother, the trotter. The trotter uses his opposite fore and hind feet as his motive power, which calls into action a cross nervous stimulation, thereby making the action more intricate and demanding at all times an expending of nerve force from the entire nervous system, leaving no time for rest and recuperation. If the above is the fact, is it strange that the pacer leads his brother in the race? A pure bred pacer to-day is a novelty, while the trotting bred are fast occupying the field. THE CHARLES DICKENS.

but, in face of all this, she still holds her own upon the iron road, demanding some amount of praise when you come to consider the thousands of valuable lives she has safely conveyed between the two great cities of which she is the first mishap. In construction this engine is typical of many running upon the same system, being that is generally known in engineering phraseology as a six foot six coupler, single, inside cylinder engine; in length about fifty feet, and weighing about thirty-three tons, with an additional twenty-five tons for the tender, which is constructed to carry about eighteen hundred gallons of water.

The amount of coal consumed averages some 30 lb. per mile, causing a loss of ten lb. of water, equivalent to a gallons, which is thrown off in steam. This being the case, it is necessary to take in fresh supplies upon the journey. For this purpose long semicircular troughs have been placed between the rails, which enable the driver to lower a kind of scoop into the trough, which is always filled with water, at which time the engine is traveling from sixty to seventy miles an hour, the speed with which the scoop into the engine tank, thereby saving the immense amount of time, trouble and inconvenience over the old method of stopping the train to take in water. Up to quite recently the London & Northwestern was the only railway that worked this system. These water troughs are about 500 yards long, and there are three sets of them on the line, one between Euston and Willesden, another between Tamworth and Lichfield. An engine of this description, starting out with her tank fully charged with water, would probably run with safety fifty miles before replenishing. The average load is about 150 tons or less carried, and her highest speed has been known to attain seventy miles an hour when the road is exceptionally favorable; but the usual rate of speed would be about forty-five miles an hour. In conclusion, it may not be out of place to mention that the same railway consumes some three thousand tons of coal daily for the supply of their five hundred engines, while twenty thousand tons of water are boiled every day and converted into steam.

Spurgeon's Little Freak.

Rev. C. H. Spurgeon used to be very fond of puzzling his friends with words which have no definite meaning. On Thursday evening, after the usual weeknight service, he thus addressed his deacons: "I want you to know, my brethren, that I have had a single deacon followed me on the platform in time for the service this evening. Deacon Jones very attentively began to exonerate themselves. One said: 'I beg your pardon, sir, but I opened the door for you.' 'I beg your pardon,' returned and at once followed you," and several others stated that they were also behind the first speaker. Here was a dilemma, the beloved and highly respected pastor was actually being run by the faithful and devoted deacons standing just the contrary. After a few minutes' confusion, during which a smile brightening his homely countenance, replied: 'I am right in saying not a single deacon followed me, as you are all married.'

A UNIQUE STRUCTURE.

The Building Planned by North Dakota for the Chicago Exposition.

Plans for the building the world's fair building have been adopted by the majority of the commissioners of that state. The structure will be unique in construction to approve the design before building operations may begin. The building is to be in the form known as a block house, and will be surmounted by a cupola. The main building will be a thatched roof of wheat straw.

The building is to be 70x80 feet. A space 40x40 feet in front of the general assembly hall, between two committee rooms, is to be used as a courtyard. From this courtyard the main assembly room will be entered through a large stone arch above which on the exterior is to be an elaborately carved panel containing the coat-of-arms of North Dakota. The floor of the hall of the interior is to be the assembly hall, which will include a space 56x56 feet. The room will be lighted by four large arched beams between each of which it to be a wide window reaching from near the floor to the ceiling. At either end of the room will be a broad fireplace. Committee and toilet rooms are provided on the ground floor. The second structure will be two stories high, and on the exterior the walls of the first to the pebble-dash coat to the height of the remainder of the walls will be of timber. The building is to be surmounted by a cupola. J. L. Shilone, of Chicago, is the architect of the structure. He is also the architect of the West Virginia state building.

The Oldest Libraries.

The oldest libraries of which we have any certain knowledge are those recently brought to light by the excavations among the ruins of the east. Among these are the Babylonish books inscribed on bricks, which are supposed to have been preserved for public instruction about 650 B. C. It is said by Aristotle that Polycrates was the first known collector of books and manuscripts—this about the year 800 B. C.

No writer in recent years has so satisfied the youthful fancy for stories of adventure upon the sea as W. Clark Russell. Elderly people, too, have enjoyed his stories. Mr. Russell has mastered the usual order of things by being an American by birth and an Englishman by adoption. He has had a connection of the port Wadsworth and his father was the author of those old songs "Cheer, Boys, Cheer" and "To the West," and "There's a Good Time Coming." Clark Russell was educated in France. At the age of thirteen he went to sea as a middy in the merchant

Later he entered journalism as a writer for the Newcastle Chronicle, subsequently going to London, where he became leader writer for the Daily Telegraph. This he abandoned on account of his health and now writes only as he feels impelled to do so, and that in the line of fiction.

GRAPE WINES,
ALSO
UNFERMENTED GRAPE JUICE.
Used in the historical ceremonies for communion by the Reformed Dutch Church for the past 200 years.

Speer's Port Grape Wine,
FOUR YEARS OLD.
"THIS Excellent Wine is the pure juice of the finest ripe Concord Grapes, raised in Speer's vineyards, and left to mature until ripe, when it becomes a most delightful beverage. Its invigorating
Tonic and Strengthening Properties are highly recommended by many other Wines. Being produced under Mr. Speer's own personal supervision, purity and genuineness are guaranteed, and used by the principal Hospitals and Boards of Health who have examined it. The purest medicine for child and the weakest invalid to use it to advantage. It is particularly beneficial to the aged and debilitated and suited to the various ailments that affect the decline of life.
It is in every respect a WINE TO BE RELIED ON.
Speer's Unfermented Grape Juice
is the juice of the Concord Grape, preserved in its natural state, fresh, made as it comes from the press by fumigation and sterilizing, thereby preserving the entire nutritious properties. It is perfectly pure, free from spirits, and may be used by the most delicate.
Speer's (Socialite) Claret
is held in high estimation for its richness as a dry Table Wine, of a delightful aroma and flavor.
Speer's P. J. Sherry is a Wine of superior character, and resembles the finest Sherries of Spain, which it is intended to imitate.
Speer's P. J. Brandy
IS A PURE distillation of the grape, and equals the best brands in this country for medicinal purposes. Its mellowness commends it to the use of the grapes from which it is distilled.

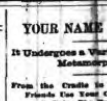
YOUR NAME CHANGES.

It Undergoes a Variety of Peculiar Metamorphoses.

From the Cradle to the Grave Your Friends Use Your Christian Name in turn—The Theodore Jones.

Do you know that your name changes from year to year? If you imagine that the name given you by a priest is true and a happy mother at the baptismal font is a fixed and changeless appendix you are sadly mistaken. Here, for instance, says the Chicago Mail, are a few familiar metamorphoses of a very plebeian name, William Jones.

Who would think of calling this youngster any other name than "Willie?" There is only one exception to this: When the young hopeful transgresses a home rule or a raised strict propriety and his mother finds it necessary to correct him, she no longer calls him "Willie," but strikes terror into his soul by saying, in sepulchral tones: "Will-yum!"



"WILLIE."

And this young fellow of twenty—everybody knows him. He is "Billy"—plain, informal, convivial "Bill-y." He is learned to part his hair in the middle of a great care; particular about the shade of his necktie; doesn't care if cigarettes do cost a cent; wonders whether his mustache will be brown or red. If any man dares to be assassinated on the spot let him call this young man "Willie."

"BILLY."

When a change ten years has brought "Billy" hassled his red neckties his cigarettes [and his pipe, and a snake sheds its skin. He now emerges as "Will." He can give you a better story about anyone in his set; he delights in the German; he has a few flyers in wheat and doesn't care for the poodle dog.

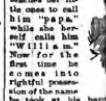
"WILL."

Now everybody refers to him as a very promising young snap.

Ten years more brings another change. This time it is one of the most important in his career. He is married now and his wife teaches him little ones to call him "papa." While she is at self calls him "Will." Now for the first time he comes into rightful possession of the name given him at his baptism, but which hitherto has been abbreviated and mangled and distorted by his friends. And this is "Bill." Whom they know

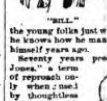
"WILLIAM."

"Bill-y" he is the jolliest old chap in the city, his fishing pate is crammed full of fifty years of experience and the whole of it has brought with it. His is the type of the wise and counsel. He always is ready and willing to tell the young folks just what to do, because he knows how he managed those things himself years ago.



"BILL."

Seventy years produces "Old Bill Jones." A term of reproach only when used by the multitudes of those he has befriended. The story of a life is comprehended in the change which make "Willie" become "Billy," and "Billy" "Will," then William "Bill" and "Old Bill Jones."



"OLD BILL JONES."

Rats by the Million.

Deseret, an island adjoining Porto Rico, is infested with rats. There are millions of them there, and it is useless for a man to set foot on the island. They have destroyed all the goats which were formerly kept there and are now eating the shrubbery.

A Joke Becomes Reality.

Stale pies in railroad restaurants have long been a standing source of dyspepsia. Recognizing this fact, a member of the Missouri legislature has introduced a measure compelling bakers to date their pies.

Barnstormers, Welcome!

The largest barn in the United States is about to be erected in Lexington, Ky. It is to be one thousand feet long and one hundred feet wide.

The Oldest Inhabitant.

The Colorado cliff dwellers are said by scientists to have existed ten thousand years ago.

Rose to the Occasion.

Upson Downes—Last evening I was introduced to a girl worth three millions.

Downe de Bout—Great Cæsar! What did you do?

Upson Downes—I asked her if she believed in "love at first sight."—Puck.

"Is Dinner Ready?"

A bright little lad, who was impatient for her dinner, kept running to the dining-room to see if the table was spread, at last she rushed back behind, saying: "The water is in the pitcher now, mamma, and let's go in and begin on that."—Harper's Young People.

City Sportsman Not Adapted.

City Sportsman (sadly)—I see you have "No Trespass" signs all over your property. Why are you so afraid of having a few rabbits shot?

Experienced Farmer—Oh, it hain't th' rabbits I'm skeert about. It's th' noise.—Good News.

Too Mild a Description.

Gaspar Griggs—That's a pretty loud pair of trousers, Bowdell.

Bowdell Gibbs—Ah—yes; it is a rather pronounced pattern.

Gaspar Griggs—Pronounced? Why, dear boy, it shouteth!—Puck.

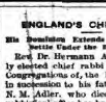
A French Reverse.

Riggs—It isn't always the coat that makes the man.

Biggs—But if the man happens to be a tailor it is the man who makes the coat.—Boston Home Journal.

ENGLAND'S CHIEF RABBI.

His Bombastic Extends Wherever Jews Settle Under the British Flag.



REV. DR. HERMANN ADLER.

Rev. Dr. Hermann Adler was recently elected chief rabbi of "The United Congregations of the British Empire," in succession to his father, the late Dr. N. M. Adler, who died in 1890. The rabbinical office has been held by many members of the Adler family. Both the father and grandfather of the new chief rabbi filled that exalted position in Hanover, in which city Dr. Hermann Adler first saw the light of day, May, 1839, six years before his father was elected (1845) to the rabbinate in London. He was educated at University college, and matriculated in 1857 at London university, passing in honors in classics, and he greatly distinguished himself at subsequent examinations. He studied Jewish theology with the Joseph Wolfsohn, formerly a librarian at the British Museum, at Prague with the great scholar Rapoport, and at Leipsic. In December, 1862, he was "promoted" at the Leipsic university to the degree of doctor of philosophy. He preached his first sermon in 1859 at the consecration of a synagogue at Swansea, when he was but twenty years of age. His first appointment as a minister was in 1864, when he was elected the first preacher of the then newly consecrated Hagawater synagogue.

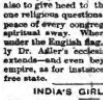
In 1879 the late chief rabbi, with the concurrence of the congregation, appointed Dr. H. Adler delegate chief rabbi, and the son assumed from that time the discharge of all the active duties of the exalted office. Those duties are of a very varied and exacting nature, requiring much tact, an immense knowledge of rabbinical literature, and no little acquaintance with mundane affairs. The chief rabbi is the bishop, a parish priest, a judge, and a learned professor combined, and many a day he has to pass from one function to another quite rapidly. The foreign Jews in the East find a demand on a considerable amount of his time and attention. As "Father of the House of Judgment," he patiently investigates their disputes, and thus relieves the police courts from adjudicating upon these "family quarrels." He also presides all new synagogues, ordains synagogue officials, inspects the Jewish schools, preaches every Sabbath day, gives "licenses" for Jewish marriages, which involve delicate inquiries to prevent the wandering Jew having a wife in every port." The chief rabbi has also to give heed to the thousand and one religious questions that disturb the peace of every congregation under his spiritual sway. Wherever Jews settle under the English flag, there also speedily Dr. Adler's ecclesiastical dominion extends—even beyond the British empire, as for instance in the Orange free state.

INDIA'S GIRL WIVES.

Little Dwarf-Like Bengal Whose Lot is Life in Harem.

I expected the little girls in India would be the same proposition, strong, fully developed girls that I found in other tropical countries, observes a writer in the Home Maker; and how great was my astonishment to behold the little dwarf-life, quarter-developed beings, and to be told that they were wives, and serving not only their lords and masters, but the mothers-in-law, and often a community family of ten, twelve, fourteen or twenty. Talk of marriage for little creatures! They can never come to full maturity, for they were robbed before they were born, as were also their ancestors. If they could have proper exercise, with all the food they need, and above all, if they could be made healthy before the twenty-five years old, it might not be a sin for them to give birth to an immortal soul.

Maturity does not depend upon one body's growth alone, but upon the condition of the entire system; and thus it is evident that these children of India, instead of coming to maturity earlier than other girls who are born in a temperate climate, are five or ten years later in reaching any approximate standard of womanhood.



HUSBAND AND WIFE.

A Slur.

"She doesn't claim to be a bud, does she?"

"Why, certainly!"

"What kind—century plant?"—Judge.

USELESS CORRECTION.

"NOT IN IT."

Visitor—Can glass eyes cry?

Mother—No, certainly not.

Visitor (regretfully)—Then it's no use spanking Dolly any more, I can't tell whether it hurts her or not.—Golden Days.

On the Wheel.

First Bicyclist—Here comes a woman with a baby carriage. I wonder if she'll turn out enough to let us pass or whether we'll have to get down and walk.

Second Bicyclist—If it's pushed by a nurse she'll give us room. If it's pushed by the mother she'll want the whole road.—Good News.

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN.

Something About the Real Hero of the Famous Book

His Name Is Lewis Clarke and He Is Now Living in Peaceful Retirement in Kentucky—Reminiscences of the Southern Planter.

No book of modern times has enjoyed a wider popularity or more largely affected the moral and political thought of the world than "Uncle Tom's Cabin." And no character in that book awakened profounder interest than its hero, "George Harris," the handsome, stalwart and intelligent young mulatto, the "down-trodden victim of the slavery system in the south, who subsequently escaped to Canada. This character, writes Daisy Pitzhugh in Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper, finds a prototype in Lewis Clarke, who personally provided Mrs. Stowe with most of the sensational and dramatic data for her story in her own home at Cambridgeport, Mass.

Clarke, who enjoys this unique distinction with proud complacency, was born in Madison county, Ky., in 1815, his mother being a slave, the property of Samuel Campbell, a very wealthy man. All the many vicissitudes and bloodcurdling experiences—subsequently detailed for the edification of Mrs. Stowe—he underwent very correctly. Lewis, was put up at auction at sixteen years of age, like any other goods and chattels, at Stanford County House, Ky., and knocked down to the highest bidder, a gentleman from Garrard.

Here, according to the man's account, history repeated itself, and continuous persecution on the part of his master, who would fain have kept him in ignorance and dire subjection, fired the lusty, quick-witted youth with the purpose of effecting his escape and winning his way to Canada, the bondsman's Mecca. Here the cases of the story's hero, George Harris, and Lewis Clarke parallel. Personally, there was no dissimilarity between the real and the fictitious character, Mrs. Stowe drew her picture accurately from life. The description that the story gives of George Harris was an exact description of Lewis Clarke at the time that Mrs. Stowe knew him. "Six feet in height, a very light mulatto, brown, curly hair, a very intelligent, speaks handsomely, can read and write."

Both were accomplished and adepts at the spelling-school, and after a successful escape and several years of slow progress northward, during which time he was favorably received in Ohio and other states, he finally found his way to Cambridgeport, Mass., where he was kindly received by Dr. Lyman Beecher, who felt a keen interest in his career, and gave him pleasant employment at his home.

Lewis Clarke, now an old man, delights in relating incidents in the home life of the Beecher family, with which he was closely identified for six years, and among whom he was treated with the utmost kindness. Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe, whose husband at that time was a professor of Latin languages in an Ohio institution of which her father, Lyman Beecher, was president, made it a custom to spend her summers at Cambridgeport, her girlhood's home. It was during these visits that her sympathies became aroused in the young mulatto under her father's roof, who had endured so much, and who became to her a type of his kind, and a just exponent of the barbarities of the southern slave-holding system. Mrs. Stowe turned an attentive ear to every reminiscence with which young Clarke was quite willing to regale her. She was especially alert at any incidents or detail that she fancied she might render available in her story, and it is said that the young man about his work and ply him with deft questions, be unsuspecting of ulterior motive on her part. Then suddenly she would say with apparent indifference: "Wait here, George, until I come back," and hasten to her room to make a stealthy memorandum, returning soon to continue her "drawing out" of the young negro and collect further material.

The "Aunt Chloe" of the book had for her original old "Aunt Amie," who belonged to Clarke's Kentucky master. "Emeline" was his sister, Delia Clarke. The characters were specific subjects from real life idealized. "Uncle Tom" was a sort of composite photograph, with Josiah Henson as the source, very artistically retouched.

Lewis Clarke, alias George Harris, is now a striking, picturesque looking man of seventy-six, with a refined face, silken snow-white locks that curl about his head, and a skin of Caucasian fairness. He has devoted considerable time, both in Canada and New England, to the lecture field, his theme in former days being "The Exposure of Slavery." Even now he has a taste for public life.

With strange inconsistency he has turned to Kentucky, the scene of the bitterest and most galling associations of his life, as he alleges, as to a peaceful haven in his declining years, and is living in contentment with his children there. Nature has justified herself.

PRESIDENT OF HAITI.

Something About Gen. Hippolyte, Chief of the Republic.

He Is the Political Idol of the Poor Blacks, Who Constantly Support Him—Extracts from Harper's Weekly.

Gen. Hippolyte is about sixty years of age, and of coal black complexion. He is the political idol of the poor blacks, who constantly support him and who, says Harper's Weekly, "Gen. Legitime, whom he displaced, was a mulatto and the leader of the mulatto party. Politics are still somewhat primitive in Haiti, and the color of the candidate's complexion is the chief issue. More than the planks in his platform, Hippolyte is the son of a president. Haitian children are educated chiefly in the normal schools of France, at the expense of his government, and he has letters from the ablest jurists of the Cape Haitien, which is still the most prominent educational institution on the island. He has risen from the ranks, black republic for over a year, and though his career has been dotted by three revolutions and four comparatively riots, he seems still quite firm in the presidential chair.

Of course, Gen. Hippolyte did not expect to complete his presidential term of six years, but he has come and so long drawn out would seem to be the hard fiber of a Haitian president. He has had more than a hundred revolutions. Gen. Hippolyte has very nearly completed the average term of eighteen months, and if some unwritten law, is allotted to the Haitian presidents to rule in accordance less we will soon see him follow in the wake of his predecessors, Salomon and Legitime, sail away to Paris to join with them in the pursuit of the presidential pleasures, and assume the proper position as an interesting figure in that circle of exiles which the American ex-potentates who have to make a certain section of society.

Paris picturesque, and who are quite as worthy of the biting wit of Paris as the exiled royalties.

The "season in Paris" of Gen. Hippolyte would be observed with pomp by the authorities of our state and naval department in Washington, together a striking example of sensible American training, a very promising lad.

A FUTURE MARQUIS.

Little Count Robert San Marzano Goes to School in New York.

Like little Lord Fauntleroy, New York contains to-day another important little chap, who, according to the World, is not one day be a marquis.

He is a blonde, too, but his old for curls, and he doesn't talk with the grocer round the corner, for his mamma is not poor, but is the Marquise Helen San Marzano, who lives in luxury in a stately apartment at a Fifth avenue family hotel, the Bristol.

Little Robert, eleven years old, is a grand-nephew to a king—Amadeus of Aosta, who held the throne of Spain from 1870 to 1873. The Queen Mark was a sister of his great-grandmother.

He belongs to Company Eight, of the Berkeley battalion, is a bright scholar, a good wrestler and doesn't look up though his duration or family pride interferes with his fun in the least.

The lads grandmother, now living in a small town near Turin, Italy, was once an ambassadress to the court of Prussia at Berlin, and a life-sized portrait of that beautiful woman now hangs in one of the richly gilding rooms, filled with costly furnishings, of his mother, the Marquise Helen San Marzano.

His father, the present Marquis San Marzano, is a nephew of Cardinal San Marzano, of Rome, and first cousin of the Duke of Genoa, commander in chief of the Italian forces at Massowah, in the late African war.

His mother, the Marquise Helen, was a Miss Gardner, of New York, another illustration of lovely American women who have married into the nobility.

She is a devout Catholic, and in one of her apartments has fitted up a shrine to the Virgin, where lights burn throughout the day and night, shaded by costly Bohemian glass.

The rooms contain a quantity of rich vases, fine paintings, imported furnishings and gems of art from all over the world. They face on Fifth avenue, and are the ideal surroundings of a marquise, but also a devoted mother.

The Berkeley school is non-sectarian, and represents most of the millionaire families of the state.

He is considered a bright scholar, belongs to the Legion of Honor battalion, is tall, well built, unaffected and altogether a striking example of sensible American training, a very promising lad.

CHRISTMAS DAY.

With emotions flow the waves of time rush on and on.

Man, with all his inventive skill and assumed power, cannot stay the mighty flood that bears him swiftly and surely onward to the realm of death.

Wisdom bids us meditate upon the serious fact that all must die, that, sooner or later, every living thing of earth must pass away.

It is a solemn decree.

The rich and the poor, the high and the low, have no distinction within the grand tomb, where they mingle alike; and no earthly wealth can be transported thither.

But, thanks to the Almighty Ruler, there are spiritual riches which endure forever.

The coming years reminds us of noteworthy events, vital incidents of the long past, and how soon they roll around! Commemorative!

We are again in the presence of the greatest and most joyous of all anniversaries—Christmas Day!

The greatest, because a personification of the goodness of all holiness, for unto Him who came to sanctify, to comfort the sorrowing, to console the weak, to lift up the fallen, to encourage the persistent, and to point the way infallibly to Heaven.

The most beautiful thought of why blessings of the richest and brightest qualities ever conferred upon human kind.

Does not earth need us now, as we journey on these hundred years after the coming of the mighty song of "Peace on earth, good will to men"?

Then, there is the happy gift occasion in the power of you and the real meaning of Christmas.

Look around and with Christian sympathy extend a helping hand.

There is the needy darkened,

Help them with empty baskets and replenish them.

There are those wretched and worn with trouble and anxiety.

Lighten their oppressive burdens!

There are hearts lacerated by misfortune.

Kindly apply the balm of relief!

There are eyes red-lined with weeping.

Dry the tears of sorrow!

And you will thereby reap the sweet reward of Heaven approved duty done!

Christmas Happiness is the boon we sincerely wish for all.

A CORRESPONDENT'S OPINION.

A correspondent of the Philadelphia Press predicts that the next Governor of New Jersey will be a young Democrat.

It is because of the next President of the Senate of New Jersey will be Hon. Robert Allen, and the Speaker of the House, Hon. James J. Bergen.

The Trenton Times-American has been enlarged and made into an eight page size. It is a pleasure to note the prosperity of this true Democratic journal.

It is positively stated that James G. Blaine is in the market for the Republican nomination for President. Well, he has earned the honor beat him once and can do it again.

The opinion of Sammis and Fee in the suit against Chief Edward B. Kelsey, of Hoboken, as Sergeant at arms of the County Court. Should theirs waive be sustained—an excellent effect would be experienced.

To Hudson Gelt of the Dover Index is a handsomely illustrated pamphlet of definitive valuable information, statistics and interesting reading. The Index is an enterprising and staunch Democratic journal.

The Prohibition National Committee, in session at Chicago, on Thursday of last week, failed to hold their next national convention in the City of Jugernaut or Sauerkraut. Noise and Prohibition—no good. Three Republican Senators who had the courage to vote against the McKinley bill. He was a very inspiring figure in the Senate. The Democrats of Kansas will have the power to fill the vacancy caused by Senator Plumb's death, and that choice is not unlikely to fall on ex Senator Ingalls.

Speaker Crisp presented a full field committee to the House of Representatives on Wednesday. Mr. Springer was made Chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, and Mr. Mills on Commerce. Congressman J. A. Cockran, member of the Third District of New Jersey, is on the Committee of Naval Affairs and Immigration and Naturalization.

THE BRADLEY'S PHILANTHROPY.

Free—Gratis—Nothing for nothing! Joe S. is the name of Robert Carlton, for postmaster of New Brunswick, N. J., to succeed William H. Price, whose term expired four years ago.

This quite a long list and puts in the coveted office, drawing $2,700 a year, a faithful servant of the real Democratic Administration. Mr. J. Bradley Squier is the power of patronage to appointments for office were exhausted First and John H. Conover.

Petitions were circulated in favor of the appointment and a delegation was sent to Mr. Kean in the interest of Mr. Cooper, but all to no avail. Mr. Carson was Postmaster for 25 months, beginning in 1886.

He was removed by President Cleveland for offensive partisanship, and came from the Republican Democrat, whose he in turn displaces.

The Senator Club Honors a Plainfielder.

The Senators' Land and Water club, at a recent meeting, adopted a red-edged badge or ball on a black field as the club colors. D. G. Whitlock, Louis F. Ballard and F. W. Fobes were appointed a committee to wait upon John Taylor Johnston of Plainfield, who is a large property owner at Bowerton, was elected an honorary member. It was also decided to give a reception and dance at the Bowerton House on New Year's Eve, instead of the proposed masquerade. A clay-pigeon match will be shot on the following afternoon. Membership, and team and individual matches have been arranged for Christmas Day.

WHERE THE WIECHERS MONEY WENT.

Field Inculpated Himself Into the Young Man's Favor, and Squandered His Property Before He Made Him His Partner.

FROM THE PRESS OF DEC. 23.

The more one looks into the failure of Field, Lindley, Wiechers & Co. the worse it appears. It was stated yesterday by a gentleman who has seen something of the books that the firm was insolvent from the very day it started. So far as he could learn, he added, all the Wiechers money was gone before the new firm was formed. Much of it was taken in December, 1890.

Wiechers, he said, had placed his property and that of his family in Field's safe keeping and Field had made away with it all, so that when Wiechers went into the firm he was as poor as he is now. Field kept the business going by plundering customers and robbing/breaking banks and stocks, and then, when that could not be done any longer, he resorted to forgery.

When asked if this making away with the Wiechers property by Field, as a member of the old firm, did not make Mr. W. Field liable, the gentleman said that he did not know. It would depend upon the time when Mr. Field withdrew the money he had invested in the firm. If he drew it out before the Wiechers money was stolen, then probably he could not be held liable, but if it was after the steal he was liable also.

It is said that all the members of the Wiechers family have suffered sweeping financial losses through the doings of Field. That those in Europe have hardly enough money to pay their passage to America, and that if one member of the family comes over, as is expected, that likely more than one will pay his passage. William A. Wiechers, who died some time ago, was the wealthy member of the family. He left a widow and two children and eldest, among whom were George F. Wiechers, the father of Field's partner, and Carl F. Wiechers, who lives in Schlangenbad, Germany. On receiving his legacy, Carl F. Wiechers, who was in the civil service of the German Government, resigned his position, and spent a year or two on his income. Now he is almost destitute. A letter from him was received. Like other day in which he thanked most fervently that he and Wiechers for the loss of the family's money. He said in the letter that when he went home one day he found his brother sobbing bitterly over the fact that he had just come, that the fortune which they thought such a short time had disappeared.

George F. Wiechers lives in Puerto Rico, where he does business. He is expected here very soon, and when he arrives there will be some legal developments made immediately. Those who know him say that he Wiechers will find out where that money went, or will know why he does not find it out. The Wiechers family have probably lost a million or a million and a half by Field.

It was said yesterday that when Edward B. Field declared that the young Wiechers controlled a great part of the estate of William A. Wiechers he immediately said everything to make it pleasant for him. He took him out on his yacht, introduced him to the members of his family, and went systematically to work to ingratiate himself in the young man's favor. He succeeded remarkably well, as was apparent from the handsome way in which Mr. Wiechers always treated him and entertained the Wiechers in Field's country home on Grant avenue, Plainfield.

George D. Forest Lord talked yesterday in a manner that has been made that Cyrus W. Field was paid the $500,000 he had put into the old firm. He not only has not been paid with it, but has lost money, but he has not been paid at all. The money was gone absolutely.

A story was told yesterday by a friend of Field, illustrating how thoroughly Field had hoodwinked his partner. Six or eight weeks before the last failure, Field, in talking to Wiechers about the business and how well the firm was doing, said to him: "Old man, you are worth $200,000 or $300,000 in cash." Wiechers believed it. He wanted his wife to share in his wealth, so he went out and bought her $50,000 in United States bonds, which he intended to present to her as a Christmas gift. The bonds were actually paid for out of the supposed profits of the firm, and Wiechers put them in his desk. As every one knows, these were stolen that Field's got his inside 9,000.

AN OUTRAGE ON THE PUBLIC.

Citizens Suffer Injury Through the Negligence of a Sidewalk Constructionist.

Since the present owner of the Crescent Park began his alterations of the building the public has suffered much inconvenience because of the littering up of the sidewalk, and the accumulation of debris. Tuesday night a positive outrage was inflicted on them. The big boiler had been placed through the cellar and was left lying on the sidewalk, where it had no right to be, and where there was no earthly necessity of its being left. After sunset the lack of lights made the place very dark, and the obstruction could not be seen. The arms from the boiler extended out across the pavement of the walk directly in the path of all passers-by. Any unfortunate who might run into them, soiling garments, and bruising flesh considerably. One broad-shouldered fellow, hurrying for the train, was struck by the projecting iron with terrific force across the groin, tearing his clothes, and inflicting severe injuries that may have permanent effect. A woman was thrown headlong to the ground and painfully shocked. Several aldermen were made to the owner to have the obstruction removed, but the response was hours before such a signal was put up. Before the lantern was exhibited it was utterly impossible to see the obstruction. A little farther on, in another dark place, boards were scattered loosely over the walk, causing several to trip and fall.

Those putting up or altering buildings ought to be as regardful for the public's interest as for their own, and ought not to create obstructions except such as are absolutely necessary. And in no case of obstruction is it otherwise than criminal to neglect to rear every possible safeguard. Tuesday night's example was a shameful abuse of sidewalk privileges which may result in suits for damages by the public if some one is seriously or fatally injured. The physician attending the principal victim says that he narrowly escaped internal injuries that may bring on properties of a fatal and brilliant career utterly ruined.

The Old Story of Love and Reunion.

One of the best plays on the stage today is Bronson Howard's "Shenandoah", which will be presented at Music Hall for the second time next Tuesday evening. There is nothing in the moral of "Shenandoah" that can be said to be out of date. Its moral is the grand old watchword of patriotism. Its story is the old, old story of love and heroism. It exalts love of country above all other loves, and thus furnishes a moral which in telling much is often suppressed in this age of artistic insanity.

IN DARKEST PLAINFIELD.

AWFUL PLAGUE-SPOTS IN THE CITY, SAYS MRS. OPDYKE.

Ex-policeman Carey Has a Fine Opinion of the Town, and Told Her "Twas the Most Depraved Place He Ever Knew—The Poor-house Gets a Rotting Over, for the Depravity of Its Inmates—Drunkenness and Debauchery Said to Rule—Rum and Food Exchanged by the Paupers for Whisky—Plainsmen Remarks on Avoided Subjects—The Rescue Mission Project Gets a Chilling Blast.

A decidedly interesting and somewhat exciting meeting was held in Reform Hall Saturday night, when the project to supplant the Reform club with a "wanderers' home mission", as outlined exclusively in these columns some days ago, received attention at the hands of a large audience of people interested in religious work. Most of the city clergymen were present, in addition to many laymen and women. Mrs. George F. Opdyke of West Eighth street seemed to be the one most concerned in the mission scheme, and she was surprised to find a reporter present, as it had been intended to keep the matter from the newspapers, and she asked the Press representative to "let them down very light". The reporter assured her that he was there only to write up what, were took place. She said that she did not know how it was all going to turn out, but hoped he would say very little about it. Then she went to the front, read a passage of Scripture containing reference to "a certain woman", and asked the Rev. W. R. Richards to lead in prayer. When the petition was ended, Mrs. Opdyke took the floor and made an rapid nervy statement to those present.

HOMELESS ON THE STREET.

She said that there were in Plainfield many homeless people. She cited one case in particular, where a young Wiechers controlled a great part of the estate of William A. Wiechers by immediately said everything to make it pleasant for him. He took him out on his yacht, introduced him to the members of his family, and went systematically to work to ingratiate himself in the young man's favor. DRIVEN FROM THEIR HOMES by cruelty, neglect, and unhappiness.

What disposition—was asked—did the police make of such cases?

Where the police officers were considered worthy—the judge responded—they gave them food and lodging in the station-house.

Were the provisions comfortable?—was inquired.

Unless the sergeant took them into his private room—and this was rarely done—there was nothing for them but "the cells." There they used the regular bench and mattress of the prisoners.

Mrs. Opdyke suggested that there was no lost-sourcing for these bombs.

The judge replied that the place was hard to find and secluded, and had as he never heard of complaints from the said.

The Rev. Howard Love asked how many there were in the poor-house.

Mr. Carey replied that it was well filled. Not all the city poor—he added—were kept there. Some were kept by arrangement with relatives.

Mr. Love said that it seemed to be the rule the world over that more was spent on a criminal than on a pauper. He thought there was a reason.

CRYING NEED FOR REFORM.

especially at the poor-house if it was said it was overcrowded with both sexes of all ages, with fine distinction from one part of the house to the other.

The Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes questioned if it was not the duty of the city to provide comfortable accommodations for the poor, the otherwise he argued—pay lazns to keep the poor, and money is appropriated for that purpose. It might indeed be necessary to bring about a change in the way they were kept, but the care of the poor was with the city. He considered that a public measure, and though the urgency of the case might call for very speedy remedy still it was not a subject for private charity.

The Rev. W. R. Richards suggested the appointment of a committee by memorial to the common council.

H. C. Squires asked to hear from the Rev. G. Kenney Newell, who is to take the same work. Any mission band, what was better than the salvation Army, and was not the Reform club itself doing an admirable Christian and philanthropic work? He denounced as a slander the insinuation (in the remark that Christ had not been held up enough in the club) that anything religious had been done by the club the past year. He admitted that previous to that there had been, bickerings, and that he as a peaceful man had got out of the club till the dissension was ended; but of the churches with the club, to do the very work outlined in the mission plan, had been met with much success. The Rev. C. T. C. had abandoned the club, and their initials had been painted out from the platform and over the entrance, and the Woman's Temperance Aid society substituted. He should like to see harmony. He should like to see the women of Plainfield realize each other. He advised that the Christian people make effective the 1-rose already existing, and paid that if the Reform club was only supported financially and otherwise as it ought to be it would do most effectively the work of a mission and home. He complimented the gathering on its respectability, and said that he read the Bible every day, but he did n't explain what connection those remarks had with the subject in hand.

The motion before the house was called for. Mr. McGee explained that its purpose was in no way to defeat the plan for a rescue mission, but only to arrive at of needs and plan. The motion was put, and carried, but only a few voted either way. Then, to get a fair expression of opinion, it was reconsidered, put a second time, and carried almost unanimously.

Mr. Harder moved that the meeting approve of forming a union evangelical mission under the control of the Christian people of Plainfield. The motion was tabled by an almost unanimous vote, the Rev. C. B. Mitchell arguing that it was too late to open that question that night. He alone—he explained—had a great deal to say on the matter, and by the time he got through talking it would be Sunday morning and time to adjourn. He knew besides that Dr. Yerkes and others had just as much to say as he had.

The Rev. Dr. E. M. Hunter sought to have the matter of formulating a plan put in the hands of a definite committee instead of the callers of the meeting, but that motion was defeated.

The meeting adjourned subject to the call of those to whom the entire matter had been referred, and to meet again for parent overwhelming objection to the project that it is doubtful if the second meeting ever will be held.

SCHOOLS IN NEW JERSEY.

An Increase in the Number of Children Who Do Not Attend

The figures of the current year compiled for the annual report of the state Superintendent of Public Instruction show an alarming increase in the number of children in New Jersey who are not attending public schools. The school census for the year shows that there are 430,279 school children, while the number attending public schools is only 337,-603. The increase in the number of school children is 19,767, but those attending school have only increased 3,528. There is a very large increase in the number attending private schools, the enumeration being 54,865, an increase of 7,586. There are 137,814 children in New Jersey who attend no school.

It cost $3,699,945 to conduct the schools of the State. This is an increase in cost of $297,603.72. The average cost per pupil, calculated on the total school enrollment was $6.85, but calculated on the number enrolled is $13.41. The number of male teachers is 760, a decrease of 62. The number of female teachers is 3,857, an increase of 214. The average salary paid male teachers per month is $76.38; female teachers, $43.61.

In Essex county they have 76,639 school children. Of this number 13,912 are in private schools and 36,424 are in no school at all. In Hudson county, 36,-111,694 children; enrolled in public schools, 29,389; attending private schools, 17,788; attending no school, 53,874. Passaic county school census gives 29,000 children; enrolled, 16,372; attending private schools, 3,306; attending no school, 6,316.

NEW JERSEY VITAL STATISTICS.

Interesting Facts Relating to Births, Deaths, and Marriages.

According to the vital statistics just tabulated by the State board of health, Camden is still the favored Gretna Green of New Jersey. In the year just closed there were 1,000 marriages performed there, which is about 30 per cent. of the marriages of the State. The total number of births in the State for the year was 35,564, a slight increase over the number married last year, which was 15,305. The number married in Essex county was 2,-199; in Hudson, 1,307, and in Passaic, 907. The number of births have decreased. There were 28,982 this year, against 30,-161 last year. The deaths show only a slight increase, there being 20,000 this year while last year they were 20,530. Essex county had 2,060 deaths, Hudson 2,725, Passaic 1,000.

Acute lung trouble and consumption were the principal causes of death; another cause was the severe diarrheal disease which prevailed during August, when the death were as follows: From typhoid fever, 134; from scarlet fever, 45; from diarrheal diseases, 1,000. In Hudson the deaths from diarrheal diseases were 797.

The death rate of Newark is 23.69 Orange, 20.29; Jersey City, 26.60; Hoboken, 25.43; Harrison, 31.70; Bayonne, 20.72.

Sussex county is the healthiest, the death rate being 13.48

Boy's Daughter.

Marion Harland, on pages 103 and 445 of her "Common Sense for Maid, Wife and Mother," says:

"For nothing baby-should it be slow in receiving its natural strength—is Angelina's Cordial Elixir. It is a delicious compound, containing the nourishing properties of beef and wine, and warms blood with certain tonic qualities developed in the wearing. It should be given in small doses, and is excellent for all digestive and stomachic cases, for perhaps all ills."

"Four pints to the bottle, enter ALCOCK'S Elixir of Beef, Wine and Iron." Sold by druggists. 75 cents a bottle.

A "brother" says that every city ought to have just such a mission. People without money, home or friends would there find shelter and salvation. There were people in Plainfield as elsewhere who had got religion but did n't work at it as they ought. There was room for them to get to work, Hamilton street, and centered men—not reform them.

Mrs. Opdyke read a letter from mission-worker Hadley, who gave three reasons why a mission and home were needed in Plainfield: First, there were more saloons than churches; the saloons were open every night, some of them all night, the churches were open only occasionally. Second, there were nearly 400 arrests for drunkenness last year; out of that number how many had been convicted? Third, there was no place among the saloons where the saloons could be fought, and a place of shelter was needed night and night, to keep the unfortunates from the saloons.

Mr. Hadley further remarked, in his letter, that there was too much Christian and told that a farm of salt in the attic would n't save the meat in the cellar.

E. P. Williams doubted the advisability of having too many agencies to do the same work. Any mission band, what was better than the salvation Army, and was not the Reform club itself doing an admirable Christian and philanthropic work? He denounced as a slander the insinuation (in the remark that Christ had not been held up enough in the club) that anything religious had been done by the club the past year. He admitted that previous to that there had been, bickerings, and that he as a peaceful man had got out of the club till the dissension was ended; but of the churches with the club, to do the very work outlined in the mission plan, had been met with much success. The Rev. C. T. C. had abandoned the club, and their initials had been painted out from the platform and over the entrance, and the Woman's Temperance Aid society substituted. He should like to see harmony. He should like to see the women of Plainfield realize each other. He advised that the Christian people make effective the 1-rose already existing, and paid that if the Reform club was only supported financially and otherwise as it ought to be it would do most effectively the work of a mission and home. He complimented the gathering on its respectability, and said that he read the Bible every day, but he did n't explain what connection those remarks had with the subject in hand.

The motion before the house was called for. Mr. McGee explained that its purpose was in no way to defeat the plan for a rescue mission, but only to arrive at

LARGEST PLANER IN THE WORLD.

Two Sides at the Same Time and Has a Speed and Capacity of Nineteen Railroad Cars Required to Transport It.

There was shipped Saturday from the Pond Machine Tool Works a fine piece of machinery in the shape of a double planer. This is without doubt the largest 120-inch planer ever made in the United States, if not in the world, and the most complete in every sense. Its total weight is 110 tons, and it took seven cars to transport it to its destination, Pittsburg, Pa., where it will be at once set in place. The bed, which is 14 feet parts, weighed 42 tons; the table 20 tons; the uprights weighed 13 tons each; the cross rail weighed 16 tons; the arch 44 tons, and the large driving-gear 4 tons. This planer was designed under the supervision of James E. Greenesmith, the manager, and the direction of Andrew McCardell, and "the machine work and setting up under Chas. Foster, the general foreman of the machine shop. Its work reflects great credit on all concerned. As it was seen by the shop when finished its form was faultless, the coatings were perfect and the finish was of the best, making it fit only a beautiful piece of work but a durable one as well.

Two more, though lighter, 120 inch planers, are under way, one for the table builder Milton Hersey & Co., Thursday.

The footfulfilate from the works, known as the "Pittsfield Team," have arranged for a match, association rules, with the Pittsfield Club of New York city, for Christmas Day, at 3 p. m., on the Crescent grounds. The following players have been picked out for the match: J. McIntosh, R. Bissell, J. Ahearn, N. Bissell, J. Davis, T. Hendry, H. Wharton, J. Stansfield, J. Lewis, T. McNeil, L. W. Nicholson. A second match on Thursday.

Monday the fifth gun lathe for the government was shipped to Troy, N. Y., and the sixth will be placed in position for trial. LATHE HAND.

THE NATIONAL FLOWER.

New Jersey's Board of Horticulture Adopts the Golden-Rod.

The State Board of Horticulture, in annual session at Trenton, yesterday, considered the subject of the national flower.

The fight over the national flower was an animated one. Franklin Dye, secretary of the board of Agriculture, moved the adoption of the golden-rod. Some thought the adoption of an obnoxious weed as a national emblem, ought to be ridiculed. The objection to the abrysanthemum was that it was a hot-house flower and came from a heathen country. Efforts were made to have the violet, clover, rose, and violet substituted. For a short time it looked as if the rose advocates would win, but when the vote was taken golden-rod was adopted by a majority of one.

Going to Florida.

On the 6th of January, Messrs. E. F. Thorn and Ellis A. Condit will start for a few weeks' visit to the home of Mr. Campbell's son, Harry, near Crescent City, Florida, where the latter owns a fine orange grove and is engaged in raising trees and five acres of young trees. The fruit gathered from Mr. Campbell's grove is of the finest quality and is sold in the market, embracing such as mandarine, tangerine, and navels. Last year he shipped North over 600 boxes, and will gather more than this this year. Round Lake Grove is in a high state of cultivation, and the climate is lovely. The grove is taken in charge from a beautiful lake of about twenty acres which is situated on the property. This lake has been stocked with black bass and pickerel, and affords excellent fishing. The first spring of last winter Mr. Campbell killed a five-foot alligator on the banks of the waters. There is also another large body of water, known as Crescent Lake, about two miles from Round Lake Grove, which abounds with game fish. Quail and dove afford good sport for the sportsmen. Taken all together, the section is a paradise which one never ceases to praise after once visiting it. Oranges from Round Lake Grove are for sale at many of the stores in the city, in boxes marked Kelly & Campbell. Mr. Thorn and Mr. Campbell will take all necessary paraphernalia with them to have a good time with fish and game, and will go about about a month.

CITY DEPARTMENT.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE, THE COUNTY AND THE CITY, AND HAS THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY PAPER PUBLISHED IN THE COUNTY OF UNION.

J. A. DEMAREST ..... City Editor.

—The Park club house in North Plainfield will be opened the latter part of January.

—The list of entries for the Crescent League individual bowling tournament will be continued open one week longer.

—At Grace church, Friday, there will be early celebration at 7.30, and morning prayer, sermon and Holy Communion at 11.

—Mrs. Clifford Booth-Clibborn, the famous Salvation Army Marechal of France, will speak at Reform Hall some time in January.

—The Jersey City bowlers won a tournament game from Fanwood Friday night by the score of 2,719. Fisher of Jersey City rolled 215.

—Monday was the shortest day of the year 1891 and the first day of winter. There was but nine hours and four minutes of daylight.

—Dominick Duffy, who had his jaw smashed by his brother-in-law, Dominick Caufield, has discharged cured from Muhlenberg Hospital.

—The prayer meeting of the Young People's League of the First Baptist church usually held on Friday evening, will be omitted this week.

—Ground has been broken for Mrs. Julia M. VanBuren's residence on Central avenue. John F. Ramsome has been awarded the contract for the mason work.

—Water from the Plainfield Supply reports a catastrophe has been turned into the cellar of the Park Hotel and has attached to connect the water that the little town gets.

—Fog was so thick Monday night one had hard work to find his way to and through it. The railroad men had an unusual time, and doubled the precautions against wrecks.

—Lehigh Ayres and Cornelius Teeple will shoot a match at live birds, for $25 a side, at Campbell's club-house, Christmas Day. There will be live-bird and inanimate-bird shooting all day.

—John M. Schorb, sr., was fined $100 by Judge Collington, Friday night, for selling liquor on Sunday. His bartender William Schorb, was also arrested, but on him sentence was suspended.

—The report that engineer Rodrigues, who was hurt in the recent P. & R. collision by Plainfield Branch, is dead is false. He is getting better, but it will be a year before he can resume his place in the cab.

—George Saddler, of 159 East Sixth street, was horribly cut about the face and thread by a ball through a pane of glass Saturday night. He had bled almost to death when picked up, but is recovering.

—Twenty-five couple enjoyed the dance at The Albion, Saturday evening. Three hortsnight's dances are quite a feature of season. In Plainfield. The young society people of the city are particularly welcome to them.

—A lineman cut a five-alarm wire by mistake at 10.15 last Thursday, and a blow was sounded. At noon the 15 o'clock striking mechanism was slightly out of order, and the noon blow was greatly prolonged.

—The gang of hoodlums who are allowed to congregate about the entrance to the five-cent nights, insulting passers-by with coarse, insolent and profane remarks, are a nuisance to the public and a disgrace to the city.

—The patrons and subscribers of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST are reminded that the faithful carrier of the paper, Chas. S. York, will call on the annual visit on New Year's day, and hopes to receive an "oval time" silvery and agreed eagle reception, as this will probably be his last New Year's address and appeal to their noble generosity.

—Those who have imagined that the surveyors on Park avenue, Second street and Madison avenue, were getting really to cut down second street, and do other grading, are disposed to learn that they are only getting accurate measurements of the Cook lumber-yard property. The surveyors are from F. A. Dunham's staff.

—A large quantity of wild rice has been received at Chatham from Canada by the Fish and Game association and planted over a large part of the lakes and ponds meadows, since the Banks of the Stanley mill pond and in the great swamp, for the purpose of creating a feeding ground for wild fowl. Next spring, the club will liberate 3,000 quail on its preserves next spring.

—D. L. Hoffek, one of the city's best carpenters, has been awarded the contract for repairing the building formerly occupied by A. M. Runyon & Son, and owned by Wm. H. Brown. He has just completed one of the finest stables in this locality—that of Samuel J. McCutcheon on Rockview terrace. The interior finish of the stable is of pine & palmetto.

—A special Christmas praise service will be held at the First Presbyterian church next Sunday evening. The Rev. S. F. Ketcham, pastor, will deliver the address, and appropriate music will be given by the quartette, Miss Fellows, soprano; Mrs. Alling, alto; Mr. Hird, bass; Mr. Bond, tenor. Solos will be sung by Miss Fellows and Mrs. Hird. All are welcome.

—Isaac Brokaw & Son, through H. Harry Brokaw, has sold to J. Taylor Johnston the Eatenreck property on Belmont avenue, extending from Brook avenue to Dudley avenue, North Plainfield. It was owned by the Mutual Life Insurance company. The price paid was something over $16,000. This firm has sold over $50,000 worth of real estate in the last two months.

—The unpleasant presence of some disbonest person at the Franklin school is reported. It is said that various articles have been abstracted, recently, even from the teachers' desks. Yesterday a boy's hat was stolen, and not even an inferior one was left in its place.

—A North Plainfielder who pays $17 street-light tax a year complains that the North Plainfield Electric Light company turns off the current earlier than the contract calls for.

—W. J. Lockey, a tinsmither in the Pond Machine Tool company's foundry, cut his thumb seriously, yesterday, with his jackknife.

—The three-year-old child of Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. Booth of Madison avenue, is out of danger this morning although he has been almost despaired of Tuesday. The little one was suffering from membranous croup, and it was feared that a tube would have to be inserted in his throat to save his life. Dr. T. S. Davis is the attending physician, and it is undoubtedly owing to his skill, faithful attendance and untiring exertions that the child is living to-day.

—A very pretty home wedding was of Miss Daisy Morse to W. A. Schutt, at the house of the bride's parents, on Chatham street, Tuesday evening, Rev. Dr. Terhune was the officiating clergyman. The guests were limited to immediate relatives, of whom on the bride's side there were five generations represented. The ceremony took place under a beautiful floral arch. Mr. and Mrs. Schutt will reside on Door street. It is thought that a second happy wedding is soon to take place on Chatham street.

PERSONALIA.

Mr. Mangum of West Front street is slowly recovering from a severe shock of paralysis.

Letter-carrier Will Demarest is happy over the advent of a fine baby daughter, weighing eight pounds.

A. D. Cook has rented the new house at Sixth street and Sycamore. He will move into it with his family in February or March.

Miss Ida Cains of East Front street, entertained the Neighborwood Whist club at her home, last Thursday evening. Prizes were given, and supper and dancing followed.

Ferdinand Lissignolo is home for the holidays from the military school at Peekskill, N. Y. His Plainfield friends hardly know him in his cadet uniform of gray and bright buttons.

Leonard T. Coles, jr. the of the peace, died at his home in Dunellen at 2 o'clock, Monday afternoon, of Bright's disease, after a long illness, aged 38 years, 9 months and 20 days. He was born in Plainfield, was formally opened and conducted the business of coroner.

Funeral services will be held Saturday morning at 11.35.

Mrs. Clemson's son James T. was for years prominent in financial circles, and was a member of the well-known banking and brokerage firm of Clemson & Hayes, Broad street, New York. He is now retired.

Leonard T. Cole.

In the death of Leonard T. Cole, better known as "Judge" Cole, his family, the neighborhood in which he lived, and the community at large, have met with a loss which will be keenly felt. He was of such a disposition and character as tended to endear him to all with whom he came in contact. He lived a life of usefulness and died at a good old age. He was born September 13, 1808, at Rye, Westchester county, New York. He was for many years a resident of Williamsburg, New York, where he enjoyed a successful business career. He afterwards moved to Brooklyn, New York, and after residing there for a number of years purchased property at Dunellen, which had been his home for the last fifteen years. He had always been active and prominent in matters tending to the good of the public in the community in which he lived. He also took a prominent part in politics, having been an old-time Whig and latterly an earnest Republican. Many years ago he was elected justice of the peace, which position he held during the life of his death, and those members of the bar who have had the pleasure of appearing before him in matters which came within his jurisdiction will also testify to his ability as a magistrate.

Mr. Cole was married first to Miss Sarah Ann Hall, of Rye, N. Y., who died in 1847. He was married the second time to Miss Phebe Ann Hall, a sister of his first wife, who survives him. By the first marriage there were two children, Mrs. William T. Birdsall, and Mrs. Samuel Marion B. Hall, both of Plainfield, where he spent several seasons, and where, three winters ago, he delivered a course of lectures. He was born in Harwich, Mass., March 15, 1815, and early in life he followed the sea. He subsequently traveled extensively through the United States and Canada. He visited Europe in 1835, in 1836, in 1837, in 1847, and in 1865. His visit in 1847 was for the purpose of examining the educational institutions of the Old World, and he received much attention from Government officials and educators. On his return he was employed by the Massachusetts Board of Education to address public teachers' institutes. Prof. Tripp was occupied in teaching for a number of years at South Yarmouth Academy, Union Seminary at North Fair Haven, Villard Seminary at Hyannis, and the Highland Institute at Roxbury. Prof. Tripp's volume of Response Leaves was published in 1853. It had an unprecedented sale of sixty editions, and was greatly praised by the European and American press. In 1877 he was recommended to President Hayes by the Massachusetts delegation of teachers and Representatives in Congress for the position of Minister Resident at Brussels, Belgium. During the past thirty years Prof. Tripp had been continuously occupied in delivering courses of lectures on "Persons and Events from 1846", to the highest institutions of learning in the principal cities of the United States and Canada.

Prof. Alonzo Tripp.

Prof. Alonzo Tripp, lecturer and author, who died of pneumonia at Newton, Mass., Sunday, was born in this city. He was a descendant of Stephen Hopkins, who came to Plymouth in the Mayflower, where he spent several seasons, and where, three winters ago, he delivered a course of lectures. He was born in Harwich, Mass., March 15, 1815, and early in life he followed the sea. He subsequently traveled extensively through the United States and Canada. HYMENEAL.

Bankson—Atkinson.

A brilliant wedding took place at Grace church on 7 o'clock Thursday night, when Miss Mattie Louise Ackerman was married to Robert Rushmore. The church was thronged with invited witnesses.

At the appointed hour the groom, his "best man", and the officiating clergyman, stationed themselves at the altar and awaited the coming of the bride. As she entered, a roll of silken fabric was unwound and spread about her pathway. She was preceded up the aisle by the ushers, the bridesmaids, and the maid of honor. Her personal escort was, her brother Ernest R. Ackerman, on whose arm she leaned, and who gave her away.

The ceremony made a very pretty picture. The whole front of the church was a mass of beautiful floral decoration. The Wedding similar was wreathed about the altar and open work of the reredos with lavish hand. Rich masses of white roses and chrysanthemums adorned the chancel, and at each side stood tall, magnificent palms. Lelica's, delicious, pink rose blossoms, woven into heavy fragrant, floral wreaths, were along the railing. The artists from the firm of Wm. H. Brower & Sons, of New York, the decorators, of which a Mr. Bankson is resident of this city, had been two days arranging the decorations, and the result of their work was superb.

At the bridal party stood amid this rich setting of floral elegance, the effect was strikingly beautiful.

The central figure was of course the bride, radiant with loveliness. She wore a handsome costume of white satin, cut plain, with sleeves and waist trimmed with Venetian point lace. About her throat she wore a magnificent diamond brooch, the gift of the groom. She carried an ivory-bound prayer-book.

Of the bridesmaids, Miss Dumont, Miss Rushmore and Miss Morgan wore Nile-green India silk, and Miss Willis, Miss Scudder and Miss Tracy wore pink India silk. The trimmings were all of lace.

The maid-of-honor was the young sister of the bride, Lydia Platt Ackerman. She wore a child's gown of white India silk, and her hair hung in ringlets.

The ushers were Joseph Sandford, Albert Holly, Howard Dox, and Alfred Ackerman, all of Plainfield, and Townsend Morgan of New York, and C. Percy Wilcox of Philadelphia.

The "best man" was C. P. Turner of Brooklyn.

The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. C. M. Nickerson, and the Rev. Dr. T. A. Starkey, Bishop of Newark, D. D., pronounced the blessing.

The wedding marches were by Mrs. Freeman.

After the marriage, a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother, on Madison avenue, between Second street and Central avenue. The music was by Lander, and Marcel was the caterer.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Warden Ackerman, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac W. Rushmore, Councilman and Mrs. Rushmore, Mayor and Mrs. Runyon, Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert, Major and Mrs. Place, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Shepard, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Murray, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Marsh, Mr. and Mrs. Howland Cox, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Newhall, Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Timpson, Dr. and Mrs W. H. Murray, Mr. and Mrs. James E. Clark, Miss Sewall, Miss Julia E. Bulkley, Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Hegeman, jr., Mr. and Mrs. L. V. F. Randolph the Rev. Dr. K. P. Ketcham, the Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, Mr. and Mrs.G. W. Endicott, Francis E. Marsh, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Dumont, Mr. and Mrs. O. T. Waring, and many others.

THE CAPTAIN THOUGHT HIM HOMESICK.

But the Sergeant Had no sympathy, and the Prisoner Went Mad—Then He Fell.

James Francis, formerly a keeper in a Canada insane asylum, was arraigned in police court this morning. Captain Price and Sergeant Seventh appeared against the defense, decided that Francis himself was a little off and a good deal homesick. The prisoner thought if the second floor front room enough he would go away and not ill-turn anybody anymore. Sergeant Lynch, however, very sensibly remarked that men who were a little off and also walked into private houses and threatened the women who were there alone, were better looked up before they did worse harm.

An interview that a Press reporter had with "Jemima Armstrong", a servant in the employ of Frederick F. Brooks of Crescent avenue, elicited these facts: Last summer Miss Armstrong went to her home in Dundee for a vacation. While there she was married to Francis, who at that time, she says, was a keeper in an insane asylum. After she returned to Plainfield, Francis, her husband, also followed her. He torments her with his *continual presence, she says, and de*pends on her for his support.

The bridal news is that Mr. Dunn is badly cut about his head, and that Mrs. Dunn has her shoulder, left leg, and head cut. Mr. and Mrs. Dunn are in a hotel in Lima, but are expected to-day to-day, and will go to the Fort Wayne Hospital.

Mr. Wheelers is Sad.

Arrangements are being made by John F. Hall, Esq., of Elizabeth, for a sterling suit against Edward M. Field. Mr. Wheelers represents himself as being practically robbed by Field's financiering. He put all the money he could himself by Field to into the firm, and also put into it the money of relatives. Some of these relatives reside in Europe. They are now on their way to this country. They are Carl Wiechers, an uncle of John F. Wiechers, and Mrs. Kirstein and Mrs. Lassen, sisters of Mrs. Wiechers, and Martin A. Sagloss of 50 Wall street, New York.

The Garden Blizzard.

While we are constantly reading of successful men who have risen to fame by sterling overwork, anxious apparently to make their boy while the sun shines, it is evident that one of them at least does not intend that his son shall be forced to work that rest as well as work is necessary for those who use their brains. Mr. Albert Bloss is now in Europe and proposes to allow that fact to interfere with his pleasure. He is making the grand tour of that country, or being lected by travelers, and soon, after the new year, will sail from Naples for Greece and Algeria. Letters from him indicate that he is enjoying himself to the utmost, and he is enthusiastic about Barrolo a Spanish artist. He will be the hero of a novel with his publisher, G. W. Bullingham, of New York, before he went away, and it will appear in January, under the title of "The Garston Blizzard." The scene is laid principally in the State of Iowa, and the story is said to be in no way inferior to the rest of the brilliant series of which it will form the seventh volume.

Sculptor Elwell Honored.

The Philadelphia Art club has presented to F. Elwin Elwell of New York, who is to lecture in this city at an early date for the benefit of the Children's Home, a gold medal in recognition of his work as a sculptor. It is larger than the silver dollar. On one side is the Genius of Art, the Spirit of Philadelphia. Below is a lyre inscribed his name and the year. On the other side is the figure of a woman, around which are the words: "Sculpture, Art, Architecture", with the words "Ars Opus" above. The Art club has bestowed only one other similar medal, and that was given three years ago to Mr. Gilchrist.

FIRST OF THE PHILHARMONICS.

The Musical Treat at the Casino Pronounced by a Full-Dressed Audience a Great Success.

The first concert of the New York Philharmonic club was given in the Casino Tuesday. The undertaking of these gentlemen in the matching of a musical treat this year, as so much and already been subscribed for music in this city; but owing to the fine encomiums of the orchestra offered, as well as by the ability and personal popularity of the manager, H. O. Newman, there was absolutely no difficulty in the disposing of all tickets. The Casino was full. The programme was as follows:

PART FIRST.

Sextette—"Serenade," Op. 36 ..... Arnold Krug
Allegro vivace.
Andante.
Andante grazioso, "Intermezzo."
Allegro molto moderato.
Finale.
[Composed for and dedicated to the N. Y. Philharmonic Club.]
Aria—"Shadow Song," from "Dinorah" ..... Meyerbeer

Mlle. Clementine DeVere.
Violin Solo—"Danses Tziganes," ..... V. Sachse
Mr. John Marquardt.

PART SECOND.

Quartette—Op. 59, No. 3 ..... L. v. Beethoven
a. Menuetto grazioso.
b. Andante quasi allegretto.
Three Violins, Viola and Violoncello.)
Flute Solo—"Rhapsodie Hongroise" ..... W. Popp
Mr. Eugene Weiner.
a. "Romanza" ..... G. Holzmeister
b. "Spanish Dance" ..... C. Cui
N. Y. Philharmonic Club.
Scena—"Le Rossignol" ..... C. Cluriti
Mlle. Clementine DeVere.
Tarantella ..... B. Godard
N. Y. Philharmonic Club.

Miss DeVere was in much better condition than at her appearance here in "The Creation" last winter, though she was evidently not in her best voice. Her voice generally was rich and full, but her upper register was occasionally shrill and foggy, and her runs in the Shadow Dance were blurred. Her breathe were wonderful. There are of course comparisons made between her rendition of her second solo, and that of Mary Howe, who sang the same thing in the Casino last winter, but each lady has her own devotees. She was recalled both times.

Mr. Weiner's figure is so familiar one here, as to him has been entrusted for years the guidance of the orchestra in the Choral society's concerts. He produced a sweetness and tenderness of tone unequal to a flute, and which was a delight to the audience. He also received a recall.

Mr. Marquardt played with great delicacy and consummate skill, and was warm response from his hearers, whom he then favored with a byronet.

The execution of the club as a whole, was excellent. The four movements of Kruga's "Serenade" were varied and equally interesting. The quartette by Beethoven was especially delightful. The audience and was interesting in that way; but the romance by Hollaender pleased those less educated, while the quaint rhythm of Grieg's Spanish dance charmed everyone. In response to an enthusiastic encore, the audience was favored with a repetition of the dance which in turn was followed by a dreamy waltz. Godard's tarantella was a fine finish to a delightful evening.

Undoubtedly everybody felt himself or herself fortunate in having secured tickets for this course before it was too late. From the enthusiasm displayed at intermissions or half-way, it was evident that no one felt that the must be got for his money at that concert was the sight of his neighbor's best clothes.

A BAD SMASH-UP.

Hackman Uninjury Almost Loses His Life and Wholesale Destruction Is Narrowly Averted.

Augustus Utzinger, hackman, had an exciting experience Monday night. A little after 10 o'clock he was driving down East Third street along the railroad track. He was just turning into Peace at out when a train went by, the locomotive pouring out a flood of blazing steam. The noise frightened his horse, which gave a terrific plunge and completely overturned the hack. The top of the vehicle was instantly wrecked. The maddened animal galloped on up North avenue, dragging the debris after it, and was about to dash into the row of hacks standing at the station when a hackman caught it—just in time, to avoid wholesale destruction among the cabs and a panic among the horses. Utzinger's hack was completely smashed into kindling wood, and he himself was terribly cut with glass and torn by splintered wood-work. He considers it miraculous that he escaped alive.

A Pirate Paper Horrified at Other's Sins

The Elizabeth Herald says:

"Upon the Elizabeth Journal editor word of warning was given that the propagate to the Polish" and credits it to the Plainfield Courier-News and Press. Republican contemporaries in such city are so hard up for pointed paragraphs that they are unable to manufacture themselves, that they are obliged to set the pirate's part and rob their Democratic neighbors of their wit and humor. The statement was on the side of the Plainfield Courier, which is published by "the people's party," without acknowledgment from the HERALD. Our modesty simply fell into the trap.

The Elizabeth Herald criticising other papers for copying articles without credit reminds one of the old expression about the pot calling the kettle black. The Elizabeth Herald every day prints columns of matter bodily taken from the columns of brighter and more brainy contemporaries. The "Stale news" is a notable instance of journalistic piracy. Every paragraph in the two columns daily devoted to that department is clipped from some New York and Plainfield papers with never a word of credit. THE PRESS has for months uncomplainingly borne the injustice of the Elizabeth Herald in seeing its articles even while reproduced in other papers and credited to the Herald, which had unblushingly stolen the matter from those columns.

Among the gifted contributors to the Elizabeth Herald are Walter Irving Clarke, formerly of this city, but now of Plainfield, who has written a tale of newspaper life of absorbing interest. The title is "The Story that was Killed." It is a production of much originality and considerable dramatic force.—New Brunswick Times.

Frederick Moore, who was superintendent of the Warren Union mission in 1890, has consented to act again in that capacity. His work was so successful, before that the mission is to be congratulated on his acceptance. E. C. Fenn, the retiring superintendent, declined to serve another year, against the request of many.

OBITUARY.

From THE PRESS of Dec. 23.

Mrs. Louisa A. Clemson.

At her late residence, Front and Richmond streets, after a continued illness of 3 o'clock this morning, the end has occurred of Mrs. Louisa A., widow of the late N. Holden Clemson, at the age of 78. She leaves one son, James T. Clemson, and one daughter, Mrs. H. E. Scudder.

Funeral services will be held Saturday morning at 11.35.

Mrs. Clemson's son James T. was for years prominent in financial circles, and was a member of the well-known banking and brokerage firm of Clemson & Hayes, Broad street, New York. He is now retired.

Leonard T. Cole.

In the death of Leonard T. Cole, better known as "Judge" Cole, his family, the neighborhood in which he lived, and the community at large, have met with a loss which will be keenly felt. He was of such a disposition and character as tended to endear him to all with whom he came in contact. He lived a life of usefulness and died at a good old age. He was born September 13, 1808, at Rye, Westchester county, New York. He was for many years a resident of Williamsburg, New York, where he enjoyed a successful business career. He afterwards moved to Brooklyn, New York, and after residing there for a number of years purchased property at Dunellen, which had been his home for the last fifteen years. He had always been active and prominent in matters tending to the good of the public in the community in which he lived. He also took a prominent part in politics, having been an old-time Whig and latterly an earnest Republican. Many years ago he was elected justice of the peace, which position he held during the life of his death, and those members of the bar who have had the pleasure of appearing before him in matters which came within his jurisdiction will also testify to his ability as a magistrate.

Mr. Cole was married first to Miss Sarah Ann Hall, of Rye, N. Y., who died in 1847. He was married the second time to Miss Phebe Ann Hall, a sister of his first wife, who survives him. By the first marriage there were two children, Mrs. William T. Birdsall, and Mrs. Samuel Marion B. Prof. Tripp's volume of Response Leaves was published in 1853. It had an unprecedented sale of sixty editions, and was greatly praised by the European and American press. In 1877 he was recommended to President Hayes by the Massachusetts delegation of teachers and Representatives in Congress for the position of Minister Resident at Brussels, Belgium. During the past thirty years Prof. Tripp had been continuously occupied in delivering courses of lectures on "Persons and Events from 1846", to the highest institutions of learning in the principal cities of the United States and Canada.

UP GOES THE MONUMENT.

The Most Elaborate Headstone Ever Put Up Under Friends' Auspices.

Thos. F. Johnson, a monument maker at Dover, has completed the erection in the Fairview cemetery ground near Millbrook of a beautiful monument to the memory of the late Edward Dell. It will be remembered that Mr. Dell made a provision in his will for this. It is said, the amount named was so in excess of the ideas of simplicity held by the Friends that the matter was referred to the society of Friends at Plainfield, who held the title to this property; and, though hitherto nothing g but simple headstones have been permitted, the will was finally arranged that the bequest might be carried out, providing the monument did not exceed a certain height. It is of Quincy granite, of what is known as the sarcophagus pattern, and the base is four and a half feet long and three feet wide. The plinth bears the family name "Dell", and above the die is the inscription, "He giveth His beloved sleep." The front face bears the name of Edward Dell and the date of his birth and death the end pieces contain the names and ages of his parents and the rear face bears a cross for flowers. The cap is of the cottage-roof style. The panels are beautifully polished in strong contrast to the roughcast surfaces. The lot is surrounded with a fence made of heavy granite posts with moulded tops, connected with a galvanized iron rail, with large corner pieces. The gate posts are also polished shields. The whole is very tastefully thought out, and the cost of the monument and fence was $1,000.

The most astonishing results in healing wounds have been made by Salvation Oil. 25 cts.

Dell is said to set before you for conscience sake, asking no questions"—but if you've got a real stubborn cold, buy a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup and cure it quickly.

RULER OF THE DANES.

King Christian IX. and His Illustrious Connections.

In His Youth He Was a Dazzling Match and Has in Many Ways Been the Cause a Very Small Potato.

Christian IX., king of Denmark, while ruler of the smallest kingdom in the world, has more royal connections probably than any crowned or uncrowned head in existence. Over fifty years ago he won a prize for the hand of Queen Victoria, and though rejected for a worthier prince has lived to become the father-in-law of H. R. H. the prince of Wales. After marrying his daughter Alexandra to that personage, King Christian disposed of another child, Maria, to the eldest son of Alexander II. of Russia. Now she is an empress. Christian's son George is now monarch of Greece, and increased the number of his family's royal relations by marrying the grand duchess of Russia a year after he ascended the throne.

Compared with his present splendid circumstances, Christian's early days look mean indeed. He was born in 1818, the son of a prince of Glucksburg, who, notwithstanding noble connections, like many a count of to-day was poor and proud. His ancestors were gentlemen of fortune, who looked to the crown and their wits for their livelihood. Christian, however, though entitled to the title of duke, condescended to eke out his scanty income by giving drawing lessons. Twenty years later he was called to the throne of Denmark.

Christian lost no flesh after Queen Victoria declined his proposal, and it is no disparagement to her to say that he secured as good a woman as she for a wife. That was Princess Louise of Hesse. It is through his wife's connections that Christian reached the throne, and it is due largely to her wisdom and tact that he has held it with prosperous success. It is not to be denied that Christian possesses few kingly attributes. His personal appearance would scarcely call him bright, and his unconsciousness of his dullness has made him suspicious and stubborn. He regards his ministers, who by their wise administration have gained the popularity which he has failed to acquire, with dislike.

Christian's accession to the throne came about in somewhat peculiar way. In recognition of military services somewhat vague, in truth, Princess Caroline's father was made commander in chief of the Danish army, and subsequently allied himself with the royal house by marrying a sister of King Christian VIII. As the royal line of Oldenburg threatened to become extinct, the London protocol of 1850 settled the succession on Princess Louise, Duke Christian's wife. In 1863 she was called to the throne, and the reign of Christian IX. began. His title to the crown, however, was questioned by the Danish people electing him on the condition that he guarantee them the integrity of their political constitution. Further than that, the grand powers guaranteed the legality of the monarchy. But both pledges were broken into fragments.

Before Christian had ruled a year the armies of Prussia and Austria invaded the diminutive territory and carved away two fifths of Denmark. The duchies of Holstein and Schleswig were their acquisitions wrested away after a campaign which was most disastrous for the Danish army. Repeated efforts were neither regained. The other guaranty, made to the people by the king, was nullified ten years afterward in which Christian attempted to fly in the face of the constitution by governing without Odom by prorogued laws. He has never succeeded in persuading the representatives of the people to legalize such action.

GOVERNOR HOVEY.

Essential Career of Indiana's Late Chief Executive.

Alvin P. Hovey was born on a farm near Mount Vernon, Posey county, Ind., September 6, 1824, and was educated in the country schools and by private teachers. In 1844 he was a schoolteacher, and while so engaged pursued the study of law evenings. He was admitted to the bar

gov. hovey.

in 1845. He enlisted as a private in the Mexican war, and was commissioned a first lieutenant for conspicuous service in June, 1848. Returning to Indiana at the close of the war with Mexico he began the practice of the law, and as a democrat was elected to a state office to the convention which framed the state in 1850. In 1851 he was elected judge of the circuit court of the third judicial circuit, and at the expiration of his term in 1854 was appointed one of the judges of the state supreme court to fill a vacancy. The same year his party nominated him for the republican ticket, but was defeated by Hon. Samuel Goodlins, republican and know-nothing candidate. The year following, 1855, he was made president of the democratic state convention, and in 1856 President Franklin Pierce appointed him United States district attorney for the state of Indiana, from which office he was removed in 1857 by President James Buchanan because of his active support of Stephen A. Douglas for the presidential nomination. Governor Morton, now United States senator, was appointed his successor. Gov. Hovey was the leader of the democratic forces of the union at the opening of hostilities between the north and the south in 1861. He was the first to organize a regiment—colonel of the Twenty-fourth regiment, Indiana volunteers, and in April, 1861, was appointed by the governor brigadier general of volunteers. He served under Gens Fremont and Hunter in Missouri in the fall and winter of 1861-62, with Gen. Grant at Shiloh and Vicksburg, and with Gen. Sherman in his Meridian march to the sea. As a brigade and division commander he participated in the battles of Corinth, Shiloh, Port Gibson, Grand Gulf, Champion's Hill, and the siege of Vicksburg and Jackson. In July, 1864, he was commissioned brigadier general of volunteers, "for meritorious and distinguished services during the war." He was appointed United States minister to the republic of Peru in 1865, which office he filled with conspicuous merit until 1878, when he resigned and returned to Indiana. In 1877 he was elected as a republican to the forty-fifth congress from the First congressional district, defeating James E. McCullough, democrat. While serving this term as congressman he was nominated for governor by the republicans in 1876 and was elected, defeating Mahoney, democrat, by 8,500 plurality.

A Year and a Day.

In ancient British law a year and a day was the term fixed within which certain things could be lawfully done. Under this law it was necessary to claim estrepage (look within a year and a day, otherwise it became the property of the lord of the manor. By the same law, if a person was wounded within a year and a day the person inflicting the wound was held to be guilty of murder.

THE SEAMED GLOMERIS.

It Possesses the Ability of Rolling Itself Up Into a Ball.

Among the myriapoda are several species of animals which possess the ability to roll themselves up into a complete ball as soon as any danger is apprehended. One of these, the glomeris, which points downward, the animal consists of from twelve to thirteen segments, the second and last one are longer and the first narrower and smaller than the others, and all are some what curvelinear at the sides. In rolling themselves up there is no opening visible, and the animal represents a solid ball, hard and dark.

Our engraving represents the seamed glomeris (glomeris limbata) to be found singly or in groups of different sizes under stones, decaying leaves and in damp places, usually in the woods. They are completely harmless, of glossy brown black color, and each segment has a yellowish rim. They are very lazy animals, and in most of the time rolled up in their hiding-places. In case of danger they roll themselves up and remain in this position for a long time. The glomeris makes use of this faculty for many purposes, sometimes where the surface is slanting—they simply roll down hill.

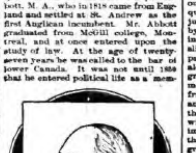
The chief constituents of decaying plant remnants. Of their development little is known. They shed their skin, digging into the ground for that purpose, where they remain until the skin has hardened and the light color has changed to dark brown black.

Considerably larger than the European species are some found in Africa and Asia, and the latter is one to be found in Florence more than two inches in length. The general color is very dark, nearly approaching to red, the head and front segment edged with blackish brown. The surface is shining and polished, and on the segments, except that at the end of the body, are marked with deep longitudinal lines, and for this reason the animal has received the name of zephronia impressus.

CANADA'S NEW PREMIER.

Something About the Man Who Succeeds the Late Sir John Macdonald.

John J. Caldwell Abbott was born on March 12, 1821, in the rectory of St. Andrew's in the county of Argenteuil, Que. His father was Rev. Joseph Abbott, M. A., who in 1818 came from England and settled in Canada. He was commander in chief of the Danish army, and subsequently allied himself with the royal house by marrying a sister of King Christian VIII. As the royal line of Oldenburg threatened to become extinct, the London protocol of 1850 settled the succession on Princess Louise, Duke Christian's wife. In 1863 she was called to the throne, and the reign of Christian IX. began. His title to the crown, however, was questioned by the Danish people electing him on the condition that he guarantee them the integrity of their political constitution. Further than that, the grand powers guaranteed the legality of the monarchy. But both pledges were broken into fragments.



HON. J. J. C. ABBOTT.

ber for his native county in the assembly of Canada. From that time forward he took an active part in the transactions of the house, notably in connection with the militia bill of 1862, was made a Q. C. in 1862 and for a short time was member of the Sandfield Macdonald-Sicotte administration. In 1864 he introduced and fought through the house the "insolvent act," probably his chief work as a legislator. In 1867, upon confederation, Mr. Abbott was elected to the house of commons. In the negotiations of the syndicate that which Sir Hugh Allan was chief, for the Pacific railway matter Mr. Abbott acted as counsel, and through his confidential clerk's treachery the famous private correspondence which caused the Pacific scandal saw the light. In the defeat of the government at that time Mr. Abbott shared, and remained in private life until 1880. He was elected in that year and sat through parliament until 1887, when he retired. He was subsequently elevated to the senate, of which he has of late been the government leader. Next to that in solvency act, the measure by which his reputation has been most enhanced, is the forty law consolidation act for lower Canada.

MOUNTED ON WHEELS.

The New York Salvation Army to Have a Bicycle Corps.

Riding into sin on a bicycle.

That is what the Salvation Army proposes doing hereafter, says the New York Journal. But instead of riding on a bicycle and committing sin, they purpose to ride on the machine and kill sin.

The idea of using bicycles in carrying on the work of the Salvation Army, SALVATION ARMY ON WHEELS.

while a new thing in New York, is far past the bounds of successful experiment in London.

For more than a year Gen. Ballington Booth's London forces have been doing most of their work on bicycles. That is the machine has been used "to carry messages from one post of the army to another, and for going to distant parts of the city where meetings are to be held.

"There is nothing nicer," said a member of the Salvation Army, who had recently come from London, "than a sight of one of our companies on the road hurrying through the streets of London.

"A bold Salvation Army lad, or a pretty Salvation lassie mounted on a safety bicycle, and hurrying along in close order, is a veritable staging a Salvation Army hymn, is something that calls forth a crowd."

The New York city mounted bicycle brigade of the Salvation Army," is the official title of the organization that is about to be formed.

The organization will consist of a lieutenant commander, a corps of two lieutenants, a bugler, who will act as orderly, and twenty-five privates, of which retire will be the very prettiest Salvation Army lassies that the city contains.

Named and the Founders of Youth.

Bimini was a fabulous island firmly believed in by the Spaniards of the fifteenth century. It was thought could give the further of life to those who could find it. In the same hundreds of leagues north of Florida, on the island of Bimini, the fountain of youth was said to flow. Ponce de Leon and Fernando de Soto in 1512 and 1539 respectively made voyages in search for this fountain that led Ponce de Leon and Fernando de Soto to "Florida." Ponce de Leon named the land Florida because it was discovered by him during the season of Pascua Florida, or flowery Easter.

SANCTUM TRAGEDIES.

A Few Sketches from the Pen of John Swinton.

The Final Month of Poe—The Writer of "The Raven"—A Picture of Horace Greeley—Other Famous Scenes and Incidents.

COPYRIGHT, 1891.

4 HUNDRED ROAD SCENES.

The other day I met down the centuries of shreds and patches the dead silence and leading writers of New York daily papers whom I had known in their lifetime. I recalled their appearance, their traits, their powers, their work, their career and its end. I recalled my first editorial chief, the accomplished poet Raymond of the Times, at the time he was the rival of Bowles, of the Tribune, and the peer of Greeley. I recalled the sledgehammer men who covered broad sheets with their blows, the caustic satire critics, the pure spinners, moral reformers, humorists, book reviewers, partisan scribblers, philosophers, rhymsters and writers of other kinds, nearly all of whom are now unknown, even by name, to the world who read their years ago—those their places. The fact that the daily press gives to its notaries, as the mold of fame is shortlived, though some among them are apt to think it will last a few years at least.

In glancing over this list of dead editors buried within less than 50 years, I was struck by the fact that only a few of the names in it belonged to men whose lives came to a direful end and at least one half of the rest lived to middle age. Three if not four of them were murdered; as many more took their reasons in hand and died of drink, or by accident; not a few shortened their lives by indulgence in liquor, and at least half of them died in misery and poverty.

I have not yet got quite through, however, with the hundred men on my list. Some of them, like Bryant, Bennett, Hunt, Bartlett, Hastings, Raymond and others, lived to a green old age, prosperous and conspicuous to the last, turning out "copy" daily till the fires of life were darkened.

The record of the dead editors of New York is not by any means all direful or doleful; there are streaks of light across the slip of paper before me containing the names of a hundred of them whom I know in their lifetime.

THE AUTHOR OF "THE RAVEN."

"The Fate of Edgar Allan Poe" is the theme of a poem in which we are told of Poe's "enigmatic face," "mysterious smile," "sweet dreamy eyes," "planet-calm eyes," "dark floating hair," "poetic presence." Now I would like to know from what picture or what traits this description was drawn. There are in this city, so far as I know, but two portraits of that wonderful, wild, weird American genius, Edgar Allan Poe, author of "The Raven," "Ode to Helen," etc. Of these, one is in the gallery of the New York Historical society, and the other, owned by a writer in my cabinet circle, showing half the figure, belongs to me, and is now before me. The oil painting does not accord with the above description of Poe's appearance, and the water color is far from accord with it. It was done sold by the late Charles F. Briggs, who was Poe's partner in the editorship of the Broadway Journal, that this water color is a capital likeness of its subject, in feature and expression, when he was in the high, reflecting the bloom of cradles of the man as known by his works and the record of his life. It was painted a few years before Poe's death, and when he was thirty-two years old. The expression of the face is mystical, full of poetic thrills. The forehead is broad, and is very largely developed in the locality of ideality, causality, and in that portion which the phrenologists describe the "perceptive faculties." The eyes indicate "speculation in these eyes," and there are also emotion, suffering and despair. The mouth is fastidious, and on the lips are scorn and contempt—a certain haughty expression of scorn. A rather weak chin terminates an oval face, the cheeks of which are sunken, and along the edge of which are narrow whiskers-stripe. The dark hair of the head is cut rather short and curls slightly. On every feature and part of the head are peculiar traits and qualities of Poe are visibly, profoundly and painfully expressed. Immediately after the publication of the door one night after midnight.

After a short time I found out, at patients I got to be the opinion of the medical advisers. The regular doctor, the three eminent doctors and consulting doctors, the highly distinguished doctor who used his profession as a mortality detector, telegraphed me, after a few days, positively that recovery was not to be looked for and that the end was approaching.

Still indulging a private doubt of the accuracy of their prognosis, I determined that, before death and burial, I would go over the case and abroad. I took ship from this port and in a few days I was on the shores of the Mediterranean, with no change from my mortal condition. When I got to Nice, the physician living there was sent for. He came in a lively way, announced his name, and after a preliminary talk went those of nervous prostration, gave some advice, left some medicine and said there was good hope of recovery. "In that your prognosis, doctor?" "It is." "And what is its period?" "Six months, to be safe." "But," said I, "I have paid the New York doctors more than twenty times as much for a prognosis of the opposite of that!" He smiled again, repeated his visits at a cheaper rate on subsequent days, and left me in a few days somewhat improved somehow. When springtime came, I returned to the United States, and found the doctors themselves where he knew a doctor to be recommended. I took the advice pressed. He looks here as Hamlet, the melancholy Dane, may have looked to some of his moods. The portrait is very unlike the engravings that appear in the various editions of Poe's works, and very unlike the man described in the poem on "The Portrait of Poe."

If there are any other original portraits of Poe than the two here spoken of, I should like to know of them.

Ex-Mayor Hall, of New York, has recently published his memories of Poe, but I apprehend that he does not clearly remember the personal appearance of the bewitching American author, whom he saw nearly half a century ago, and who died of delirium tremens when not yet forty years old.

A SQUAD OF M'CRYDEMOORE DOCTORS.

I have had some lively times with my doctors in New York and there can be no harm in telling of them. Some time ago I got back from a foreign country, to which they had sent me as a last resort, and from which they thought I would never return. I had been laid up for a long time with a complication of maladies which threatened to put an end to life, and an eminent member of the medical faculty, a worthy and wise practitioner, looked after the case. Months passed away without improvement. He came to think that the case looked desperate and made his diagnosis known with proper gravity to others than myself. "What is the progress?" I asked him one day, and he admitted that it was not favorable, soon after which it seemed proper to provide for his fees. In order to make sure of the case and to see whether anything farther could be done in it, he suggested the calling of a council of highly distinguished doctors, and next day the council was held in the sick chamber as I lay shed. They examined the case, in which they found anomalous symptoms, and it soon became evident from their looks and whispertings—which were, of course, noticed by the patient—that they regarded it as dangerous. They went into an adjacent room to exchange views in private, and when they returned after a time, to take another look at me, I saw by the incensed sobriety of their faces, that there was no hope. "What is the prognosis?" I asked, the reply to which was a dry smile, and "What is the price of it?" the answer to which came next morning in the shape of a bill for $50 for the consultation. In order to settle the whole business beyond doubt, another highly distinguished doctor came to see me will call Dr. Pantagruel, and who has the reputation of "always being able to forecast the result of an illness that is sure to be fatal," was next called in. He gazed at me, felt my pulse, shook my forehead, asked a few questions, and gave his opinion that the sufferer was in serious straits. The prognosis was unfavorable, and the price of it was $100. "Is he dead yet?" asked an enterprising undertaker that I met on the street as he spoken of, and there saw the doctor he had commended. This new doctor laughed merrily at the absurdity of all my experiences with my prognostics, ting and costly medical advisers in New York, and at once gave a favorable prognosis of the case. When asked what would be his fee for this surprising prognosis, he replied four shillings, but that other visits would be half that rate. I assured him services for the season, took the drugs which he gave, enjoyed the hills, the sunshine and the society in his company, grew well while he sang the songs of life among the heather, got well as the months passed along, and came back to these shores, lived to a green old age, prosperous and conspicuous to the last, turning out "copy" daily till the fires of life were darkened.

The record of the dead editors of New York is not by any means all direful or doleful; there are streaks of light across the slip of paper before me containing the names of a hundred of them whom I know in their lifetime.

THE MIKADO'S ARMY.

Maneuvers Conducted with Remarkable Skill.

Movements of the Troops and the Fleet of the Japanese Empire—Astonishing Progress Made in Western Ways and Methods.

COPYRIGHT, 1891.

Musical study is so universal among Americans that anything bearing upon the subject in any degree may be said to have in a particular sense a popular interest. Music is chosen for an accomplishment, when languages, athletics, art and scholarly studies are subordinated or ignored. It is, indeed, the most popular of all accomplishments. It is also the accomplishment in regard to which more misapprehensions exist and in the history of which more illusions are shattered than any other that might be named.

No one who has watched musical students, whether they be our curious dabblers or passionately serious laborers in the schools on both sides of the Atlantic, has failed to note the distressing number of cases in which the singer or player lacks not merely general talent but the primary necessity—a trustworthy ear. Not only those people and bad music who were drawn to it by inclination there would still be many destined aspirants. Everybody's experience furnishes illustrations of would-be endeavorers who have "no ear." But the number would be considerably small if the students were not pushed forward by admiring and ambitious parents and friends, who exhibit an unconscious tendency to delude the objects of attention, thought and pushed by the best training that money can buy, they squander fortunes in New York, in Paris, in Leipsic, and have a debut upon which the highest expectations are keyed, and in the critical hour their voice, modulated by every trick of art, is found to commit the fatal sin of "flatting". The singer has no ear. He or she can never be great.

A similar experience is noted among instrumentalists. With great difficulty obtained, by a refinement of drudgery, they are deficient in that sense of perfection, aged in middle life, speaks the true sources of their mediocrity is learned.

How many ambitious parents have asked themselves: Has my child an ear for music? How can I discover whether my child has an ear for music? Before engaging teachers or squandering money I should like to have some way in which I can discover whether the effort and the expenditure are worth while?

The question was put to me the other day under circumstances that interested me in a satisfactory response. I determined to go to headquarters for an answer.

I first called on the distinguished leader, who sat at the feet of Richard Wagner, who as a young man played at those "glorious Wagnerian matinees" where Liszt shone with other celebrities of scarcely lesser luster—Anton Seidl, leader of the German Opera.

Anton Seidl's Opinion.

Anton Seidl was seated at a desk in the study study of his home on West Forty-third street. The room was the abode of the "den" of a musician; and of a German musician. Between the windows, in a portrait of Beethoven, beneath was a full length photograph of Mme. Materna. A fine engraving of Bismarck hung over the mantel.

Mr. Seidl wore a dark smoking jacket faced with fur. He smiled a little when I told him what it was that brought me there.

"You see me," he said, "that people are to do to detect the musical ear, particularly what parents are to do when interested in the education of their child. I suppose you know that this is in one respect a difficult question, and that for a long time there was very little to say. But it seems to me that there is going to be found a criterion by this that the parents shall seek the judgment of a musician. I do not see what else they can do. I suppose that this is not a completely satisfactory course in every case, for I suppose that it is true that many teachers take pupils, knowing that they have not a good ear. But nothing will give an answer to the question but a long trial, and a musician is also competent to make such a trial. A musician should be able, in his honest judgment in any matter, but we are all human, and I suppose some of the judgments are no doubt biased. Probably the desire of the parents to discover talent sometimes influences a false judgment, perhaps a conscious, that leads uncertain judgment."

"Is it not easier to detect a good ear in a vocalist than in an instrumentalist?"

"It certainly is. In the case of a voice, I find the musician has only to play or sing a brief passage—a few notes—and set the pupil to follow. A few such trials of the voice will indicate beyond doubt whether a beginner has the necessary foundation of a true ear.

"Of course, there might be cases where the ear was not perfect and where a general trial might seem favorable, but in such cases there would be some sense of harmony, not seriously defective would possibly escape detection in a few trials, especially in the case of a voice."

"Is the case of a performer the case is undoubtedly somewhat different. The only trial is not thought to have been but through an instrument it cannot be known. Even a fine-looking but musical study will bring out the ear defect of a pupil who does not sing. In a few lessons, particularly in the case of an instrument like the violin, the defect will appear if it is to appear.

"I have been asked how anyone could set down for finding that a pet son had no ear, say more than there is a rule for finding whether a person has positive sequence. Either train will appear under trial by a person competent to make that trial."

Signor Errani's Views.

I next sought the opinion of probably the most prominent and popular vocal teacher in New York, Sig. Emilio Errani, who was for twenty years successful singer in Italian opera in Milan and in this country. When Professor Errani sang "Traviata" in America Verdi was her tenor.

The tenor of the Twenty-sixth street house in which Sig. Errani gives lessons is lined with portraits and souvenirs of Mme. Patti, Nilsson, Sig. Salvini, Sig. Hauk, who was Errani's first pupil.

"It is certainly very important," said Professor Errani, distinguished by the particular "that the judgment on the capabilities and endowments of a musical beginner should be carefully and frankly given. No teacher who values his reputation would give a false judgment on a pupil or voice. Too often we blame pupils for their willingness and eagerness to develop their children's talents or to relieve what they believe to be their interests. Their mistake, if they make one, is pardonable. The mistake of the teacher who asked for his judgment is unpardonable."

"How do you test the ear?" I asked.

Without answering directly Sig. Errani said:

"There are three things to be decided in the case of one who wishes to be singer. First, the voice—has he or she the natural qualification? Second, has he or she the ear? Has the ear of the voice the sense that we call music? Third, has he or she a musical organization?

"The voice and the ear are readily tested by the sounding of a piano note or phrase which the pupil is asked to repeat. For instance," said Sig. Errani stood behind the piano and struck a note somewhere in the upper part of the middle register. "Sound that."

The pupil did sing.

"Never mind, try that."

I tried.

"Could now try this one." It was octave or so lower.

I tried again.

"Better. Your ear is correct."

This was worth coming for.

"Now," said Sig. Errani, coming from behind the piano, "you may sing that, so far as the process is concerned, is the simplest test of the ear. It is simple. In the case of the instrumentalist the process would be reversed. The teacher would sound a vocal note and ask the pupil to find it on the piano. With the violin it would be less easy, but the test is a fair trial. But in the case the readiness of a good ear could be found with more or less readiness in a voice, but even in the most careful training was dangerous at a very early age. Sig. Errani did not think that children's voices should be trained to greater ease than was ordinarily expected the sentence correctly.

Little Dot—I like cake; it's good.

Mamma—That's better.

Little Dot—I like cake; it's awful nice.

Mamma (reprovingly)—You almost say you "love" cake; say "it's good." Do not say "awful"; say "very"; not say "nice;" say "good." And, by the way, the word "just" should be rejected, also the word "very." Repeat the sentence correctly.

A Wonderful Southern Flower.

A wonderful flower has been discovered in Florida, and it is claimed that this is not a completely satisfactory course in every case, for I suppose that many teachers take pupils, knowing that they have not a good ear. But nothing will give an answer to the question but a long trial, and a musician is also competent to make such a trial. A musician should be able, in his honest judgment in any matter, but we are all human, and I suppose some of the judgments are no doubt biased. The Constitutionalist.

W. L. FORCE, A. L. FORCE
Editors and Proprietors.

OUR SILVER ANNIVERSARY.

On the first day of January, 1867, the present owners and publishers of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST engaged in the printing business in a building on Cherry street (now Park avenue) near what is now known as the corner of North avenue, Plainfield, N. J., established a weekly paper called Jinny Jim. At that date Plainfield was a village and but two newspapers were issued within its limits—the Plainfield Gazette and the Plainfield Union—the latter published by our since deceased and respected citizen, Milton F. Cushing, under whose instructions both members of the firm of THE CONSTITUTION said. Wm. L. and Albert L. Force, were taught the art of printing. W. L. in the year 1851 and A. L. a few years later. After various vicissitudes, on the 1st day of January, 1868, the firm, under the name of W. L. Force & Bro., commenced the publication of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST, the name of the paper being proposed by our venerable friend, ex-Mayor Nathan Harper, who has continuously contributed to the columns of the paper of the galaxy of newspapers of the State in a quaint, caustic manner. With hard work and attention to business, both members of the firm, putting their hands to the wheel, writing articles, setting type, pulling the hand press, etc., etc., as above thrived, and has done good work for the Democratic party, whose principles it has always represented. It has advocated the election and election of many successful Governors and other Representatives of the State and been the staunch advocate of the nomination and election of a Democratic President of the United States—GROVER CLEVELAND, and lived to see him again re-nominated and elected to that high office, which position he so ably filled for four years.

Note the difference between Jan. 1, 1867, and the present date in the advancement of newspaper enterprises and progress in Plainfield. In those days we speak of, North Avenue was not laid out as a public thoroughfare. It was a common one and a coal and lumber yard. Now it is one of the most prosperous and handsome business streets of our city. Then TAN CONSTITUTIONALIST was issued on a Washington hand press in a second-story 20 x 30 room. Now, a handsome three-story brick building adorns it a corner whereon THE CONSTITUTIONALIST is edited and published, on the first floor are the spacious and commodious counting and editorial rooms, with the entire third floor as composing and job-printing rooms. The basement is used as the press room, with five Campbell presses run by steam power, a huge boiler furnishing motive power and steam to heat the entire building, which includes Reynolds's Harness, Vanderbeek's Music Store, the offices on the second floor and the large room devoted to devotional exercises by the First Church of Christ. In the same building is also edited and published Plainfield's own daily—THE PRESS, an offspring of its older contemporary, and Democratic in principles. In the office to-day are also employees who embark in life's voyage with the proprietors of this paper twenty-five years ago.

The aim of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST has been in the past, as it will be in the future, to advance the interests of the party with which it has represented the people—the Democracy. We thank the public who have aided us in our advancement and set off-ers and wish them all a HAPPY NEW YEAR.

THE NEW YEAR.

A HAPPY NEW YEAR TO ALL!

Yes to all, irrespective of race, creed, worldly condition or political name, a Happy New Year is our sincere salutation.

Years swiftly follows years, ninety-one passes away and ninety-two springs into existence. No human power can stop the revolving wheel of time.

The child grows to manhood, gradually applied and studied, is a lesson of abiding worth, provided, the errors of life it discloses are wisely made retrospatory for the future.

The opening year, like all its predecessors was a chronicler of change.

How many enjoying robust health at its advent now people about graves or languish on beds of sickness? What happy home prosperous and buoyant have witnessed riches take wings and fly away, said hope's radiant promises grow dark and gloomy beneath the sweeping winds of disaster and disappointment?

As chart and compass point the mariner's way over wide stretches seas and clear of shipwrecking shoals to port of safety, will past history, if thoughtfully scanned, aid security to the voyage of life.

No one can foretell what the New Year has in store, but all may look upon the future. It will also be the herald of chance, scattering fortune and adversity, pleasure and pain, and doubtless, numerous blessings in disguise.

Let us meet it with fortitude, and thankful for the opportunity, sternly resolve that come what may come, we will endeavor to discharge aright every duty and obligation of life, not in the spirit of selfishness, but for the good of humanity at large and the glory of God.

THUS TO ALL A HAPPY NEW YEAR!

SPEAKER CRISP.

Without disparaging the claims of other Democratic members, and there are several amply qualified for the position, the election of Mr. Crisp, of Georgia, as Speaker of the next House of Congress, is a commendable action.

To preside with credit over a large legislative body demands peculiar abilities and those Speaker Crisp possesses.

Conservative, cool-headed, courteous, and skilled in parliamentary law, he is the very right man for the place, as time will bear witness, and furthermore, as an additional qualification for a competent presiding officer, his judicial mind is not of minor importance, because it will naturally temper firmness of decision with justice.

The Democratic House of Representatives did well to place the gavel in his hands.

Thanks to Gov. David B. Hill, the Legislature of New York State is once more Democratic. By the decision of the Court of Appeals the Senate will have one majority. Hurrah! That the people is quite to recognize the present and constantly increasing efficiency of the train service.

RIGHT YOU ARE.

THE MEMBERS of the New Jersey delegation in the House of Representatives have fared well at the hands of Speaker Crisp, in his selection of Committees, but we are at a loss to understand his failure to appoint Mr. Gelsenhainer to the Chairmanship of one of the important Committees—Naval Affairs and Immigration and Naturalization—and in these places he will have abundant opportunities of serving his constituents.—Sommet Record.

"Jimmy" Martine, Plainfield's possible candidate for Congress on the Democratic side, was right royally entertained by the "Peanut Club" at Rahway a few nights ago.

The Somerset "Democrat," Clinton Democrat, and Sussex Independent are among the State journals which issued double sheet holiday numbers bristling with interesting reading matter.

PLAINFIELD A YALE STRONGHOLD.

The Seeds Have Students to the Great University Sent—Other Jersey Town.

Plainfield has a great interest in Yale University, and yearly sends a number of her sons to its halls of learning. It has a flourishing Yale club, and among many of Yankee's young men a Yale spirit prevails.

It is estimated that $350 a year is the lowest figure at which a student can get through Yale college. This is a little in error, although true if looked at from the standpoint of the student who pays as he goes. As the college distributes about $10,000 annually in scholarships, and, to take Professor Phillips's word, the fund grows in proportion to the demand, $12[illegible] the tuition fee, can hardly be deducted from $350, leaving $250 as the lowest figure. In the estimate $125 is put down for board; but it is a very common thing for students to carry their board by forming eating clubs or waiting on the table. Thus the amount maybe further reduced to $100. Your correspondent has a classmate who showed him the account of his expenses during Sophomore year. They reached the sum total of $172 and some odd cents. In this amount were included his traveling expenses, and he lived some 500 miles away. Yet the surroundings of this young man indicated no abject poverty. Indeed, so many opportunities does Yale offer for earning money that there is no reason why a student working his way through college should not have a bank account. Standing to his credit at the end of his course, if he has character and native ability backed by energy. Yale's democratic spirit will see to that. It would be may rise to a position of high influence and popularity among his fellows.

From the following figures it will be seen that Yale continues to deserve the title of "the nation-l university. There are a Yale from Rodol Safety Power.

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad company has recently placed in service on its fast trains through this city, between New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington, six new engines which are considered the most powerful and speedy in this country. These new flyers have driving wheels six feet, six inches high and cylinders 18 inches by 24. The boilers are large, and give them tremendous power and the high drivers protect the machinery from the rack and strain incident to fast running on straight lines of road. There is practically no limit to the speed to which these new marvels may be driven and they skim over the rails as steamers on a smooth river.

Another recent addition to the motive power of the company is a consignment of eight powerful ten wheel passenger engines, designed for service on the mountain divisions. These are the heaviest ten wheel engines ever constructed, weighing sixty-seven and one-half tons. They have driving wheels six feet two inches high and cylinders 21 inches by 26. One of these machines performs the work heretofore requiring two of the old engines and they take the heavy through express trains up the mountain grades quickly and with perfect ease.

The Mt. Clare shops of the company have recently completed an order for ten switch engines of the highest type, and sufficiently powerful to make up a train and to the full drawing power of a consolidation freight engine. Also three new heavy eight wheel passenger engines, having driving wheels five feet eight inches, and cylinders twenty inches by twenty-four. These engines are now doing excellent work; they are very powerful and exemplified of great speed.

In addition to the foregoing the company has now under construction at its Mt. Clare shops ten powerful ten wheel consolidation freight engines for fast freight service and for heavy passenger trains on occasion, also twelve consolidation freight engines of great power.

These additions to its motive power are in line with the other great improvements constantly being made in the general management of the B. & O. property by the present management, which have been noted by THE PRESS from time to time, and the rapid augmentation of the passenger traffic of the company is indicative that the people is quite to recognize the present and constantly increasing efficiency of its train service.

FIRES OF THE YEAR.

Chief Bloss Makes His Annual Report, and Gives It to the Committee of Streets and Sewers.

The Plainfield common council Monday evening received from chief engineer T. O. Doane the following annual report, which was read with interest and placed on file:

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Dec. 28, 1891.
To the Honorable the Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

GENTLEMEN:—I herewith present my report for the year ending December 28, 1891.

The annual report of the Department consists of one Chief and two Assistant Engineers and one hundred and sixty-one other officers and men. There have been thirteen men placed on the Exempt list during the year; five resigned; three have died; and twenty-four new members elected.

HOUSES.

There are occupied by the City for Fire purposes four houses, three of which are owned by the City. The house on Second street, Nos. 26 and 28, is in very poor order and should be repaired as soon as possible. While this is being done, some very necessary alterations should be made. The house occupied by No. 2 Engine Company, No. 60 West Front street, is in very good condition, except that the rear part of the house needs a new floor, as the present floor is about worn out, and the building rests partially outside and in.

The house occupied by Alert Hose Company, No. 11, Hamilton avenue, is in fair order, and partly by the owner and partly by the City. The house is owned by the Department and rented by the City. The department has outgrown this house in its present condition and I would recommend that where this Company should have a more suitable house.

APPARATUS.

There is in the service of the City one third size double pump Amoskeag engine—capacity 750 gallons, one third size single pump Amoskeag—capacity 400 gallons, both of which are in good condition. Two two-wheeled hose carriages, one four-wheeled hose carriage and one hook and ladder truck. The two hose carts are in good condition, but one requires no paint or color, and a new truck purchased the present apparatus never was fit for use.

HOSE.

There are 5,000 feet of cotton hose in service, which is in good condition. A proper and proper care of our hose until drying rooms same as is now in No. 2 Engine House, are established. This is a difficult matter in the houses we have to possible way to dry hose, and they soon become mildewed and rot.

WATER SUPPLY.

That water supply for fire purposes at present consists of our brook Green running through the entire length of the City, and Under Brook nearly right angles to the first named, two-thirds of the width of the City. Contributing to the supply of the Green are the springs at the Pond Machine Tool Works, eastern at the Grand Underwood and twenty-one deep wells. There are also about thirty hydrants furnished by the Plainfield Water supply Company and connected therewith at the disposal of the Fire Department for use at free fire of charge.

That we have this gorgeous our water supply for fire extinguishing purposes is well-known to every citizen of this place. The most of our water mains were laid in use a great many years and will not give a full supply of water; and that there is now water in the mains, they have filled up with sand, and it would be about as cheap to build new ones as to clean out the old. Our brooks will sometimes go dry and as it happened one time this fall when the mill pond was used for a purpose the principal business portion of the City was almost totally unprovided for nearly two weeks and some portions of the City are at all times almost at the mercy of a fire and I would urge upon the Common Council the necessity of taking some immediate steps for the better protection of the City in case of fire.

FIRES.

There are nine houses in use in the Fire Department, six of which are owned by the City. The services rendered by the Department to the City show conclusively that it is good policy for the City to own all the houses used by the Fire Department.

FIRE ALARM.

Our present Fire Alarm consists of one 12-in. clamp which located on the Electric Light Company's pole, corner of Front and Park, Electric Light Company, four fifteen-inch gongs located as follows: One in engine and hose houses of Chief and Assistant Engineers, and one four-inch tapper in livery stable of Chief Engineer, all of which gongs were insulated and connected with fifteen nonconducting cells of battery in the Chief's parlor. Although a great deal of time and care has to be given to keep the system in perfect order, it has proved a success, and I know that it gives entire satisfaction to the whole of the Department and citizens, and I submit the Fire Department and citizens to return to the old way of sending of alarms of fire.

Box 51 is a private box located in the office of Pond Tool Company's works. Three should be a box on the corner of Second and Watchung avenue, as there are large factories unprotected, and also a box on the north part of the City, daily inquiring when are we going to have a box placed in our vicinity?

FIRES AND ALARMS.

There have been sixty-seven fires and alarms during the year, an increase of nineteen over last year, with a loss on buildings and stock amounting to about $30,000, covered by insurance and six dollars ($6.00), covered by insurance amounting to one hundred and thirty-five thousand two hundred and ten ($135,210), from causes as follows:

Defective flues	5
Sawdust ignitions	1
Spontaneous ignitions	1
Sparks from a locomotive	1
Sparks from a stove	1

The fire loss would have been small in proportion to the number of fires and compared with the loss of the preceding year two hundred and six dollars ($206), covered by insurance amounting to one hundred and thirty-five thousand two hundred and ten ($135,210), from causes as follows:

CITY DEPARTMENT.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE, THE COUNTY AND THE CITY, AND HAS THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY PAPER PUBLISHED IN THE COUNTY OF UNION.

J. A. DEMAREST - - City Editor.

—T. O Doane, chief of the fire department, and inspector of buildings, says there is no truth in the report that he is a candidate for the office of captain of police.

—The Westfield fire department has elected the following officers: President, Albert Wilcox; vice-president, F. Stevenson; secretary, Chas. Ira B. Clark; trustee for three years, Charles M Farrington.

—For disturbing a Salvation Army meeting and smashing the windows in the army barracks, two young men named Holmes and Robinson were sent by judge Coit glen on Saturday to jail for 30 days.

—In the pigeon-shooting match at Campbell's club-house, Friday, between Lebbeus Ayres and "Colonel" Temple, the former was victorious, killing 7 to his opponent's 6 out of 10 live pigeons each shot at.

—Atlas Lodge, No. 25, F. and A. M., of Westfield, has elected the following officers for the ensuing year: W. M., John F Worrall; S. W., C. G. Rowe; J. W., J. H Vail; treas.urer, G. H. French; secretary, John C Bleakley; trustee for three years, Lucius Hadsell.

—A well-known young man about town is doing a very bad eye administered to by the defender of a colored woman whom the young man had insulted on the street. The woman slapped his face for his insult, and then he knocked her down. She called for help, and a passer-by thrashed the fellow soundly.

—The largest and finest stock of stallions, breed mares and colts, ever offered at public auction, will be sold on Saturday, January 9, 1892, at Hall's Sale Stables, Flanderne. They include all the horses of J. C. Shaw's extensive establishment. The list is published in full in the advertisement in another column. Luncheon will be served on the grounds.

—Manager T. H. Keller of the Crescent League ball team has given notice that he holds the following players under contract and reserve for next season: Wm. H Keeler, Fred Jones, Frank J Bonner, Wm. H. Murphy, George A. Turner, Charles Hamilton and Alfred Lefevre. Murphy is an old Cleveland leaguer, and played on the Norwich team last year. He and Turner are great batters

HYMENEAL.

Seymour—Myers.

Miss Mary Lee Myers, daughter of the late Joseph M Myers, became the bride of Frank S. Seymour, of Allegheny, Pa., at 6:30 Monday night, at the home of the bride's mother, East Front street, the Rev Dr Ely officiating.

The wedding was so unostentatious as to pretty one. The bride wore her mother's wedding dress, and Mrs Myers wore the wedding dress of the bride's grandmother's wedding. The bride's costume was of more antique, trimmed with point applique lace. She wore a veil of tulle, fastened with orange blossoms.

The bride entered on the arm of her brother, and was given away by her mother.

The maid of honor was Miss Weil, of Germantown, who wore a gown of white silk trimmed with chiffon. The bridesmaids were Miss Rosa Beach of Baltimore, Miss Jessie Johnson of Morristown, Miss Virginia Low of Boston, and Miss Williams of Oyster Bay. All these were in floating dress of the bride. Their gowns were of blue silk trimmed with chiffon. The "best man" was Arthur Scribner of New York, groomsmen were Miss Myers' brothers Frederick A Burrall, J. Lee Taller, and Collins P. Bliss, all of New York, and Henry Ward of Troy.

The bridal party was well represented among the guests. Among those from out-of-town were: Mr. and Mrs. Robert W Taller of New York; Mrs. Bliss and A. Bliss of New York; Mrs. H. L. Powers of New York; Mrs. William Scribner, Miss Scribner, Mr and Mrs. Charles Scribner, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Scribner, New York; Mr. and Mrs. Shedd, Mr. and Mrs. Wm Barbour, Mr. and Mrs Edward Taller and Mr. and Mrs. William Taylor, all of New York.

The caterer was Maresi, and the music was by Andrew G. Carpenter of the city. The music during the ceremony was that of Mr Carpenter's own compositions. Besides this there was played under his direction the "Bridal Rose" overture, the "Serenade flute-and," and the "Awakening of Spring." The happy couple received many handsome and valuable gifts.

The Christmas Story Has Through It All.

Special Christmas services were held in the Park M. E. church, Sunday, Sunday, both morning and evening. The morning service was well attended. The music was inspiring. The pastor preached an able sermon on "The Unpeaceable Gift". The song service in the evening was not so well attended, but those who were present enjoyed a rare treat in the music. The beautiful Christmas story ran through all the service, from the opening anthem, through the pastor's sermon, to the final anthem, which the choir rendered so admirably, and in which every heart joined.

A. J. Brunson in Two New Industries.

Two new companies filed articles of incorporation Monday at Elizabeth, and both are to do business in that city.

The first is the American Fluorine company, with a capital of $1,000,000. The incorporators are William H. Davis, jr., and Charles A Doremus, of New York, and Augustus J. Brunson, of North Plainfield.

The other industry is the Eagle Silk company, which will begin business with $10,000 capital. The incorporators are Hans Hindemann, of 671 West Twenty-third street, New York, Fritz Bickel, of 333 East Eighty-sixth street, New York, and Augustus J. Brunson, of North Plainfield. The offices of both enterprises are situated at 68 Broad street, Elizabeth. The principal place of business outside the State will be New York city.

Robbers at Scotch Plains.

Robbers appeared again in Dunellen, Saturday night. They effected an entrance through the front window of the residence of W. J. Hamilton, on Church street. Mrs. Hamilton heard a noise in the parlor, and called to her mother. The thieves apparently heard the confusion that their presence was causing, and left to continue their operations next door, at the residence of R. J. Swackhamer. They were on the front porch attempting to effect an entrance through the parlor window when William Hamilton, jr., caught sight of them from his window and shouted at them. They soon disappeared, and have not made their appearance since.

It is reported that one of the thieves resembled one of Dunellen's own citizens very closely, and that this same citizen figured in a very similar case once before. Now is the time for citizens to take precaution and put the slippers on some of those fellows, or they will be made hold by their necks and terrorize the town.

I HAVE been troubled with catarrh for 10 years and have tried a number of remedies, but found no relief until I used Ely's Cream Balm. I consider it the most valuable remedy for catarrh in use. I have recommended it to many of my friends. E. B. Crockett, P. M., Greenwood, Ind.

I HAVE used Ely's Cream Balm with excellent results. My daughter's Cream Balm is the only remedy that has done her any good. I shall recommend it to all my friends.—Mrs. Jennie Hall, Lowell, Mich.

SOCIETY BUDS IN BLOOM.

The Buddiest and Prettiest and "Sweetest" German that Plainfield Has Ever Seen.

OVELTIER than ever before, looked the Casino on Monday night. To the gay, light-hearted throng who gathered there to indulge in the delights of the ball-room scene in some fascinating castle-hall, and the beauty and delight of it all, every fluttering heart to overflowing with a delicious joy.

The gay little Casino had been placed at the disposal of the young people of the Plainfield's society, and by their dainty handiwork it had undergone considerable of a transformation. The decorations were such as ever the Casino had seen never before. The chandeliers were veiled in pink tarlatan and tissue paper, and here and there were tastefully arranged evergreens, and just at the open, green arbor where the musicians were concealed. Each feminine form looked its loveliest. The chandeliers and most ravishing gowns had been brought out, and every natural charm and grace was heightened by the perfection of artistic effects.

Over all the beautiful scene was shed the rosy glow of the softened electric glare, and the polished floor was like a mirror with a pink blush over it.

The colors were of the softest and yet the gayest. The maidens were the sweetest, and the young men the most gallant, all the time. So what else could the event be but a most blissfully delightful one.

The German had been arranged by Clarence Murphy and John P Munn. The receiving patronesses were Mrs. William Bloodgood, Mrs. William T. Kaufman, Mrs. C. E. Brooks, Mrs. R. L. Burnett, and Mrs. J. P. Mason.

To the entrancing strains of music, by Austin of Brooklyn, Clarence L. Murphy and John Wayne VanBoskerck led the German. 'Twere too long—though most happy task—to tell of all the many beauties of that dance. The figures were novel, and beautiful, befitting—as every other adjective one may choose to apply. That of the three spinning wheels was especially charming. The boys and girls of that part reserve for best season. What that part the word One had to be there to realize the full glory of such bits of fairy-land scenery.

There were 68 people present, among them the following: Rowland Cox, Gifford Cooley, W. T. Kaufman, Jules Erickson, Edward Bloodgood, J. Frank Hubbard, Howard Huntington, Daniel Glinn, Harry Borden, John P. Munn, Frank Cake fair, Albert Stroull, Boardman Wight, Lloyd Wight, Edward Van Wagenen, Clarence Van Buren, Thomas Van Boskerck, Will Tyler, Ernstus Webster, Fred Walz, Walter Stelle, John D. He died at the home of his stepfather, C. H. Fullerton, who is the father of Mrs. Charles E. Tabor of Somerset street. Mr. Dingee, who survives his husband, formerly conducted the Bodmer seminary for many years in this city.

FRIGHTFUL DEATH ON THE RAIL.

A Brother of James P. Roman Runs to Please by a Rushing Locomotive.

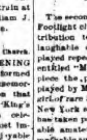
A brother of James P. Roman of this city met with a frightful death on Tuesday morning, Saturday. From the Trenton Sunday Advertiser is taken the following account of the distressing event:

A fatal accident occurred near Old Wyck street crossing of the Philadelphia and Reading railroad about 7 o'clock last evening, by which a well-known railroader met with a shocking death. The man was cut in two and his right arm was torn from the socket. Bystanders who witnessed the accident say that the man was attempting to jump on a moving train, but an investigation of the circumstances surrounding the death last night proves that he stepped out of the way of a moving freight train, and on to another track, where the tender of a locomotive struck him. The body was picked up and brought to Vanclève's morgue, where Coroner Physician Leavitt and Coroner Goutier made an examination.

It was at first thought that the man was a stranger, but the County Physician found papers on him that plainly that he belonged to Trenton. The two officers started out to find where the man lived. That finally ascertained that he was J W. Roman, a bridge-builder, and that he resided on Bellevue avenue, near Calhoun street. Mr. Roman came down town last night after supper to witness the fireworks display at the Battle Monument. After that was over he started to go home, and in order to reach Willow street, took a short cut across the tracks. A freight train was going down one of the tracks and Roman stepped quickly on another to get out of the way. As he did so the tender of the locomotive struck him.

Mr. Roman was about 47 years old, and was a prominent member of Anson Wilkes Post, No. 23, G. A. R. The locomotive that struck him was No. 101, and the engineer was George Henry. The engine was backing down to a train at the time of the accident. William J Sand was the conductor of the train.

A Rare Programme at Trinity Reformed Church.



THE EVENING at Trinity Reformed church was a memorable one. Upon that occasion the "King Birthday" was celebrated in a most impressive and enjoyable manner by the Sunday-school, under the leadership of Horace Martin. The church was appropriately and richly decorated under the direction of Harry A. VanArsdale, chairman of the committee, besides Mrs William A. Woodruff who was the most active, were O. W. Dunham, Miss Hattie Martin, Miss A. Swaim and Miss Jennie VanWinkle.

The recitations were especially good and great credit is due the young women who had charge of them. The entire order of service was:

UNCLE RUFUS' WILL.

Mr. Fielding Becomes Interested in a Trust Fund.

He Has Spent Much Time and Money and Has Thus Far Succeeded in Collecting Six Cents.

[COPYRIGHT, 1891.]

My wife's uncle, Rufus C. Small, recently passed from earth, and as the event occurred shortly before election, when there was nothing in this world but politics, we may conclude, though entirely ignorant of the late Mr. Small's faith and character, that he found a better and a brighter home, more or less, as the case may be.

He left a will—which I earnestly wish he had taken with him—and a large number of relatives to bear his loss with resignation, and to mourn the survival of one another. Uncle Rufus had been considered rich.

Much as I grieve at the heart that dear old Uncle Rufus was gone, though I don't believe she had remembered his existence since 1880, I found that when we heard that he was coming to visit us it is a strange coincidence that that date, too, began to be ours.

"How do you know that your uncle was rich?" I asked Maude, when the shower of tender drops had passed, so that we could see the silver lining of this cloud of bereavement.

"Goodness, he never spent a cent!" she exclaimed. "He was a regular old miser."

I was not wholly able to disguise my anxiety when I asked Maude how much she expected to get. She replied, in substance, that she expected a very handsome legacy, but that $10,000 as evidence that Uncle Rufus had been unduly influenced by certain members of the family, would seem well known to be tainted with the taint of gold.

Ten thousand dollars? And they say marriage is a failure! I would take ten per cent of it, and cheerfully forgive the other heirs. Inheritance might be a blessing after all, though I had hitherto looked upon it only as a means of acquiring parents, kleptomania, and an unbearable cast of countenance. Suppose it should prove to be only a check, and dollars. Even so little would be better than nothing—as the Presbyterian lady remarked when she was told that the revision of the confession would cut eternal punishment down to a million years. I went out and bought a couple of neckties, just to see how it would seem to be financially easy.

In a lucid interval, increasing my first enthusiasm, I began to doubt whether Maude was mentioned in Uncle Rufus' will. I had visions of the possibility of have a bad way of leaving their money to suspected wives or charities, or other things which I, for one, detested above leaving their lives. Acting on this impulse of caution I refused to buy all the things which Maude said she could show off with. I bought only a winter overcoat, a new pipe, but a meerschaum pipe and other overcoatless, fearing that I might be dress goods, about which there was no great hurry, till we were sure that there was no mistake.

But in a few days we learned for a certainty that Maude was mentioned in the will. She herself was also a heavy involved in the matter somehow, but whether she was left to us by Uncle Rufus or was simply a visitation of Providence I have not been able to discover.

A few days later we received notice to appear before the surrogate of Hudson county, N. J. The imposing legal appearance of these documents, and the mention of various pains and penalties therein, led my wife to believe that we were all going to heaven, and I myself, in my own mind, and protested that I was innocent, that I had not, some enough to think of it, and courage enough to execute it, and that if they took me to prison she should go too, though she hadn't a thing that was fit to wear in the dismal cells of the tories, and then we went to the assistance of the court officer who had involved himself in the matter, and called on counsel. Miss Lottie Small, who had been visiting us for some weeks. Lottie is a widow, and is very considerate herself a pound daily. To insinuate that she is still a child is to invite bloodshed. The latter served upon her an interrogatory in the usual legal form to "Lottie Small, infant." But we did not think she would suffer any real harm. Probably he will look quite as well in a wig. Yet I doubt if he would wish to serve any more notices in our house at fifty cents a piece, which is the regular fee.

I have since learned that similar notices were served upon all persons mentioned in the will, so that we would have been happier if Uncle Rufus had been kind enough to make no will, and spare some subject to the annoyance of having if he had known of their existence or had cared a copper for them. Uncle Rufus had more opinions and hisses than anybody since King Charles the Second, and he had received notices at fifty cents apiece, and the estate paid the fees. As soon as they found in Uncle Rufus' house in Elberia there were a few absentees when the tribe of Small assembled in the surrogate's office.

By and by we found a man who knew where the surrogate was. Would he be good enough to tell us? He would. The surrogate was out of town. At this moment the lawyer whom I had employed to defend me in my hurriedly. I do not doubt I to be had walked ten blocks out of my way to see me. He told me that the deputy surrogate, or something of that sort, would do just as well. He said that it was only a question of interpreting the document. He would suggest to the deputy surrogate the alleged intent which, when he made the alleged will, was in my uncle's alleged mind. The deputy surrogate and the lawyer then retired into an obscure corner of the building, from which the lawyer shortly emerged. Whether the deputy was able to do so or not, I did not learn.

Our lawyer told us that the will had been proven and that nothing now remained but to decide what the dickens it meant. He had made an interpretation, and the deputy had accepted it on trial with the understanding that it be sent home to Bailey Street was to be made. It appears that Uncle Rufus had left a small bequest—I forget which, but it was a sum under $10,000—and a pair of suspenders—to an aunt with whom his relations had never been quite sure, but "blood is thicker than water. He had then expressed a wish that the remainder of his property be divided in equal parts among his nephews, nieces and their sons.

This left Maude and me just about what we had come into as inheritance tion in exchange for the time I wasted which was worth in the neighborhood of $500. Meanwhile, I had borrowed a few hundreds more to cover current expenses, for of course I couldn't waste my time for nothing while my wife's vast interests were at stake.

MAUDE THREW HER ARMS AROUND MY NECK.

The first real light on the subject came in the form of a statement from our lawyer. It was neatly done in typewritten copy, and was so pretty that it would have been a pleasure to read it but for its import. It contained an account of funds disbursed, and disclosed the fact that about every third map in the United States who was of sound mind, and several who were not, had been engaged in the service of the estate. Our lawyer's personal account was there. It was itemized down to the attorney and counsel fee, with a scrupulous dishonesty which won my envy. Some of the items contained delicate flattery, such as the "To horse and buggy blacked in order to receive Mr. Fielding properly, 10c." It would have been a perfect legal document but for one blemish—one little item that did not include an overcharge. It was: "To post. age furnished Mr. Fielding in correspondence relating to the estate, 5c." The total made me faint.

Outside of his own bill the most interesting items were: "900 special guardians at 90, " "8," and "taking depositions of Lavinia Ann Augusta and Lavinia Small (colored), of Pikesville. Yes, who deposed and said that they were in no way related to deceased, 1f. 50."

The document closed with the statement that the surrogate had reversed the opinion of the deputy, and had decided that the will created a trust, and therefore, under its provisions, the trouble indexed the sum of 16 cents, being the amount due to each of thirty-nine heirs for the quarterly interest at 4 per cent on the trust fund of $6,576 remaining after all legal charges against the estate had been paid, which charges amounted to $1,576. The trust fund amounted to $8,000.

Further, we were directed, commanded and enjoined to sign receipts, acknowledgements and various other documents beginning with "Whereas" and these presents that in consideration of the sum of 16 cents, etc.," the effect of which was to release, discharge and acquit the trustee, his heirs, executors, assigns and posterity generally from any complicity, moral responsibility or criminal connection whatever with the "affair."

And may the next man who mentions any of my family in his will live long and die hard. HOWARD FIELDING.

UNCLE JERRY'S FARM.

How the Secretary of Agriculture Tills His Own Soil.

The Place He Calls Home at Virogua, Wis.—His Nephew Keeps Him Posted About Crops and Conditions Current on Old Hickory.

[COPYRIGHT, 1891.]

WENTY years ago Uncle Jerry Rusk, in all probability having dreamed of a portfolio of agriculture in the president's cabinet, purchased a farm of 160 acres, bordering on the outskirts of the little city of Viroqua, in Vernon county, Wis. By degrees this farm has been added to by purchases from neighboring farmers, until it now consists of 400 acres. It still belongs to Secretary Rusk, who, although busy with official cares at Washington, keeps close track of the management of it, being kept advised by his nephew, Albert Rusk, who, with his family, occupies the farmhouse, of the arrival of new calves, how the corn is getting along, and all the other things that a farmer would want to know about affairs at home. When Uncle Jerry visits Wisconsin he goes directly to his farm, forgets politics for awhile, and lets the politicians in the cities wait until he gets ready to leave the farm and talk with them. Uncle Jerry is proud of his farm. Not only because it is a good farm is he proud of it, but because the associations of other days are connected with it, but because he expects as long as he lives to call the place "home."

Viroqua is not a great place either in the world of business or society. If it has an importance that carries its name beyond its own borders than by being the home of Jerry Rusk it is only that it is the county seat. It is nothing more than a village, but the people are a body of persons—prosperous not through speculation, but from living in the heart of the fairest agricultural region of the west anywhere. From twenty-five miles in every direction come the rural people to do their trading, and every time any pleasant week day the main street is lined with big wagons of produce and live stock—for here are to be found the pavements of a big commercial city.

Everybody in that country knows Uncle Jerry long before he was governor of Wisconsin, and politics does not cut any figure with the feeling for him. It is not particularly a feeling of regard or esteem in the sense those terms are generally applied in connection with public men. Perhaps it is a better term for it, and the country people are proud that a man developed among them has risen to the highest honorable political completion of it.

"Yes, sir, this is where Jerry hails from," said a citizen, with a little wan, of marked agricultural characteristics, who got on the train at a little station. "Glad he is president, I guess. I'll bet it. I'm a democrat myself. Ain't very many of us here, though, sorry to say, but we did knock 'em out last time, and maybe we can again. That don't make no difference, though. Jerry's mighty glad to see him back and shake hands with him, if we don't agree with the wisdom of his politics. Takin't but a mile out. First house you come to; you can't miss it."

Everybody in Viroqua can step to his front door and point to the wind mills that whirl on the farm of Uncle Jerry. Pretty much everybody in town, it may be remarked, has either a newspaper cut or a more pretentious portrait of the secretary of agriculture pasted upor hung up against the wall somewhere in their business or office. Perhaps the inhabitants, too, look with a little interest and more than ordinary interest at the weather signal that is raised to the flagstaff on the principal business block every morning, for they look about that one would the people of other cities and towns. But people elsewhere would probably like to know something about Uncle Jerry's farm. It lies only a good walking distance northward along the road from the white wind mills loom above a grove of maples that hides from view the farm buildings. The farm occupies the highest point of land in all the country round, and from it a view of a wide extent of landscape is to be had. The road from town, a series of gradual ascents, is broken on either side by groves of maples for three years ago by Uncle Jerry himself. And soon a stranger in a single wagon is located the farmhouse. Nothing in that farmhouse or its surroundings is indicative of Cabinet rank. It is just a plain but neat frame building such as the majority of prosperous farmers live in, not a very large one, but one with a iron palisade but a stake wooden picket fence incloses the yard. The barn is as simple as a barn can be. It is also a mile house and a lot of plain sheds

You see the secretary has got just a common-sense idea of it," said Uncle Rusk, Uncle Jerry's nephew, a man of about fifty years of age, who was acting while the proprietor was in Washington. While everybody else calls him "Uncle Jerry," his nephew always addresses him in close hip to use that term, always refers to him as "the secretary."

"If you were to look around on good a farm as there is on Round Prairie that is the name given to the country), I'll bet you'd say with me," continued Mr. Rusk. "No, we haven't got any fancy name for it; it just goes by the name of Jerry Rusk's farm."

In a large meadow back of the farmhouse and buildings is a favorite spot with Uncle Jerry, as he knows. Standing there he can see every house and tree for miles around, and when he tires of looking at the little city he can below him a mile to the southward, he can turn and behold from this point's eye view the broad acres of land farms, flecked with cattle and sheep. On this spot the secretary long contemplated building a handsome, pretentious country house, a plan which he has given up in favor of a hill on the other side of the road from the present buildings, the crest of which is higher than the hill where the house is to stand. The way Uncle Jerry found out how high this hill was is a little bit novel and will bear repeating. He was standing there one day last summer wishing for a carpenter's level. There was none to be had, but Uncle Jerry sent for a bottle, filled it with water so as to leave a small air bubble and corked it up, laying this on a rock on the hill. Then he had the engineering it until the edge was horizontal, the secretary of agriculture got down and sighted to the bubble in the bottle, observing that it was exactly the height of the hope of the hill opposite.

Next year will see a fine mansion crowning this hill, and preparations for it are being made. Some improvements on the sheep side of the elevation are already under way.

With all the modern improvements that Uncle Jerry contemplates there will be no pleasanter residence to visit in the Vicinity of Viroqua than the Rusk farm. The Vicinity call forms that divide the different fields, and the rustic gates that open and close them. Whether it has been said that there is nothing so rustic about a farm as a station and a station so rustic as a rustic about holes." These so-called stak holes are not the forbidding things the name would indicate. They are simply holes formed by terrific contractions of the earth in spots, and now from a distance look like the gravel pits, ice ponds and maples. As given a retreat as could be wished for the holidays of any statesman or a stranger to whom all the more interesting. Near one of these sink holes is the grave of Old Whig, one of the pioneer stage horses which after the railroad ruined his vocation roamed over the farm, the king of the herd, and lived to a ripe old age.

Some one tells a story of Uncle Jerry to the effect that he was one time twitted about being a farmer, and replied that he was not a farmer but an agriculturist.

"What is the difference?" he was asked.

"Well," said Uncle Jerry, with a twinkle in his eye, "a farmer is supported by his farm, and an agriculturalist supports his farm."

Whether this be true or not there isn't much of the impractical or play day kind about this farm: it is run just about as all the farms surrounding are run and for about the same purpose. It is a dairy farm principally. There are on it at present thirty-eight head of cattle, twelve horses and the pigs and poultry. The last season one hundred acres of corn were grown, one hundred and sixty acres of hay and thirty acres of oats. The rest of the land consists of pasture.

Hair, Roller Crystals of Bamboo.

One of the most fashous and fatal poisons used in Japan and Java is obtained from the bamboo. The young shoots of the cane, when they first push through the ground, are covered with fine, brownish hairs, which, under the microscope, appear to be bayonet-like spines of crystals of silex, infinitely sharp and solient. Small quantities of these hairs administered daily in the food bring on alienation of the whole alimentary canal, simulating malignant dysentery. The action must be of a mechanical rather than chemical nature, just as the spores of the common puff ball act upon the eyes. The bamboo shoots are also used as food at European residents of Java. A Dutch official report says that scores of deaths among European troops are due to the bamboo hairs and to the jealousy of native women, who, whenever they have a fancy for a white man, will either have him or poison him on bamboo hairs if it takes month to accomplish the job. An additional danger lies in the bamboo hairs of the insect powder, which is the pulverized flowers of certain species of chrysanthemum.

Everybody in that country knows Uncle Jerry long before he was governor of Wisconsin, and politics does not cut any figure with the feeling for him. It is not particularly a feeling of regard or esteem in the sense those terms are generally applied in connection with public men. Perhaps it is a better term for it, and the country people are proud that a man developed among them has risen to the highest honorable political completion of it.

"Yes, sir, this is where Jerry hails from," said a citizen, with a little wan, of marked agricultural characteristics, who got on the train at a little station. "Glad he is president, I guess. I'll bet it. I'm a democrat myself. Ain't very many of us here, though, sorry to say, but we did knock 'em out last time, and maybe we can again. That don't make no difference, though. Jerry's mighty glad to see him back and shake hands with him, if we don't agree with the wisdom of his politics. Takin't but a mile out. First house you come to; you can't miss it."

Everybody in Viroqua can step to his front door and point to the wind mills that whirl on the farm of Uncle Jerry. Pretty much everybody in town, it may be remarked, has either a newspaper cut or a more pretentious portrait of the secretary of agriculture pasted upor hung up against the wall somewhere in their business or office. Perhaps the inhabitants, too, look with a little interest and more than ordinary interest at the weather signal that is raised to the flagstaff on the principal business block every morning, for they look about that one would the people of other cities and towns. But people elsewhere would probably like to know something about Uncle Jerry's farm. It lies only a good walking distance northward along the road from the white wind mills loom above a grove of maples that hides from view the farm buildings. The farm occupies the highest point of land in all the country round, and from it a view of a wide extent of landscape is to be had. The road from town, a series of gradual ascents, is broken on either side by groves of maples for three years ago by Uncle Jerry himself. And soon a stranger in a single wagon is located the farmhouse. Nothing in that farmhouse or its surroundings is indicative of Cabinet rank. It is just a plain but neat frame building such as the majority of prosperous farmers live in, not a very large one, but one with a iron palisade but a stake wooden picket fence incloses the yard. The barn is as simple as a barn can be. It is also a mile house and a lot of plain sheds

You see the secretary has got just a common-sense idea of it," said Uncle Rusk, Uncle Jerry's nephew, a man of about fifty years of age, who was acting while the proprietor was in Washington. While everybody else calls him "Uncle Jerry," his nephew always addresses him in close hip to use that term, always refers to him as "the secretary."

"If you were to look around on good a farm as there is on Round Prairie that is the name given to the country), I'll bet you'd say with me," continued Mr. Rusk. "No, we haven't got any fancy name for it; it just goes by the name of Jerry Rusk's farm."

In a large meadow back of the farmhouse and buildings is a favorite spot with Uncle Jerry, as he knows. Standing there he can see every house and tree for miles around, and when he tires of looking at the little city he can below him a mile to the southward, he can turn and behold from this point's eye view the broad acres of land farms, flecked with cattle and sheep. On this spot the secretary long contemplated building a handsome, pretentious country house, a plan which he has given up in favor of a hill on the other side of the road from the present buildings, the crest of which is higher than the hill where the house is to stand. The way Uncle Jerry found out how high this hill was is a little bit novel and will bear repeating. He was standing there one day last summer wishing for a carpenter's level. There was none to be had, but Uncle Jerry sent for a bottle, filled it with water so as to leave a small air bubble and corked it up, laying this on a rock on the hill. Then he had the engineering it until the edge was horizontal, the secretary of agriculture got down and sighted to the bubble in the bottle, observing that it was exactly the height of the hope of the hill opposite.

Next year will see a fine mansion crowning this hill, and preparations for it are being made. Some improvements on the sheep side of the elevation are already under way.

With all the modern improvements that Uncle Jerry contemplates there will be no pleasanter residence to visit in the Vicinity of Viroqua than the Rusk farm. The Vicinity call forms that divide the

THE CORK ELECTION.

The Result Declared Under Decidedly Unfavorable Circumstances.

The result of the polling in Cork for the vacancy in the parliamentary representation—caused by the death of Mr Parnell was declared as follows:

[Table of election returns]

A singular incident met the view of those who accompanied the high sheriff to the front of the building where the result was to be declared in public. But a regiment of infantry were drawn up on the opposite side of the street with fixed bayonets, while cavalry also had stood a couple of ambulance wagons. Immediately in front of the assembly stood two a strong force of the royal Irish constabulary, some mounted and others on foot. Between these two forces was a vast concourse of people. When the sheriff in declaring the poll mentioned the successful candidate's

The evil repute of Halifax implied in this saying dates back to the barristers from Halifax in Yorkshire, England. Halifax law, as may be gathered from a letter of Lord Bacon, was derived
